Curtain Up On Ghosts This Weekend For 3 Shows

The cast and crews of the University Theatre's production of Ibsen's Ghosts put the play under wraps after opening night when tragedy hit the nation.

Opening night was November 21. The following day silent stage hands covered the props with canvas, the box office phone rang in an empty building, actors came by just to stand around.

The canvas will be lifted, the lights will go on, the show will resume its run December 6. On the evenings of December 6 and 7 at 8:15 p.m. and at a matinee December 7 at 2:15 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium the public can see Henrik Ibsen's great drama, Ghosts.

Tickets purchased for the November dates will be honored in December. The box office announces that an automatic "swap" wil be made, Friday for Friday and Saturday for Saturday tickets. Ticket holders are asked to confirm their reservations and to make any changes they wish to make. The box office at Student Union will be open starting December 4th.

atic collections from all parts of the world, but ones concentrated mainly in our own geographical area. Dr. Bartlett, head of the museum committee here at the University, has stated a need to include in future plans, more facilities, better organization and more space for the museum. In 1965 space will be increased in the new building, but what would be most advantageous is the beginning of field parties and study groups which would make expeditions to the various parts of the world for study and collecting. Up to this time, this type of work has been done only on a limited basis by individuals.

Another look to the future may see a loan basis on a world wide scale. Up to the present time, qualified investigators have been able to acquire the loan of a particular collection or collections from other colleges in the country; but this would be even more beneficial on a world wide basis. Museum specimens might be traded with Russia, France or Sweden.

But to return to the present, a short walk to Fernald right here on our own campus brings us to the largest insect collection in this part of the country except for Harvard or Yale collections. It was started in 1890 by Dr. Fernald, the first entomology department head. His specialty was the small moths good condition.

Most of the specimens are New England insects, but there are also many others from the United States and various parts of the world to make up about 12,000 species of which over 100,000 are named specimens and many more remain unnamed. These have all been acquired by students, staff members, alumni and friends willing to donate entire collections. These are at present being used for class work, comparison, graduate research and people have come in at times clutching in a grubby fist or between dainty painted fingernails a tity.

Nothing in the collection, however, meets up to the spectacular "Oh My" collection of Dr. Smith! Tropical insects prove to be like something from a toy store window or a nightmare when the Hercules beetle appears with its five inch long snout. Giant walking sticks show mimicry when they have to be pointed out against a background of real twigs. Butterflies up to eight or nine inches across reveal brilliant "shine in the dark" colors of blue, pink and orange.

Arnold Air Society Initiates Pledge Idea

A new policy change in the Arnold Air Society at the University of Massachusetts has been wrought by AAS Major Peter M. Gillon, Commander of the John P. Granville Squadron.

Blending the Air Force spirit with that of fraternities the world over, the AAS squadron at the University now has pledges and special pledge squads.

These squads will have special service projects, high school visitations, assisting the wing when required, and generally being a cut above the average cadet.

As Major Gillon phrased it, "each pledge, as a member of a professional organization, has the responsibility of completely familiarizing himself iwth the purpose and mission of the Arnold Air Society, certain fundamental aspects of Air Force protocol, and more importantly for the cadet, the responsibility of becoming a distinctive member of a very distinctive profession, the Air Force Officer cadre."

The first such pledge squad in the history of Arnold Air at the University was composed of four of what Major Gillon calls the "sharpest" junior cadets in the 370th AFROTC Cadet Wing. Thomas Cleland, James Fleming, Paul Krzynowek, and Keith Ross were selected to inaugurate the program.

even murder, he said.

They called for immediate emancipation of slaves and constantly exposed segregation in schools and governments in Massachusetts and other New England states.

"This is a difficult question to answer" the Rabbi explained, "but I feel that this attitude is evoked by today's historians who, rather than re-evaluate the situation from primary sources, accept those views of historians who lived around the 1900's when segregation was still quietly accepted".

"Nowadays the tendency is still to look down upon the man of extremes. Our society is easy-going—we aren't willing to stick our necks out. Yet, if we recall the spirit and desire for justice that the Abolitionists fought and died for, possibly we too will be inspired to liberate the oppressed everywhere—perhaps we can even have a certainty of success."

Rabbi Ruchames is Director of the Hillel Foundations at the University, Amherst and Smith while the other two participants in the program are both from the English Department. Yesterday's speaker was Doctor Edwin D. Driver on Differential Fertility in India and today Joseph P. Langland will discuss The Wheel of Summer.

first album will be released in January. This company is also issuing Volume 2 of new folks. Included on this album is Lisa Kindred, who is now singing in the Boston circuits. Anyone who is going to be in Boston soon should go to the Cafe Yana to hear John Townley. At the age of nineteen, John is the finest folk guitarist I have heard. John, who is only slightly over five feet tall, plays a guitar that is almost as big as he and plays in a great many styles. His repertoire ranges from ballads to blues to early rock and roll.

Rumor has it that there will be a new coffee house in Amherst. Theh projected opening is next semester. We'll have more on this as plans become concrete.

The book sale in the Commonwealth Room has in stock several copies of the finest Blues anthology to be printed in the last few years. Titled "The Book of Blues", this publication has the lyrics, music, guitar and tenor banjo chords and a list of recordings for one hundred of the best blues ever written. Included are "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out", "See, See RideF", "Troubled in Mind" and many others. This is a good source of material for either the blues or jazz orientated musicians on campus. The price is somewhat high, but the book is well worth it.

As an added note, Dave Gitelson and Dick Doherty presented a concert under the auspices of a local church at Frontier High last Friday. The introduction of folk music into an area as yet untouched was well received.

Brouillet Finishes Season

by GENE COLBURN

The greatest cross-country runner in UMass. history closed out his varsity career last week on a triumphant note. Captain Bob "Digger" Brouillet became the first runner in the Redmen's history to compete in the National Collegiate Cross Country Championships at East Lansing, Michigan. The South Philipston Flash finished a highly respectable 33rd, as he covered the 4 mile course in the time of 20:37.8. Vic Zwolock added the national championship's crown to the IC4A title he won a week earlier. The Villanova great covered the course in 19:35, as San Jose State won the team title with a score of 53 points, followed by Oregon (68) and IC4A champ Notre Dame (128).

On Thursday Bob competed in the National A.A.U. 10,000 meters Cross-Country Championships and turned in one of his best races all year. Tom O'Hara of Loyola University covered the 6¼ mile course in 30:12.7 to take first place. Bob finished 11th with a time of 31:28. Indicative of the caliber of this performance is the fact that "Digger" received a personal letter from Chuck Werner, executive director of the U.S. Track and Field Federation, complimenting Bob on his race and stating that his performance marked him as one of the top 10,000 meter prospects in the country for the 1964 Olympics. Coach Footrick was also complimented on his fine job of coaching Bob.

"Digger" now has only Indoor and Spring track left in his collegiate competition, but he has already established himself as the greatest distance runner ever seen at UMass. Last year Dick Ward, another Redmen great in track and field, went to the nationals and became the first Redmen to ever place in such high competition, as he took 5th in the hammer.

Football Danger To Univ. Of Chicago Academic Community

CHICAGO (CPS)—Football is now considered a "danger to the academic community" by the University of Chicago student government.

Acting on the heals of a sit-in that hampered the University's game with the North Central College for two hours, the government passed a resolution last Tuesday (Nov. 12) that instructs its executive committee to take action to insure that UC football "shall be played under positive controls." The group, however, also expressed distaste for the sit-in noting that it interfered with the rights of other students.

The resolution also deplored a statement by President George W. Beadle against the demonstration. Beadle had said that any student who so strongly disapproved of football that he needed to stop other students from playing "might more appropriately express his disapproval by withdrawing from the University."

Leaders of the student government tried to halt the sit-in and confine the demonstration to a picket along the side-lines.

Chances for the success of the student government, however, appeared slight. Dean of Students Warner Wick told the group that the school would not "deal with its students in a bargaining situation."

He also complained that the publicity given football at the University was in a large part from the Collegiate Press Service. Students have complained that undue publicity was ruining the image of the University. Last week's sit-in was triggered by an announcement that CBS TV would film part of the game with North Central.

Concerning the demonstration, Wick said, "if you attempt to use force to coerce the University, you will find the same method used in retaliation."

Twitchell led UMass rebounders with fourteen. Ryan followed had seven assists and a fine performance from the floor. As a team the Redmen hit on thirty-six of seventy-eight field goal attempts and eighteen of twenty-eight from the foul line.

The Terriers could muster only thirty of seventy-six from the floor, and a poor twelve for twenty-five from the foul line.

The Redmen outrebounded the Terriers by a sixty to fifty-six margin and were able to control the boards at the crucial points in the game to provide the difference.

The little Redmen lost to Westover 70-68 in a tight prevarsity game match.

Friday, the UMass squad travels to New Brunswick, New Jersey to face Rutgers University.

In the A.F.L.: Boston over Houston — The winner of this game will take the eastern division title, and the Pats are hungrier than the Oilers.

Buffalo over New York—Heads will roll in Buffalo if the Bills finish last and if they lose Sunday the team is in danger of doing this.

Kansas City over Denver—The Chiefs are long overdue for a win and the Broncos should be the victims.

San Diego over Oakland—The Chargers will be trying to get even with the Raiders for defeating them earlier in the year.

In the N.F.L.: Green Bay over Los Angeles—To stay in contention the Packers will have to end the Rams win streak.

Baltimore over Minnesota — Unitas should be able to throw more TD passes than Tarkenton.

Chicago over San Francisco—After two straight ties the Bears will finally get their 10th win.

New York over Washington—Tittle should pick the weak Redskin secondary apart and keep the Giants in the tie for first in the east.

Pittsburgh over Dallas — The Steelers have too many horses for the Cowboys.

Cleveland over Detroit — The Browns will keep pace with the Giants by mauling the Lions.

St. Louis over Philadelphia—The Cards will keep their slim title hopes alive with a victory over the Eagles.

Redmen Over Terriers, 80-72

UMass Squad Wins Opener; Five Place In Double Figures

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts opened the season with a well deserved victory over the Boston University Terriers.

The Redmen were paced by a fine team effort that put five men in double figures. It was a close game throughout with the largest margin being 65 to 51, with 8:16 left. The final score was 80 to 72. The Redmen used a fast moving offiense and a tight man for man defense.

The Redmen scored the first point on a foul shot by Mike Johnson, but quickly fell behind with BU hitting from inside. The Terriers ran up a 7 to 1 lead before the Redmen scored again. Both teams were cool in the early going with the score 9 to 5 in favor of the Terriers after the first five minutes of the game had elapsed.

Dick Moreshead led the Terriers in the early going. Then Redman Jim Painten got hot hands and scored 11 points in the first half. UMass regained the lead at 17-16 with just under ten mintues left in the half. The Redmen then opened a 27 to 18 lead. The Terriers closed the gap to 36 to 34 with just under 2 minutes left in the half. The Redmen left the court for intermission with a 40 to 36 lead following a half court set shot by Pete Bernard.

The teams started slowly once again and after 5 minutes in the third quarter the score was 47 to 42 in favor of the Redmen. UMass then began to sweep the rebounds and use their fast break to good advantage to roll up the 65 to 51 lead. The Terriers, however, were not quitting. With Morsehead controlling the boards and Sheridan James hitting on long jump shots, BU closed the lead to 69 to 62, and it was nip and tuck the rest of the way.

James continued to hit, but the Terriers had to foul to gain possession. UMass made the foul shots and were able to slow down the game and hold the lead. Moreshead led all rebounders with 24 as he showed a great deal of strength around the boards. James led all scorers with 19 points hitting on 9 out of 17 from the floor. Ken Leary added 17, Morsehead had sixteen, Florczak added ten.

The Redmen, however, placed five in the double figures. Bernard with seventeen, O'Rourke with fourteen, Painten with

Yankee Conference Basketball Opens With Bears Vs. Catamounts

With the defending champion University of Connecticut Huskies established as slight favorites to capture their 14th title in 18 years, the red hot Yankee Conference basketball title race will open this weekend when the University of Maine's Black Bears invade Burlington for Friday and Saturday engagements with the University of Vermont Catamounts.

The UConn's under their new head coach Fred Shabel have a number of veterans back from a club that won 18 while losing seven last year. Toby Kimball, 6-7, and Ed Slomcenski, 6-11, both all-Conference choices a year ago head the field.

The University of Massachusetts Redmen, also under a new coach, Johnny Orr, and the University of Rhode Islands Rams, both of whom are well stocked with returnees, appear to be the chief threats to the UConn's dynasty but Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire also have improved enough that this could be the most keenly contested race in the conference's history.

The Redmen, headed by Rodger Twitchell, 6-6, all-conference choice for two years, have both size and depth to cope with their schedule. Rhode Island, also with a veteran club, led by Steve Chubin, 6-3 sharpshooter, probably will have the best offensive club in the league with an impressive array of shooters but will be giving away height on most occasions.

Maine will be going mostly with sophomores while Vermont will be seeking a replacement for its star center, Benny Becton. Jim Rich heads what should be an improved New Hampshire quintet.

Hockey Team Plays 16-Game Schedule

The University of Massachusetts varsity hockey team will play a 16-game schedule this winter according to an announcement by Assistant Athletic Director Earl E. Lorden.

The Redmen will open their season Dec. 5 at M.I.T. and then travel to Bowdoin Dec. 14 before playing their first home game Dec. 17 against Amherst College. UMass will also compete in a Christmas Tourney at Burlington, Vt. featuring Vermont, Connecticut and New Hampshire. Other top home games are against Army, Pennsylvania, Colgate, Williams and New Hampshire.

Capt. Charlie Glew (Framingham), center Ken Palm (Melrose) and goalie Skip Bowen (Melrose) give Coach Steve Kosakowski three experienced veterans to build around. Kosakowski has been experimenting with various combinations and admits he hasn't definitely decided upon a starting lineup.

Kosakowski feels that lack of ice to practice upon will hamper the early-season performance of the Redmen. He hopes UMass will be ready for a stretch-drive similar to last winter when the Redmen won their last five games.

Free Bus Service To Town Initiated On Trial Basis

The Student Senate Services Committee, Senate President Jon Fife, and the Town of Amherst have combined their efforts to initiate a free bus service to and from the center of town.

This will be financed by Town merchants on a trial basis for two weekends during which response will be examined by merchants, with an eye toward its continuance.

The busses will start on the project today, and will extend until the vacation, on both Friday and Saturday. The Friday service will extend from noon to 6 p.m., while Saturday service begins at 10 a.m. and runs till 6 p.m.

The busses will have a new route, quite radically changed from that of last year. Beginning at WPE, the bus will pass the girls dorms, turning right at the lights, and stopping at the Student Union. From there they will stop at the south set of lights and go up the hill stopping at Butterfield, from there going into the center of Amherst.

There will be 20 minute time intervals to and from the center of town..

Honorary Colonel Finalists Chosen

A report from the administration on the "Yamasaki Affair" will decide the fate of a proposed Faculty Senate investigation of the loss of the internationally-known architect, Senate members revealed Thursday.

The faculty, it was disclosed, deeply deplore the loss, not only because of the quality of Yamasaki's work, but also because of the resulting loss of prestige to the University.

The report, to be delivered at the next meeting of the Senate, will be a statement of just how the situation appears with respect to the government of the Commonwealth. After the report is given the Faculty Senate will decide whether or not to launch a full scale investigation.

Faculty members have expressed hope that the firm of Saarinen Associates will be retained by the Commonwealth for the Fine Arts Center. The "distinctive qualities" of such a building were mentioned as reasons for a distinguished firm.

ID's Not Transferable

Due to a number of recent complaints from the University's Police Department, Men's and Women's Judiciaries are reminding all students that I.D.'s are not transferable. Severe discipline action will be taken in the case of any further infractions.

Phi Kappa Phi Initiates Scholars

Founded in 1897, Phi Kappa Phi is the national all-university scholastic honor society. Phi Kappa Phi believes that recognition and honor of those students who have achieved intellectually will stimulate other students to work for high scholastic standings. The other primary belief of Phi Kappa Phi is that scholarship is universal, not limited. To be elected in an undergraduate's junior or senior year is one of the highest scholastic honors offered at UMass. It is also open to election of faculty and graduate students.

On December 4, 1963, the following 23 members of the class of 1964 were initiated into Phi

RD's To Present Three One-Acters

by ANN MILLER

An independent student production of three one-act plays by well-known playwrites will be presented by Roister Doisters, the campus dramatic society, officers announced today.

The three one-actors will be Something Unspoken by Tennessee Williams, The American Dream by Edward Albee, Pyramus and Thisbe (from A Midsummer's Night Dream) by William Shakespeare.

Tryouts for the production, which will be given January 31 and February 1 in Bowker Auditorium, will be next Monday and Tuesday.

"We urge everyone to try out, both for parts in the plays and for work on the technical crews," RD President Tom Kerrigan stated, "and emphasize that a student needs absolutely no previous experience or requirements in order to read at tryouts."

Tryouts for Something Unspoken will be Monday at 7 p.m.; for The American Dream Monday at 8:30 p.m.; and for Pyramus and Thisbe Monday at 7:30 p.m. These will be held in Bartlett 121.

Tryouts for all three plays will also be held Tuesday from 4:30 to 6 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

All persons interested in stage work or in work on publicity are asked to come at these times to sign up.

The Williams play has two female parts, The American Dream has a cast of three women and two men, and Shakespeare's work has nine characters.

RD officers said final arrangements had not been completed regarding direction of the plays but would be announced soon.

Roister Doisters, an integral part of UMass life since its inception when UMass was still Aggie, last presented a stage show in Spring 1962. Since then it has worked closely with University Theatre in bringing live theatre to the University campus.

Past productions have ranged from the medieval miracle play, On Corpus Christi Day, to the early '30's hit Death Takes a Holiday to the sell-out Auntie Mame.

Tennessee Williams, one of the best known contemporary American writers, is author of such sensational best-sellers as Cat On A Hot Tin Roof and Night of the Iguana.

Edward Albee is perhaps best known for his Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf which rocked Broadway several years ago.

The traditional tree stands ready for the annual Trim-a-Limb to be held today at 4 p.m. All UMass students are invited to help trim both trees. Decorations will be provided by the Student Union. Refreshments will be served.

Travels In Collegian Montaigne

by JOHN CHILDS

PART II WINTER SANCTUARY

It came to pass that the time of snow fell upon us and we sought warmth in the sanctuary of the natives in the land called Universtayovmass. Leaving our barren winter camp we set out one cold day with two native guides. Hard was the journey. We trecked across great wastes of uprooted land and were sore afraid that a violent shaking of the earth's bowels had caused this. To this fear our guides laughed calling the uprooted land, "Kon-strucshun." Evidently they feared no rapid movements on the part of this "kon-strucshun" for they said no more.

We soon reached the great lake which forms the center of the kingdom of Universtayovmass. Sheets of ice had formed upon it and we were bewildered at the sight of small statues imbedded in the ice. Shaking their heads at our ignorance the guides informed us that the "statues" were in reality living birds, ducks. We were greatly confused as to why they were in the ice. Our guides stated that a deity, called "Redtapism" was responsible. Not wishing to offend the predominate religion we said no more on the matter.

Our sanctuary was at last gained in a great religious temple called by the natives "The Hatch". Here there was a mingling of many races of the kingdom. Rough mountaineers from the hills, Greeks bearing gifts, members of the priesthood, called the "Proferzers", all were to be seen. At seemingly unrelated intervals the call to prayer would rise up from an instrument known as the "Jukeboz". This had an immediate effect on the pious nature of the natives for they would begin to go into esoteric trances through rapid movement of the heads, fingers and so on . . . this pious activity would end after the call to prayer.

As we wandered around our sanctuary our attention became attracted by the gathering of crowds around notices evidently posted by the central government. These notices called, "Fynal-exam-skeduals" are evidently decrees from the central government noting the times and places of execution for deviants from the society. Great fear was in the eyes of the natives as they read these decrees. . . It was with great relief that we left this area of depression.

LETTER

A Direction Of Concern

To the Editor:

It is with a sense of responsibility deepened by the tragic events of the past weeks, that American citizens must contemplate the meaning of Human Rights. "The inherent dignity and . . . the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world." These words, from the Preamble of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, have assumed great personal significance to us who have been so shaken by the division and strife and by the recent tragedy in the United States.

Since 1950, December 10th of each year has been observed by most nations throughout the world as Human Rights Day; December 15th is celebrated in the United States as Bill of Rights Day. Since these fall within a week, the late President had proclaimed December 10th to December 17th as Human Rights Week, urging the nation to demonstrate its support for the principles embodied in the Declaration of Human Rights as it was adopted in 1950 by the UN General Assembly.

Such a Declaration has great moral force, but it is not binding on the members of the U.N., on our government, or on any citizen. Each of us must therefore continue to express our indignation at the viclation of human dignity and human rights. This is a plea for students and faculty as individuals or as spokesmen for their organizations to write to their Senators and Congressmen requesting their support for the prompt passage of Civil Rights legislation. Massachusetts residents should mail letters to:

Senator Edward Kennedy, Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

Representative Silvio O. Conte, House of Representatives, Washington 25, D.C.

There could be no greater memorial to our late President than passage of a bill which would let our people and the whole world know that our concern for human rights is more than mere mouthing of noble sentiments. It may be too much to hope that Civil Rights legislation will be passed during Human Rights Week. Is it too much to hope that the measure may be debated during this session before the nation settles back into complacency or into inaction out of political experiency?

Let us not forget the vehemence of our passionate concern during recent weeks; let us direct it meaningfully toward a vigorous campaign for legislative action in those areas of human rights where our opinions can influence the course taken by our government.

'WHO... ME?'

Not Enough Money?

To the Editor:

Well, the ominous cry of "not enough money and not enough manpower" has sounded once again. We all knew that problems would be encountered when Van Meter was converted to a women's residence hall. Many of the most important ones have been adequately dealt with, but I have become increasingly aware of the fact that the women living in this area have been sadly shortchanged.

A suggestion was made recently to Mr. Harry Hugill, Director of Physical Plant Building, that steps were necessary between Van Meter and Greenough House, so that girls who eat in Greenough would not have to take a rather circuitous route on existing walks to eat their meals. In addition, it was stressed that railings on these existent walks as well as along the length of Clark Hill Road are imperative before the ice and snow of winter accumulate. Although it was admitted that these suggestions were well founded, the "not enough money and not enough manpower" doctrine was summarily employed.

I question the sensibility of this. It is a common occurrence to see young ladies at the bottom of the hill soliciting a ride to Van Meter. Another has been the assortment of bruises sustained while walking down the hill when the pavement is slippery. One girl has already broken several bones in her foot in just such a manner. Yet a day seldom passed when our great and general maintenance department, already overburdened with the profoundest of tasks, is not seen diligently raking leaves in front of the President's house or removing that delightful red scum from the surface of the pond (two men wielding the tools, with a supervisor for each).

The need for immediate action by the proper persons is a foregone conclusion. The railings should have been installed years ago. The steps between Van Meter and Greenough present a newer, but no less serious problem. Even if an argument to the effect that there are no persons available to shovel or sand the steps is used, I am sure that an arrangement can be made between the two residence halls to deal with this matter. So sure am I of the phlegmatic nature of the powers that be, that I would even offer my own back and shovel if the steps were to be made. By all appearances, however, I will be slothfully inactive this winter.

Mili Ball

Dear Miss,

I certainly do hope that you have your date for military Ball by now. Otherwise my last letter was not as successful as I had hoped it would be. In any case this letter is designed to remind you of a few things I neglected in my first letter.

First of all when you are home for Christmas Recess, don't forget to bring back your gown, heels, and any other items that may be essential for the Bali. Now that you have given this man his "excuse" to go, you also have to give him something to be proud of that night, so do your best to appear as stunning as possible. Chances are that it isn't very often that he gets an opportunity to see you in formal attire.

I also have a few hints concerning flowers. Let your date know in plenty of time what color dress you are wearing so that he may order appropriate flowers. Aiso this year's Ball decorations are planned to include a great deal of yellow in them, so you might aiso wish to take this into consideration. A further consideration is the color of your date's uniforn, be it green or biue, depending on his R.O.T.C. affiliation. If your date is not a member of the R.O.T.C. he should wear a tuxedo if possible, and if this is not possible he may wear a dark colored suit, a white shirt with a plain collar, and a biack bow tie.

I sincerely hope that this year's Military Ball is an enjoyable and memorable evening for both yo uand your date.

Confidentially yours,
Mr. Al

C.A. Presents Film Saturday

This Saturday evening the Christian Association will present a French Film "Forbidden Games." The film, which is distributed by the Fellowship Of Reconciliation, is a protest against the cruelties and tragedy of war. Ironically the film will be shown on December seventh, Pearl Harbor Day, which signifies the beginning of World War Two for Americans. The story involves two children who play war games in a graveyard in a bombed out section of France. These children, the unknowing victims of a war for which they could bear no responsibility, express in their grisly play the danger that each man must face in himself—that of becoming unaware of the significance of his own actions to the point where even war can become only a game.

This is the third in a series of films designed to provoke thought and discussion about contemporary problems confronting each of us as human beings. The film will be shown in Bartlett Auditorium at 8:00 P.M., admission is 25 cents. A coffee hour to which all are invited—will follow in Bartlett lounge.

Hootennany Friday 13th

In the true spirit of revelry the Revelers are disregarding the awesome, haunting feeling which traditionally surrounds "Friday the 13th' by presenting a rollicking, entertainment-packed Hootenany on Friday, December 13.

The holiday season will be kicked off in Bowker from 8 until 10 P.M. as music and folk songs fill the air. The entertainment will be provided by University students. By offering students the opportunity to display their abilities it is hoped that the student body will become more aware of the many resources of talented groups on campus.

The proceeds from the night's fun will be used for scholarship. The admission charge is 50c. The evening should prove to be fun and exciting for all. Anyone wishing to participate in the program should contact Mike Paris at AEPi or Donna Logue at Johnson House immediately, since practice sessions will be held this week.

See you on the 13th!

Recent Prints And Paintings Exhibit At Bartlett Hall

A showing of Donald R. Matheson's recent prints and paintings, the fifth exhibit in the University's 1963-64 art exhibition program, opened Tuesday in Bartlett Hall.

The public is cordially invited to the reception, which will open the first one-man show of the current season.

Matheson's exhibit includes etchings, lithographs and mixed media paintings in motifs ranging from the concrete and familiar to the subjective and abstract.

The exhibit will continue through December 31. The gallery will be open until 9 p.m. weekdays and until 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Matheson teaches printmaking, painting and drawing at UMass. He joined the faculty in 1958 when the art department was first organized.

Before coming to the University, Matheson was director of the West Point Museum and director of the Museum of Art at the University of Oklahoma.

Newly Appointed Conductor Lauded

Sunday evening, November 17, at the Lord Jeffery Inn, the faculty, administration and students joined in honoring John A. Jenkins, newly appointed conductor of the University Bands. Present at the annual cheerleaders-band banquet as invited guests were President and Mrs. John W. Lederle, Dean and Mrs. William F. Field, Dean and Mrs. Warren McGuirk, Coach and Mrs. Vic Fusia, and Dean and Mrs. I. Moyer Hunsberger. Dean Hunsberger was guest speaker. Dr. William C. Venman, Assistant to the Provost, was Master of Ceremonies.

The guests noted in their remarks Mr. Jenkins' excellent work in shaping this year's band. Mr. Jenkins, formerly solo cornetist under Dr. William Revelli at the University of Michigan, started his work here during August when he instituted the first band camp. The band camp trained prospective band members in precision drill at the same time emphasizing fine musical sound. After band camp Mr. Jenkins spent long hours over scores and charts arranging original shows for the band. Many pieces heard throughout the season were especially arranged for the band by Mr. Jenkins. Not leaving any details to chance, Mr. Jenkins also travelled to each away stadium in advance of the band's appearance to preview the acoustics of the stadium.

To thank Mr. Jenkins for his work, band members turned the banquet into John A. Jenkins Night at the Lord Jeff. After band members and cheerleaders were presented with their awards, band staff members made special presentations to Mrs. Jenkins and her 2½-year old daughter, Debbie, who was made mascot. Mr. Jenkins was presented with a sweatshirt, a mug of black coffee, and a special plaque to thank him for his work with the band. The inscription on the plaque reads "Presented to John A. Jenkins, Best Marching Band Conductor in the East."

Season Of Santa Music

by SHERRY SPEARS

If you love the season of the Santa, WMUA can be your stockingful of music. Perhaps you're the pre-reformation Scrooge and want stock market results, weather and news. The double d.j.'s Pete Johnson and Mike Duggan of the Tiny Tim's of WMUA "Potpourri" offer this and the chance to have your name on WMUA every week as long as you're in school! Sounds great, but how? It's simple when WMUA is looking for a new name for "Potpourri". Since it's the show with a little of everything, use anything, even your name, in the title. Then write WMUA, % Eng. SPEAR HEARS: Whether you'd like to throw a text out the dorm window or study, no matter what your mood, listen weekday nights to "Shoes Off" (11 p.m.) or, more appropriately for the season, "Overshoes Off" . . . Stabbed in the final act by a thwarted lover . . . Whoops; I'm giving the story away, but that's okay because only the musical score from Bizet's "Carmen" will be broadcast on "Musicale" (Mon/8:00) . . . "It's UMass 90 and the Visitors 0. Stay tuned for Pete Greenwood's "Standing Room Only", exclusively folk music. Featured Saturday is Pete Seeger's newly released "We Shall Overcome", recorded live at Carnegie Hall. Whether it's "Saturday Night" in "Abilene" or Amherst, it's an "SRO" folktastic '63 revue of the best with Peter, Paul and Mary, the Kingston Trio, the Chad Mitchell Trio and Joan Baez . . . Question the guests of Pam Leger's "Interaction" while the program is on the air. WMUA's guests will be a member of the faculty and a UMass student. They will talk and then invite listeners to call in. Dial 2425 this Sunday at 7:30 to question Mr. Scott and Bob Brauer about UMass's Student Union . . . Do you like a lot of noise on Sundays? THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: TOM CASHMAN

Telstar beamed the first transoceanic telecast, and Tom Cashman (B.A., 1957) assumed the responsibility for training personnel and scheduling tours of the antenna complex at Andover, Maine. He also spoke to numerous civic and social groups on the various aspects of Telstar.

Not all of Tom's assignments have offered him the opportunity to participate in a historical event, but as a member of A. T. & T.'s Long Lines Department he is involved in the amazing communications advances of today. Long Lines is responsible for long distance communications, which must be effectively integrated with local services and internal communications systems.

Tom is presently Information Supervisor at White Plains, New York, where he is responsible for keeping the Eastern Area Long Lines employees informed of current telephone developments of local and national importance.

Tom Cashman, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Amherst College Program Raising Money By Gifts

Amherst College, now at the half-way point in its three-year Capital Program, has raised $11,376,000 in new capital funds and pledges since the Program began 18 months ago.

The Program, a drive to raise $17 million for faculty salaries, dormitories, a new library and other major projects, began in March, 1962 and closes in June, 1965. To date, funds have been solicited primarily from large donors. A campaign for gifts ranging from $50,000 to $3,000 has just been initiated.

Recent grants of $75,000 from the James Foundation and $50,000 from the Kresge Foundation and several anonymous gifts from individuals contributed to the half-way total.

FORENSIC SOCIETY

Debaters Upset Some At Vermont

On November 22 the Forensic Society traveled almost two hundred miles to a competition held at the University of Vermont in Burlington, to win more than their share at the tournament, and also setting several of the better known teams back on their heels in some surprising upsets. Among these were Bates, Harvard, and N.Y.U. The varsity affirmative of Mike Farrell and Maureen Flanagan also met two Yankee Conference opponents, University of Maine, and U.V.M. They defeated Maine handily, and lost to Vermont by a single point.

In the wins-losses column, Flanagan and Farrell were 3-2, Jenkins and Rutstein (varsity negative) were 4-1, Laramie and Goldberg (novice affirmative) son (novice negative) were 4-1. son (noive negative) were 4-1. The overall record was 7-3 for the varsity and 6-4 for the novices. This was good enough to place the varsity in a tie for sixth out of forty-four competing schools, and place the novices in the top half of their competition. The year's overall record for the Society after four tournaments stands at highly commendable thirty wins and eighteen losses.

Mili Ball Scheduled For January 4

In compliance with the 30 day mourning period for President Kennedy, the Military Department has rescheduled the 36th Annual Military Ball to January 4, 1964. Other arrangements will remain the same; a free 5 x 7 color photograph of all couples will be given, the music will be the Orchestra of Guy Ormandy, and the intermission entertainment will be Mr. Paul Bartsch.

This is the first year of a voluntary R.O.T.C. unit at the University, however, a large crowd is expected. This year's Ball is open to all students; nonmembers of R.O.T.C. are requested to wear a tuxedo. However, if this is not possible, a black suit with a white shirt and a black bow-tie is acceptable.

Tickets are now on sale in the lobby of the SU, and will remain on sale until the Friday preceding the Ball.

"Guns Of The Trees" By James Mekas Shown In Bartlett Tuesday Night

A member of the American artistic underground who operates out of New York under the name of Jonas Mekas will screen his film, Guns of the Trees, in Bartlett Auditorium Tuesday night at eight o'clock.

Mr. Mekas is Editor-in-Chief and publisher of the periodical "Film Culture," and also writes a weekly film column for the "Village Voice."

In 1962 he helped found the New American Cinema Group, from whose members have come films which Mekas calls "the best of contemporary cinema.' He writes, "Many of these movies are illuminating in opening up sensibilities and experiences never before recorded in the American arts, a content which Baudelaire, the Marquis de Sade, and Rimbaud gave to the world a century ago and which Burroughs (author of "Naked Lunch") gave to American literature three years ago."

While Mr. Mekas decries the fact that "it is a very bad state of affairs when the best of contemporary cinema can not be seen at all," he senses that it is this very state of affairs that gives his work much of its value when he says, "I don't want any part of the big game," and "the new film-maker is not interested in public acceptance."

According to critic Joseph Freeman, "If we decipher the metaphors of Guns of the Trees —Mekas calls it his meditation on love and death in a period of rebirth—we can see that its basic theme is the human condition in our time, envisioned under the aspect of eternity. On the realistic level the film deals with the impact of the cries of the age on five Americans, all in their early twenties, who live in downtown Manhattan."

The Art Club, which is sponsoring the event, has announced that Mr. Mekas will give an informal talk after the showing of the film.

1. Now that I'm a senior I have to start thinking about my future. Will you marry me?

Will you be able to give me all the things I crave—like pizza pie and chow mein?

2. I've lined up a terrific job. There's a choice of training programs, good starting salary, challenging work, and the chance to move up. That's Equitable.

I agree—but what's the company's name?

3. Equitable—it's Equitable.

It certainly is. It's also fair, square, and just. But I would still like to know the name of the company.

4. We're not communicating. I keep telling you it's Equitable—and you keep asking what's the name.

I keep agreeing your job sounds good. But you stubbornly refuse to tell me who you're going to work for.

5. Can it be you never listen to my words? Is it possible that what I thought was a real relationship was but a romantic fantasy?

Is it conceivable that what I took to be a solid foundation was just a house of cards? That what I thought was a bright flame was merely an emotional flicker?

6. I'd hate to lose you, but at least I'll still have my job with Equitable—The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Oh, The Equitable. Why didn't you say so? We'll have a June wedding.

For information about career opportunities at Equitable, see your Placement Officer, or write to William E. Blevins, Employment Manager.

Blood Donor Days Dated As Success

At the Annual University Blood Donor Days, held on Mon., Tues., and Wed., Nov. 18, 19 and 20 in the Commonwealth Room of the SU, 589 pints of blood were collected by the Hampshire County Chapter of The American Red Cross.

Sponsored by the Campus Religious Council, in conjunction with the University Women, this year's blood bank was open only to the student body, and the response was most heartening. Last year 975 students pledged blood, and 495 actually donated, while this year 589 of 940 who signed up kept their appointments and gave a pint of blood. The Campus Religious Council would like to thank the campus as a whole for the excellent cooperation that it gave during the entire blood drive.

A ROMAN AFFAIR

Five Redmen Place On All Yankee Conference Team

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS REDMEN, who made shambles of the Yankee Conference race, placed five men on the all-Conference team, it was announced by the Conference publicity office today. All six teams are represented with Rhode Island gaining two spots and Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Connecticut, one each.

Jerry Whelchel, a 5-11 junior from Cochituate, Mass., who gained 304 yard rushing, 848 yards passing and scored 64 points, is named as quarterback for the second successive year. Joining Whelchel as repeaters from the 1962 team are Bob Tedoldi of Massachusetts, a guard, and Dan Sereika of New Hampshire, a halfback. Tedoldi, a senior from Wellesley, Mass., is 5-10 and weighs 215 pounds. Sereika, a senior who set a new conference record with an 85-yard punt against Maine, is 6-1, weighs 200-pounds and hails from Winchester, Mass.

Other backfield selectees are Ken Burton of Vermont and Tony "The Brahma" Tetro of Rhode Island. Burton, a 6-foot, 195-pound senior from Middlebury, paced the Catamounts to their best conference record in history, while Tetro, a 217-pound senior, was the most consistent back for the surprising Rams.

Two sophomores from the unbeaten Redmen took over the end spots by wide margins. Bob Meers, a 6-3, 205-pounder from Hudson, was a unanimous selection at one end position while Milt Morin, a 6-3, 225-pounder from Leominster, was a close second.

Two 234-pounders were selected for the tackle spots. Co-Captain Paul Graham of Massachusetts, a senior from Malden, and Joe Buesing, of Rhode Island, a junior from Union City, N.J. were named. Phil Soule, a 228-pound senior from Portland, and the University of Maine, joins Tedoldi at the guard posts. Dave Kupec, a junior from Ossining, N.Y., and the University of Connecticut, was selected for the center spot.

The second team is as follows: Ends—Paul Toussaint, Vermont; and Joe Simeone, Connecticut; Tackles — Ernie Smith, Maine; and Al Kidder, New Hampshire; Guards—Ron Hertel and George Oelze, both of Vermont; Center —Rusty Brink, Maine; Quarterback — Dick DeVarney, Maine; Halfbacks—Dave Korponai, Connecticut, and Ken Paim, Massachusetts; and Fullback — Brian Smith, Connecticut.

Honorable mention went to the following: End—Ned Sherry, Maine; Tackles—Tom Mongeon, Vermont, and Jeff McConnell, Connecticut; Guard—Ray Sawyer, Maine; Center—Bernie Dallas, Massachusetts; Quarterback —Lloyd Wells, New Hampshire; Halfbacks—Fred Lewis, Massachusetts; and Mike Haley, Maine; Fullbacks — Mike Ross, Massachusetts; Fred DiQuattro and Mike Eastwood, both of New Hampshire.

Swimmers Bow To MIT

by BUD PRATT

THE REDMEN VARSITY SWIMMING TEAM, possessed of some outstanding individual performers but somewhat lacking in depth, fell to defeat 53-42 before a strong and deep M.I.T. squad at Cambridge, Wednesday.

The meet saw a most rare event in the defeat of Mike Rothschild in the 200 yard freestyle. The UM co-capt. was nosed out in this event, but avenged this embarrassment by romping to victory in the 500 yd. freestyle.

Co-capt. Mike Bjornholm, his kick weakened by a broken toe, still took firsts in the 50 yd. freestyle and 200 yd. backstroke.

Charlie Monnier and John Grybko finished one-two in the 200 yd. breaststroke; with Charlie's time of 2:38.5 just four seconds off his own UM record. And this, the opening meet, is early in the season to be thinking about breaking records.

At the end of last season both Bjornholm and Rothschild were disposing of UM and pool records with casual regularity.

Second place points were won by Dick Daniels (100 yd freestyle) and Jim O'Sullivan (200 yd. butterfly), while Harley and Koss picked up a point apiece in diving and backstroke respectively.

A STRONG VICTORY IN THE FINAL RELAY by the team of Cowern, Daniels, Rothschild, and Bjrnholm, was simply not enough to pull out a victory for the day. However, coach Joe Rogers, hot off last year's winning season, was not displeased with the performance of his squad in its debut against a powerful M.I.T. unit. The next meet is at Amherst College Friday, Dec. 6, at eight o'clock.

Spirit Leads X-Country Team

by GENE COLBURN

THE VARSITY CROSS COUNTRY TEAM recently closed out its season with a 8-2 dual meet record, a second place finish in the New Englands, and a 14th in the IC4A's. Thus the team added still another amazing page to Coach Footricks record book. From 1954 to 1963 coach Footrick has complied an overall record of 52-22. Since 1957, when the Redmen had their first winning season the team has been 44-14. From 1960 to present the record has been 30-9, for a winning percentage of 77%.

The teams performance in NE championship meets is just as great. Since 1954 the Redmen have finished lower than 5th only once, and that was a 6th place finish in 1954. The team won the meet in '61, and finished second in '60 and '62. In the Yankee Conference the Redmen have finished lower then third only twice, and have won the title three times (1960-62.)

This years varsity testifies to their success. None of the runners were really well known while in high school, yet their potential was recognized. With Coach Cobb's springboard the boys have been molded into a fine team by Coach Footrick. At the start of the season the only bright spot appeared to be Bob Brouillet, Tom Panke, Bob Ramsey, and Bob Golveo were all expected to help, but it was not known how good they would be, or how Gene Colburn, Bob Larson, and Al McPhail would do. Through patience and hard work coach Footrick turned what was supposed to be just a fair team into one which UMass. could be proud of. After losing their first meet, the Redmen won all the remaining meets, including the last two by a combined total of 3 points.

Throughout the season, the team's performance was marked by its highly competitive spirit. This spirit enabled the Redmen to upset favored Providence and New Hampshire, and beat Springfield. The win over Springfield probably best showed this spirit, as both teams were almost exactly even; and it was UMass's superior desire that decided the meet.

A COACH'S REAL ABILITY can only be measured by how his contemporaries rate him. When the Redmen took 14th place in the IC4A's some people felt it was a poor showing. However, many of the coaches there expressed amazement at Coach Footrick's ability to turn out such fine teams without scholarships. With Bob Brouillet at the nationals, Mr. Footrick was once again complimented by his contemporaries on his fine coaching job. Cross country certainly does not have the glamour and the glory of other sports, but thanks to Coach Footrick's diligent efforts the varsity cross-country team has helped bring praise and recognition to UMass.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Redmen 1963 UPI Major New England Team Of The Year

THE BEST FOOTBALL TEAM IN UMASS HISTORY has been chosen United Press International New England college major team of 1963 replacing B.C. which headed the poll all season.

Quaterback Jerry Whelchel of Cochituate and Guard Peter Pietz of Belmont have been named Co-Captains of the University of Massachusetts football team for the 1964 season by a vote of the Redmen lettermen.

WHELCHEL was the offensive sprakplug of the undefeated Redmen this fall. A bona fide triple threat with his passing, running and kicking Jerry led the team to its first outright Yankee Conference championship. He paced the team in scoring (ranking second in New England), was tops in rushing with 304 yards and completed 53 of 87 passes for 848 yards and nine touchdowns. He was also rated as the top UMass defensive back.

PIETZ has been a starter and letterwinner for two seasons. Although not the spectacular type Peter has been terrifically consistent both on offense and as a linebacker on defense. The former Belmont High star was one of the chief reasons the UMass line limited the opposition to just 53 yards rushing per game and only 12 points all year.

Pietz and Whelchel were co-captains of the Redmen frosh team three years ago. In their two varsity seasons they have helped the Redmen compile a 14-3-1 record. Both players have won numerous honors with Whelchel being a double All Yankee Conference selection.

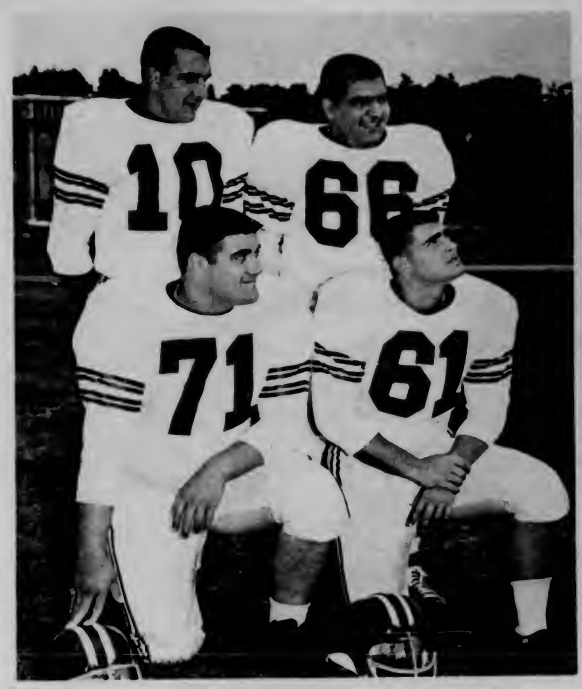
Retiring Co-Captain Paul Graham has been named to the Small College All American First Team and the UPI All American Honorable Mention. Senior Bob Tedoldi was mentioned in a Boston paper as a possible Pro draft choice. Boston Patriots Coach Mike Holovak listed halfback Fred Lewis as possible draft choice for the Pats but the Oakland Raiders of the same league beat Holovak to Lewis.

The undefeated team will be honored at a banquet open to everyone to be held Tuesday evening December 17th at 6:15 p.m. in the Main Ballroom of the Student Union.

John Michelson, head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, will be one of the featured speakers and Governor Endicott Peabody will be among the head table guests. N. V. "Swede" Nelson, one of New England's most popular banquet personalities, will also be present to help honor the Redmen grid champions.

During the past few weeks increasing amounts of recognition have been bestowed upon this undefeated team, and one of the finest honors, 1st place in the United Press International New England Major College Poll, will be feted with a plaque presented by UPI sports editor Dick Dew.

In as much as there has been many requests to help honor the team Dean McGuirk indicated that students, faculty, staff, and friends of football every where are cordially invited to attend the banquet. Tickets at $4.00 may be secured in Room 10A of the Men's Physical Education Building or else at Augie Smoke Shop on North Pleasant St. in Amherst.



Kneeling: Paul Graham, Small College All-American and Peter Pietz, 1964 Co-Captain. Standing: 1964 Co-Captain Jerry Whelchel and Bob Tedoldi, possible pro draft choice.

Rugged Five For Basketball

by JOHN GOODRICH

TUESDAY'S WIN over the Boston University Terriers, Coach Orr remarked, "It was a real team effort. The team played with a lot of desire." The Redmen placed five men in double figures scoring as well as having an evenly distributed effort on rebounding.

Some things that missed Wednesday's write-up that should be noted here just so they won't go unmentioned. As is readily seen, the new style of basketball the team employes this year is as exciting to see as any seen at UMass in along while. The fast break and tight defense provide for plenty of action for the fans. Until the team members learn the moves of their teammates, however, the spectators will see a few mistakes. A ball thrown away on a break or a travelling violation can be expected. The team kept the mistakes at a minimum in the first game and it really showed.

Most teams like to start off the year with an easy game or two so they can get organized before they reach the meat of their schedule. The Redmen have no such opportunity. In their next five games before Christmas they face Rutgers, UConn, Boston College, UNH, and Holy Cross. None of these games fall into the so-called breather category. The Redmen have to avoid any letdowns and keep at a fast pace. With a coach like Johnny Orr the team can always be counted on to give a good account of itself.

REBOUNDS: 5'7" Ken Leary was the smallest man on the court Tuesday . . . Yet he still managed to score 17 points and lead in assists for BU . . . Some of his passes were errant in the early going but he settled down.

Tom Ryan made a pair of spectacular assists in the second half . . . One came on a pass from Bernard which Ryan tapped to Twitchell as he fell out of bounds . . . Twitch was left with an easy layup . . . Chuck O'Rourke moved to the outside for some shots . . . If he can hit from out there he could become a big man by moving the defensive center out to cover him.

All three of the top teams in the Yankee Conference opened with wins . . . RI on Monday, UMass on Tuesday, and UConn on Wednesday all triumphed . . .

Gymnasts Open Saturday Against Southern Conn.

by BEN BARCLAY

TOMORROW THE VARSITY GYMNASTICS TEAM opens its season. The team will travel to New Haven, Connecticut to face the gymnastics team of Southern Connecticut State College.

Southern Connecticut is coached by two-time Olympian Abraham Grossfeld. His squad has two outstanding veterans, Dan Sternback and Greg Speck, who sparked Southern Conn. to its victory over U of Mass last year by the score of 48-47.

Capt. Dave Williams, first on the parallel bars and second on the side horse at the New England Gymnastic Clinic Championship held here last week, along with Stan Braillier and Dan St. John should offset their two top men. After that Coach Kjeldson believes that the team can win on depth. Consisting of Felix Mosakewicz, Al Cohen, "Willy" Heinold, Dick Cardiff, Jim Dusenbury, and Ed Frado.

Unfortunately one of the team's better men, Dick Cardiff, has been hampered with a slight hip injury which might have a definite effect on the team.

GYMNAST OF THE WEEK "Willy" Heinold who joined the team after a back injury from frosh football last year is making considerable progress and will participate in both the high bar and free exercise. Only a sophomore "Willy" has combined size, strength and agility to make him a performer of excellent potential.

There will be a meeting of the complete Collegian Sports Staff on Sunday, Dec. 8 at 4 p.m. in the Collegian Office.

ROTC Program Changes Approved By House

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The House Armed Services Committee this week (Nov. 19) apmittee has recently approved radical changes in Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) programs for U.S. colleges and universities, including a few unwanted by higher education.

Basically, the new program is voluntary—the chief concern of land grant colleges which were forced to use critically needed facilities to teach ROTC for masses of incoming freshmen.

If the new ROTC plan is approved, as expected, by Congress, it would permit many institutions to use ROTC classroom space for regular academic programs. The switch, however, is underway already in many large state universities in anticipation of the new program which has been in the works for almost three years.

Changed during subcommittee hearings on the legislation for ROTC was a key section worked out by the Defense Department and higher education officials.

They had proposed switching ROTC to a strict two-year program offered on advanced levels such as the junior and senior programs now in effect at most schools.

Revamped by the subcommittee headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., the bill now provides that the two year program would be optional along with the present four year system.

However, many universities are expected to switch to the two-year program as soon as it is established.

Hebert told CPS in an interview that the two year program would permit a student "an opportunity to enter ROTC training as late as the completion of their sophomore year of college."

Students who wish to enroll in the two-year program must first complete a six-to-eight week accelerated summer training period as privates. Pentagon officials hope to weed out physically and mentally unqualified applicants during these summer sessions and select only those with long-range officer capabilities.

Selectivity has been the main cry of defense officials. While thousands of freshmen were once forced into the programs, the services lost their large investments when most of the students quit after their second year.

By permitting both the students and the services to be choosy, officials hope to end up with more officers at less cost.

Another new idea included in the legislation was borrowed from the Navy's ROTC program. The Navy has long provided scholarships for students deemed qualified for their college programs. The attached string means four years active duty upon graduation.

CAROL RICCI, LAST YEAR'S WINTER CARNI QUEEN

Tuesday, Dec. 10, elections will be held to choose five candidates for queen of the beautiful Winter Carnival spectacle. Univ. Symphony Makes Debut Thursday Night

The University Symphony Orchestra, under conductor Ronald Steele, will present its first public concert Thursday, Dec. 12 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

According to the conductor, everyone connected with the symphony has worked long and hard to make the concert a success. Steele says the orchestra members' efforts have resulted in better and better rehearsals in recent weeks.

Applications from musicians have picked up slightly, Steele said, and the entire orchestra is in high spirits about the debut concert. When the orchestra takes the stage Thursday night it will include about 64 musicians—UMass students and faculty, students from Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges, and local townspeople.

Thursday's concert will begin with Handel's "Water Music Suite." Pianist Henry Allaine and the orchestra's string section will then perform Ernest Bloch's "Concerto Grosso."

After intermission the orchestra will present the first campus performance of "Pastorale for Chamber Orchestra" by Elli-

Baker Blaze Summons Fire Dept.

What appeared to be a serious fire on the roof of Baker Dormitory summoned three Amherst fire department companies and one ladder company last night.

The fire was caused by a clogged screen on top of an incinerator chimney. No real damage other than a few broken windows has been reported. University police disbursed the crowd which had gathered to view the action.

A Letter To Santa

Dear Santa,

As you probably know Christmas is quickly approaching. We at the Collegian are aware that you must be very busy and we don't wish to burden you with any more than you already have. But we are a little worried. You see, at the University of Mass. where so many things are happening, where old conceptions are becoming new realities, so much could go wrong. There is much you could do for us here, Santa.

For instance, we have been trying to build several dormitories up beside Van Meter, which is a monstrosity in itself. Well, these dormitories are really overdue. We were wondering if you could give us some assurance that they will be done by the beginning of next school year.

Secondly, finals are approaching quickly. We were wondering if you could give us a reading period. Just two or three days. There has been a lot of talk and we understand that there is a good chance that our wish may come true. We hope so!

Thirdly, as the University grows there has been so much concern with prestige that its most important function has been sometimes ignored. That is to develop rational undergraduates. Instead, a great deal of emphasis has been placed on the graduate school. We hope that you will give wisdom to those determining the policy of the University.

And lastly, we have a student representative body on campus called the Student Senate. In some ways we are very proud of it for it is very careful with our money. Yet, at times we become really ashamed of the Senators when they sometimes get involved in their own pettiness. At times nothing gets accomplished, and it is very disheartening to the whole University. Please give them discretion and maturity for Christmas.

THE PARIAH

Republican Or Democrat

by JAMES R. CRAWFORD

Coupled with the remarkable response of all world leaders to the death of President Kennedy was the anguished mourning of millions of the world's poor for this rich man's son. For the late-President had a massive following in the lower classes, because of his frequent support and notable initiation of welfare legislation.

What is it that makes a wealthy man a supporter of welfare programs? One can say Lyndon Johnson is a Democrat because he comes from the South, but, knowing of the conservatism prevalent among Southern Democrats, his liberalism is probably a political liability. Franklin Roosevelt could easily have been a Republican, witness the similarity of his pre-presidential career to Nelson Rockefeller's. One of the reasons Roosevelt adopted the welfare ideology was that he was "soft-hearted," that the tragedy of the nation's poor moved him profoundly, that he was concerned.

Some of us may remember that, after his success in World War II, General Eisenhower was offered the Democratic nomination for President in 1948; not politically committed, he refused. Later, of course, he accepted the Republican nomination. In so doing, he made a value judgment. So too must all of us, whether great leaders or anonymous voters, judge whether this nation is to foster the ideals of "rugged individualism," states' rights, and John Birchery, or their antipodes, mercy, concern, and government action. In making their decision, many look to the examples of tough but tender men like Roosevelt and Kennedy, who have identified modern liberalism with a "soft-hearted" concern for Newburgh mothers, Harlem Negroes, and other "have-nots."

TERRY'S CORNER

Ducks, Commons, Ed Block

by TERRY STOCK

Dear Terry,

Each day, as I pass the Campus pond, I notice with dismay that our ducks and swans are slowly but surely being enclosed in the ice. I shiver with compassion for these poor, about-to-be-frozen-in creatures, and constantly hope that an influential someone will use his authority to have them removed to a warm, sunny place.

What's going to be done about this situation, and who is responsible for having so cruelly left them outside in this cold weather?

(M.C. '67) A Sypathetic Student

Dear M.C.,

Many students have shown concern because our ducks and swans are being forced to paddle in small and smaller circles each day, as the ice closes in around them. You may stop shivering, however. According to Dr. David Wetherbee of the Department of Poultry, the man directly responsible for the birds, our ducks are non-migratory, and the cold weather simply doesn't bother them. Because of ice skating season, they will be taken to Dr. Wetherbee's farm this week (where they will be left outside) and returned when the skating season has ended.

Dear Terry,

I've been tolerating the poor quality of the commons food for 2½ years. Recently a friend of mine got sick with food poisoning after eating a typical commons' dinner. Since then I have understandably found it difficult to swallow a mouthful of food there without gagging.

I would like to know who sets and enforces the sanitation standards of the commons. May we look foreward to any improvement in the quality of the food?

Thank you.

R. B. '64

Dear R.B.,

The sanitation standards of the commons are state regulated and directly enforced by Mr. John Martin, Commons Manager. Inspections are made periodically by the Department of Health and reported to Dr. Gage, head of the Student Health Service.

Said Dr. Gage, "The bacteria count of the food has never been reported as abnormal or below acceptable standards during my 4½ years at the University. If a student had contracted food poisoning at the commons, many other students would have shown similar symptoms."

Dr. Gage stated that the completion of the new commons will hopefully mean additional personnel to supervise cooking conditions, food preparations, food quality, and methods of sanitation control. "The present commons is composed of very capable people," he continued, "but it is sadly understaffed."

Perhaps, R.B., the future will bring an end to hair intermingled with food, stale bread, sour milk, and other such commons problems.

Dear Terry,

Why is the Education Block only worth 12 credits?

N. E. '65

Dear N. E.

This is because only 2 courses plus student teaching are required. The 2 courses, Principles and Methods of Teaching (Ed. 52) and Secondary School Curriculum (Ed. 88), are 3 credits each. Student teaching is 6 credits.

English majors may take English 51 and social studies majors may take government 96 if they wish to earn 3 additional credits.

Ed. note: Address your question, gripe, complaint, etc. To Terry's Corner, Collegian, Office, Student Union.

A REVIEW

GHOSTS

by ROBERT THORNLEY

Saturday night in Bowker Auditorium we were privileged to witness Miss Sheila Ferrini's portrayal of Mrs. Alving, the main character in Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts." Miss Ferrini not only brilliantly portrayed the woman who stayed, but also poignantly and eloquently the woman who was left alone with her ghosts. From the moment Miss Ferrini walked on stage one was aware of the quiet great strength that only an Ibsen female possesses. She set the mood of the play and when she walked off stage the mood remained, waiting for her return.

Miss Ferrini was well supported by David Manley who played Paster Manders. He included just the right amount of humor to make the hypocritical pastor believable. Peter Stelzer's characterization of the dying son Oswald was a sometime thing. He went unconcernedly from a world-weary young man to a rather petulant young boy. Only in the final scene was he able to convey the tragedy of his situation.

The play opens with a scene between Regina the maid, played wit ha great deal of fire and feeling by Patricia Long and her alleged father Engstrand played by Jim Wrynn. Wrynn in later scenes with the pastor is able to convincingly and subtly convey the will in Engstrand's character.

The major flaw of the production was in the pacing. The fast pacing was so consistent that at times it seemed as if the actors could hear someone in the wings saying "faster." We feel that much feeling was sacrificed because of this. It also amazes us that the actors lost none of their lines running through their obstacle course set.

The technical crew is to be congratulated on the very effective lighting. The darkening of the set during Oswald's confession of his illness to his mother helped create the somber mood desired. The sunrise in the last scene could truly move someone to say, "Yes, there are still things worth living for."

"Ghosts" was produced by the University Theatre organization and was directed by Harry Mahnken. Mr. Mahnken's interpretation of this dated social drama lifted it out of its social context and gave it to Miss Ferrini as a triumph in fine acting.

Letters To The Editor

THEY CANNOT AND NEVER WILL

Dear Editor:

We would at this time like to congratulate the History and Government Departments for their joint sponsorship of Dr. John P. Roche, Chairman of the Political Science Department of Brandeis University. Dr. Roche, who spoke to an overflow crowd at the Middlesex room, discussed the development of civil rights and liberties over the last century. It was the opinion of many who attended this lecture that it was one of the most interesting ever presented at the University.

Other organizations, namely the Distinguished Visitors Program, whose duty it is to bring guest speakers to the University would do well not to consider just the name of the speaker but to consider also the quality of what he has to offer to the University campus. While, indeed, many of its presentations have been worthwhile, the DVP has fallen down we believe, in regards to interesting speakers. They should somehow divorce themselves from the idea that they have to please everyone on campus. They cannot and never will.

What is needed, we feel, is a revaluation by the DVP, as to what and who is interesting to the University. A good example has been set by the History and Government Departments and by the Political Science Association. They, however, are limited in funds and much of their burden should be taken up by the DVP which has funds at its disposal. Again we would commend the History and Government Departments for their continued interests in behalf of the students at the University.

FILTHY YAHOO

To the Editor:

After two and a half years as a student in good standing at this University, I feel that the time has come to speak out against the foulest abuse ever procreated by this same University (above and beyond the usual administrative catastrophes). I am referring, of course, to Yahoo. I read all issues faithfully, not only because I have paid for them (albeit without my knowledge or consent), but also because I keep hoping to see something that will restore my faith in humanity. To that end, I have wallowed through smut, amorality, and iconoclasm in the hope of finding some little glimmer of human decency, and I find none. I find only page after page of blatant sexual references, pictures with anti-religious captions, and a general tone of disrespect and disregard which I find abhorrent. I have given up hope. I can only conclude that Yahoo is a degenerate and decadent piece of material, not even worthy of taking the place of the Sears and Roebucks catalogues in my outhouse. In short, I find Yahoo to be a very poor excuse for a magazine, and a contributor to the increasingly delinquent morals of our American youth. I, for one, protest.

Sincerely,
D.A.R.

Sailing Club Schedules 9 Meets

At the New England Inter-Collegiate Sailing Association conference which was held at M.I.T. on December 7, 1963, the UMass sailing association scheduled nine meets for the coming year. Because the Sailing Club is not able, at this point, to finance its own boats, all of the meets will be held at the location of the other clubs.

Among those schools that have been scheduled are Harvard, Wesleyan, Coast Guard, Bowdoin, Williams, Merrimac, Tufts, Boston University, M.I.T., and several Yankee Conference schools. Several of the meets will take place at Coast Guard on 24 Raven Sloops.

The most important regatta will be that with M.I.T., the present N.E.I.S.A. champions, on April 19, 1964. All the major schools in the East will also be participating in this event.

As a result of a luncheon Doug Pearsall and Al Gehring recently attended with Leonard Fowle, Jack Wood, and several athletic directors from major eastern schools, further plans were made for the opening of Quabbin Reservoir and for the purchasing of boats for the club.

More information concerning the proposed schedule will be discussed at the next Sailing Club meeting this Wednesday evening. Films will be shown of the America's Cup competition and it is hoped that all those interested will attend. Further details regarding the time and place of the meeting will be announced in Wednesday's Collegian.

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY

If you have been reading this column—and I hope you have; I mean I genuinely hope so; I mean it does not profit me one penny whether you read this column or not; I mean I am paid every week by the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes and my emolument is not affected in any way by the number of people who read or fail to read this column—an act of generosity perfectly characteristic of the makers of Marlboro, you would say if you knew them as I do; I mean here are tobacconists gray at the temples and full of honors who approach their art as eagerly, as dewy-eyed as the youngest of practitioners; I mean the purpose of the Marlboro makers is simply to put the best of all possible filters behind the best of all possible tobaccos and then go, heads high, into the market place with their wares, confident that the inborn sense of right and wrong, of good and bad, of worthy and unworthy, which is the natural instinct of every American, will result in a modest return to themselves for their long hours and dedicated labors—not, let me hasten to add, that money is of first importance to the makers of Marlboro; all these simple men require is plain, wholesome food, plenty of Marlboros, and the knowledge that they have scattered a bit of sunshine into the lives of smokers everywhere; if, I say, you have been reading this column, you may remember that last week we started to discuss Christmas gifts.

We agreed, of course, to give cartons of Marlboro to all our friends and also to as many total strangers as possible. Today let us look into some other welcome gifts.

Do you know someone who is interested in American history? If so, he will surely appreciate a statuette of Millard Fillmore with a clock in the stomach. (Mr. Fillmore, incidentally, was the only American president with a clock in the stomach. James K. Polk had a stem-winder in his head, and William Henry Harrison chimed the quarter-hour, but only Mr. Fillmore, of all our chief executives, had a clock in the stomach. Franklin Pierce had a sweep second hand and Zachary Taylor had seventeen jewels, but, I repeat, Mr. Fillmore and Mr. Fillmore alone had a clock in the stomach. Some say that Mr. Fillmore was also the first president with power steering, but most historians assign this distinction to Chester A. Arthur. However, it has been established beyond doubt that Mr. Fillmore was the first president with a thermostat. Small wonder they called him Old Hickory!)

But I digress. To get back to welcome and unusual Christmas gifts, here's one that's sure to please—a gift certificate from the American Chiropractic Society. Accompanying each certificate is this winsome little poem:

Merry Christmas, Happy New Year,
Joyous sacro-iliac!
May your spine forever shine,
Blessings on your aching back.
May your lumbar ne'er grow number,
May your backbone ne'er dislodge,
May your caudal never dawdle,
Joyeux Noel! Heureux massage!

The bill would permit the Air Force and Army to provide scholarships and other grants to students selected for the ROTC programs. They would also be required to spend four years on active duty once commissioned.

The new program will also include summer sessions for students enrolled in the two year program after being accepted. The cost of all changes was estimated at about $10 million annually.

The House group also voted to raise retainer pay for all students in the advanced ROTC program from $27 to $50 a month. It's the first pay raise for those students since 1950.

The only snag preventing quick house approval of the bill might come in connection with the high school section also covered in the ROTC revamping.

The parent committee rejected a subcommittee amendment to refuse the junior ROTC program to high schools where admission is denied to students because of race or color by a 17 to 14 vote.

Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., who proposed the defeated amendment, said he would offer it again when the bill reaches the floor. A racial squabble could develop, killing the entire program, but congressional sources deemed it unlikely.

Roche Stresses Popular Concern For Civil Rights

by LORNA SASS

An alert and interested audience greeted Professor John Roche of Brandeis University, December 6 in the Middlesex Room. Professor Roche, National Chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, spoke on "The Quest for the Dream—the Development of Human Rights in America" which is the title of his recently published book.

Speaking with the premise that "personal anecdotes are an integral part of one's political theory," Professor Roche provided an animated and fascinating discussion of the status of civil rights in the early nineteenth century and twentieth centuries as compared with today. "In the 1800's the web of common law was thrown over every non-conformist or idealist.

In the early 1900's Martin Luther King and demonstrators in Birmingham would have been shot down right on the spot."

"Today neither these nor many other injustices common then are permitted to take place. We have an enormous number of problems still unsolved but we now have a strong precedent of civil liberties such as the National Labor Relations Act. The struggles of private organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union or the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have really gotten out there and come to bat with many pertinent problems.

"We are inclined to believe that things are worse today because we hear more about racial discrimination, but this awareness is a positive sign of concern. We can take some pride in the obstacles we've overcome to create such concern. This by no means means we're through, but it's accomplishments of this nature which serve as eternal satisfaction in the quest of dreams."

A question and answer period followed, moderated by Professor Howard H. Quint, Chairman of the University History Department. Mr. Quint also informed the audience of Professor Roche's recent article "Memo to Today's Young Radicals" which appeared in the New York Times Magazine.

Students Have Big Voice In Operation Of Union

"Through its various boards, committees, and staff, the Student Union provides a cultural, social, and recreational program. aiming to make free time activity a cooperative factor with study in education."

It is with this thought in mind that the Student Union provides the opportunity to any University student to participate in the operation or programming of the Union building. Through official participation on the Student Union Board of Governors and membership on Union program committees or through informal participation in the program activities, social activities, or general use, each student has the chance to use the Union building.

The Student Union Program Council is charged with the responsibility of evaluating, selecting, planning, and executing a variety of campus activities. The Council attempts to provide a broad base of new activities that will be of interest to each student.

The Program Council is comprised of the chairmen of the various program committees plus the Student Union Program Advisor. This group meets weekly to discuss organization and scheduling of activities and to approve the recommendations of the various committees. Program activities are paid for by the income of various activities plus a budgeted amount from the Student Union General Fund. The total budget for the current year amounts to approximately $14,000.

Any interested student may apply for membership on one of the seven Program Council subcommittees: Arts and Music, Dance, Games and Tournaments, Movies, Special Events, Publicity, and Personnel. Students are interviewed by members of the Council and if selected, are assigned to the committee of their choice. Each committee member has the opportunity to move up to position of committee chairman and hence become a member of the Program Council; this advancement is based on the merit of the individual.

Congress Stymies Aid To Ed. Bill

WASHINGTON (CPS) — A stalemate between House and Senate education leaders—with both sides accusing each other of congressional blackmail — has apparently killed hopes for any aid to education legislation this year.

At the heart of the controversy is a split between House-Senate conferees over a compromise version of the Vocational Aid Education Bill.

The joint conferees have hammered out a compromise version of a bill to aid colleges and universities with loans and grants over a five year period to build campus facilities.

The "Bricks and Mortar" bill sailed through the House Nov. 6 and needs only quick Senate approval.

But the education conferees of both Houses haven't met since Nov. 8 to mold a compromise version of House and Senate vocational aid legislation.

While they are at odds on many points of the vocational bill, the chief road block is the formula to be used in distributing program funds. The Senate wants a formula based on per capita income, while the House prefers one based on population. The Senate formula would favor poorer states in the South, while the House plan would help Northern states with large populations.

Another point conferees must resolve is the NDEA program. The Senate wants to extend NDEA for three years. The House wants a simple extension for one year. The most popular college aid program expires next summer if not given new congressional authority.

Redmen Indoor Track Team To Participate In K of C Meet

by MARSHALL KAROL

THE INDOOR TRACK SEASON IS OFFICIALLY UNDERWAY THIS WEEK. Under the direction of Coach Footrick, the Redmen are hoping to emulate last year's fine record of five wins and one loss.

The 1963-64 team is led by junior co-captains Fred Lewis and Dave Sadowsky. Lewis, a highly versatile performer, participates in the dash, broadjump, and high jump, and last year was second only to Dick Ward as a point-getter. Sadowsky has proved himself to be a consistent pole vaulter of excellent potential who should rise to new heights and new records. The mile and two mile events will be led by Bob "Digger" Brouillet, who should continue to break records and establish himself among the best in the East. He will be followed closely by veterans Tom Panke, Bob Ramsey, Jim Wrynn and Bob Molvar, last year's frosh standout. The 1,000 yard distance will be covered by Gene Colburn, Bob Larson and Molvar, all of whom should deliver consistent performances.

Heavy competition will prevail in the mile relay. Craig Ericson, Paul Caisse, and Doug Sloan will fight for top position, and should be challenged closely by Bill Forand and Basil Robinson. This personnel gives the Redmen one of the finest mile relays they have had in recent years.

The dashmen will be co-captain Fred Lewis and sophomore John Mederios. Last year, Lewis came within .1 of a second of the record, while Mederios proved to be a top performer for the little Redmen. Both are standouts in the broadjump and will also participate in the high jump.

Last year the high and low hurdle events were detrimental to the team's point scoring ability. However, senior John Harrington, supported by sophomores John Mederios and Pete McKenney are hoping to reverse last year's trend.

THE FIELD EVENTS are well situated with weightmen Costa Anagostopulus, freshman record holder in the hammer, and big Milty Morin, freshmen record holder in the shotput. Backing Dave Sadowsky in the pole vault will be "Rapid" Robert Murray last year's freshman pole breaker, and Phil Read.

Coach Footrick's major problem will be a lack of depth and strength in the middle distance events. Also, there is a possibility that Fred Lewis, hampared by football injuries and "Rapid" Bob Murray, hampered by iron deficiency anemia will be sidelined for the season.

CONGRATULATIONS GO TO BOB BROUILLET who has been selected by Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities as a representative of the University.

Mermen Downed By Amherst, 54-41

by BUD PRATT

THE EFFORTS OF CO-CAPTS. MIKE ROTHSCHILD AND MIKE BJORNHOLM were outstanding, but just not enough to pull off a win at Amherst Friday night.

Rothschild, smarting from his split-second loss at M.I.T. last Wednesday, took revenge on the Jeffs with walkaway victories in the 200 and 500 yd. freestyles. Mike's time of 5:34 in the 500 established an Amherst pool record. Bjornholm took first in the 200 backstroke and second in the 50 freestyle. The co-captains combined with Bill Cowern and Dick Daniels to win the final relay.

UMass dominated the breaststroke, with John Grybko and Charlie Monnier battling each other right down to the wire, with Grybko finally nosing his teammate out.

Dan O'Mara turned in a strong 2:33.1 to win the individual medley. Third place points were won by Tom Hanley in the diving, Jim O'Sullivan in the 200 butterfly, and Dick Daniels in the 100 yd. freestyle. But second places were hard to come by as Amherst's edge in depth made the difference. But even UM's fine individual performers will have to scramble for firsts in this Wednesday's meet vs. powerful Wesleyan. (WPE 3:00 p.m.)

the fine performance. Other outstanding players included O'Rourke who scored 12 points and had 12 rebounds, and Bernard who had 11 points, 5 rebounds and 9 assists. Painten ended with 11 points and Twitchell had 11 rebounds. Ashley had 18 points and Friedman 21 for the Scarlet Knights. The scores at the five minute marks were 16-7, 26-26, 35-31, 47-47, 64-53, 80-66, 91-72 and 101-82. This was only the fourth time in the history of UMass a team has reached the century mark. Next Tuesday the Redmen take on solvent UConn at Curry Hicks Cage. The summary:

Halftime 47-47 tie

Chicago, Home Of Non-Violent, Non Football Plays Political Football

CHICAGO (CPS) — THIS IS NOT A FOOTBALL TOWN. With its two major league teams, interest in baseball runs fairly high, and last year it had both the NCAA basketball winner (Loyola) and the State champions in the same sport. But it is simply not a football town.

At least not until this year. The Air Force Academy Falcons met the West Point Cadets in a city-sponsored game that was billed as the "Game of the Year." (Army won, 14-10)

Exactly who hit on that happy phrase to describe the contest no one knows, but while the activities on the field may fall short of spectacular, what went before is the equal of anything that has happened here since the Blacksox threw the World Series in 1919.

It was pure politics that brought college football back to Chicago and the maneuvering began two years ago when Mayor Richard J. Daley, suggested that Chicago was being discriminated against.

The Army-Navy game used to be a Chicago affair, he pointed out, but the last one held here was in 1926.

Miraculously the politicans were able to make the arrangements.

Alderman John J. Hoellen returned from a trip to the Air Force Academy saying that the Academy band had been silenced for political reason.

The band will not play at halftime, he charged, because the time would be used for the politicans to make a ceremonial walk across the playing field to demonstrate impartiality.

"The time is going to be used for a political spectacular for the Democratic candidates. It will be prime television time," Hoellen complained.

The complaint was taken to Colonel Jack Reilly, Daley's director of special events, who handled it in his customary fashion:

"Whoever told you that is nuts."

Reilly added that he would like to walk Mr. Hoellen across the field "at the point of a bayonet," a threat he is capable of carrying out.

THEN CAME THE GIRLS.

The city, having undertaken to entertain 80,000 spectators, also had to entertain 5,000 cadets. And entertaining cadets apparently means providing them with dates.

Col Reilly was equal to the assignment and he formed a committee to find companions for the 3000 young men who would not bring their own. He also arranged a dinner dance to make sure the couples would be watched carefully.

This was done once before. In 1926, after the last inter-service game was played a dinner-dance was also held. That year Army and Navy tied 21-21 and the party just about wrecked the hotel.

Every cadet, Reilly promised, would be on his train at midnight.

Letters were sent to every college and university in the area asking that typical American girls be recommended and they were assigned by height and age to the men.

Things were going smoothly when two 18 year-old Chicago secretaries wrote to Mayor Daley to charge that they were bypassed for college girls in the selection process. They were, they said, "just as good as them any day."

Col. Reilly was equad to the ascock" — an answer that demonstrated considerable restraint on his part. But the complaints multiplied and the girls threatened to picket City Hall if they weren't chosen.

When the candidates demonstrated their impartiality by changing sides at halftime, a few spectators didn't really appreciate it, and no matter how exciting the play was, a few thought the game just a bit anti-climactic.

Yan-Con Race

Although the season is only a little more than a week old, the Yankee Conference basketball race could take definite shape tomorrow night when the University of Connecticut Huskies, the defending champions, and the University of Massachusetts Redmen, rated as the top threat, collide head-on at the Curry Hicks Gymnasium in Amherst.

In addition to being a headliner in any competition, the game also marks the first conference action for the rival coaches. Fred Shabel who has taken over the duties at Connecticut and Johnny Orr who is starting his first season at UMass will attempt to get their season started in the right direction.

Meanwhile, the third member of the favored triumvirate, the University of Rhode Island Rams will be at Durham to meet the University of New Hampshire Wildcats.

On Saturday, Massachusetts will travel to Durham to meet New Hampshire in the final conference action until after the first of the year.

Redmen Basketball Network

The entire 24-game schedule of the University of Massachusetts basketball team will be carried over the Redman Basketball Network this winter.

Stations WHAI in Greenfield, WHMP in Northampton, WARE in Ware and WMAS in Springfield will be airing the UMass home and away contests. Bill Rasmussen will be the play-by-play announcer. Bill broadcast the Redmen football game this fall.

Rasmussen and Redmen Coach Johnny Orr will also conduct a post-game show that will feature interviews with opposing coaches and outstanding players. The Network got its baptism when UMass upended Boston University, 80-72, in newly renovated Curry Hicks Cage.

Felix Mosakewicz sprained his wrist. Here again UMass tied the favored Southern Conn. maintaining its three point lead.

On the final event, the rings, Sternback of Southern Conn. took first place but UMass came in with a strng 2nd, 3rd, 4th, Williams, St. John, and Brallier, to expand its lead to 5 points and winnin gthe meet with a final score of 50½ to 45½.

COACH KJELDSON is very proud of his team, however next week they may have troubles when they travel to West Point, the number three team in the country.

Redmen Over Rutgers, 101-82

Twitchell And Edwards High Scorers With 23

by JOHN GOODRICH

UMASS RACED FROM A 47-47 TIE at halftime to an impressive victory over Rutgers University at New Brunswick Friday night. Another fine team effort paced the Redmen as five men again scored in double figures. Roger Twitchell came off a seven point performance against BU to hit on 8 of 9 shots in the first half. Sub Tim Edwards came off the bench to score 23 points, 16 in the second half, and pull down 21 rebounds. Twitchell finished with 23 points also.

After Rutgers scored the first point, UMass got hot hands and rolled up a 10-3 lead, and it looked as though a romp was in the making. But as was to be seen through the first half, the Scarlet Knights fought back. Paced by Tom Asley and frail Al Friedman, Rutgers took the lead with 10:00 left in the half, 28-26. The Redmen regained the lead and opened an eight point spread 45-37, but Rutgers was not out of it, and in the last 2 minutes fought to the tie at halftime. In both of these comebacks, three point plays were instrumental. It seems that every foul was accompanied by a hoop. UMass was building up a great many personal fouls and, in fact, Rutgers had the use of the 1 and 1 reward after only 7 minutes had passed by in the first half.

UMASS WAS REALLY HOT IN THE FIRST HALF hitting on 21 of 37 from the floor, and added 5 out of 7 from the foul line. Rutgers managed 18 of 43 from the floor, but hit on 11 of 16 from the line to keep in the game. Massachusetts completely dominated the boards by a 33-14 margin, and it was the offensive rebounds that Mass tapped in the hoop that also managed to keep the score close.

The second half was a completely different story. Scrappy guard Pete Bernard had acquired three fouls guarding Ashley and several other Redmen had two, so Coach Orr shifted to a 1-3-1 zone press. While this switch did little to ease the foul situation, it did force numerous mistakes on the part of Rutgers. The Redmen finally got their fast break rolling and opened a 62-51 lead. This time Rutgers just did not have enough to come back. The closest they could come was 68-60.

While the Redmen maintained this rather comfortable spread, the game was not exactly decided. With still 8 minutes left in the game and UMass holding an 83-72 lead Twitchell fouled out. To add to the situation, O'Rourke, Bernard, and Painten were in danger of fouling out, but Edwards got two hoops and Ryan added three points before Ashley hit for the Knights. Now the scoreboard read 91-74 and it was looking much better. It was only left for Tom Ryan to toss in the 100th point on a foul shot, and the subs filled the floor. Ryan's point came with better than 2½ minutes left in the game.

THE REDMEN HAD A REAL HOT SHOOTING NIGHT, hitting on 42 of 83 and 17 of 29 foul shots. Rutgers scored on 30 of 84 field goals and a strong 22 of 27 free throws. UMass with a big height advantage out-rebounded the Knight 67-44. Twitchell hit on 11 of 14 field goals, Painten on 4 of 5, and Edwards on 10 of 14 led

by MORRIS SHUBOW

THE UMASS HOCKEY TEAM opened the season on a bright note by defeating M.I.T. 10-1 at Cambridge.

Capt. Charlie Glew chipped in with three goals and three assists to lead the scorers, while Ken Palm, Bob Edmonston, and Dick Forster all scored twice. Pete Hurd had the other UMass goal. Pete Catto scored M.I.T.'s only goal late in the third period. The margin of victory is surprising considering that the team had held only four practices prior to this game.

Coach Steve Kosakowski said after the game that Charlie Glew looked as good as he did in his Sophomore year. The only injured player was forward Allan Johnson, who suffered a pulled muscle. He will be out 4 or 5 days. This win gives the Redmen a 6-game winning streak, since last season the team won its last 5 games.

Next Saturday, Dec. 14, the Redmen travel to Brunswick, Me. to play a strong Bowdoin team. Kosakowski feels that his team has a good chance to win.

The Redmen's first home game is Dec. 17 against Amherst.

Gymnasts Down Southern Conn.; Williams Two Firsts

by BEN BARCLAY

SATURDAY THE VARSITY GYMNASTICS team successfully opened its season. The team travelled to Southern Connecticut State College in New Haven where they took three first places and won the meet with a score of 50½ to 45½. Capt. Dave Williams took two of our three first places while Al Cohen took our third.

Floor exercise was the first event of the meet. Southern Conn's Speck and Davis took first and second places while Frado, Brallier, and Helnold took third, fourth, and fifth for UMass. They used the old method of scoring so at this point Southern Connecticut was leading with a score of 10-6.

UMass took its first step to victory in the second event, the side horse. Here Dave Williams did an excellent job, making all of his single leg cuts while almost all the other participants missed a few of them, thus easily taking first place. Dan St. John followed Dave with his usual excellent routine taking second place. Southern Conn. took third and fourth place while Jim Dusenbury and So. Conn's Rowland tied for fifth place. The score after this exent was UMass 16½ and So. Conn. 15½. If Jim Dusenbury had not tied Rowland it would have been a tie meet at this point.

The next event in line was the bar. Southern Connecticut was favored to take first and second places in this event but Mike Zotta, their top man, missed his entire dismount thus coming in fourth. However, Greg Sternback, their second man, took first place. Brallier, Cardiff, and Dusenbury tok 2nd, 3rd, and 5th thus tying Southern Conn. 8-8. After this event the scoreboard read UMass 24½ and So. Conn 23½.

On the long horse Al Cohen did remarkably well as he took an easy first place with his two vaults, a cartwheel and a hecht. Southern Conn. took 2nd and 3rd while Mosakewicz and Cardiff took 4th and 5th for UMass. As a result of this event UMass expanded its lead to three points as the socreboard now read UMass 33½, So. Conn. 30½.

Southern Conn.'s Dave Sternback had several breaks in routine on the parallel bars thus enabling Dave Williams to take his second first place of the day. Dan St. John came in fourth for UMass. It was in that event that

Varsity Rifle Team Tops Connecticut

The UMass Varsity Rifle Team, continuing in the tradition started several seasons ago, proved itself to be a first class team. Saturday's match was in Storrs, Conn., where the Redmen defeated the Huskies by a score of 1399 to 1361. Most of the Redmen shooters are returning lettermen, and indications are that the University will be very proud of its "Varsity Marksmen." Team Captain Hal Butterworth again spearheaded the Redmen attack with an excellent three position total of 287 out of a possible 300 points. Butterworth "dropped" only one point in the prone position. He was five points shy of a perfect target in the kneeling postion, and seven points off perfection in the off hand (standing) position.

Mark Nataupsky was in the number two plot for UMass. with a score of 281. Nataupsky has been shooting far below what was expected of him in previous matches, but Saturday's performance partially redeemed the Senior shooter.

Jim Carswell followed close behind with a total of 279. Carswell has been shooting much better, but he was slightly off in all three positions at UConn.

M. Greene and G. Kwist completed the top five for UMass with scores of 276 each.

High man for UConn was Pellerin with a total of 288, which was also the high individual score for the match. The fact that it takes five good shooters to have a winning team is evidenced by the 38 points between the 1399 aggregate for UMass vs. UConn's 1361.

RSO's Mrs. 'V' Retires In January

by MARCIA SUTHERLAND

Treasurers come and treasurers go, according to the transitory nature of any university; but the finances of the various student organizations at UMass have nevertheless remained consistently in order under the experienced watchfulness of the supervisor of RSO accounts, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Versailles. Now the University faces the momentous task of finding someone to match her efficient financial guidance, for Mrs. Versailles is retiring in January.

MRS. VERSAILLES

Mrs. Versailles came to UMass in 1952, after working for 16 years as Senior Actuarial Clerk for the Commonwealth in the Division of Insurance. She has been working with the RSO Office since it started in 1954, originally under the direction of Professor Lawrence Dickinson, and now under Mr. Edward Buck.

Mrs. Versailles has set up and supervised the financial systems of all the RSO accounts. According to Ross Jones, Senate Treasurer, Mrs. Versailles "can be given credit for keeping generations of treasurers sane at their jobs." Her easy communication with student treasurers and efficient auditing of accounts have been described by those who have worked with her as "invaluable".

Jon Fife, President of the Student Senate, commented that "Mrs. Versailles' help always came in the form of guidance and advice. My experience working with her not only helped me do a better job as Treasurer of the Student Senate, but gave me an education for everyday life."

Mrs. Amy Judge, housemother at Knowlton, has found her "patient, considerate, and kindly, with a real interest in each individual dorm. Working with the dormitory treasurers she was always willing to devote time to any specific problem."

Boston University is Mrs. Versailles' alma mater. She graduated from B. U. with the Class of 1929 with an A. B. degree, and received her masters from that institution in 1930, achieving Phi Beta Kappa honors. Also to her credit are various courses from Tufts and Harvard.

Away from the RSO Office and her exacting profession, Mrs. Versailles devotes her time to a developing interest in geneology, the study of family histories. Research in this field has resulted in the unearthing of interesting and informative material about family backgrounds through old church records, coats-of-arms, family trees, and occasional tombstone reading.

More than an idle pastime, her hobby is backed by a summer of instruction in geneology at American University in 1962 Mrs. Versailles is co-author of a book on old families, written as part of the history of the town of Chesterfield, Mass., for its anniversary. She is now assisting in the writing of the history of Williamsburg for the county tercentenary celebration, and is preparing the geneology of the Hathaway family.

For a few more weeks, Mrs. Versailles will be at her job. Students, campus leaders, administrators and all those who have had contact with her agree that her presence in the RSO Office will be sorely missed.

Student Opinion Sought On Year-Round Operation

This is the first of two articles that will appear in the Collegian in an attempt to familiarize the student body with the conditions surrounding a possible shift by the University from its present calendar to one of operating on some form of year round basis. The university has no definite plans in this area at the present time except that of studying the possibilities of such a change.

A Student Senate Ad Hoc Committee consisting of Jerry Kagan, Ben Barclay, Bill Landis, and Tom McMullin, Chairman, is working in conjunction with Dr. William C. Venman, Assistant to the Provost, and Chairman of the Faculty Ad Hoc Committee on Year Round Operation, in order to get student reaction concerning the possibilities of year round operation.

In October of 1962, a faculty committee was appointed to study the possibllities of year round operation, and in March of this year, the committee issued a report containing the results of extensive research and including several recommendations. It was the recommendation of this committee that some form of year round operation be put into effect at the University.

There will be a great need in the future for more spaces for students on the University campus. It is necessary that we provide these spaces, and expand our facilities. To do so, we must not only enlarge our physical plant but we must utilize it to greater benefit for the student body. A system of year round operation would also allow the student who wishes to accelerate his college experience to three years, to do so with more ease than is now the case.

The system that was highly recommended was that of a three term session. Under this set-up, there would be three EQUAL sessions, each containing 15 weeks. The first term would be comparable to the fall semester as it now stands, but it would open nearer to Labor Day and close before Christmas. A second term similar to the current spring semester would begin near January 1, and end during the first week in May. The third term would begin early in May, and end in late August.

Any of a number of patterns may be chosen. The student would be able to elect to attend any of the sessions he liked whether it be a pattern of fall-spring, fall-summer, or spring-summer, or all of the periods.

The above system in brief, has been proposed for eventual use by the University. Under the system, it is felt that the student would have several advantages, both financial and otherwise, that are non-existant at the University at the present time.

Revelers Present Hoot

Group spirit and fun will prevail at the Reveler's Hootenanny on Friday, December 13 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Singing and folk music provided by student entertainment should promote audience participation much to the enjoyment of all.

Proceeds from the event will be used for scholarships for deserving students on campus. These scholarships will be awarded at Student Leaders' night in the Spring.

Five Nabbed By Police In Fire Scare Melee

by ELWIN McNAMARA

FIVE STUDENTS are slated to appear before Men's Judiciary as a result of the melee following Sunday night's fire scare at Baker Dormitory, Dean of Men Robert Hopkins revealed Tuesday.

The five were nabbed by University police in the midst of a snowball fight which erupted as the dorm emptied. The screaming whistle on the power plant, and the approaching sirens of fire apparatus brought what has been estimated at between 1000 and 1500 boisterous students to the vicinity of the hilltop residence hall.

FIRE ENGINES were slowed to a crawl in their response by a mass of humanity which surged up Van Meter hill.

All University police were recalled from their homes in anticipation of a riot as the crowd grew. The force battled two hours to quiet the crowd.

DEAN OF MEN Hopkins stated that the was "disgusted" with the action, and revealed that he went to fire headquarters to apologize. He said that it is "ridiculous that the firemen drive to a supposedly serious fire and be met by snowball and rocks."

"Loss of co-operation between the town and University could", the Dean said, "result in great cost" to Massachusetts taxpayers.

POLICE OFFICIALS stated that one cruiser was hit by at least 100 snowballs as it went through the crowd. Windows in several dorms were shattered by the missiles.

Several students were soaked by water thrown from the upper floors of Baker, and firefighters narrowly missed the same fate as they left the building.

STUDENTS' CARS, parked near the scene were damaged by flying snowballs and rocks.

Amherst Fire Chief George Cavanaugh stated that in addition to the snowballing, approximately $50 worth of equipment was "taken" from apparatus parked on the hill while firemen inspected the dormitory.

HOWEVER, Chief Cavanaugh stated that he still has faith in the students. He stated that he felt that "a small number" of those present were responsible. "The men," Cavanaugh said, "had no adverse comments on the incident."

Senior Registration

All seniors should register with the placement office as soon as possible. Employment interviews will not be scheduled unless they have registered.

Time For Action

by JOHN B. CHILDS

December 10 to December 17 has been designated by President Johnson as "Human Rights' Week."

This designation comes only a short time after President Kennedy was assassinated.

It comes a few short months after several Negro Children were killed in a church bombing.

It comes at a time when a bill important for the improvement of civil rights is snagged in the House Rules Committee.

These are not isolated events. The church bombing is symptomatic of a lack of concern for rights of Americans. The murder of President Kennedy occurred in an atmosphere of hate . . . . and his death will have been in vain if no effort is made to at least distill this hate.

A method is at hand to aid in this distillation. This method is the Civil Rights Bill now held up in Congress. This bill, as it now stands, would outlaw discrimination throughout the country, prohibit segregation in restaurants, hotels, and other places of public accommodation, and provide new legal means to end discrimination in schools and voting.

The atmosphere of hate exists now.

The time for action against this hate is now.

For this reason a petition will be available in the Student Union Lobby this Monday, December 16th, from 8 to 5. This petition will urge the swift passage of the Civil Rights Bill. This petition will be sent to the Congress of the United States.

Will you sign? The time for action is now.

Chorale Well Received

The University Chorale

by LANGDON F. LOMBARD

The University Chorale presented its annual Christmas concert at Bowker Auditorium, Sunday, December 8th at 4:30. A crowd of over 500 faculty, students, and friends attended.

The supposed feature turned out not to be that at all. While the three carols of various nations were of great interest having been arranged by John King, the conductor for seven years of the Chorale, the highlight of the afternoon concert was the "Alleluia" by Randall Thompson.

Other important works on the program well received by the audience were the selected choruses from The Christmas Story by Heinrich Schutz, Christmas Day by Gustav Holst, and the Fantasia on Christmas Carols by Ralpn Vaughan Williams. These were major works on the program and were recognized as such by the audience.

But there must have been something special about the Thompson Alleluia. It might have been the expression of Christmas in the work or the spell of the season given by the other pieces but it probably was the beautiful incantation by the Chorale that prompted the audience to applaud before the piece was even over.

Those who attended should find increased Christmas cheer this year in their lives and give thanks in no small part to the University Chorale for their efforts to brighten the season.

Who's Who In "Who's Who"

To the Editor:

Who's who in "Who's Who"?

It was most interesting (and mildly shocking) to notice that all seven of the student selection committee for "Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities" judged themselves qualified (and humble) enough to be selected for membership in this exalted and worthwhile organization. By the way, we're wondering if they conducted their affairs in Greek, since six of the seven were . . .

We realize that we could be accused of "sour grapes" since obviously none of us are of the sterling quality which so noticeably comprises this illustrious band. However, as we read through the list of names and compared them to the qualities which they supposedly represent, we must admit that we became mildly nauseated. We looked at the names and thought "scholarship? academic participation? citizenship? promise of rewarding future (as what?)?" We think that a re-evaluation of the criteria actually used by this group is long overdue.

HURRAH FOR THE MAGNIFICENT SEVEN — A GOOD JOB WELL DONE!

Boycott Classes

To the Editor:

Before rushing headlong into the madcap festivities of the Finals season, perhaps we should cast one long, lingering look at the season that is about to pass. Upon casting a wary eye at the calendar, we notice that classes end the 11th of January and exams begin the 13th. Rapidly doing a few calculations, we see that this allows us one day to prepare for finals.

Now, gentlemen (addressing students, faculty, and administration) this is preposterous. Is it any wonder that to the faculty the majority of students appear to be firmly ensnared in the Morass of Ignorance? Of course not, for what student has the energy to move when he is constantly being beaten with the club of "No Time." Now, the solution to this problem is remarkably simple.

Instead of charging ahead full speed into Finals, perhaps it would not be too bad an idea to institute a reading period.

By a reading period I mean just that, a period prior to exams in which the student can catch up on his back reading, a period in which he doesn't have to worry about meeting the daily schedule, a period when the professors are available if the students have questions or problems. Now, no doubt there will be some who will say that this cannot be done because some professors save their hour exams for the last week of classes. Well, if this is the case, then hold classes the first two days of the week, and give us the rest of the week for reading.

Of course, this is all idle speculation, and nothing like this will ever occur on our campus. So, I have an alternate suggestion. I propose a general boycott of all classes for the last three class days before exams begin. If all students participate, then how can this fail? If those above are unwilling to do something, then we below must act. One way or another, we will have time to study properly.

The Mature Man

To the "Mature Men" of UMass:

I realize that the life on this campus may get a bit boring at times, but this does not seem to me to be an excuse for the animalistic activities that periodically take place on the "hill."

This nonsense would be understandable if anything was to be gained by it. However, I should think that by now someone would have the sense to realize that it is not only very annoying and definitely childish.

Brooks and Van Meter were converted to girls' dorms because the administration felt that an eighteen year old male was capable of mature conduct. However, after witnessing another near primitive demonstration Sunday night, it seems that they aren't.

PLEASE GROW UP! A.B.
M.R.

"ID"

To the Editor,

I feel that students should be able to transfer their ID's and meal tickets, except for use as personal identification, for the following reasons:

1. Students are billed every semester for activities such as athletic events, musical programs, etc. ID cards are a means of admittance to these functions; in purchasing an ID, the student buys the right to attend these functions. If he chooses not to exercise his right to attend, one cannot assume that he has forfeited his right—the student, having purchased the right, should be able to bestow it on whomever he chooses.

2. The University administration forces all undergraduate students under 21 years and not seniors who live in University dormitories to eat at the dining halls. This forced right to eat at the dining halls is purchased and owned by the individual student. If he chooses not to exercise this right, he should be able to let anyone he chooses use his meal ticket.

As long as the University persists in forcing payment for rights that may be unused and/or unwanted, the student who has purchased the right should be able to do with it as he sees fit.

Republican Or American ?

As I was thoroughly entertained by Mr. Crawford's article in Monday's Collegian, I am prompted to write an article of my own—one which will undoubtedly entertain very few on this campus. The pariah, as he humbly refers to himself, examined the reasoning behind the "rich man" who becomes a Democrat. I am neither a rich man, nor a poor man. No, Mr. Crawford, I can neither boast of my father's millions, nor moan over my mother's debts. I, Mr. Crawford, am a Republican. But before you so glibly place me in the class of the John Birchists, I would also like to remind you that I am an American.

I, like you and many others, cried over the death of John F. Kennedy. I never supported him, and if he were living today I'd still never vote for him. However, he too was an American, and I loved him as I would love any American. This bit of digression, which sounds more like a refrain to My Country Tis of Thee, is merely a defense against your great waves of vitriole. Contrary to public opinion, the John Birch Society is no more American than the Communist party. Nevertheless, if you subtly place the American right wing in the same class with the John Birch Society, I can place the American left wing in the same class as the Communist Party. Any intelligent reader can plainly see that you place things like the John Birch Society against both Kennedy and Roosevelt. Needless to say, your article is titled Republican or Democrat.

I am a Republican, Mr. Crawford, because of people like you. I am not "hard-hearted." I, too, have concern for "Newburgh mothers, Harlem Negroes, and other have-nots." Nevertheless, I have concern for the future of the United States. Contrasting "government action" against such horrors as "John Birchery" implies that government action is a virtue. (You do speak of antipodes.) Government action is certainly a vital part of administration; however, it should be the last step not the first step. I am one of those "soft hearted" people to which you refer. Nevertheless, I would directly support these "have-nots" myself before I would allow the federal government to "take action."

The thougths which inspired an assassin on November 22, 1963, were neither Republican nor Democrat, they were enither liberal, nor conservative; they were, by no means, American.

Peace Corps Announces Spring Training Program

The Peace Corps announced plans today for the largest spring training program in the agency's history.

Volunteers scheduled for assignments in 18 nations will enter training at U. S. colleges and universities in February-March, said Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver. An estimated 1,500 prospective Volunteers will participate in the training programs.

In past years, only about '400 volunteers have entered mid-year training programs, Shriver said. While the peak in-put period will continue to be the summer months, he said this year's large spring group will fill urgent requests from countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Many of the spring group will be mid-year graduates of U.S. colleges and universities who will fill teaching assignments, most of which require college degrees.

The spring training programs will prepare Volunteers for service in Somalia, Malaysia, Nigeria, Ecuador, Nepal, Thailand, India, Jamaica, Togo, Colombia, Panama, Iran, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Venezuela, Tanganyika and the Dominican Republic.

Teachers will be needed at all levels — elementary, secondary and university — and in all subjects, with particular emphasis on English, science and mathematics. Some physical education and vocational teachers will also be required.

Other Volunteers will be enrolled in agricultural extension, community development, construction, engineering and geology programs.

Peace Corps Volunteers serve for two years, including training. They get a modest living allowance designed to let them live at a level equal to that of the people with whom they work—plus a $75 monthly readjustment allowance, paid at the end of their service.

Currently, 7,164 Volunteers are at work in 46 countries.

Meet Gerald Bourland

Computer Systems Associate at WE

Gerald Bourland, B.S., Central Missouri State College, '61, picked Western Electric because it offered many interesting and challenging opportunities in his favorite fields—automation and data processing. Gerald's work here consists of writing, testing and documenting computer programs — each one a different and exacting assignment.

Also of great interest to Gerald when he joined Western were the Company's numerous management courses and paid Tuition Refund Plan. He knows, too, that we'll need to fill thousands of supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience needed to qualify.

Right now, Gerald is working on a verification sub-system for maintaining production control. It consists of seven distinct computer programs that operate as one routine which performs the function of tying together and verifying forecasted with actual customer orders.

If you, like Gerald Bourland, set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, as well as for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Amherst Features Amadeus Quartet

The Amadeus Quartet of London will perform works by Mozart, Britten and Schumann Wednesday (Dec. 11) at Amherst College. The concert, scheduled at Mead Auditorium at 8:15 p.m., is open to the general public without charge.

Recently the Amadeus Quartet played in Russia, a tour which was greeted with overwhelming response. The Quartet has also appeared in Hungary, Czechoslovakia and has made a six-week tour of Israel. The Amadeus is now making regular tours on this continent sandwiched between their appearances in England, France, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Spain, Portugal, the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland.

Although the Amadeus' home base is London, only one member of the ensemble is a native Englishman — Martin Lovett, the Cellist. His colleagues, Norbert Brainin and Siegmund Nissel, Violinists, and Peter Schidlof, Violist, are all originally Austrians. The four met for the first time in the studio of Max Rostal, their teacher, in 1941. In 1946 they began serious work together and made their first public appearance in 1948 in London's Wigmore Hall.

In 1958, the Quartet undertook their first 'round-the-world' tour.

The concert includes the Quartet in D Major, K. 499 by Mozart, the Quartet No. 2 in C Major, Opus 36 by Britten and the Quartet in A Major, Opus 41, No. 3 by Schumann.

Debaters Place Second At Yan-Con Competition

The Forensic Society took home a trophy and two certificates after copping second place in the annual Yankee Conference debate competition held at UNH on Dec. 6.

UMass was represented at the competition by the varsity team of Mike Farrell and Maureen Flanagan on the affirmative and Steve Jenkins and Larry Rutstein on the negative. Jenkins and Rutstein won all their rounds except for a close-fought battle with UVM. This was good enough to give them the trophy for the best negative team at the tournament, in addition to giving Jenkins the certificate for second best negative speaker at the tournament. The affirmative ran into more difficulty, winning one round while losing three extremely close decisions to the other Yankee Conference schools. Farrell, however, still managed to walk away with the certificate for second best affirmative speaker at the competition.

The tournament was by far the closest of the year. The University of Maine took the trophy for overall best team with a 5-3 record. UMass was second with a 4-4 record, giving the Society an overall record of 34 wins and 22 losses, one of the best in New England. The team has now amassed a trophy, a plaque and four certificates of excellence for this year's work.

Morrill—Our Zoology Museum

by LINDA VALONEN

A harsh discordant scream of a blue jay, a low eerie hoot of a barn owl, a continous twitter of a cliff swallow, a sweet warble of a goldfinch. One might expect to hear all these sounds in a room in Morrill Science Center which is inhabited by all these birds, but only silence greets us as we observe this particular part of the zoological museum. These birds are now in taxonomical arrangement in a form called "study skins" which consists of the skin and feathers of the bird stuffed with cotton.

On the trays we find robins whose cheery carol welcomes spring; thrushes, rich red-brown above and white with heavy spots underneath, the common starling whose short legs make him look very awkward as he walks along the ground looking for insects and grain. The Baltimore oriole we picture with flashes of orange and black in the top of a tall shade tree and we see the kingbird dashing down on crows and hawks of whom they are intolerant. Sea gulls have the purest white feathers and herons are noted for their long legs.

The mammals, rather than displaying only a "study skin" have as well a skull and skeleton in a little box next to the stuffed skin. To get this perfectly cleaned skeleton certain insects are put in a closed contained with the dead animal and after a short while only the clean white bones remain.

Bats in the collection are the only flying mammals. They have a very limited eyesight; but large ears which alow for a unique system for locating and avoiding objects. The emit a high frequency sound which echoes back like a radar beam and thus indicates the position of obstacles to be avoided.

The carnivores include a well known and well represented group most being land animals with the seal as an exception. They are preditors with adaptations for speed, cutting and tearing with teeth and claws, and this group also includes those whom the women know well in forms of coats of mink, racoon, fox and otter.

A seal may look out of place in the collection but he really isn't. Caught off the Massachusetts coast, this specimen is an aquatic mammal whose awkward perch on land becomes a streamlined grace in the water.

The invertebrate collection is a modest sampling of marine, fresh water, and terrestrial invertebrates, concentrating on Marine life along the Atlantic Coast from Maine to Florida. Used for teaching and research, these collections have been gathered, as in other departments, by students, staff, and donators. Research includes that of determining the controls in the snail for the deposition of calcium in the shell.

On stepping in the specimen room, shelves are seen filled with bottles of all sizes containing formlin solution to preserve the

by BOB WEBER

With Christmas coming, many people will be buying guitars either for themselves or as a gift. This week's column will try to answer some of the questions most often questions asked about guitars.

The three qualities which are most important are: tone quality, ease in playing, and dependability. Tone is influenced primarily by kind and thickness of the wood, size of the guitar, and the type of finish. In general, one should look for a guitar where the grain appears narrow and even. Woods usually used in good guitars are spruce for the top and rosewood for the sides and back.

The neck should have either a mahogany or ebony fretboard and if it is to be strung with steel strings, some sort of metal reinforcing to prevent warping of the neck. We usually advise against buying guitars with a paint finish, although a high glossy finish does not necessarily indicate a good guitar.

Also, look inside the sound hole in the face of the guitar. If the guitar has only a few thick supports, then it isn't of good quality. Better instruments have many thin supports.

The number and size of these supports affect the tone. The strings should be fairly close to the fretboard to facilitate playing, but they should not rattle when played.

When you buy a guitar, shop at a dependable place and inquire about the guarantee on the instruments. We advise against buying imported guitars, except German and Spanish guitars. GUILD makes good classical and steel string guitars and guarantees them. Martin and Gibson make excellent steel string instruments, with the quality of their classical line being somewhat lower. Of the Martin and Gibson, we prefer the Martin, although this is just a matter of taste, as both are fine guitars. If you are in doubt, ask someone who plays, (if you don't) to go with you to help select a guitar. There are differences even between two guitars of the same make and model ,and it will take a while to find the particular guitar that suits you.

Locally, the Revelers present an all-campus hoot in Bowker Auditorium this Friday night. Appearing will be many of the campus folk singers. There is a small admission charge with proceeds going to charity.

WMUA has changed folk music from Tuesday night to Sunday night at midnight. Going until 2 a.m., this show will feature performers like Ian and Sylvia, Pete Seeger, Joan BAEZ, John Hammond Jr., Keith and Roney, and a great many others. The show will be done with an educational point of view, as well as the simple d. j. work.

We understand that the main entertainment for Winter Carni will be a group of "folksingers." More on this at a later date—when we can mention the name of the group.

HomesteadOwedToHelenKnowlton

by TERRY STOCK

Miss Helen Knowlton, educator and pioneer in home economics, was born in 1879 in Farmington, Maine.

In September of 1924, when UMass was still an agricultural college, she was hired for the position of Assistant Professor of Rural Home Life. By training she was especially fitted for the work, which was still in the pioneer stage.

Helen had spent two years at Bates College and graduated from Mount Holyoke in 1903. She then began an impressive teaching career in various fields.

MISS HELEN KNOWLTON

First she was an instructor in Greek, Latin, and algebra at the University of Georgia. Following this she taught English, science, and home economics for a few years in Massachusetts hign schools and then went to Cornell as an instructor of home economics. After two years she left Cornell to become Dean of Women and Head of the Home Economics Department of New Hampshire State College. Finally, because of her interest in Y.W.-C.A. work, she left N.H.C. and devoted five years to service with that organization.

While instructing at Cornell, Miss Knowlton had begun graduate work there. In 1924, the year she came to Mass. Agricultural College, she received her M.A. degree from Cornell.

Fortunately the new professor did not expect to find elaborate home economics equipment when she began work here, for the cooking laboratory was a small room in the basement of Fernald Hall. There she worked cheerfully with her girls until 1929 when her work was moved to the second floor of Flint Laboratory. In her new location she had easy access to the products of the Diary Department.

Miss Knowlton was the originator of many new practices in the college. In 1928 an old farm house was renovated in order to give the home economics majors an opportunity for home practice work. This was the Homestead.

She also did research work under the Purnell fund. Released from her teaching duties the winter term, she travelled in a sleigh over the hills to little towns north of Amherst, supervising a school lunch program.

Then too, she was the first one to offer a course in foods and nutrition for boys. From 8 to 14 boys, mostly military majors and some of our best athletes at that time, joined her class and were as proud as Miss Knowlton of the meals they prepared.

Her interest in the various religious groups in the area was another aspect of her interest in everything. She was an active worker in the Christian Association on campus and sometimes accompanied the groups when they went on retreats. They felt she practiced what she preached.

She loved the outdoors and was President of the Nature Club for many years. She was also an enthusiastic horsewoman.

Perhaps Miss Knowlton's best attribute was her ability to get along with her students. They liked and trusted her, for she was sympathetic, understanding, and patient with their short comings. She knew when to encourage them, when to prod them, and when to give them a taste of her humor, of which she had plenty. She shared their interests and was always willing to help them.

Helen Knowlton died in 1941; and on November 19, 1950, Knowlton House was dedicated in order to honor this woman whose tremendous success in her chosen field will always be remembered.

Sasha Speaks

Of Cats And Folk Fans

Hysterical screams last Sunday brought terrified lobby denizens to the aid of an embattled housemother. The noble lady, experienced in subduing exuberent male callers, was reduced to utter helplessness by an acutely defensive alley cat perched on her windowsill.

The beast, surpassing even the felines of William Blake, Lewis Carol, and Edgar Rice Burroughs, had been known to prowl the quadrangle, demanding choice tidbits from conscience stricken coeds. Some kindly girl, overcome by Sunday charity, had let the derilect into the warm dormitory where he was lured by the fish meal fertilizer the housemother used to feed her window plants.

Establishing himself among the African violets, he began to nibble the tender blooms like a feline Ferdinand. Although attacked with a copy of "Ladies' Home Journal", he merely gave a Cheshire grin, and began to wallow ecstatically amongst the geraniums.

At last, with the housemother welding a Webster's dictionary (unabridged) and a counsellor making noise like a caviar-fed orchid, the beast left, though not without making several caustic catty comments involving the state of dormitory hospitality.

Deck the halls . . . and while doing so remember from whence the custom evolved. Christmas ornaments came from the pagan Celts who triumphantly strung the intestines of their vanquished enemies among the branches of evergreens. Evidently they felt it was all right to have an elaborate tree if you had the guts to do it.

• • • •

The folk music craze has penetrated all aspects of current life, much to the dismay of devoted ethniks. Garment makers offer a "Hootnanney shirt" with matching headbands, the Salvation Army had added guitars to the traditional Christmas bands, "Peanuts" recommends that every newborn baby be given a banjo for a sense of identity and security, while Popeye now contends with a appropriately grubby folksinger attempting to seduce Olive with his playing, no strings attached.

Fire Scare . . .

He went on to say that the sole problem created by the students was "getting in the way of units responding to the fire, and presenting a problem if another had occurred simultaneously."

THE SCARE itself was caused, according to fire officials, by an overloading of the incinerator with newspaper. This caused a "terrific draft", pushing some paper to the top of the screened-in chimney creating a spectacular sight to those in the area. The papers had been removed from the room of a floor counselor, where they had been placed by dorm residents as a prank.

soft tissues of the animals. Many specimens present economic problems such as the barnacle which has to be prevented from latching on to ship bottoms; oyster drills, a snail which makes a hole in the oyster and eats the soft inside. The cone snail of the Barrier reef is fatal as is the black widow spider. Most jelly-fish are not harfmful except for the Portuguese Man of War for which signs of "Beware" can often be seen along Florida beaches.

In the cold-blooded section of the museum including fish, amphibians, and reptiles, the amphibians and reptiles are a modest collection used for teaching purposes while there is an extensive collection of fresh water and marine fish from this general geographical area.

Amphibians include the brilliant green tree toads, the spring peepers, horned toads which are actually desert lizards, the Texas Gila monster with its beady scales and the skinks who have their scales arranged in overlapping patterns and also have greatly reduced limbs. The chamelons of Florida have been sold by curio shops because of their unusual color change from brown to green; but the true chameleon of Africa looks nothing like this with its prehensile tail and eyes enclosed by a cone of scales allowing for a broad optical field.

NEW CHEVELLE!

BY CHEVROLET

The kind of go—6 or V8—you'd expect from one of Chevy's great highway performers. Come on down and drive it.

The kind of comfort you'd expect in a large interior. Come on down and sit in it.

The kind of fresh styling—inside and out—that makes it the year's smartest surprise. Come down and stare at it.

New Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Now—Chevy spirit in a new kind of car!

We built this one to do more than just stand around looking beautiful. Held its weight down in the 3,000-pound range. Then built four lusty engines—two sixes and two V8's—with output all the way up to 220 horses*!

And if that makes you think this is one frisky car, you've got the right idea.

You've also got a roomy car here. Yet its 115-inch wheelbase keeps it highly maneuverable in traffic and very easy to park.

With its Full Coil suspension, it's got a ride that reminds you of the Jet-smooth kind the way it muffles noise and cushions bumps.

And the fine hand of Body by Fisher craftsmen shows up beneath this one's suave good looks, too.

Sound good? There's more. Like the fact that Chevelle comes in three series with eleven models—convertibles, sport coupes, sedans, wagons, even Super Sport models with front bucket seats. Like the fact that (and see if this isn't one of the nicest surprises of all) the new Chevelle comes at an easy-to-take price!

Like to hear more? The listening's wonderful at your Chevrolet dealer's—and so's the driving.

Off To Antartica

Dr. H.T.U. Smith, chairman of the Geology Department, cuts a cake given to him at a surprise "Bon Voyage" gathering by the members of the Geology Staff, Undergraduate Majors, Graduate Students ,and the secretarial staff.

Dr. Smith will be spending ten weeks in the Antarctica during their summer season on a National Science Foundation Research Program U.S.A.R.P. (United States Antarctic Research Program) called "Operation Deep Freeze". Dr. Smith is believed to be the first scientist to be chosen from UMass to go to Antarctica. While there his home base will be MoMurdo Station, the largest of all Antarctic stations, located on Ross Island. It is the primary logistic center for U.S. ships ,and aircraft from outside the continent.

Assuming the duties of Acting Chairman for Dr. Smith while he is away will be Dr. G. F. McGill of the Geology Department.

Mills House Nightshirts Cause Comment In Commons Line One

by HAROLD GUSHUE, JR.

"They look sexy"; "It's disgusting." No these are not comments of new "Pop" art. Rather these comments were evoked by the appearance of red nightshirts in the commons.

Thirteen students from Mills House, in red nightshirts, were the reason for these comments.

My curiosity being aroused, I interviewed Robert Cripps, counsellor and spokesman for the group.

Bob said, "Because of the complaint of lack of spirit on campus Mills House thought it would take a new lead. We feel that it's about time dorms showed some of the togetherness and spirit of other organizations such as fraternities.

"This is just the first in a number of spirited promotions by Mills."

Other comments were:

"It makes the dining hall rather homey."; "They're not really dressed for dinner are they?"; "Relieves the monotony of the Commons"; and "Shows a little dorm spirit."

The "Feeps" of Hamlin said they also wanted red Mills nightshirts.

Perhaps the future will see a united effort, in the Commons, by Mills and the "Feeps" of Hamlin.

Green Bay Over San Francisco Boston Over Kansas City

by RALPH PROLMAN

Season: 46-23-3

IN THE A.F.L.: Boston over Kansas City — The Pats want the eastern division title badly. Their famed "blitz" should help them win the clincher.

Buffalo over New York — Cookie Gilchrist should have another big day as the Bills shoot for second place.

San Diego over Houston — Knowing they have to win to stay on top, the Chargers should swamp the Oilers.

Oakland over Denver — The Raiders shouldn't have too much trouble with the Broncos, but they are going to need help to catch the Chargers.

IN THE N.F.L.: Green Bay over San Francisco—The Packers are too powerful for the 49ers.

St. Louis over Dallas — The Cards will end a good season with a win over the Cowboys.

Chicago over Detroit — The Bears will clinch the title with a win over the improving Lions.

Baltimore over Los Angeles—John Unitas will cap a good season off by passing the Colts to a win over the Rams.

Cleveland over Washington—The Browns will finish their season with a victory, and Jim Brown should pick up enough yardage to pass the mile mark and top 1800 yards for the year.

Minnesota over Philadephia—The Vikings should score more points than the Eagles and finish the season on a winning note.

PITTSBURGH OVER NEW YORK—The winner of this game wins the Eastern division title. The Steelers has never won the title and I am picking a thing called desire to give the Steelers their first title in what will be a close game.

UConn briefly held a four point lead with just over two minutes to go but hoops by Edwards and O'Rourke tied it up. Al Ritter then scored for the visitors and UMass was down 59-57 with 1:45 showing on the clock. Edwards hit on a drive and it was all tied up again. After Della Sala missed for the UConns, Mass took the rebound and shortly thereafter Edwards was fouled. He made 1 of the 2 shots to reach the final margin of 60-59.

THE GAME WAS FAR FROM OVER Edwards then committed a foul but Ritter missed. Mass got the rebound, but Kimball made a steal in the bucket. Coach Shabel called time out but he had already used up his limit. Under the rules, Mass should have been awarded a technical but the referee gave the ball to UConn. Orr then filed a protest on the game. On the succeeding inbounds pass Edwards made a steal. In a wild effort to commit a foul, Kimball literally rode Tom Ryan out of bounds.

A RIOT ENSUED and Kimball was thrown out of the game and Ryan was given two free throws. He missed both of them and the Huskies rebounded. Perno was double teamed and tied up by Ryan for a jump ball. Perno tapped to Della Sala who missed a long jumper at the buzzer. The action continued on the court with another wild melee breaking out. The court was finally cleared and the Redmen had won the first of the meeting of the big three.

The homers placed four men in double figures with Twitchell scoring 12 points and 11 rebounds. Edwards scored 13, with Bernard and Ryan both adding 10. Mass hit on only 25 of 71 from the floor and 10 of 20 foul shots. Perno scored 21 points while Kimball added 11 with 15 rebounds. The Huskies hit on 22 of 59 and 15 of 25 from the line. The tall visitors lead in the rebounds, 57-46 but were unable to overcome the ball stealing tactics of the fired-up Redmen.

Points For The Snow Bunnies

phasize, in your mind, the skidding of the tails of the skis. Keep your skis fairly flat and set your edges as lightly as possible at the end of the swing. Follow this with the unweighting and then float your skis through the next turn.

On narrow, very steep trails, you'll find that a nice, smooth wedel or even an average short swing with moderate edge set is not enough to give your control. The kind of edge set you need for this terrain is the firm stop-christie type.

In order to get the firm, stop-christie edge into your repertory, go out on a fairly rugged slope and try some stop-christies. As the skis come into the traverse position, set the edges firmly by rolling the knees and ankles into the hill. This setting of the edges takes place at the bottom of the down motion. This will give you speed control.

In order to make the stop-christie type of edge work on a narrow trail, you have to connect these firmly edged turns, one to the other: the minute the pole goes in the snow, you must go vigorously from down-motion into the up-motion and repeat the sequence. Don't hesitate at the pole planting stage, but push up immediately.

The quick, rhythmical turn used by slalom racers, called the step turn, is a form of stem turn, and the preparation is basically the same as for the stem christie. Initiating the turn with less up-unweighting than you would normally use for a parallel turn, but with more through weight shift from one leg to the other.

To make a racing step turn, brush the unweighted, uphill ski lightly over the snow into the stemmed position, always maintaining contact between the snow and the inside edge of the ski. That will keep you from losing the feel of the snow. Now put your weight firmly onto the uphill ski and start the turn at the very same moment.

One value of split rotation, is that it allows a skier to start a turn with reverse action and then change to rotary power for the end of the turn. This brings his body square to his skies so he can initiate his next turn more easily.

The average skier can start a turn on ice or hardpacked snow more easily with reverse action than with rotary power. But split rotation would bring him into a more advantageous position for starting the next turn. The same skier, however, will find rotary power easier for starting a turn in deep snow. Here, split rotation would save him from over-rotating at the end.

Redmen Win In Thriller

UConn Huskies Fall 60-59; Protest and Brawls Hilite Game

by JOHN GOODRICH

The Redmen of the University of Massachusetts fought their way to a 60-59 victory over Connecticut before a full house at the Curry Hicks Cage last night. The game was tight throughout with several fights erupting near the end as nerves became frayed.

In the end it was a foul shot by Tim Edwards that spelled the difference. The shot came with about a minute and a half left in the game making the score 60-59 and despite the wild finish neither team was able to score again. The Redmen missed two fouls and the Huskies three baskets down the stretch.

UCONN opened a 7-0 lead early in the game and it was looking dark for the home team. But the UMass squad fought back and with 10:00 minutes left in the half the Redmen finally gained a tie at 15 all. It took the team two minutes to find the hoop before Jim Painten opened the scoring. At the fifteen minute mark the score was only 9-6 favor of the Huskies. The visitors came out in a tight zone defense and the Redmen in their scrappy man for man. Both teams were very cold shooting in the first half and as it turned out the poor hitting continued in the second half.

After the opening seven point lead the widest spread that either team enjoyed was a five point margin. UConn opened up a lead with about five minutes to go in the half at 25-19. A hoop by O'Rourke and two by Tom Ryan got the Redmen back in the contest. Mass then went on to score five more before the visitors could again find the range. Then it was basket for basket until the halftime margin of a single point in favor of the Redmen was reached. The score was 34-33.

In the first half the Huskies constantly managed to get cool ball hander Dom Perno open and he managed to come through with sixteen big points. The Redmen successfully bottled up the UConn big men Toby Kimball and Ed Slomcenski. O'Rourke covered the former while Johnson and Edwards covered the 6'11" giant.

In the second half the Redmen switched to their 1-3-1 zone press. This defense constantly bottled up Perno but the big men managed to get free. Coach Orr made the necessary adjustments after the Huskies opened a 48-43 lead. Twitchell hit on a three point play as the homers quickly got back into the game. In the first 10 minutes of the half a total of 28 points were scored by both teams. After the Redmen had closed the lead it was basket for basket down the stretch.

Broken Leg Section

Ski Pointers For The Vacation

A skier who has trouble getting into the plow position, ought to try the following: While still running down the slope with skis together, do a deep knee bend. Do it once, slowly. Then do it a second time, coming up quickly. As you come up, push the tails of the skis apart. You'll find they brush into the plow position quite easily.

When you start skiing badly, quit immediately. Every run you take is a part of your learning process. Therefore, when you start skiing badly, you are training yourself to ski incorrectly. Take a rest, the longer the better.

A stem skier, often is in so great a hurry to get around the turn that he swings his outside arm and hand around, hoping rotation will do what his skis won't: that is, finish the turn. As a result, the skiing deteriorates with the stem. A good stem is sufficient.

If you are a stem skier, you should use this method to check whether your stem is working sufficiently: put your poles behind your back, and keep them pointing out to the sides as you make the stem. The exercise eliminates any rotation or other swinging, and will remind you that you can go through the stem simply by edging the outside ski and getting enough weight on it.

Vitally important in good parallel skiing is having the legs close together through the turn. Besides improving appearance, having the legs close together improves steadiness and edging.

Here's how to develop the leg togetherness vital in parallel skiing, stand with your skis a foot or so apart. Then without hopping, bring both skis together. Sustain this tightening effort after your skis have met. Squeeze the knees against each other. Apply this effort while making your turns, with particular emphasis on the start of the turn.

In heavy snow or through moguls, the sharp heel thrust can lead to a wobbly, uncertain descent. To steady up in heavy snow or moguls, you'll have to learn to gentle that heel thrust, to float your turn rather than force it.

To tame your heel thrust into a gentle, light swing, emphasize steering the tips of the skis around the turn, particularly the tip of the outside ski Deem-

Angels Rush In, Reserves Retreat

ANGEL'S WORK IN AF ROTC.

The originally masculine Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps at the University of Massachusetts was invaded early Wednesday night by "Angels." The pranksters sneaked into the ROTC offices and transformed the drab, masculine offices into feminine pink and lace.

The office hardest hit was that of Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., detachment commander. The "Angels" added pink curtains, pink-bowed telephones, a white desk shirt with a pink heart, a vase of sweetheart roses and pink carnations.

In other offices stockings hung from the ceilings and windows, desks, and walls were decorated in pink.

The "culprits," according to Col. Simmons, were the 40 members of the Angel Flight of the UM Arnold Air Society. He said the stunt was harmless because all of the props could be removed easily. The motive was the retaliation by the coeds to the taunts of undergraduates in the formerly all-male program.

Forensic Society To Debate

The UMass Forensic Society has challenged both the Army and Air Force ROTC departments to a debate on the topic "Resolved: Old Soldiers Should Fade Away." The debate would be held on campus, probably in the Student Union.

Forensic Society President Steve Jenkins told the Collegian that "We feel that there has been a serious over-abundance of old soldiers in the world today. It is our contention that they are responsible for many of our political difficulties."

Jenkins added that the debate was a "serious one with an unusual topic". He further stated that "we of the Society hope that all participants will learn from the experience."

Sophomore Banquet

The special events committee of the Sophomore Class announced today that a contest will be held for any sophomore who can design the best coat of arms for the Sophomore Class. This crest will be used for the goblets which will be given as favors at the sophomore banquet. Please make the crests in black and white on plain paper approximately 5" by 7".

The winner will receive two free tickets to the banquet. The contest closes Thursday, December 19, 1963.

Special Election

A special Student Senate election will be held to fill a newly-created vacancy for the office of Senator-at-Large for the class of 1966.

Nomination papers are available now in the RSO office, and must be returned to that office by December 20.

The election will be held on January 6, 1964.

SU Sponsors Christmas Dance

This Friday, December 13 the Student Union Dance Committee will present a "Deck the Halls" Christmas Dance in the Student Union Ballroom. The high point of the evening till be trimming the tree, which is the center of the decorations. Music will be provided by the Country Squires. The Dance Committee hopes to see everyone there!

Year-Round Operation Meets Strong Faculty Opposition

Proposed plans to put the University on a year-round schedule have been met with strong disapproval on the part of many faculty members.

Many departments, among them History, Math, Government and Geology, are reported to be uannimous or near unanimous in their disapproval of the institution of a trimester schedule.

IN JUNE OF 1963 a report was issued to the Faculty by a President Lederle-appointed committee which concluded that Year-round operation would be advisable and beneficial for the University.

Many faculty members were angered that the report was issued to the faculty at an inopportune time (the beginning of summer vacation), and that there were no full time teachers on the original committee which was composed of Albert Purvis, Dean of the School of Education, Leo Redfern, Head of the Office of Institutional Studies, Robert Wagner, Associate Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and William Venmen, Assistant Provost.

AT A FACULTY SENATE meetlng on September 19, the committee was expanded to include five full time teachers, Professors Gordon, Higgins, Morris, Richason and Silver, and was instructed to bring to the Senate a list of motions which expressed the educational principles upon which any system of year-round operation must be based.

It must be remembered that the thirteen motions constructed by the expanded committee are only principles and can apply to any type of year-round operation, including the trimester.

However, many faculty members believe that the administration is not planning any minor revision of the present calendar, but is in reality planning a major shift to the trimester program.

Four of the motions were dealt with and passed by the Faculty Senate at a meeting yesterday. However, included in the nine other motions are statements which increase the complexity of the situation. One motion states that faculty members will not be compelled to teach in the summer unless students are made to attend summer session. If this motion were to be passed, many faculty members, wary of the "unless", feel that they will be compelled to teach during the summer thus upsetting family and or research obligations.

OTHER GENERAL OBJECTIONS on the part of many faculty members concern their belief that certain "administrative careerists" are more interested in the efficient business-like functioning of the University than in the educational process. One report circulating through the faculty read "students need a break in their studies, because they would, in my opinion, get much less out of their education if 'rushed through' than if allowed periodic rests. Constant cramming is an intellectually inefficient as a nearly empty campus is economically inefficient."

THE SAME REPORT goes on to score the tri-mester system on

RD's Announce Cast For Upcoming Plays

Roister Doister officers have announced the cast for their upcoming "Evening of One-Act Plays" to be presented January 31 and February 1.

Cast in The America Dream, by Edward Albee, are: Carol Ann Russell as Mommy, Kenneth Feinberg as Daddy, Jane Abbiati as Grandma, Deena Ferrigno as Mrs. Barker and Lawrence Wilker as the Young Man.

In Tennessee Williams' Something Unspoken will be seen Paula Norton as Cornelia and Gerri Siegal as Grace.

In Pyramus and Thisbe, by William Shakespeare, will be: Tom Kerrigan as Quince (Prologue), Roland Laramee as Snug (lion), James Wrynn as Bottom (Pyramus), David Axelrod as Flute (Thisbe), Robert Thornley as Snout (Wall), Kenneth Feinberg as Starveling (Moonshine), Lawrence Wilker as Theseus, Ellen Swartz as Hippolyta, Roy Blitzer as Nobleman and Pat Long as Puck.

Officers expressed appreciation to all students who tried out, and regret that not everyone could be given a part in the production.

"We're not wasting any time," an RD spokesman remarked, "rehearsals get underway tonight at 7 p.m. and will continue up to the time of performance. In fact, we will be going full-blast all through intersession."

The production, the first one to be sponsored independently by Roister Doisters since Spring of 1962, will take up again a long train of distinguished student production by one of the oldest campus organizations.

"We're especially grateful," continued the spokesman, "for the ald University Theatre is giving us in this production. The result of two such organizations can only be more excellence in the drama presented on the UMass campus."

Names will still be taken of students who wish to work on the technical crew and on publicity for the production, the officer added.

Famous Cantor Performs At Chanukah Festival

This Sunday at 7:00 P.M. in Line 2 of the Dining Commons, B'nai Brith Hillel is sponsoring their annual Chanukah festival, this year featuring Cantor Alix Zimmer from Ohabei Shalom in Brookline. Because of the great response Cantor Zimmer received when he was here in 1960, he has been invited back to entertain.

ALIX ZIMMER

Cantor Zimmer began to take singing lessons when he was in high school and continued even after he had enlisted in the Army Air Force in 1942. After separation from the Army, Cantor Zimmer continued his vocal training, which eld him to the Collegiate Chorale. Later the became bass-baritone soloist for the famed Robert Shaw Chorale. Senate Applauded On Who's Who Committee

We believe that the Student Senate made a wise decision at their last meeting, Wednesday evening, when it unanimously voted to establish an ad hoc committee to study "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" in regards to this and other campuses.

Since this year's selectees have been announced there has been a more than normal curiosity concerning selection processes and the relative merit of keeping Who's Who at the University.

The fact that the entire process of selection is so cloaked in secrecy only serves to whet the curiosity of those who would desire to know more about the entire subject.

The Senate, in establishing the committee is doing a definite service for the student body. If "Who's Who" is to be one of the highest of all campus honors, then it is the Senate's job, as representatives of the student body, to make certain that the selections are conducted in the best possible manner, using the best possible criteria.

It must continually be reiterated that the newly established committee was not created in any attempt to discredit the present members of the selection committee (whoever they may be) or the other recipients of the "Who's Who" honor.

The newly created committee will merely investigate and report to the Senate what it has determined to be some, if any, of the flaws in the selection process of this University's "Who's Who."

A Review

Ceasura

by LOIS SKOLNIK

Caesura, the campus literary magazine, has presented an adequate first issue. The only change of format from previous years involves Sandy Graham's illustrations accompanying the stories. This addition aids in an artistic note of expression.

The first story, by Sally Minich, deals sensitively with a child's first experience with disillusionment in the adult-real world on "The Other Side of the Fence." Sandy Graham's, "The Gull," another child story, concerns a girl who lives with the tasteless and practical conformity of her aunt and the free spirit of her uncle. The story is developed successfully through a child's simplicity and insight.

The highlight of the prose is "The Little Man in the Crimson Shirt" by Steve Orlen. This story, a phantasy of unusual impact, is readable and amusing as well as provocative. In it, a sculptor creates a little man who lives a quiet, regulated life, ending in an innocent but futile attempt to identify with a "living" person. The style is fluid and firm.

The poetry, on the whole, is good. Outstanding pieces include N. C. Bowlen's "Epistle to Mayor John Knill . . .". Sue Tracy's "The Riding Lesson," and Steve Orlen's "At the Age of Forty Eight."

The art is disappointing. "Face," a woodcut, by Cynthia Stoddard, and the cover, a woodcut, by Douglas Gray, are the only notable pieces.

In all, the Autumn publication of Caesura is substantial for a first issue. It lacks the excellence of last winter's issue and the spark of last spring's issue. Yet, hopefully, the few exceptional pieces will serve as forerunners in surpassing the high standards of last year's publications.

Letters To The Editor

Dishonesty

Do Professors Care?

Ed. Note: Because of the highly personal aspect of a letter of this type it was felt that the term "Two Disillusioned Sophomores" as applied to the letter's authors, was preferable to actual names.

To the Editor:

Maybe our standards are too high to be realistic, but we feel that something ought to be said, by the students themselves, about a situation that has seemingly gotten out of hand; i.e. "honest" cheating.

Recently, in one class, two students received marks which they did not deserve. One, through a mistake in the addition of his points, received a 75% instead of the 45% he deserved, and did not report the error. The other skipped the exam because of another exam on the same day, and then told the professor that he (the professor) had misplaced her exam. She received a make-up exam on that basis!

Although these are only two cases, similar circumstances occur quite often, especially with the use of infirmary excuses. Can the professors really be unaware that so much "dishonesty" exists, or do they just not care?

Two Disillusioned Sophomores

Animalism On The Hill

In reply to A.B. and M.R. of Dec. 11 Collegian:

In your letter in the Dec. 11 Collegian you mentioned the "animalistic activities that periodically take place on the 'hill' ". Would (or could) you kindly explain why you believe that these incidents occur only on the "hill." In our stay here there has been only one other unfortunate incident of this type and it was started in other men's dorms and progressed up the hill to Baker and the other dorms there.

We sensed from your letter that you were women; pardon us if we're wrong. If you are women you should have been in your dorm at 12:15, but if you were at the fire, you should have noticed that there were quite a few students coming up the hill. The crowd at the fire was estimated at approximately 1500 students, but the "primitive demonstration" was perpetrated by only a small group of those present. It is our belief that you are very foolish and mentally immature if you place the blame for the whole affair on all the residents of the hill, when in reality it was executed by only a few immature persons from all of the men's dorm

Preparation For Life

One goes to a university not only to get an education in the arts, letters, or sciences, but to prepare for life. It is the duty of a university to fulfill both of these functions. The University of Massachusetts does not. Thousands of co-eds are being shortchanged every year. They may leave the University with some book knowledge but they are, as a whole, woefully inadequate when it comes to living an unprotected life; one without parents, housemothers and curfews. Some girls graduate from college without knowing how to cook, to manage a household or their own financial affairs. The best way to remedy this situation would be to allow those co-eds who so desire, to live off campus.

Dormitories are a good thing if you are socially retarded to the extent where you need the overpowering protective shelter of a housemother or the excuse of a curfew. However, if you are the least bit thoughtful you might be upset by some of the conditions of dorm living; sometimes there are three girls to a room sharing one or two dressers and two desks and, even worse, sometimes roommates are incompatible. There is noise at night which makes it extremely hard to study after curfew because everyone is caged in the dorm, and they have nowhere else to go and quiet hours are very ineffective. Some resent paying for a room that they absolutely detest; rooms are small and cell-like in construction, they are poorly lighted and both the furniture and the storage space are inadequate. There is no such thing as privacy and it is this very point which makes dorm living so difficult for some. There is no place where one can go to think, and thinking is a necessary part of growth. These conditions make studying rather difficulties—especially for freshmen who can not even get a late library permission until second semester when it is often too late. Some girls find it comforting to know that if the going gets rough in their social lives they can always hide behind their strict curfews. This is a cause of social immaturity. The curfews are a substitute for running home to mother. Dorm life really calls for very little responsibility on the part of the co-ed. She just has to remember where she put her meal ticket and what night is Gorden Linen night. How can she be expected to marry and run a normal household? It is no small wonder that the marriages of so many college educated women end in divorce.

The co-eds who would be allowed to live off campus would have many advantages. They would be on their own. Co-eds would feel that they were being trusted and would rise to the challenge and act like mature adults. They would learn self-reliance because they would have to cook, keep house and manage their own money in order to be able to survive. They would have privacy. The conditions would be more conducive to study. They would have better food (there is no need to dwell on the fact that anything, even one's own cooking is better than commons fare).

A girl comes to the University expecting to have the opportunity to get an education equal to that of her male counter-part and what does she find? Binding curfews and antiquated rules concerning the residences of female students. Meanwhile the UMass male undergraduate is free to live and learn and it is accepted, even here, that one learns best by experience.

You might argue that it is much safer for the residence policies of the University to remain as they are—this way the authorities know where everyone is . . . however . . . do they? How many girls sign out illegally or don't bother to sign out at all? And what good does the curfew do? Does it discourage sex? Does it improve moral conditions? I think not.

The University argues that co-eds are too irresponsible to live off campus, but how are they ever going to gain this responsibility? And is the UMass male undergraduate any more deserving of this trust?

In our country theoretically all are born equal—be they black, white, male or female. If the male college student has the opportunity to learn to live an independent, self-reliant life, why not the UMass co-ed?

Graduate School Recieves 15 More DefenseFellowship

The University of Massachusetts has been granted 15 additional National Defense Education Act fellowships for graduate study during the 1964-65 academic year, Dean Edward C. Moore of the University's Graduate School announced today.

Twenty-four NDEA fellows are currently doing graduate work at the University. Many of these will continue next year.

According to University officials, the number of new NDEA fellowships is the highest awarded to any public institution in New England.

NDEA fellowships are granted under Title IV of the 1958 National Defense Education Act and cover the cost of tuition and fees and carry a $2,500 stipend. Fellowships normally continue for a three-year period, and are awarded to assist universities with growing graduate programs.

The federal program is designed to increase the number of advanced degrees in areas of study deemed important to national defense.

Four of the grants were made to the English department, three to the philosophy department, two to the department of sociology and anthropology, one to the geology department, and two each to the departments of food science and technology, psychology, and German.

UMASS NAIADS PRACTICE FOR COMING EVENTS.

On November 6, the Naiads officially began work on their show for 1964. After much discussion and voting the theme of "The City" was decided on as the theme for the show. Work continued that night on the many possibilities for individual numbers, of which there will be ten.

Tryouts were held for the places in the solo, duet, trio, and quartet during the rest of the week. The results were as follows: Solo, Jean Holeman; Duet, Cindy Ward, Nancy Wood; Trio, Bev Brent, Barb Quay, Bobbi Farinella; Quartet, Sue Neet, Joanne Piela, Alison Malone, Carol Paulk.

At the next meeting, natatographers were assigned to the writing of the 10 numbers. The natatographers then presented their finished numbers to the group on Dec. 4 and the group then signed up for the numbers in which they wished to swim. Rehearsals will now be held for individual numbers until after Christmas vacation when a general run-through will be held.

Petition To Urge Civil Rights

The time for action on the great issue in America today, Civil Rights, is now. In order to aid the national drive for equality for all people in this nation, a new group has been formed at the University called Students for Civil Rights. The first major project of this group will be a drive to persuade citizens of the town of Amherst to write their Senators and Congressman in support of President Kennedy's Civil Rights bill. Volunteers are now being recruited to aid in this project, which will be carried out tomorrow, December 14, from 1-4 p.m. There will be a brief meeting of all workers on Saturday at 12:30 p.m. in the Worcester Room of the Student Union. All students and faculty members who are sincerely interested in combating the hatred and violence which our late President opposed so vigorously, are urged to help tomorrow.

Philip Johnston,
President, Students for Civil Rights

This Monday, December 16th, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., students will have the opportunity through Collegian auspices and support to sign a petition urging passage of civil rights legislation. This petition, to be sent to House Speaker John McCormick, supports provisions of HR 7512, the bi-partisan civil rights bill now in Congress.

This petition supports the following provisions:

I. A bar on unequal voting registration requirements, denial of the right to vote because of errors or omissions on records, and the use of literacy tests not taken in writing. Sixth grade education shall be made a rebuttal presumption of literarcy. The Attorney General shall be authorized to request a special three-judge federal court to hear any voting rights suit. District courts shall be required to expediate voting rights suits when the Attorney General makes no such request. The petition supports:

II. Permission given to the Justice Department to secure suits for the desegregation of state or locally owned or operated public facilities when the Attorney General certifies. Permission granted to the Attorney general to institute court suits when persons have alledged deprivation of equal protection of the laws on account of race, color, religion, or national origin.

The petition supports:

III. Desegregation of public education. Requiring the U.S. Office of Education to report within two years on progress of desegregation at all levels. Authorize the Office to give technical and financial assistance, if requested, to local school systems in the process of desegregation. Authorize the Attorney General to file suit in court for the desegregation of schools and colleges if he receives signed complaints and certifies that the aggrived persons are unable to initiate or maintain appropriate legal proceedings.

The petition supports:

IV. The formation of a permanent Civil Rights Commission as an agency of the government, and to broaden its powers so it might function as a national clearing house on civil rights information; give to the Commission right to investigate unlawfall denial of the right to vote in any federal election, as a result of any patterns of fraud or dis-

Panel Held To Discuss Wheat Deal

A panel discussion on "Agriculture in Russia and the Wheat Deal" was held on Wednesday, December 11 at 8 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. Members of the Agricultural Economics Society listened to brief talks by Professor Burke of the Geography Dept., Professor Dilkes, History Dept., Ohio University, and Professor Yavasaur, from the University of Berlin.

Professor Burke outlined his opinions on the 5 Point Program, as follows: 1. The people of the USSR are not starving. 2. The present wheat deal is not as stupendous as the American press seems to think. 3. He suggests that it is unwise to let the 1963 Wheat Deal situation color our outlook 4. The really amazing thing about Soviet agriculture is not what it is, but what it has done in spite of its problems. No other country has equalled its progress in the 1950's 5. In the long run, the present agricultural difficulties in the USSR are not very important.

Professor Dilkes presented an overall look of the Russian economy.

The third panelist, Professor Yavasaur, spoke on Soviet agriculture in general and the food situation.

Professor Yavasaur passed out leaflets indicating statistics for current food production in the USSR. Afterward, a question and answer period gave the members a chance to discuss the problem.

University Represented At Air Society Conclave

On Saturday, December 7, Cadet Major Peter Gillon, Arnold Air Society Commander, accompanied by John Coggins, Captain, AAS, Robert Skiba, and James Fleming attended the Area One Arnold Air Society Conclave at Westover Air Force Base.

Major Gillon, the Commander of this University's John P. Granville Squadron, said that this conclave was designed primarily to bring together all the New England elements of the society and provide a problem solving session for this area.

Of major concern for the University and its neighboring communities is a projected program called the National Speakers Pool, which will be available for this University. He elaborated, "This program is not to be viewed as a policy panel seeking public support for the Air Force, but rather a program to acquaint local groups with specific functions or activities of the Air Force and ROTC programs nation-wide."

The innovation that the Speakers Pool brings to ROTC units is the cadet orientation this will provide. This is to be a cadet function. Each cadet selected will familiarize himself with a certain Air Force activity, such as the B-70 program or something as seemingly simple as just what does an AFROTC cadet do, and be on call to deliver that topic to whatever organization might request the service.

Another such conclave is scheduled for the near future and will again provide the type of atmosphere necessary for the "coordination of the different squadrons in the New England area."

Senate Services Committee Answers Student Querys

In conjunction with the Services Committee of the Student Senate, the Senate Public Relations Committee will try to acquaint the students with the work cut out for this committee.

In the past few weeks the Service Committee solved the following problems:

1) Due to the great number of students, Van Meter requested more phones,—An additional pay phone and two additional interdorm phones were installed.

2) The married student, who all live on the 1st and 3rd floors of Hampshire House, felt that since most of them have personal phones, both they and the single boys on the 2nd floor were being inconvenienced by having to answer the other phone on their floor, most of the calls being for the single students.—The phone was moved to the 2nd floor and an inter-dorm phone was also put in.

3 The free bus to Amherst that we have had in the past was sorely missed by the students.—After several meeting with the Amherst Chamber of Commerce, a bus route was established and 4 trial runs were decided upon: December 6 and 7, and December 13 and 14. The buses on December 6 and 7 were well received by the students, but it remains to be seen whether business in Amherst was financially improve to warrant their further providing this service. Services Committee would like to thank Mr. Edward Buck of R.S.O. for coordinating this Free Bus Service.

4) The girls of Van Meter requested a railing along the asphalt walk leading from Van Meter North down to the north end of Greenough. — The railing is to be put up shortly.

There are many more problems which the Services Committee is presently working on: transferability of meal tickets, Yahoo distribution, late breakfasts, commuter mailboxes, quadrangle lighting, a TV set in the infirmary, lack of tables & chairs in the Lodge, extra-free-transcripts for seniors, and a pathway between the Public Health building and the new addition to Morrill.

Each and every problem is checked into by a member of the Services committee and is written up in a formal report at the end of the month. Once a month, this column will bring to the student body, all important and significant solutions to problems tackle by the committee. Any student is free to submit similar problems to the Services Committee. They are to be left in the Services Committee mail box in the Senate office.

"Art Of Jazz" Interviews Woods

Sunday at 10, WMUA's "Art of jazz" presents an interview with alto saxophonist Phil Woods. From Springfield, Mass., Phil is one of the few current altoists extending the influence of the late Charlie Parker, who was known with Dizzy Gillespie as a "father of modern jazz". Mr. Woods uses the Parker base for his consistently original, meaningful work. Few of his contemporaries are more than talented imitators. The 1963, Downbeat Critics Poll placed him above both Julian "Cannonball" Adderley and Paul Desmond. A significant fact when one considers he doesn't have considers he doesn't have his own his own group or any currently available recordings under his own naem. For an insight into the artist and the music he selects to play, join Ron Engel's interview with Phil Woods, Sunday at 10 p.m.

Sororities Involved In Holiday Activities

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

Many activities have kept us all busy for the past few weeks. As our informal rush draws to a close for the time being, we have pledged five new girls and are very proud of them. We wish to congratulate Sharon English, Claudia Hammond, Dee MacCaferri, Judy Mostek, and Priscilla Ponce.

Along with new pledges, we also have three new sisters who were initiated last week. They are Louise McCarthy, Nancy Pero.

Congratulations also go to Evelyn Hanson who was recently initiated into Phi Kappa Phi honor society. We are very proud of her achievement.

PI BETA PHI

The Christmas tree is finally up, and the Christmas spirit is beginning to take hold of everyone. All of us are busy planning dorm and house Christmas parties and buying presents, as well as anxiously awaiting that last day of classes. But despite all the social affairs being planned, everyone hopes to get a little studying in on the side, especially since finals are all too close.

Once again "thank-you's" and congratulations are in order. A warm expression of appreciation to the brothers of Zeta Nu for a most enjoyable exchange supper, and sincere congratulations to Marie Makinen on being named to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

They have a pledge period of about three and a half weeks.

The sisters would like to wish Gina Testa, our Winter Carnival Queen Contestant, the best of luck. Gina is a freshman from Fairhaven, Mass.

The newly elected officers of the pledge class are president, Leone Noonan; vice-president, Phyllis MacAteer; secretary, Carolyn Schmidt; treasurer, Linda Coty.

The president of Sigma Kappa, Priscilla Bradway was elected senator-at-large for the class of '64.

We would like to thank QTV for the wonderful buffet and we'll be looking forward to our Christmas party with the brothers.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

Best of luck to the newly elected pledge officers of Sigma Sigma Sigma who are: President, Marilou Prentice; Vice President, Joan Felio; Secretary, Sue Pelland; and Treasurer, Sandy Nordstrom.

Next Monday will be Steak and Beans night for the sisters as part of their scholarship program. Also in connection with their academics program, Panhellenic is sponsoring a Scholarship Tea Sunday. It will be held at Tri Sigma for the first time.

Busily are the girls putting up Yuletide decorations for their Open House planned for Saturday eve from 7-8 P.M. Visiting the sorority on Wednesday will be old Saint Nick himself full of the Christmas spirit. At the party, he will be giving out character gifts to all the sisters and pledges.

Phi Sigma Delta has always been known to be active on and off campus. Fraters Richard Lerner and Jim Baskin spent a rewarding summer touring Europe. As members of a student tour group, they spent 8 weeks visiting all the major European cities, and even traveled to Tangiers, Africa.

The past year has witnessed extensive participation of the house in campus organizations. Four brothers are members of The Flying Redmen. Oleh Pawluk, a reporter and feature-article writer for the Collegian, is also active on the Yahoo. In addition to these organizations, Phi Sig's have participated in the Redmen Marching Band, Operetta Guild, Roister Doisters, various honor societies, and such sports as swimming, tennis, soccer, and track.

To The Men

Men's Shaving Proves To Be Real Problem

Though stainless steel shavers and razor blades are the newest items to enter into the battle of the beard, men of 2500 B.C. in Cyprus used tweezers to remove their whiskers—a tedious operation and not without a little pain.

The hair on your face is four times as thick as the hair on your head, from 700 to 800 hairs per inch. To make shaving even tougher, the whiskers don't stand up straight. Their angle is from 30 to 60 degrees, and under the chin they may be nearly flat.

If you are average, you will spend 139 full days during your life shaving off a total of 27½ feet of whiskers! All in all, Americans spend five million man-hours every day just shaving.

The ancient Egyptians invented a bronze straight razor; many of these razors, found in Pharaoh's tombs, have sharp edges even today! While iron and steel eventually replaced bronze in the straight razor, men continued to shave with substantially the same type of razor for hundreds of years—with many a nick and scratch along the way. It wasn't until 1762 that anyone got lathered up enough to invent a razor that was "safe."

Jean-Jacques Perret, a master cutler in Paris, contracted skin diseases from going to the barber's shop and being cut about the face—so he conceived the idea of adding a wooden guard to a straight razor, basing his invention on the principle of the carpenter's plane in which only a short section of the blade projects from the surface. But his razor was too expensive for the ordinary man.

Safety razors somewhat resembling their usual modern form with a guarded blade set across the handle were devised by William S. Henson of London in 1847. According to his description, Henson's razor "resembles somewhat the form of the common hoe."

However, Henson's new razor had one drawback: he used a small hollow-ground blade, which had to be fixed in a separate holder for stropping. King C. Gillette, of Boston, found the solution in 1895 when he proposed to mass produce blades of the wafer type so cheaply that they could be thrown away when they were no longer sharp.

Ever wish you didn't have to shave? If you were given the chance to be whisker-less the rest of your life, you'd probably pass up the opportunity! According to a group of eminent New York City psychologists, a man's beard is very important to him symbolically. In a test survey, a number of men were given this hypothetical question: If a cream were offered for sale at a reasonable price which in three applications would rid you of your beard forever so that you would never need to shave again, would you buy it?

The response? Practically none of the men was interested. One of the meager three per cent who did show any interest explained, "It would be O.K., because I've got hair on my chest."

Sportsmanship

The horror of the UConn basketball riot can be seen on the faces of two UMass coeds (center).

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts has never been noted for beating the University of Connecticut with any consistency. Therefore when such an event does occur, it is unfortunate that it has to be marred by several unnecessary skirmishes. While the players can be forgiven due to their involvement in the contest, the actions of the fans cannot be so lightly passed.

UMass is attempting to go big time in most of its sports. The accomplishment of the football team are well known, and the basketball team seems to be picking up where the Fuslamen left off. We have a new coach and an exciting new style of play. One of the most important assets to our growth is the fine support that the teams are getting from the student body. Redmen crowds have become noted for their noisy devotion to the teams. This is appreciated by the players and the coaches as it can be very unsettling to the opposition.

The crowd last Tuesday was really outstanding until that last minute of the game. When Tom Ryan and Toby Kimball got into the skirmish, they were pried apart. It was only after the fans came from the stands that the fight continued. Even at the end of the game the players were involved in another melee touched off by Chris Whitcomb. This time the stands were really cleared and in fact some students became involved in the fights.

If the actions of the fans were to continue in this matter there is a possibility that the Redmen would be made to forfeit a game. The bad publicity that would result could be the worst thing that could happen to the University. The stigma that the student body has earned would be attached to the team everywhere it went. This would be most unfortunate for the team in the face of the image the school is trying to build as an academic community that can still provide top flight athletic programs.

So what do you say fans? Lets get out and support the Redmen from the stands, but please keep off the court and let the team take care of the playing of the game.

Ski Team Is Busy Preparing Returning Vets Raise Hopes

by DAN GLOSBAND

Four returning veterans and 16 candidates raise UMass hopes for a good record in the upcoming roll and supervising, as the Don Burgess, Norm Carpenter, and Walt Swiatek have been taking role and supervising, as the candidates ran five miles a day for the past three weeks, prior to this weekends cut to an eight-man squad. While the loss of their leagues second high man, last year's Capt. Dick Horlburt, will be strongly felt, Coach McConnell hopes that Swiatek, who missed most of last season with a broken leg, will fill the gap.

Christmas vacation should be busy for the team, as they have a five day pre-Christmas training camp at either Killington or Mad River Glen, and then finish the vaaction on Thunder Mt. their home area. Since the University fails to draw experienced racers, the Ski Team must put in 20 to 25 days of skiing before their first meet. Four hours a day of short slalom skiing and climbing puts the team in top condition and gives them an advantage in long races.

The parallel team New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference limits itself to Alpine events-slalom, giant slalom, downhill, and is geared toward a meet program that results in about 12 minutes of competitive skiing per man. The average race lasts only about 50-90 seconds on a ½ to 1 mile course, the longer races being UMass's last. Each team hosts a one-event meet, with six of the 8 man squad competing and the top 4 times counting.

Since the team is often required to stay over night at away meets, they hire a home or a camp and do their own cooking, both to reduce costs, and to provide a good pre-meet atmosphere.

The Team looks forward to it's first meet on January 26 at Cranmore Mt., sponsored by Brown University.

Wrestlers Bow To Amherst 24-8

by NICK PAPPAS

The UMass Matmen travelled to Amherst last Wednesday night in search of an early victory this season. The Lord Jeffs proved themselves too much for the Redmen however, and Amherst Coach "Scully" Scandrett soon saw his team win six of the eight matches.

Despite some very fine efforts, especially Boris Chevone's (130 pound class), UMass remained scoreless until the fourth match. Then Jesse Brogan in the 147 pound divison came through with his usual fine performance, gaining five points for Coach John Douglas with a pin in 2:08 time. Dave Cafarelli displayed real ability until a knee injury forced the courageous Redman out, adding five more points to the Amherst total.

UMass' only victory by decision was supplied by George Darling over George Jacobs in the 177 pound class. Even though Darling gave away considerable weight for this match he kept complete control, winning by time advantage. The only defensive effort Jacobs could muster in the nine minutes seemed to be continuously crawling off the mat, a "moving" performance. The Lord Jeffs did demonstrate their usual potent style of wrestling, however, notably Charles Fierstine and Doug Wales, in the lightest and heaviest positions.

Last weekend the Redmen journeyed to New London to participate in the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament. Wrestling against such powerful teams as Syracuse, Maryland, and the victorious Navy squad, UMass scored eight tournament points through the efforts of Jesse Brogan and Team Captain Craig DeWallace. The whole team gained valuable experience.

Redmen Finish 3rd Kings Point Next

The UMass pistol team placed third behind a strong Villanova team in the Dickinson Hall Range on Sat. 7 Dec. It was no contest for Coast Guard, the second place team, UMass and MIT the fourth team in the tournament. Behind the terrific performances turned in by Villanova's Mascia, Sinclair, Brennen and Leidecker the Wildcats accumulated 1364 points. Coast Guard scored 1325, UMass, 1317, and MIT finished with 1311.

UMass showing a bad case of the jitters managed to fire their highest score to date, but they were not up to their best. Top shooter for the Redmen was junior Dan Sullivan with 273, followed by Capt. Jack Kelly 267, Dave Naylor 266, and sophs Eric Mussen 256, and George Wletecha 255.

Next Saturday the Redmen tackle Kings Point considered to be at least as powerful as Villanova so it appears that UMass has their work cut out for them again. The team is four and two so far in the season having beaten Coast Guard, MIT twice and Brown and losing to Villanova and Coast Guard.

U.S. Skiing Nation

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 — Bob Beattie, coach of the U.S. Olympic ski team, predicted today it is "just a matter of time" before the U.S. attains the status of "the best Alpine nation in the world."

Beattie's prediction, attributed to the American attitude towards skiing as the reason for our expected superiority over any other nation.

He described the American attitude as "the great tremendous feeling inside of you that this is something that you must do and do well." He said American skiers strive to succeed "for the sake of athletics."

In other countries, he said, skiers are subsidized, and they compete with the goal of ultimately becoming instructors or coaches.

But Americans, he said, are "not trying to win because we want to be ski instructors or run a ski shop. A lot of our kids want to be doctors and dentists—they can do anything they want to do."

"The fact is we want to win because it just sort of seems we should. So, there is a tremendous drive instilled in our kids to do this and they feel this very, very strongly."

Ski Injuries

Reduce Ski Risks

How can a skier reduce the risks of injury?

Several suggestions are offered by Dr. Arthur Ellison, M.D., a safety specialist, chairman of the National Skier Research Foundation and director of the Mt. Snow medical facility.

Among Dr. Ellison's suggestions are these:

1. Before the ski season begins, undertake an appropriate conditioning program. Such programs can best be carried out though local ski clubs or "Y" branches.

2. Use proper equipment, based on the amount of experience you have as a skier. If you're a beginner, rely on a reputable ski shop.

3. A new skier should start with a week or more at a resort. Here you can develop under the progressive guidance af a certified instructor. It is dangerous to learn a variety of techniques before mastering the basic fundamentals.

4. Don't take unnecessary chances just because being daring exhilarates you. If you like to ski, remember it's impossible to do so with a broken leg.

The above procedures have also been endorsed by the Association of Intercollegiate Ski Competition.

Redmen Face UNH, Holy Cross Next

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts now holding a four game win streak, has three more tough games before the Christmas recess. Last night, they beat the Eagles of B.C., 93-74, at Chestnut Hill. The homers have two claims to fame this season. The first of these is their famous coach Bob Cousy retired great of the Celtics. Cousy took in Tuesday's game with UConn and was interested in the preceedings since he plays both teams during the season. One other claim to fame is soph sensation John Austin. At 6'1" Austin is figured to be one of the brightest lights for the Eagles this year. The BC boys as a whole are very young and may take time to develop. They lost their first game to Fairfield by the score of 68-63.

On Saturday night the Redmen travel to Durham to play the University of New Hampshire. The Wildcats, picked for no better than fourth in the Yankee Conference, scared powerful Rhode Island Tuesday before bowing 91-90. The Wildcats are paced by all conference choice Jim Rich and Nick Mandrivalis. This will mark the second conference test for the Redmen, with every game being vital. This is so because of the power of the "big three" and the evident quality of UNH. Vermont also could be a threat since they opened the year by downing Maine twice.

Next Tuesday marks probably the biggest game for the Redmen when they travel to Worcester to play perennial power Holy Cross. Joe Kelly and John Wendelken pace the Crusaders on offense while another veteran, Pat Gallagher, adds to the team's overall performance. The Crusaders have established themselves as threats for top honors this year as they have won 2 and dropped only 1. So far they have been bothered by inconsistent performances.

On Tuesday's game, Coach Orr commented, "Another fine team effort. While the team did not play as well as it has in other games, they still were good enough to win and that's what's important." The fact is that the shooting of the Redmen was noticeable off but the fine floor game made the difference. Pete Bernard and Tom Ryan came up

by BEN BARCLAY

Tomorrow you will see the Varsity Gymnastics team leaving for their six hour trip to face the Cadets of West Point, the number three team in the nation.

The Cadets are coached by Tom Maloney, a two time Olympic coach. With all but two members of the team returning they have both strength and experience. Kenny Slutzky, who participates in three events, Mike Gray and Jerry Dufour, both two event men are their big three.

The UMass team which downed Southern Connecticut last week is hoping for a good showing and a possible upset.

Gymnasts of the Week

For their excellent showing last week against Southern Conn. Dave Williams and Al Cohen were unanimously chosen as the gymnasts of the week. Dave is a senior and the captain of the team. Last week he took two first places, one was on the side horse the other on the parallel bars. Al, a sophomore, won his first place in the one event that he competes in, the long horse. Both boys work hard and help contribute success for the team.

Mermen Bow To Wesleyan

by BUDD PRATT

The UM varsity swimming team suffered its third loss of the week at the hands of powerhouse Wesleyan University in a meet Wednesday afternoon here at WPE.

Against a heavily favored opponent Joe Rogers' charges did not do quite as well as expected; Mike Rothschild's victories in the 200 and 500 freestyles were the only Redmen firsts. His fellow co-capt., Mike Bjornholm, suffered a bad day under certain disadvantages.

Known best as a sprint freestyler, Mike found himself competing in the backstroke and individual medley due to the team's lack of depth plus the unforseen illness of UM's fine medleyist, Danny O'Mara.

Unconditioned for the 200 yd individual medley, Mike miscalculated his pace. He gained a yard's lead in the butterfly, extended it to four bodylengths in the backstroke, saw it reduced to two bodylengths in the breaststroke, only to find himself exhausted for the final 50 yards. Mike was caught in the turn and beaten by about four feet. But the 200 backstroke was the worst night mare for the shaggy-haired Finn. Two Wesleyan swimmers assaulted their own record, leaving Mike a fast third.

For Mike Rothschild it was just another day. Mike embarrassed all opponents with walkaway victories in the 200 freestyle (2:00.9) and the 500 (5:36.1). The Springfield ace then went to spark a UM victory in the final relay accompanied by Dick Daniels, Bjornholm, and Wilson.

CO-CAPT. MIKE ROTHSCHILD in the 220-yard freestyle.

Elsewhere, Charlie Monnier saw his own UM record approached by a Wesleyan swimmer who beat him by three seconds in the 200 breaststroke. Dick Daniels scrambled for a second in the 100 sprint, and a third in the 50. O'Sullivan, Hofmann, and Hanley secured a point apiece.

But the Wesleyan team had too many guns. Van Kennan, their soph sprinter swam a 22.5 fifty and 50.5 hundred — times previously unapproached by either UM or Wesleyan.

Like last season, the mermen find themselves three meets down with five remaining — none as rugged as any of the first three. And Joe Rogers speaks with confidence of a repeat of last year's winning season and the establishment of a slew of new records. The team faces a month of hard work in preparation for its next meet at Coast Guard, Jan. 10.

Frosh Down UConn, 74-67 Babyak High With 21

by BRUCE KRESKER

The UMass freshmen won a well played game against the UConn frosh. At a definite high disadvantage, the Umles took almost every opportunity to build a 40-32 lead at half time. The team combined a fast breaking offense whenever possible with a slow, deliberate game that gave them the open shot.

John Lisack and Jim Babyak, with 17 and 10 points respectively, in the first half kept the team alive. Frank Stewart, Mike Meola, Larry Martin, and Bob Murphy scrapped under the boards to get important rebounds, and came up with the important assists.

With the start of the second half, Connecticut's control of the boards took its toll and they slowly chopped at the UMass until they led 60-57 with 8:00 minutes left. At this point a small scuffle erupted when a Connecticut player pounced on Larry Martin as he was recovering a loose ball. A lot of pushing occurred and a few unpleasantries were uttered, but no fisticuffs evolved. A technical foul was called against UConn and Babyak sunk the shot. He immediately followed on the next play by sinking a drive through the middle to make the score 61-60 UConn.

UConn then lost the ball to Frank Stewart who had just gotten over a harrassing cold. Mike Meola, whose offensive was silent most of the night, received a pass from Stewart and sank a jump shot from the corner to put Mass. into the lead, 62-61 with 6 minutes to go.

Here, the fast tempo of the game slowed, and the lead seesawed with every basket. With 2:42 left in the game, Jim Babyak got a crisp pass from Bob Murphy and drove in from the right side to make the basket and put UMass into the lead 66-63. At this point, Jack Lisack pulled down a rebound after Connecticut's missed shot. He passed quickly downcourt to Babyak, and Babyak drove again. This time he was fouled, and made both free throws to make the score 68-63 with a little over a minute left.

UConn then hurried their next shot and missed. Mike Meola came up with the rebound, passed to Babyak, and Babyak was intentionally fouled. He sunk two more foul shots, and the score was 70-63 with 50 seconds left.

UConn made one more basket, and in their eagerness to score committed two intentional fouls, one to Martin and one to Murphy. They both calmly sank their attempts to make the final score 74-67.

Jim Babyak was high scorer with 21 points followed by John Lisack with 20. Frank Stewart poured in 17 while playing a fine defensive game. Mike Meola had 7 and Bob Murphy had 6.

Police Nab UConn Students After Thefts

Five University of Connecticut students, arrested last Tuesday night after allegedly stealing seven signs, were granted a continuance in Northampton district court.

Police state that the five took "seven or eight" signs from areas in the University and the town of Amherst. Campus police officers Francis Mazzei and Lewis Anderson saw one of the five acting suspiciously in the vicinity of the Town Common. The officers followed the quintet's car, lost it, then respotted it on South Pleasant St., in South Amherst.

They gave chase, and upon stopping the car, discovered the signs. The students were promptly placed under arrest by Mazzei and Anderson.

According to Chief Alexander Blasko, the appropriate deans at UConn have been notified, along with the police chief at the University.

The signs were impounded as evidence.

Mills Presents Holiday Music Nightly

By Harold A. Gushue, Jr. '65

Sunday night heard the second of spirited efforts by Mills House.

This innovation is the playing of Christmas music between the hours of 5-7 p.m. This will continue through the remainder of the week, if it meets with the approval of the majority of the area residents.

Mrs. Korpela, the Head of Residence, said, "We played Christmas music at the Abbey and it was a great success. I personally think this will enhance the Christmas mood and spirit."

Bob Cripps, spokesman for the House Council, said, "It's the second of events by Mills for increasing Dorm spirit."

Comments from residents in the area were:

"It's O.K. I like it."

"I can't study."

SENATE ELECTION

Students are reminded that nomination papers for the office of Senator at Large '66 are available in the RSO office of the Student Union. These must be signed by at least twenty five members of the class and returned to the Student Senate office by this Friday, December 20, 1963. The election will be held on Monday, January 6, 1964.

The queen will be crowned at Winter Carnival Ball on February 14.

Van Meter Chain Letters Confiscated; Police Warn Of Severe Penalties

by TERRY STOCK

Chain letters, which have been sweeping the campus, are now being confiscated by University police.

Letters were collected by courselors in Van Meter and turned over to the police on Thursday, December 12. Counselors in the other dorms have been alerted that such letters are illegal.

One type of chain letter is being sold on campus. The buyer sends $10 to the person whose name is at the top of the list and adds his name to the bottom. He then makes several copies of the letter, sells them, and when his name reaches the top of the list, he supposedly receives vast sums of money. Generally it is the person that begins the chain who receives all the money, because his name is at the top of the list on the fifty or sixty copies which he circulates. The letters seldom continue past the first few names on the list, as people continuously break the chain. Nevertheless, the post office reports a tremendous increase in $10 money order sales.

Another chain letter is being sent through the mail. The recipient, again, signs his name at the bottom of the list, sends 25 cents to the person whose name is on the top of the list, and mails several copies of the letter to friends.

According to The General Laws of the Commonwealth, the sale or continuation of chain letters constitutes promoting a lottery. Chapter 271 states:

> Whoever sets up or promotes a plan by which goods or anything of value is sold to a person for a consideration and upon the further consideration that the purchaser agrees to secure one or more persons to participate in the plan by respectively making a similar purchase or purchases, each purchaser being given the right to secure money, credits, goods or something of value, depending upon the number of persons joining in the plan, shall be held to have set up and promoted a

$1.2 Billion for College Aid Approved

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The Senate approved a $1.2 billion college aid bill last week after a gentle nudge from President Johnson, a House-Senate Committee also cleared the way for passage of a two year extension of the NDEA.

The $1.2 billion authorization to help U. S. universities and colleges build classrooms sailed through the Senate on a 54 to 27 vote and was sent on to the White House. It had already been approved by the House.

The breakthrough in the conference committee came after a two-hour session between House and Senate conferees and two reported telephone calls from the President to key negotiators over last weekend.

Except for a few minor details, the conferees approved a compromise version of a $58 million federal aid to vocational training bill — legislation which had deadlocked Senate action on the college bill.

The Senate had refused to act on the House-passed college aid bill until House education leaders accepted their proposals on the vocational training bill.

The vocational aid package also contained a Senate-approved version of the NDEA act providing $45 million in new funds for the $90 million-a-year loan program for U. S. college students. The House has yet to report a bill on the NDEA act, but there were indications that it would approve the Senate version when it reached the floor.

House education leaders had hoped to make the NDEA a more sweeping program. But negotiators agreed on a simple two-year extension instead of a three-year duration as proposed by the Senate.

The main point of the vocational aid program which had bogged down all education legislation this year was how the $58 million would be distributed to aid vocational training.

The Senate wanted to distribute money on a per capita basis, favoring Southern states, while the House wanted to allocate it on a population basis, favoring the North.

The compromise agreement calls for fund allocation giving weight to the relative wealth of the state as well as its working-age population.

President Johnson made the following comments on the Senate action:

"The Senate is to be commended on its passage today of the conference report on higher education. This Congress is well on its way to doing more for education since the Land-Grant College Act that was passed 100 years ago.

UMass Symphony Orchestra

by LANGDON F. LOMBARD

A concert of music for symphony orchestra was presented Monday, December 2, in Bowker, the first effort by the University Symphony Orchestra. A crowd of over 500 was present.

The feature of the concert was the "Pastorale" by Elliott Schwartz of the University's Music Department. This piece was written in 1961 when Dr. Schwartz was working on his doctoral theses on Vaughan Williams. While the influence of that British composer was felt in the piece, clear examples of some of the music was a bit too short, but the University Symphony Orchestra made the most of what was there.

The Bloch Concerto Grosso No. 1 for Strings and Piano had a well deserved and received performance. Here is major work by Bloch which isn't played nearly enough, most groups feeling that it not as worthwhile performing. It took the orchestra to make those in the audience realize its worth. But it proved to be poor fodder for the talents of the pianist, Henry Allain.

The two other works presented, the Harty arrangement of Handel's Water Music and Bizet's L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2, were played as a warm up exercise for the orchestra and to please the crowd so that it might go home happy. They were successes only as such.

While a universally condemning criticism would have been easy to produce in respect to this concert, we feel it is much more worthwhile to praise the strong points of this new campus organization. It is a new venture for the University, one which, we hope, will not fade as so many others have done either in the face of public criticism or because of the lack of talent.

Physical Fitness

Our beloved late President, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, an ardent sports fan, inaugurated a physical fitness program for the non-athletes in the United States. His ambition was to make Americans a group of participants instead of a group of spectators. Under the direction of Bud Wilkinson, Oklahoma football coach, the program asks Americans, especially the youth of our country, to engage in fifteen minutes of rigorous activity per day. Much to my dismay, I and several other students were denied the right for physical activity last Saturday afternoon. Since the new phys. ed. building is not, understandably, ready for student use, and since the WoPe building was being used for a conference, we headed toward the "Cage." There, we were told to leave under a threat of police intervention. Upon asking the reason for being thrown out of the "Cage," we were told that the phys. ed. officials do not want the finish worn off the new basketball floor. Thus the "new finish" changed us from participants to spectators, against the wishes of our late President.

The Pariah
Change Means Chance

by JAMES R. CRAWFORD

I don't know of anyone on this campus who subscribes to the Realist, a "liberal" publication of little real note. I happened to find an old copy around, and leafed through it. Only one article really struck me, a short editorial about "crow-Jimism," or prejudice in reverse. The author noted that he had grown up in a middle-class Jewish family of a New York suburb, and hence had never known any Negroes until he went out into the business world. Then, he began to move in liberal circles and to acquire Negro friends. The point of the article was that, as he came to realize, the author, like many self-styled liberals, sought out Negro friends because it was "proof" that he was a liberal. He was bewildered, but by no means ashamed.

Nor should he be, for this concern about an unknown element is typical of liberalism. The risks in such a venture are many; for one thing, some Negroes resent this type of concern. For another, one's friends may take a dim view of one's Negro or Catholic or lower class, etc., friends. But the liberal is a man who takes risks. President Kennedy took a risk in the Peace Corps; it seems to have turned out well, though much money has been spent on these "ambassadors," who might well have worsened rather than bettered our foreign relations. He took another risk in the Cuban "invasion," and got stung badly. President Johnson is taking a risk in pushing the Civil Rights Bill, for such action may cost him numerous votes in his political stronghold, the Deep South. But liberalism thrives on change, but not change for the sake of change. No honest liberal denies that even a seemingly flawless program of change has some risks in it. Conceivably, Medicare could lead to a lower quality of medical training. Great Britain has found that economic strife is sometimes the companion of economic change, especially when that change is brought about through that most risk-filled of systems, the democratic process. But every liberal should also realize that to take away that element of risk would result in the bloodless, complacent, uninspired society to which, strangely, many claim liberalism, with its espousal of government support of you-name-it, is leading us. The task of modern liberalism is to minimize but never do away with the risks that must be taken for the gains so deeply desired.

This past Saturday members of the newly formed Students for Civil Rights spent the afternoon in Amherst in an effort to encourage active interest in the civil rights bill soon to be brought before Congress. They passed out copies of the bill in its present form, discussed its nature with those willing to listen, and encouraged those who favored it to write letters to their Congressmen. Among those queried was a professor from this campus. His name is both unknown and irrelevant. Only his response bears any importance—and much shame. When told the nature of the project, he replied that he was too busy grading termpapers to be bothered with such questions. His time was too precious for his country. The fact that several students had freely given of their precious time, caring more for the interests of their fellowmen than their selfish concerns, apparently eluded him. Perhaps the thought was beneath him. No doubt this editorial will be equally unworthy of his attention — but we can hope for small miracles.

Encountering this unassailable ivory tower leads us to wonder exactly what the role of our faculty is. Is their intelligence viable only when applied to abstruse footnotes? Can they merely stand apart and criticize, or are they to lead and inspire by word and example? Apparently the student body isn't the only den of apathetic iniquity after all. It seems the shoe is now on a different foot. We hope it pinches.

Reexamination

To the Editor:

Saturday night we were walking through the lobby of the Student Union, and we noticed that the Colonial Lounge was empty, although the doors were wide open and an inviting fire flamed in the fireplace. We timidly entered and walked over to look at the fire. It was real. We immediately pulled up one of those beautifully soft arm chairs, plopped ourselves into it, and started reading our single textbook.

Suddenly this bright, well-dressed young man appeared before us and said in that crisp, metallic voice that all devils cultivate that we would have to find some place else to study as the lounge was to be used as a reception room for President Lederle's faculty Christmas party. This seemed a reasonable request and we exited. Rather despondently we wandered about looking for another place to sit. We wandered eventually over to the Cape Cod Lounge and to our surprised noticed another homey fireplace all alight with flame. But suddenly we turned away, fo rthere, not less than six feet from this heavenly flambeau, was one of those.

This thing was blaring out in black and white and noise an argument between this hysterical woman and a forgetful old man. We almost cried To think that some one had gone to all the trouble to bring to the members of this great university a real honest to goodness fire, and then had all that effort eradicated in an instant of insanity by some idiot box videophile. What fools are responsible for this sin against the finer things in life? Has all the heritage of this great country lost its meaning.

R.J.S.

Dear Mr. Childs:

I fear that your idealism in regard to liberalism has blinded you to reality. Do you really believe that this petition urging passage of the civil rights legislation can do any good? Are you blind to the complexities of government, the intricacies of government? It takes men who are a part of and who understand these intricacies to pass legislation . . . not inconsiderate, idealistic students such as you.

Mr. Childs, wake up to reality.

A Realistic American

To the Realistic American:

You feel that the petition will do no good. You see it as a weak effort, the throwing of pebbles against a stone wall which should be leveled by explosion. I agree that the petition is a weak effort.

However if we listen to you what will the petition be? It will be less than a week effort . . . it will be no effort. Something must be done. Some of us are not content to do nothing using as a rationalization the weakness of our doing something.

If it is realistic to vegetate in a world of "complexity then, dear realistic American, I prefer idealism.

The Collegian would appreciate and print any written self-defense, contradiction or explanation from and faculty members.

TERRY'S CORNER

Coffee, Obstacles, Dating

by TERRY STOCK

Dear Terry,

The coffee in the Hatch tastes like it has been made with day-old grounds. It is usually so weak that you can see the bottom of the cup through it. And anyone who likes to adulterate his brew with cream might just as well be drinking warm water.

Also, what about licensing the women who drive the carts? If the registry could only see them. They drive like crazed housewives in a supermarket. M.R. '64

Dear M.R.,

Might I suggest that perhaps you have been drinking warm water instead of coffee. I'm sure you could easily be making this mistake since the middle tap on each coffee machine in the Hatch dispenses water for tea. Personally, I have always found Hatch coffee very enjoyable (even though I drink it "light" with 3 sugars).

According to Mr. Russell Colvin, Foods Manager, "The Hatch utilizes only the top blend coffee in the country. Neither are the grounds "day-old", but are removed and thrown away within 10 minutes after the coffee is made. New grounds are used each time coffee is brewed.

Furthermore, the women in the Hatch drive their carts as they do for very good reasons. One would probably be self-preservation in attempting to dodge "crazed" students. It is also necessary for them to move rapidly in order to keep up with the messes students leave for them on the tables. If they drove slowly there would be complaints that they're inefficient. As it is, they do a reasonably good job of keeping the tables cleared.

Dear Terry,

What is this obstacle course we are forced to navigate every day? It seems to me that the summer would have been a much better time to put up buildings and to find whatever they're looking for underground, not only for the "diggers" and "builders," but for the students as well. (A.B. '64) (Continued on page 5)

Reading Period

The recent proposal, in a letter to the Collegian, that a reading period before finals be instituted, is certainly not new on the campus scene, yet it is certainly welcome. Others before have asked that some such period be begun. They are those who cry in the wilderness. Their cries are met by the reply that "students would take advantage of such a period socially, but not scholastically."

To a certain extent this is true. Some would fail to take advantage of such a reading period for study use. But others would take advantage of this period for that use. Are those of the student body who wish to study during such a period being penalized for assumed transgressions of others? It would seem so.

A final exam is a last exam centered around a complete semester. A week to recollect approximately 16 weeks, a time to re-order, and review, this is what a reading period offers.

In essence such a period offers a way out of what may become extreme pressure of imposing finals advancing in stacatto rhythm. It offers a way out of the ignorance of cram sessions and offers a way in to the knowledge of a many ordered, arranged study program which can be accomplished in a week's time.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: DICK KNORR

It takes 37 craft employees, 4 foremen, and 2 clerks to maintain high-quality telephone service in Pittsfield, Mass. And the entire management responsibility for this team and their work rests with New England Telephone's Outside Wire Chief, Dick Knorr.

Dick (B.S.C.E., 1957) joined the company in 1962 and, in less than a year, rose to Outside Wire Chief.

How Dick handled his earlier assignments certainly speeded his promotion. For instance, the professional job he did as Wire Chief in North Adams, the precise workload forecasts he made in Pittsfield, the thorough way he scheduled work while Control Board Foreman in Pittsfield.

When his latest opportunity came, Dick's experience and demonstrated ability cinched it!

Dick Knorr, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Amherst Students Earn 500 Thousand In Summer

Despite the results of a watermelon picker whose summer wages totalled only $75 and an encyclopedia salesman who sold no encyclopedias, Amherst College students combined to earn nearly a half-million dollars during the past summer, as indicated by a college survey.

With 86% of those responding (873 out of 1018) indicating that they performed a variety of tasks for periods ranging from a few hours to better than three months, earnings totalled $486,083, and individual totals varied from a whopping profit of $3,300 to a loss of $250.

In addition, 136 Amherst men (13% of those answering) were engaged in formal study during the summer, at institutions ranging from the University of Jerusalem to the University of Japan. A significant number were also involved in research working on such projects as the application of nuclear radiation effects to flight and space instrumentation, and the effects of thalidomide on embryogenesis.

The average summer wage progressively increased with age, as entering freshmen reported a $436 per capita figure compared to $686 for seniors. The mean income for the entire student body was $558, slightly above last year's $551, giving a 3% increase in total earning despite a slight drop in the total labor force as more students elected to study or travel abroad in programs such as Crossroads Africa and Amherst Men Abroad.

Construction and related fields consistently offered the best salaries for summer work, but some student equalled or surpassed these figures in unusual jobs and specialities. A senior on a New York State Thruway crew and the superintendent of a fleet of trucks at an asphalt plant each earned $2,000, but an enterprising sophomore equalled that figure by giving sailing lessons and selling boats at a sailing club he helped organize on the Delaware River, and a senior earned $2,500 as an "appointments specialist" and salesman for a silverware company.

As usual, the outdoor and social advantages of camp life continued to attract large numbers of students.

Lack Of Support Mars Hoot

LOIS LEVENTHAL and NANCY REID perform at the Revelers Hootenanny, held Friday night in Bowker. Despite small participation, the hoot was termed a success.

by BOB WEBER

Campus folksingers got a chance to perform Friday night in the Revelers' Hoot, held in Bowker. A relatively small but appreciative audience heard the Rovers, Ron Reynolds and Don Eton, Dave Kane who plays Scruggs banjo, and the South Winds from Zeta Nu. This group has just started and for the length of time they have been singing together, they sounded good. Their material, unfortunately, was limited to very pop folk music like "Banua," "Michael," and others. These boys already have engagements on many college campuses in New England.

Lois Leventhal '67 and Nancy Reid '67 were also very entertaining, singing such songs as "Every Night When the Sun Goes Down," "Man of Constant Sorrow," and others in very pleasing harmonies. We hope to hear more of those girls in the future.

The Hoot as a whole was not as successful as had been anticipated, but this was due to the lack of support from the campus as a whole. We look forward to more Hoots such as this one and hope the next one is better attended.

Vacation begins shortly and probably many of us will be in areas which have coffee houses, and may be interested in who is where and when. In Boston, the Club 47 presents performers such as Jackie Washington, the Charles River Valley boys and many others. Monday is old movie night while Sunday is Hoot night. Their hoots are usually good with many of the Boston professionals singing.

In New York Gurde's Folk City will have Judy Rodrick, recently discovered blues singer. Monday is Hootenanny night and their Hoots are usually good. The Bitter End plays host to the Serendipity Singers and they spend Tuesday nights at home, when there is a hoot instead.

Pete Seeger has a new record on the Columbia label. Included are a great many integration songs, all of which are extremely well done. Vanguard has released Hedy West's first solo album. She previously had also been on the New Folks Vol. I album, which, incidentally, also marked the record debut of Jackie Washington and the Greenbriar Boys. Hedy's singing might be classified as "ethnic," as her repertoire consists mainly of mountain songs and ballads.

Peace Corps To Commence Largest Training Program

The Peace Corps announced plans today for the largest spring training program in the agency's history.

Volunteers scheduled for assignments in 18 nations will enter training at U. S. colleges and universities in February-March, said Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver. An estimated 1,500 prospective Volunteers will participate in the training programs.

In past years, only 400 Volunteers have entered mid-year training programs, Shriver said. While the peak in-put period will continue to be the summer months, he said this year's large spring group will fill urgent requests from countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Many of the spring group will be mid-year graduates of U. S. colleges and universities who will fill teaching assignments, most of which require college degrees. But about one-third of the spring trainees will not be required to have degrees.

Teachers will be needed at all levels — elementary, secondary and university—and in all subjects, with particular emphasis on English, science and mathematics. Some physical education and vocational teachers will also be required.

Other Volunteers will be enrolled in agricultural extension, community development, construction, engineering and geology programs.

University Assn. Names Spielman

Dr. Arless A. Spielman, dean of the College of Agriculture, was named to three posts in the Association of State Universities at the group's annual meeting recently in Chicago.

He was elected chairman of the Northeastern Experiment Station Directors, and re-elected to the Senate of the association to represent the Division of Agriculture, and to the executive committee of the Division of Agriculture.

Administrators and officials from state universities in 50 states and Puerto Rico make up the membership of the Association of State Universities.

Gymnasts Bow To West Point Cadets Ranked Third In Nation

by BEN BARCLAY

The Cadets of West Point, the number three team in the nation, proved to be too much for the UMass team as they downed them by a score of 149-124. This was the first meet that the new method of scoring was used. This new method highly depends on depth and unfortunately our team lacks real depth. The Cadets outnumbered UMass 14 men to our nine, thus many of our team had to compete in more than a couple of events.

The outstanding competitor was West Point's Ken Slutzky who scored a 9.4 pts. out of a possible 10 pts. Ken received a standing ovation for his great performance. Slutzky was not the only first place winner for West Point as they took all six firsts.

UMass' captain Dave Williams scored two second places, one on the side horse and the other on the parallel bars. Dick Cardiff took a third place on the high bar, the squads only third place in the meet. Although the Redmen only took the seconds and one third every member on the team placed and help contribute to the score. In fact the loseness in the scores shows us that although West Point took almost all the top three scores in all the events the UMass team placed fairly close to the cadets numerically in each event.

An added attraction was a performance by the two Sakamoto brothers on the high bar and the rings during intermission. The brothers are competing for the 1964 Olympics.

The UMass team is now preparing for its next meet against Penn. State, the number one team in the country, on Jan. 11.

Stockbridge Riflers Win

The Stockbridge School Rifle Team scored a close shoulder-to-shoulder win over the University of Rhode Island Freshmen at the Rhody rifle range on Saturday. Going into the last relay, the match was up for grabs, but Captain Jim Rocha came through with a fine three position 282 to give the contest to Stockbridge and bring their shoulder-to-shoulder match record to 3-0 thus far this season.

SEX

Sports Greatest Game

by JEFF GREENFIELD
Editor, The Daily Cardinal,
University of Wisconsin

(CPS)—I don't know what it proves, but the young American has the damndest way of discussing his real or imagined amorous exploits. In the hope that some observant sociologist will draw the sweeping conclusion, I offer a brief discussion of this puzzle.

The most prevalent — and incredible—feature of such discussion is that the young American male has evidentally confused the national indoor pastime with the more prosaic outdoor diversions. Sex, for young Johnny, is not only a sport; it is a competitive sport. He seems to have gotten his partner confused with an opponent.

A successful exploit is a "score" in the popular argot, a triumph against an opponent in combat, much like hockey, where the athlete outmaneuvers the wary goalie and rings up a goal.

Also, the young man no longer copulates; he "makes" his girl, presumably along the lines of constructing a model airplane, or conquering a mountain peak.

The use of the sport jargon has reached a point where one enthusiastic athlete of my acquaintance would regale us with his nocturnal gambols much like an announcer would rattle off a play-by-play.

"Had a wild game last night," he would say, eyes gleaming. "I threw a couple of short passes and ground out the yardage. Then I took a gamble too soon on the touchdown pass and she threw me for a loss back to my own 25. So I huddled, and just tried out the line a little. Then I faded back and hurled a long pass and . . ."

The game would vary. Some nights this young man would spend on the basketball courts, other times, a baseball game was the media through which we communicated his triumphs and failures. Always, however, the wars were won, lost, or tied on the playing fields of New England beaches.

There is something as disturbing as it is amusing about this attitude toward sex; for it indicates a sad element in our society. We have reached a point of materialism where the gratification of physical needs has become a mere end in itself, where the partner in the sex act is relegated to something along the order of a vending machine.

The sex act has now become an acquisition, an attainment which is equated with a car, or a phonograph, or a victory in some kind of contest. What is completely missing in this attitude is any regard for the partner, who is, after all, another human being.

The prevailing attitude is geared so forcefully to the acquisition of sexual fulfillment, that the element of love, or compassion, or even consideration is missing. Sex is to be obtained from an opponent, not shared with a person.

To require—or even expect—a young man of normal makeup to be favorably inclined to chastity is evidence either of incredible naivete, or of a large dose of imbecility. But surely it is not too much too expect this normal young man to regard his sexual partner as something more than a pinball machine or a tennis opponent.

A Letter Slipped By

(ACP) — Some time ago, relates THE OKLAHOMA DAILY, University of Oklahoma, Norman, a letter to the editor was printed. It complained of "obscene antics" during an Air Force ROTC drill.

It was signed by a "W. L. Yossarian." Mr. Yossarian said he was a new resident of Norman who lived near the drill field. He threatened to call the police if the "obscene" yells were not stopped.

The Air Force investigated. It developed that Mr. Yossarian's address did not exist, nor could Mr. Y himself be found. We then learned that the name "Yossarian" lives with a character in a book entitled "Catch 22."

Then the Air Force checked the charge with bonafide residents of the area. These residents said they had not been bothered by the ROTC personnel.

THE DAILY is very sorry about this incident. Normally, we are careful to check all letters, but this one slipped by us. And it happened during the letter exchange on the justification of compulsory ROTC at OU.

Back To College

(ACP) — It's a funny thing, notes BUNEWS, Boston University, that almost every college student wishes it were graduation day but almost all graduates wish they were back in college.

Perhaps we too little appreciate the life of the college student. Despite the long hours of study, the poor food and the regimented dormatory life, the pressures on a college student are usually far less than the demanding grind of the work-a-day world.

This American college tradition of homecoming is undoubtedly rooted in that strange quirk of human nature which blesses us with the ability to easily forget the rugged times and remember only the glad moments of our youth.

nine of them. Manfrevalis contributed to the cause with 15 points. UMass played four men in double figures. Twitchell with 11, Bernard with 11, Edwards with 14, and Ryan with 16 led the Redmen. UMass looked nothing like the team that won its first four games, but they have to get right back on the beam if they are to beat the Crusaders of Holy Cross Tuesday night in Worcester.

CHRISTMAS TOURNEY

by MARSHALL KAROL

With Christmas approaching, the University athletic teams look forward to tourney competition at distant locations.

The basketball team will compete in the Christmas Tourney, Dec. 27-28 at Staten Island, New York, while the hockey team participates in the star-studded Christmas Tourney at Burlington, December 27-28. Both teams are hoping to rebound from recent defeats. The basketball team having been upset by the New Hampshire Wildcats, 98-74, while the hockey team lost to a powerful Bowdoin sextet, 5-0.

The problem of visiting teams is not only the lack of unfamiliar playing conditions, but also the loss of the home crowd cheering groups which give the squads strength and morale.

Terry's Corner

Dear A.B.,

Warner Brothers, under contract to the Commonwealth, is the "digger" to whom you referred. They are currently installing pipe lines, sewers, and drains to service the new buildings on campus, such as a line to the new physics addition and a water system to the new men's physical education building, which has had a temporary system until now. Naturally, this time of year is not the best suited for the work, but time is critical because the facilities are needed for the new additions.

The buildings are going up to answer the cry, "We're overcrowded!"

Dear Terry,

I have a gripe about girls on this campus who refuse to go out on dates when asked out. In order to disprove my gripe, how would you like to go out with me this coming Thursday night?

E.S. '64

Dear E.S.,

I would like very much to accept your invitation, but unfortunately I must stay in and write my column entitled "Terry's Corner." Why don't you invite a member of the "Yahoo" staff out?

UMass Beats BC; Loses To UNH

Redmen Down BC 93-74

Wildcats Beat UMass 99-73

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts traveled to Boston and dumped the Boston College Eagles 93-74, last Thursday. On Saturday, however, the University of New Hampshire burst the Redmen four game win streak with a resounding 98-73 triumph.

IN THE BC GAME, the Orrmen raced from a 37-36 halftime deficit to an impressive victory. In the first half, the Eagles held a wide margin in the rebounding margin, and the effective control of the boards was the difference. In the second half the superior height of the Redmen began to tell and UMass rolled to a large lead. At one time, the visitors had outscored the Eagles 31-13 to open a 67-50 lead.

CHUCK O'ROURKE, who played one of the finest games of his college career, pulled down 12 rebounds in the second half and 14 for the game. He also scored 17 pts., 11 in the second half. The big scoring gun in the second half was Jim Painten who contributed 16 points. He led the UMass scorers with 22 points. Pete Bernard with 15, Rodger Twitchell and Tom Ryan with 11 each, and Tim Edwards with 10 all were outstanding for the Redmen.

UMass managed to hit on an even 50% of their field goal tries and 19 of 20 foul shots. They also finished with a 54-50 edge in the rebounds, as they outrebounded the Eagles 37 to 20 in the decisive second half. John Austin of the Eagles led all scorers with 23 points in a fine effort for the losers.

THE GAME MOST PEOPLE expected the Redmen to win turned out to be a disaster. Playing their third rugged game in the week, the Redmen just could not get started. The managed to open a 40-34 lead but the determined UNH team closed up the game to a 42-39 lead for the Orrmen at halftime. The visitors had managed to play excellent second half ball all year, but this was not to be their night. With big gun Jim Rich hitting from all over the floor and Tom Horne bombing from the corner, UNH turned the poised UMass defense into a shambles. The usually effective 1-3-1 zone press could not keep the Wildcats from hitting Rich and Horne for scoring plays. The home team played an offense that consists of run and shot. This fact can be attested to by a glance at the statistics. UNH took 99 shots hitting on 36 of them. The foul shots were the difference as the home team hit on 26 of 33 attempts. Mass could manage only 31 of 79 from the floor and 11 of 21 from the line.

The Redmen did control the boards, but it did them little good. An example of what happened throughout the game was a picture of two Redman jumping for the ball and knocking it out of bounds.

THE WILDCATS got two tremendous performances from Rich and Horne. Rich scored 41 points, 26 of them in the second half. Tom Horne hit for 31 big ones, 17 coming in the big burst.

After the first four minutes of the second half, the Redmen held their last lead at 51-50. UNH then outscored the visitors by a 19-4 margin, with Horne tossing

Freshmen Redmen Whipped By Boston College Frosh

by BRUCE KRASKER

The frosh lost to a well drilled BC frosh five 113-77. Once again, the UMass team played at a height and weight disadvantage. The BC team sported two men who could get well over the rim and an all-state New Jersey sharpshooter.

UMass started the scoring on a jump shot by Bob Murphy. BC followed with two baskets and never lost the lead again. UMass had to resort to the slow deliberate game that won the UConn game because of the alert BC defense. They hit slowly and the score was 10-7 after 5 minutes of play. Then they hit a cold streak, while BC hit from the outside. After 5 more minutes of play the score was 18-7.

Mike Meola hit two long jump shots in a row to make the score 22-11. Then the BC center started to hit from everywhere: outside, drives, tap-ins. UMass then went into a half-court press that disturbed BC for a while. Babyak stole the ball twice for two baskets to make the score 34-21 BC with 7:15 left.

UMass then came up with an all-out effort to make up the scoring difference. Babyak was fouled for 2 points. Martin stole the ball for 2 more, and Meola hit another long jump bomb to make the score 39-31 with 5 minutes left in the half. The lead then remained approximately 10 points for the rest of the half. With a last second basket BC lead 57-43 at the half.

For the second half BC reverted to a 1-2-2 zone defense. Stewart and Babyak hit 2 quickies from the outside, and Meola came up with a pretty 3 point play to make the score 66-51. Then Doug Hice from New Jersey ran 6 baskets in a row for BC to break the game wide open: 74-54. Jim Babyak left the game with 12:55 left with a profusely bleeding cut over his right eye.

From here on BC just rolled up the score. Coach Leaman's changes of defenses and free use of substitutions to come up with a combination that would work were all in vain. The entire UMass roster saw action as 3 players fouled out. Mike Meola was high man with 18 points followed by Jim Babyak with 15. John Lisack had 11, Bob Murphy and Jim Hadfield had 8 apiece, Frank Stewart had 7, Ric Angers had 6, and Martin had 4.

Pucksters Lose First; Bowdoin 5, Redmen 0

by MORRIS SHUBUN

The University of Massachusetts hockey team lost Saturday night to a strong Bowdoin team 5 to 0 at Brunswick, Me. Archer (Skip) Bowen, the Redmen goalie who played a great game was given a standing ovation when taken out near the end of the last period. He had made a total of 45 saves.

The team was without the services of forwards Dennis Frey and Dick Forster who were not able to make the game. In the middle of the first period, Capt. Charlie Glew, who played a great game against M.I.T., was injured and did not see action for the remainder of the contest. Missing three regular forwards, the Redmen offense was greatly handicapped.

Coach Steve Kosakowski praised defensemen Dick Phillips and John Clayton who played almost the whole game.

Bowdoin had previously lost close games to Brown and Harvard, two of the best teams in the East.

The Redmen's first home game is Tuesday against Amherst at College rink at 4:00. This should be a close game between these traditional, intra-city rivals. Skip Bowen of UMass and Dave Stringer of Amherst are both excellent goalies. Charlie Glew is injured and might not be able to play.

The Redmen now have a 1-1 record.

Pres. And Mrs Lederle Extend Cordial Wishes For The Holiday

In an era dominated by crisis and unrest, it is highly appropriate that we have an opportunity each year to pause, under conditions that are both festive and solemn, to direct ourselves to matters of the spirit and to a renewed hope for peace in the world.

As you depart for this festive vacation, I urge you to consider the world's problems and to try, even in some small way, to contribute toward an increase in the goodwill among men.

Let us join with charitable organizations in helping those who are not so fortunate as we. Let us arrange to give some service in hospitals or other institutions ministering to the aged and the ill. Let us give thought to those in our society who, though they are Americans, must fight to gain the rights which the rest of us take for granted.

We should not, it seems to me, be merely passive viewers of the holiday scene. We should utilize this pause in our day-to-day routine to think on the defects in man's spiritual condition and means for arriving at even small improvements. I believe that the greatest values of the season reside in this sense of participation in what one writer has called the "holiness of the heart's affection." For all of us, this can indeed be a high purpose and an appropriate way to confirm our desire for peace on earth, good will among men.

Mrs. Lederle and I wish to extend to all of you our most cordial wishes for a very happy holiday season.

John W. Lederle

But Once A Year

by John B. Childs

It is time again.

It is time again for Christmas and words of "Peace on Earth" "Good Will Toward Men"

It is a time for good cheer, of giving, of anticipating friendship.

The only thing wrong is that it is "the time for".

If Christmas is truly a time for peace, good will, and friendship, then it is a time wasted, a fruitless time, a superficial time. There is not a time for peace or good will. These must exist all year or not at all.

Let us realize Christmas as a symbolic emphasis of peace, of brotherhood, of goodwill. Let us realize Christmas as an emphasis of conditions which exist or should exist throughout the year.

Christmas comes but once a year.

Let us make that "once" the year.

Chaplains' Christmas Words

As we attend and participate in the various functions on campus at this time of the year, we immediately realize that there appears to be something different about them. Everyone exudes happiness. The air seems to be almost charged. Indeed it is refreshing. The example of Jesus becomes a powerful force that is truly stimulating.

The obvious question presents itself—Why cannot this continue? Actually this was the intention of our Divine Lord when He came to transform the earth. His desire was that peace and joy might reign in the hearts of mankind. With this individual peace a reality, it would mean a world peace as well.

The moral then of this wonderful season is to work harder for our interior peace. Strive to apply the lessons we find in the Prince of Peace—His charity, His humility, His obedience, and too many others to innumerate. The result will be contagious in others and the meaning of Christmas will become so practical.

Our prayer at the Newman Center will be for our entire University family, that the many graces of this holy season will be with you and your loved ones in abundance. We know this will assure the Happy and Holy Christmas we wish for all of you.

Monsignor Power

It is still with us. Factories are still producing. Stores are still selling. Lights dance on the trees again. Choirs sing. Mailmen deliver little cards. Families exchange gifts. Candles flicker in churches. And infant Christ lies naked on the snowy common.

A little while ago we wondered if it would come around again. But here it is. Our prestige remains strong. Our way of life continues.

Yet is it enough just to go on through another Christmas, to survive, to endure old hostilities and injustices, to wear old masks, to struggle on the old success ladder, to buy and buy, to sell and sell? Not if you want to live in peace, if you want to have the understanding of others around you, if you want to be creative, if you want a sense of fulfillment in your life.

Simply adjusting to the old round isn't enough if you want more than that. Peace comes to those who seek to establish it. A sense of being understood comes to those who seek new understanding of others. Creativity comes to those who make sacrifices to accomplish something new and uplifting. Fulfillment comes when your life bears the fruit of the divine love which lives in you as you commit yourself to it and seek to bring out the higher qualities in the lives of others around you.

The Reverend Jere Berger
(Episcopal Chaplain for the Protestant Chaplain's office)

It hath been told thee, O man, what is good,
And what the Lord doth require of thee:
Only to do justly, and to love mercy,
And to walk humbly with thy God.

Micah 6:8

Chanukah, perhaps more than any other holiday in the Jewish calendar, emphasizes the ideal of religious freedom. Originating in the successful defense of Judaism against the onslaught of Syrio-Greek paganism, the observance of Chanukah through the ages has been the occasion for a yearly affirmation of Jewish devotion to freedom of religion, not only for ourselves as Jews, but for all men.

This year we again make that affirmation. As we look forward with our Christian friends, towards the observance of respective holidays, may the freedom in which we do so continue to flourish, that we may be enabled to enrich our lives with the religion of our choice, in devotion of God and in service to our fellow men.

Calendar Major S. U. Function

The University Calendar Office is responsible for the registering of all social activities on or off campus. The scheduling of use of all Student Union facilities and of many University buildings also takes place in this office.

Because the Calendar Office handles about 4,000 scheduled activities a year, a standard procedure has been set up to make scheduling of events systematic. If an organization wants to sponsor an event, it must first check the Master Calendar to find a good date and then complete an application form. Prior to any scheduling consideration, the organization advisor's approval must be obtained. In the case of mixed social activities, a social registration form must also be completed.

DECK THE HALLS

The time has come to think of Christmas shopping, for the Yuletide will be upon us quicker than you can say Jack Robinson. (Have you ever wondered, incidentally, about the origin of this interesting phrase "Quicker than you can say Jack Robinson"? Well sir, the original saying was French—"Plus vite que de dire Jacques Robespierre." Jack Robinson is, as everyone knows, an Anglicization of Jacques Robespierre who was, as everyone knows, the famous figure from the French Revolution who, as everyone knows, got murdered in his bath by Danton, Murat, Caligula, and Al Capone.

(The reason people started saying "Quicker than you can say Jacques Robespierre"—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries like England, the U.S., and Cleveland—is quite an interesting little story. It seems that Robespierre's wife, Georges Sand, got word of the plot to murder her husband in his bath. All she had to do to save his life was call his name and warn him. But, alas, quicker than she could say Jacques Robespierre, she received a telegram from her old friend Frederic Chopin who was down in Majorca setting lyrics all she had to do was call his name to his immortal "Warsaw Concerto." Chopin said he needed Georges Sand's help desperately because he could not find a rhyme for "Warsaw." Naturally, Georges could not refuse such an urgent request.

(Well sir, off to Majorca went Georges, but before she left, she told her little daughter Walter that some bad men were coming to murder Daddy in his bath. She instructed Walter to shout Robespierre's name the moment the bad men arrived. But Walter, alas, had been sea-bathing that morning on the Riviera, and she had come home with a big bag of salt water taffy, and when the bad men arrived to murder Robespierre, Walter, alas, was chewing a wad of taffy and could not get her mouth unstuck in time to shout a warning. Robespierre, alas, was murdered quicker than you could say Jacques Robespierre—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries.

(There is, I am pleased to report, one small note of cheer in this grisly tale. When Georges Sand got to Majorca, she did succeed in helping Chopin find a rhyme for "Warsaw" as everyone knows who has heard those haunting lyrics:

In the fair town of Warsaw,
Which Napoleon's horse saw,
Singing cockles and mussels, alive alive o!)

But I digress.

We were speaking of Christmas gifts. What we all try to find at Christmas is, of course, unusual and distinctive gifts for our friends. May I suggest then a carton of Marlboro Cigarettes?

What? You are astonished? You had not thought of Marlboros as unusual? You had regarded them as familiar, reliable smokes whose excellence varied not one jot nor tittle from year to year?

True. All true. But all the same, Marlboros are unusual because every time you try one, it's like the first time. The flavor never palls, the filter never gets hackneyed, the soft pack is ever a new delight, and so is the Flip Top box. Each Marlboro is a fresh and pristine pleasure, and if you want all your friends to clap their hands and cry, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!" you will see that their stockings are filled with Marlboros on Christmas morn.

New Business Admin. Auditorium Named For Late State Senator

President John W. Lederle announced today that a new 500-seat auditorium building will be named for the late Senator Ralph C. Mahar of Orange.

The large hexagonal auditorium, an adjunct of the new School of Business Administration building, will be completed in the spring, and formal dedication ceremonies will be held at that time. The auditorium will be used for classes and lectures during the day, and for public functions during the evening. Total cost of the School of Business Administration Building, Mahar Auditorium and a smaller auditorium will be $2,072,000.

President Lederle said that th Board of Trustees voted unanimously to name the auditorium for the long-time state representative and state senator. Senator Mahar died in August 1962. As a legislator for 25 years, he worked to improve areas of public education, health and welfare. He has been called "the father of regional schools" for his efforts to aid rural schools. The regional junior-senior high school in Orange is named for him.

In 1947 Senator Mahar introduced the bill that changed Massachusetts State College to the University of Massachusetts. One of the late senator's main objectives was the continual improvement and support of the University. He actively supported the Freedom Bill legislation in 1956 and the granting of greater fiscal authority to the University's trustees.

In a letter announcing the trustees' decision to Mrs. Mahar, Pres. Lederle said, "For some time we have been searching for an appropriate way in which to honor your late husband for his many services to the University.

"It is the firm belief of the University Board of Trustees that there should be a permanent memorial to Ralph C. Mahar for his great contributions to the Commonwealth and to the cause of public higher education.

"Most appropriately this should be at the University of Massachusetts."

A University professor is the co-editor of a new book probation and parole.

Barbara A. Kay, assistant professor of sociology, is co-editor of "Probatiton and Parole," a collection of writings from some of the leading authorities in the field of criminology.

Articles center on probation and parole as parts of the total correctional process. The writers examine the legal origins of probation, development in the United States, and the principles of parole. Both practical and theoretical concerns are presented.

The book is published by Charles C. Thomas, Springfield, Illinois.

The author, Barbara Kay joined the faculty in September. She has taught at Northern Illinois, Ohio and Wittenberg Universities.

Untended Candle Named Cause Of Van Meter N. Fire

Considerable damage to desks and personnal belongings resulted from a fire in a third floor room in Van Meter North early Monday night.

The fire, attributed by campus Fire Marshal Edmund Goetzl, to an unattended candle, was extinguished by residents of the floor. Amherst firefighters, under direction of Capt. Homer Cowles, responded to an alarm at approximately 9:35 p.m. Firefighters cleared the room and corridor of smoke.

Mrs. Elliott Marshall, Head of Residence at Van Meter North, told the Collegian that she called the fire department immediately upon hearing the dorm alarm. This, she stated, was standard procedure. Mrs. Marshall lauded her counselors for the excellent job they performed during evacuation of the building.

University police officers Francis Mazzei and Donald Zidik also responded to the scene, as did Dean of Men Robert Hopkins, in anticipation of student disturbances. However, students, according to Fire Marshal Goetzl, behaved well.

Goetzl stated that the co-operation of the residents of the area was greatly appreciated by both the University administration and the fire department.

Goetzl praised University switchboard operator Dave Perry for what he called an "excellent job."

Crusaders Down Redmen, 95-75 Despite Second Half Comeback

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts lost Tuesday night to Holy Cross 95-75, despite a great second half comeback. Early in the second half the Redmen trailed 56-31 but with the hot shooting Pete Bernard and Tom Ryan, the visitors managed to close up the game. With 7 minutes left in the period UMass was down 70-69. The Redmen were just too tired to close the gap and take the lead.

Holy Cross opened a quick 12-3 lead after the first five minutes. All of the starters got in the act early. But as was to be expected, the key player throughout was Joe Kelly who put the Crusaders' offense in high gear. The homers used a well drilled offense and a tight defense, to increase their lead at half time to an eighteen point margin 49-31. The Redmen offense as at UNH just could not get off the ground. Errant passes, clock defense, and mediocre shooting stood out in the first half.

In the second half, the game continued in the same manner for the first five minutes. Then the Redmen really got hot. The score was 62-41 when Ryan and Bernard really began to hit. Tom had 9 points and Pete 12 in the spurt that put the visitors back in the game. With the score 70-69, the Crusaders hit for 3 quick points. Then with the score 73-69, the key play of the game probably occured. Ryan at the head of the key was called for an offensive foul on a questionable call.

The Crusaders got the ball and with high scoring John Wendelhen hitting 4 hoops, the homers ran the score to 83-73. Wendelhen finished with a game high of 34 points on 15 of 27 from the floor. 23 of those points came in the crucial second half. For UMass Bernard had 20 points, 16 in the 2nd half as he hit in his long jumpers. Tom Ryan came up with 19 big points as he played probably his finest game to date. He also came up with numerous steals in the big Redman spurt.

The Redmen played with the same five men in the entire half. They were Ryan, Bernard, Painten, O'Rourke, and Edwards. Besides the first two, Painten had 9 points, O'Rourke 14 points, and Edwards 12. The team hit on 30 of 62 from the floor and 19 of 25 from the line.

The Crusaders were lead by Wendelhen with 34, Kelly with 17, Richie Murphy with 16 and Pat Gallagher with 14, all in the first half. Holy Cross hit on 41 of 81 from the floor and 13 of 16 fromthe line. Next action for the team will be against St. Peter's in the Staten Island Tourney on Dec. 27 and 28.

The little Redmen suffered a 2-637 loss at the hands of the Little Crusaders. Jim Babyak with 19 and Mike Meola with 16 lead the visitors.

Tufts Drops Matmen Redmen Frosh Win

by NICK PAPPAS

LAST SATURDAY AT TUFTS, UMass tried for its first victory of the season, an attempt that ended in an upset victory for Tufts. The Medford Wrestlers were victorious in six out of eight matches, gaining three falls on the favored Redmen.

Tufts began the meet with a fast pin against Clegg at 123 pounds. At 130 pounds, Boris Chevone demonstrated some of his fine ability but lost the match by decision. Then Dick Shulman came through with a fall for Coach Douglas in the 137 pound class. The 147 pound event was next and Jesse Brogan, wrestling a tremendously fast match, handled his man for five more points. UMass now pushed ahead 10-8. Any hope for a Redmen victory soon vanished, however, as Tufts went on to claim four consecutive matches, with falls in the 157 pound and unlimited events. UMass' John Anderson (177 pounds) displayed real talent against a much heavier opponent but lost by decision.

SOME CONSOLATION FOR COACH DOUGLAS was his Frosh victory the same afternoon (Mr. Brosky, the Freshman coach, was unable to attend). The younger Redmen crushed the Tuftsmen 30-10. The meet began with a default (no opponent) to UMass' Staples, giving the Matmen a five point lead. Then came a series of five UMass victories by falls for LeFort, Shaw, Keown, Fitzpatrick and Fergueson. LeFort and Keown looked especially good, as did Ed Fergueson, who had no previous experience as a wrestler. The Tufts Eight rallied, however, and produced victories in the two highest divisions. With five pins for UMass on the record books, Coaches Douglas and Brosky are very hopeful for their Freshman squad.

Hockey Team

Redmen 3, Amherst College 2

by MORRIS SHUBOW

IN A GAME MARRED BY NUMEROUS PENALTIES the University of Massachusetts hockey team tipped Amherst College 3 to 2 Tuesday afternoon.

Capt. Charlie Glew, who had been injured in Saturday's defeat at Bowdoin, came back to spark UMass with a brilliant performance. Early in the first period he set up the Redmen's first goal, which was scored by Pete Hurd. In the second period with Amherst short-handed Glew picked up a loose puck in the UMass zone, skated up the right wing, and fired his shot past Amherst goalie Dave Stringer for the score.

The other UMass goal was scored by Dick Forster, who knocked in a rebound after Stringer had stopped John Clayton's long shot. Amherst's two goals were scored by Deming Sherman and Bob Youmell.

UMass had a big territorial edge in the game with Dave Stringer having to make 37 saves for Amherst, while Skip Bowen, the Redmen goalie, made only 14 saves.

There were 14 penalties called in this hard-fought game. Near the end of the second period UMass defenseman John Clayton got into a fight with Paul Butler of Amherst. Both players were given major penalties and disqualified for the remainder of the game. In the last period UMass forward Allan Johnson was penalized for cross-checking and given a match-misconduct penalty for elbowing the referee.

The Redmen with a 2-1 record will play the University of New Hampshire in the first game of the Christmas Tourney at Burlington, Vermont, December 27-28. Other teams participating in the tourney are the University of Connecticut and the University of Vermont.

On Saturday, January 4, the Redmen play Army at the Amherst College rink.

Sports Resumes

Sports return to the University campus almost as soon as the students return. Saturday, January 4th sees the basketball team at Brandeis to resume play after the Christmas Tourney. The hockey team fresh from the UVM Tourney will face Army on home ice that afternoon. Friday, January 10th will find the swimming team at Coast Guard, UVM on Redmen home ice, and basketball at UVM. That Saturday will see the Penn. State Gymnastics team ranked first in the nation here, the winter track team will be at the K. of C. meet in Boston.

Killington or Mad River

Ski Team To Training Camp

by DAN GLOSBANO

THE 16 CANDIDATES FOR THE UMASS SKI TEAM left Sunday for a cut session at Mt. Snow. The squad was chosen by a time comparison on several short slalom runs, candidates getting two runs on each course. The team for this season consists of Captain Tom Clark '64 from Pittsfield, Don Burgess '64, Greenfield, Norm Carpenter '64, Greenfield, Walt Swiatek '65, Adams, Rich Woods '65, Holyoke, Pete Plastridge '66, Berlin, Tom Pittendreigh '66, Melrose, and Collin Garstang '67, from Pittsfield.

Garstang, a freshman, and Pittendreigh, a transfer from Northeastern, are ineligible for competition this year, but by skiing this year, but by skiing the 40 or 50 days this year with the team, they will be a great asset next year.

The team leaves Friday for either Killington or Mad River Glen, if the hoped for snow arrives. After having the afternoon of the 24th and Christmas Day off, the team will return for daily practice at Thunder Mountain in Charlemont, 35 miles from the University.

Sullivan Wins

Pistol Sinks Maritime

The UMass squad swamped a hapless Kings Point team 1333 to 1237 at the UMass range on Saturday. Leading was Dan Sullivan with 278. Close on his heels were sophs Roger Yee 269, and George Wietechs 260. Seniors Jack Kelly and Dave Naylor rounded out the final tally with 261 and 259 respectively. High firer for Kings Point was Cadet Paper with 265.

One of the most striking features of the event was the performance of sophomores, Yee and Wietecha who have been plagued by handicaps. These two turned in outstanding results.

The club has a five and two record and no home matches left. With the heavy end of the schedule facing them the squad is hoping to hit their stride and finish the year with only two losses.

At The Creche

(From The Holy Merriment)

by ARNOLD KENSETH

Stand in the stable where the birds
Of snow perform for heaven's Son
A dance of love, and one by one
Make adoration without words.

Pray by sign only, your flat hands
Open as to receive a feast
Of grace, a much for very least,
More mercy than your most demands.

Do not pray for sweet rain, nor meddle
And urge that Alice be spared her loss
Or John his pain. Later the cradle
In the true play becomes a cross.

Nor ask to be among the angels,
The high-singers in golden rings
Who praise in clamorous evangels
The friar King who out-kings kings.

Pray, rather, for a huge pity
On children, a crust of laughter
For old men, joy in our duty,
A place by the fire thereafter.

Outside the jubilant inn-cock crows
And thrice proclaims the vivid birth,
As three and thirty doves unloose
Christ's morning over Herod's earth.

SASHA SPEAKS

A Childs Christmas In The Village

One Christmas was much like another in that Village by the City. Their colors were much the same, so that I cannot remember if Dad picketed for ten days when I was six, or for six days when I was ten.

There were useful presents then: brass knuckles and tuning forks, and bongos, and scratchy poems written by aunts who wore burlap so often that you wondered if they had any skin at all.

And the useless presents: chocolate reefers that you would pretend to smoke until some old lady would come and scold you for not giving her a drag; and tin folksingers who, if they could not sing could always get turned on. And nutmeg, and morning glory seeds, and codine for the tiny tots.

I remember the uncles, talking of politics in their always pink Christmas voices. And Aunt Pearl, who, after having been frightened twice by a mechanical mouse, went to the sideboard for a drag of cactus leaves, as it was only once a year.

And only we had the true Christmas spirit. The Uncles, having solved the problem of the Fascist state would tell us of the atrocities in the world uptown, and then we would all puff the Yule pot, and be carried upstairs to dream of eight armed squares as the wolf-laden wind whirled about the rooftops.

But we sang and spread Christmas cheer. As my dad picketed, he would hold my hand, and we would yell of Christmas. You see, we felt the Transit system was spoiling the Village so in our mittened voices we sang in unison, "No L."

What The Class Of '67 Wants For Xmas

Although Christmas is still weeks away, Santa Claus decided to send a messenger to Federal Circle just to hear what the kids had to say.

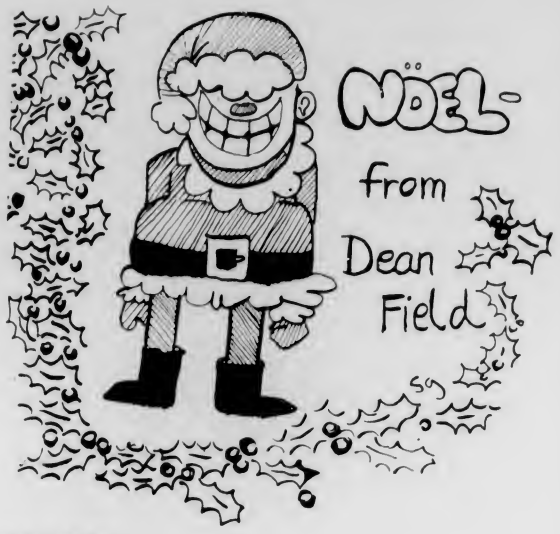
Jimmie Trefethen, 5½, too busy sliding down the snow in his sled to be bothered, exclaimed in an off hand tone, "Santa knows my name already. I told him in the store. I'll see him down street and get my toys anyway." That was that!

Harold White, Jr. III, Jimmie's 4½ year old playmate, was much more enthusiastic. He stoutly declared, "Aw! Santa can see anywhere. I want a toy steam shovel and a football drum. He knows that I haven't been too bad."

Diane Derosier, selected as Miss U of M of 1967 last year, sadly remarked, "Santa told me to go to bed early." Her little brother, Mike, pointed out a paper hanging on the kitchen wall, which held the names of each family member along with some check marks. "Each check means a present", Mike boasted. "We get one everytime we behave. I have five checks and Diane's only got two!"

"Three and one month old" Alan Sigafus was found submerged in an arm chair scanning the evening newspaper. With the wisdom of his age, Alan explained, "Santa will come to see me only when the snow is deep enough for his sled. I won't wait up for him 'cause it's a long ride from the North Pole."

Expressing the hope of all Federal Circle children, Alan wistfully murmured, "When we get a house of our own, we'll get a big fireplace and all hang our stockings up."



CHRISTMAS

Humility And Joy

by G. MASSELAM

Christmas is almost here. Christmas, a moment in the year in which men can reflect on the deeper more meaningful qualities within themselves. So often we are made aware of Man's inadequacies, his tendency to do harm to others and himself, his selfish desires, his determined will, his pride, all which compel him to destructive acts.

So contrary, yet incorporated in the same being, there is simple giving and receiving, unassuming humility, and empathetic feeling for the sickness and poverty throughout the world. This is why Christmas is so important; for it represents the giving, the humility and the empathy. One can feel the warmth generated by the joyful but somber carols, the buying of gifts and the decorating of trees.

Man has Christmas because he needs it. He needs to hear of others speak of brotherhood. He needs to feel that there is humility in people. He needs to feel that men can give.

Man has Christmas because he has to be reminded of the ideals which it represents, and which are so distant. The ideals of peace on earth, brotherhood, and love offer to him new hope found no other time during the year.

At this point cynics are thinking "What love? Christmas is the time of the year that businessmen clean up. Is this love and peace or is it greed?" People swarm to department stores to buy presents so that they can give them to persons who are special to them. People give thousands of dollars to charities during the Christmas holidays because they wish to share of themselves and to love. The will and the desire is present but the sadness is that they are not experiencing the deeper emotional aspects of love, but only the superficial qualities. Christmas, then, should be a time of serious reflection.

But there is Santa Claus; a fat, jubilant man who is nothing but joy. The squeal of children on Christmas morning attest to a jolly man who can do no harm. His merriment is contagious and he calls everyone to take part with him. And we do, for we should. It is important to be aware of humility. It is also important to be a part of the most colorful holiday we have. The "ho, ho, ho", the caroling, the shopping, the decorating, the red and the green colors all lead us to the word "Merry." Merry it can be. Merry it should be. Merry it will be.

Happy Holiday And Hidden Persuaders

by INEZ BRAND

Advertizing, at its height during the Christmas season, brings to mind the psychologist whispering principles of conditioning into the ears of the Madison Avenue agent. Yet, Dr. Milton Rokeach, psychologist, reported at an advertizing convention in New York that there has been a change in psychology over the last twenty years, which no longer sees man as irrational but as "rationalizing . . . curious, exploratory and receptive to new ideas." Dr. Rokeach noted that in spite of this new position held by many psychologists, Madison Avenue retains its concept of the irrational consumer. This reliance on "persuasion" is creating consumer resentment, Dr. Rokeach concluded.

In this holiday season we may become more aware of the part that color symbolism plays in our lives. Holiday cards remind us of the symbolism of colors used in classical religious paintings. To the artist, red symbolized love; yellow wisdom; blue, truth; purple, dignity; brown, earthliness; and white, purity.

The old-fashioned gift for that old-fashioned girl may be a corset from the Catherine Corset Shop, which advertizes its wares with the slogan "let Catherine take you in so the boys will take you out."

A ROMAN AFFAIR

A CHRISTMAS STORY TO THE COLLEGIAN

SEEING CHRISTMAS

by ALEX BLACK

"Joe, have you ever thought much about what you'd do if you got out now?"

"Well, warden, sir, I used to think about getting out a lot. Of course, that was when I was first in; but after the parole board said no that second time back in '41, I kinda gave up with any left over plans for gettin' out."

"Joe, we'd better sit down and talk a while. But I'm here for more than just a talk, and I won't mince words. The Governor has taken special effort to research your past and had decided to grant you full parole. Joe . . .?"

"Yes, sir, I heard you . . . I think; but that's gonna take some time to sink in. You ain't kiddin' me warden? No, you ain't. Of course not. Get out, huh? When?"

"Well, Joe, as soon as you feel you are ready. We realize it will be quite a change for you and we want you to be sure what you will do when you are out."

"What I will do . . ."

"We've contacted your nephew and he has agreed to take you in for the time it takes the State to find you a place to live. We hope you will be out for Christmas, Joe. That's the way the Governor thought of it."

"Why would he take an interest in an old jailbird like me, warden?"

"I guess out of Christmas Charity, Joe."

"You know why I'm in warden? You know how long?"

"Yes, Joe."

"1910 they convicted me. I was 20 years old then, a real toughy. The Judge wouldn't consider leniency and that was that. I killed a man in cold blood. Just stood him up in an alley after a fight and stuck my knife in him. And I been some 50 years now payin' for it.

"I've been all my life in prison, warden, and in all I been through—the riots and sufferin'—it hurt me most when they first sent me up. It was just before Christmas; about this same time of year. That hurt me more tha anythin'.

"My pa owned a small farm and some lumber land. I was always runnin' into town, but Christmas was still the closest family time for me. My mother cookin' and bakin', busy as could be. All the relatives came to our house for the holiday; my older brother, his wife and the baby. I never used to like home much, but then I was happy.

"I used to take my little sister out in the sleigh to cut our tree; grease up the horses hooves so they wouldn't get packed with snow; bundle up with itchy wool scarves and flappy ear muffers and hats, and the air so cold you could swear there were icicles on the tip of your nose.

"We'd go out in the evening and bring back the tree and my little sister watched over our decorating while uncles with sen-sen breath and long gold watch chains, and aunts with clacky voices, went bustling about, more in the way than a help; strings of popcorn and hand made frills and fancies for the tip of every branch. And after a long evening of fun—so warm and loud and close to each other—we'd head off to bed; but not before we'd tucked a few dozen gifts under the tree that we'd made for each other.

"You know warden, I think I'm not such an old man as I thought. You don't really age in prison. The body does, maybe, but my mind is still twenty. I won't have any trouble outside, warden. Sure lots has changed I've read some newspapers since I've been in. I know how to get along. My folks, my brother and sister, are dead now; God rest them. But you give me the address of that nephew of mine and I can make up for the Christmas I missed; with my kin again."

"I think you can arrange to be out tomorrow, Joe."

He went to town by taxi, his new suit chaffing at the joints, and got out in the heart of the shopping center to walk in the crowds, savouring his freedom before he would meet his nephew. The last minute rush for gifts was peaking, the crowd jumbling all shapes and sizes of boxes, bowed and brightly wrapped, perched precariously atop full shopping bags. The strings of lights coiled, serpent-like around street light poles, hissing on and off to tempt the mass of humanity into the sugar coated department stores.

He passed one of a tribe of Santas ringing for a kettle of coins, and noticed him as a new entity. He put 50¢ in the slot of the covered container and stood waiting for some acknowledgement. With no word forthcoming, he gazed, a bit disappointed, up the street, to see the other Santas mechanically ringing the same note. A little boy tugged his mother past, never looking up, not ceasing his whining. A bit further up, in a store window, an extensive set of mechanical figures played a clattering cyclic routine for a passive audience.

Joe walked, past the speakers blaring Christmas songs, past the pink tinsel trees in sign-plastered windows; walked the long commercial strip, the swarming traffic, the shouts, whistles, horns, the heavy smell of special-for-dad cologne blending with the exhaust of busses whose sides bore placards depicting coke-drinking Santas.

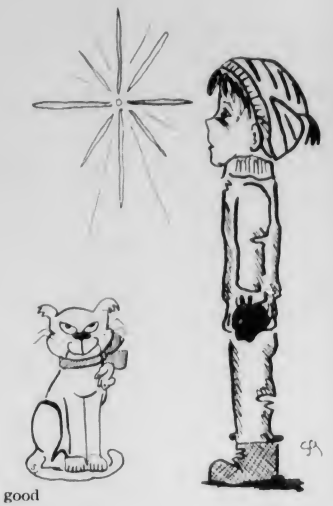
Yes, he had read some papers, but how could it be like this? It was more than the newness of it all that confused him. Could man joy in the faces. Men couldn't have found a substitute for the smile? They only rushed helter-skelter, grabbing at gifts until they were too heavily burdened to run, then lumbered grouchily along.

He passed City Hall where a spotlighted nativity scene stood, relatively unobserved, on the bit of grounds kept green amid the concrete and tar. Was this the religion that men had created, a token creche, unattended?

His nephew met him at the designated spot. Robust and enthusiastic, he seemed much like his father, Joe thought. As they drove toward the suburban home, Joe spoke little, thankful that his nephew seemed to understand his desire to remain silent.

"How can there be so much different, the people ain't even the same. I just don't understand. They don't have a family here and all those young friends of theirs seem to do is drink fancy liquor an' watch that television. No bakin' or cookin' for the misses; no home made gifts. They run out and buy, come back and raise the devil. What sort of Chritsmas can the little kid have with all this carrying on?

No, I really don't want a drink. No, I'm just a bit tired, folks. I think I'll go off to bed. Just stop off and see the little one first, though. I seen her creepin' about once or twice, peekin' at me. She ain't said hello to me and I think she wants to."



"O.K. uncle Joe. Get a good night's sleep, and don't keep that niece of yours up long. She should never have been out of bed in the first place."

"Hello, Betty. I came to visit you. You know you shouldn't still be up; but that's all right. I'm kinda glad you are."

"Are you my uncle Joe?"

"Yes, Betty."

"Uncle Joe! Mommy said you were away for a long time. I'm glad you're back; and you can share my toys for Christmas, Uncle Joe, because you only have one package. I saw mommy put it under the tree."

"Do you like Christmas now, Betty?"

"Oh, I love Christmas. That's when Jesus was born. And we have music and funny bright lights and mommy buys all kinds of good things to eat, like a birthday party. Mommy and daddy like it too, and we decorate a tree; I like to spray pink on and snow from one of those funny cans. And I get all kinds of things to play with."

"Yes, Betty, I think you really do enjoy Christmas. I guess little kids find Christmas good, even with all the changes."

"What changes, uncle Joe?"

"Oh that's all right, Betty. I was just thinkin' about Christmas when I was a kid."

"Oh, daddy told me all about that."

"He did?"

"Yes, last night. It was very pretty, uncle Joe; you got to ride horses and everything. But then I felt awful bad."

"But why, Betty?"

"You didn't get to see any pretty lights or stores or anything."

UMass Counters Claim Of Missing Nine Thous.

Over $9000 in fees collected for parking registration by the University has been the subject of controversy for the past week. State Comptroller Joseph Alecks charged that the money, the alleged unspent balance of the more than $11,000 collected, should be returned to the Commonwealth.

Mr. Alecks told the Collegian that the statute which enabled the trustees to set up parking regulations states that all "fines and penalties" may be retained. However, he added that the statute in no way mentions fees.

The University countered, saying that under fiscal autonomy, the money does not have to be returned. University Treasurer Kenneth Johnson said that "taxpayers money is not involved." He added that the system is self-supporting, thus requiring no appropriation from the state.

Contacted by the Collegian, campus chief of security John Marchant stated that there was only approximately $4700 left in the account, the rest having been spent for salaries, printing of decals and booklets, and the cost of setting up the records system. Also deducted was a 10% bookkeeping cost paid to the Student Union.

Ex-Governor Of Kentucky To Teach Practical Politics

Bert T. Combs, former governor of Kentucky, has been named Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs. It was announced by President John W. Lederle. Gov. Combs will teach during the second semester of the current academic year.

The program in public affairs, set up at the University under a large grant from the Ford Foundation, has been conducted for the past three years as a means of spurring interest in local, state and national politics.

One of the first of its kind in the United States, the professorship was established on a five-year basis in conjunction with the work of the department of government.

The program brings to the campus persons who have held top-level positions in federal, state or local governments and who have an intimate knowledge of the decision-making process by which public policies are determined.

Gov. Combs, elected to office in 1959 with the largest plurality ever given a gubernatorial candidate in Kentucky, recently left office under a Kentucky law which prevents a governor from succeeding himself.

During his four years in office, Gov. Combs launched the biggest highway program ever planned in the state. In education, Kentucky rose from 50th to 38th in the U.S. in spending for teachers' salaries. The state also had the highest rate of increase in spending for education of any of the 50 states during the same period.

Gov. Combs' administration brought an 18-million-dollar state parks expansion program and initiated the largest tourist and travel program in Kentucky history.

During World War II Gov. Combs served as a captain on the staff of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. From 1945 to 1946 he was chief of the investigating section of the War Crimes Commission in the Philippines. For his work during and after the war, Gov. Combs was awarded the Bronze Star and the Medal of Merit.

Gov. Combs is chairman of the Board of Regents of the Eastern Kentucky Historical Society and a trustee of Campbellsville (Ky.) College. He is also a member of the American Legion, Kiwanis, and Lions.

Married to the former Mabel Hall, Gov. and Mrs. Combs have two children.

Newly Appointed Med School Dean Searches For Location

The decision as to where the new University of Massachusetts Medical School will be located will be made early in the Spring according to Dr. Lamar Soutter, the newly appointed Dean of the institution.

In a recent Collegian interview at his office on the twelfth floor of Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital, Dr. Soutter also stated that he expected to have the new school, wherever it is to be located, in operation by the fall of 1967.

Dr. Soutter's appointment as Dean has ended a nation wide search in which more than 100 medical educators were considered. When Dr. Soutter assumes his new position in February, 1964, he will begin to recruit a core faculty group that can assist in formulating program curricula and in making plans for building and facility needs.

Upon accepting the new appointment, Dr. Soutter said, "The University of Massachusetts, during its recent phenomenal development, has become more of a well-rounded university of which a medical school is an important part. I am delighted at the opportunity to participate in building a top-notch medical school to serve the citizens of the commonwealth. Dr. Soutter's salary was set at $26,000 a year. To attract qualified candidates legislative action was taken last year to increase the stipend originally set for the post.

"Finding the best possible site for the medical school is of primary importance. I have no preconceived ideas on where it should be located. I welcome the opportunity to talk to representatives of all interested groups about the location."

A graduate of Harvard college and Harvard Medical school, Dr. Soutter has had extensive experience both in private practice and in medical education. He is visiting surgeon and chairman of the committee on teaching at the Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH). He has taught at Harvard university and at MGH, where he established that hospital's blood bank. He has served as associate dean, acting dean and dean of the Boston University School of Medicine. From 1961 to July of 1963, he served as Boston area chief of surgery and is now area consultant in surgery for the Veterans' administration.

Dr. Soutter was the editor of the Boston Medical Quarterly from 1956 to 1961 and is now an associate editor. He is a trustee of the Boston Medical library and chairman of the advisory committee, division of chronic diseases, Massachusetts department of public health. He is also a member of the board of directors, Massachusetts Health Research Institute, the Boston Visiting Nurses' association and the Massachusetts Institute of Laboratories. A member of the council of the Massachusetts Medical society, he serves as chairman of

Roister Doister Preparing Three One-Acters

With paintbrushes in one hand and a script in the other, the Roister Doisters will march onstage, come the end of the month, to present for a UMass audience three loudly commendated one-act plays.

Rehearsals are underway with an energetic director and cast preparing a banquet of drama entertainment for the UM student body.

Something Unspoken, a tensely dramatic production, written by Tennessee Williams, author of a number of contemporary notable stage and screen plays, such as Baby Doll and Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, involves only two actresses.

Pyramus and Thisbe is an excerpt from William Shakespeare's A Midsummer's Night Dream, involves the hilarious misadventures of Puck, Bottom and Flute, among others. A humorous version of the classical play-within-a-play, this play in-

'64's $10,000 Expenditure Labeled As Bad Risk

Sharp criticism has been leveled at a recent act of the senior class executive council authorizing an appropriation of approximately $10,000 to serve as backing for a concert to be held in the spring.

The concert, which hopes to feature Harry Belafonte, has been labeled as a "risk" by several members of the council. They charged that the appropriation, which equals the entire class treasury, could sacrifice the entire senior week and class gift.

Council member Dave Mathieson, also a member of the Senate told the Collegian that the move was "unwise and is running too big a risk with the class treasury." He added, "if it fails, the class will be in debt with no chance to have a senior week or class gift."

Mathieson called for an immediate class meeting to assess the feelings of the entire class.

Council member Ann Miller said that "the concert will result in a great amount of work, with no profit possible, for the sole purpose of bringing a big name to campus." She added that many groups have brought many "big names" to campus already.

Class Treasurer Carol Esonis was recorded against the measure by a proxy vote.

Senate President Jon Fife, also a member of the council, said, "the class council did pass the appropriation by a large majority and although I voted against it, I support the vote of the council." However, he wondered whether the class would fully support the project.

Fife further added that he felt that if the class did not support the project, that it would be wise to ask the other classes for assistance.

A Med School And Hospital For UMass

The appointment of Dr. Lamar Soutter as the Dean of the University of Massachusetts Medical School has solved the first of the many problems that will face the University in the establishment of this most important graduate facility.

The next problem that must be faced is the decision where to locate the school. Many communities have already expressed the desire to have the new school located within their boundaries. However, we feel that the only proper and rightful place for the construction of a Medical School Hospital complex is right here on the UMass campus.

This campus has much that would make it ideal for the establishment of a Med school and a hospital.

First there is the obvious ACADEMIC ENVIRONMENT so necessary for any graduate facility. Recent trends in medical education indicate that students are being introduced to medical training while still undergraduates. The establishment of a Med School-Hospital on this campus would obviously provide the graduate facility with readily available and eager undergraduates. A medical school is not a trade school. It is a continuation of academic pursuit and as such, should be located in an area where such pursuit can be carried to its utmost; a large University campus. To isolate the Med school in some dingy Massachusetts city, with an academic environment-count of zero, would indeed be starting things off on the wrong foot.

Secondly, this campus provides and will increasingly provide excellent RESEARCH FACILITIES for both students and faculty, who are engaged in serious scientific learning.

Thirdly, there is in this section of the Commonwealth a DEFINITE NEED for a top-notch Med School-Hospital complex. The over five hundred thousand residents of the Pioneer Valley are without the excellent medical care that exists in the State's larger cities. The population of this valley would be adequate to meet the needs of the necessary Med School Hospital of one thousand beds.

To graft a new med school onto a preexisting hospital in a large city might save the Commonwealth some money at the outset. But why not start afresh in the best possible environment? A decision to locate a Medical School-Hospital complex on the University of Massachusetts campus in Amherst would, in the long run, better serve the inhabitants of this valley and of the entire commonwealth.

The Class Of '64's Fiscal Irresponsibility

In past years, we have admonished the Senate for what we felt was unwise spending. However, recent events lead us to acknowledge the fact that the Senate is not the only offender in the battle agains fiscal irresponsibility.

The Class of 1964 appropriated the sum of $10,000 to be used as a backing for a concert to be given in May, the principle performer being Harry Belafonte. We feel most strongly, as does the treasurer of the class, that such an expenditure is unwise and dangerous.

We feel that the stakes are too high; that the odds are too great against the concert's being the success that its proponents hope for. If the class loses its investment, then all plans for a class gift, or even plans for Senior Week would have to be scrapped. This is too great a chance to take.

Furthermore, we feel that the means by which the whole plan has been presented has been qustionable. Few students, outside of those on the executive council, knew about the plans. There is serious question as to whether the class as a whole would sanction such a gamble, if given the chance to voice opinion on the proposed concert. We would, therefore, request that the president of the class of 1964 call a class meeting, at the earliest possible date, in an attempt to ascertain the feelings of the whole class.

TERRY'S CORNER

Hatch Tables And Gorman Parking

by TERRY STOCK

Dear Terry,

Why is it that the Hatch officials changed the table arrangements around last year? The new arrangement, with small tables up against the windows, seems inconvenient to me. To seat four people comfortably at a square table, the table has to be pulled away from the windowsill, which cramps the people in the next row out. And mostly, get those round tables back to the poles! It is very difficult to get crozy at a square table, especially in the middle of the Hatch.

A.B. '65

Dear A.B.,

According to Mr. Alme Fountaine, Hatch Management, the reason the tables were rearranged was to increase the seating capacity in the Hatch. Said Mr. Fountaine, "The larger tables next to the window were not getting the usage they should. The present arrangement allows these large tables to be entered from both ends thereby increasing seating capacity."

A survey conducted by Mr. Ryan, Business Manager of the Student Union, Mr. Colvin, Food Service, and Mr. Fountaine showed that all the tables are now getting full use and that the seating problem has been greatly improved by the new table arrangement.

Furthermore, the fact that "it is difficult to get cozy at a square table" has greatly increased the turn-over at the tables because students no longer remain as long.

Terry

Dear Terry,

Last week signs were posted in front of Gorman restricting parking to cars with "A" stickers only. Being an upstanding University citizen, and not wanting a parking ticket which would cost me $3, I parked my car up by Butterfield. Much to my dismay no cars were tagged this morning, although the majority of cars parked in front of Gorman are either not registered or have an "H" sticker. If I might make a suggestion: I think that all Gorman residents with cars, there are to my knowledge only five or six cars registered to Gorman students, excluding counselors, be issued "A" stickers. In that way all Gorman students may park in front of the dorm and all those who are not in German will either park on the hill or receive parking tickets.

A.D.

Dear A.D.,

Col. John Marchant informs us that the first 50 seniors who apply for parking privileges—not just those seniors or auto owners in Gorman—are issued "A" stickers. All others are given "H" stickers and must be parked on the hill.

As for the illegally parked cars not being ticketed, Officer O'Neil comments that the Campus Police Force is not an army and cannot always catch all violators.

Cheer up, A.D. If these people continue to violate traffic regulations, the chances are very good that they will be caught in the near future.

THE PARIAH

Socialism And Columbia Point

by JAMES R. CRAWFORD

The Columbia Point Project of Boston has received its share of local and national attention in articles about housing projects Despite good intentions, these articles have given somewhat inaccurate impressions of "C.P." two of the severest being that the project is a breeding ground of juvenile delinquency and that accommodations there are atrocious.

Each has a bearing on the other. If there are no playgrounds or ball-parks around, teenagers are likely to find other ways to pass time; if vandalism is rampant in a place like Columbia Point, there will be many windows and elevators broken, signs torn down, buildings defaced. A trip through the project shows that there is very little of such vandalism, that there are two ball-parks in the area, and, in fact, very few teenagers. The place is overrun by grade-school and preschool children. If there is a crowd of girls in a hallway, it may be some young mothers waiting for their welfare checks. Not everything, but a good deal, is being done to make the project a fit home for growing children. A fairly large playground, on-the-spot medical service, a nearby grammar school, and MTA transportation to higher schools make life a little better.

Many of the services have a socialistic flavor. Since shopping facilities in the area are inadequate, the residents have free MTA service to a South Boston shopping district. The doctor who goes through the buildings receives most of his compensation from the ADC. Maintenance men, electricians, plumbers, etc. are paid by the city.

So the real problem of the youth from the projects is whether he can adjust easily to the very different society beyond Columbia Point, when the time comes. He has led a very regimented life, in which he has depended on forms he will not see in the capitalistic world. But it is certainly a better life than one in the slums where many residents have lived and would live, but for the project.

There are kids from the project who will or do live successful later lives, because socialism and capitalism can be compatible. Where capitalism fails, as in the slums, a modified socialism is necessary. The projects are not ideal, but they beat the slums.

Home Economics Dept. Plans New York Trip

The Home Economics Department has announced plans for its annual field trip to New York.

The students in food and nutrition, business and fashion, and in retailing and business will have the opportunity to visit a variety of business organizations and establishments which are representative of the many professional positions in which a graduate Home Economist may engage.

During this trip the students will be able to meet and talk with Home Economists and individuals who depend upon the Home Economist for the success of their organizations.

The value of this experience is twofold. It will enrich the major interest area and provide valuable professional contacts for future references. Also, it will give other students the chance to become acquainted with the breadth of job opportunities related to this major.

In past years such places as General Foods, The Institute of Good Housekeeping, and Seventeen Magazine have been visited.

The department hopes that this trip along with others may help the student to plan her future more effectively and that all students will become more familiar with the opportunities associated with all of the major areas of the school.

The trip is slated for March 4-6.

Plans Forming For Yahoo Anniversary Celebration

Issues #2 and 3 of YAHOO are in full swing now, with the YAHOO staff apparently plotting bigger and better heinous crimes against heinous people. The second issue, we are told, will be in celebration of the magazine's 10th anniversary, and will feature, for one, the best of all past issues in cartoons and short prose. The second issue is scheduled for an early March appearance.

The third issue will be another in YAHOO's long line of national magazine parodies. No word is out yet on which magazine the "tree people" plan to parody, but the staff meets, in full dress uniform, this Tuesday, to discuss the coming issues.

WMUA's Final Exam Gift

by SHELLY SPEAR

When visions of million word essays make your fingers curl in premature writers cramp and a sneeze sends you scurrying to the infirmary with mononculeosis, you may be a victim of the biannual UMie disease diagnosed as finalitis. Dr. W. Mua prescribes 91.1 fm drams of quiet music to be administered as often as necessary.

During the week of final examinations, WMUA is airing 24 hours of continuous classical music ranging Shubert to Shostakovitch. There will be no news or interruptions except for station identifications. 4 p.m. or 4 a.m., studying or relaxing, dial your campus station WMUA for the best in classical music 'round the clock.

We're turning over a new FCC log page. Next semester when the station returns to normal broadcasting, you'll hear our New Year's resolution: to bring the UMass students the best in music, the latest news, sports and items of campus interest.

SPEAR HEARS: Friends, Hatch-ites and Umies, lend an ear to "Crazy Rhythms" this Friday for the only program devoted exclusively to requested popular music—old and new. This week however, only requests for old favorites will be played. "Walk Right In" to the Hatch and "Tell Him" or call 2425 for the golden grooves you want to hear.

2:30 a.m., a lone figure leaves the station. A mass of UPI releases are in the basket, a stack of pop tunes in the libe for the librarian to keep busy with, and the control room is quiet until 7 a.m. finds "Coffee on Campus" signing the station on the air for another day. Dick Meegan has just finished working the Tuesday "Night Shift" from 12-2 a.m. This week will be your last chance to hear pop music 'til next semester. Let Dick know you're listening. Call in requests. Sorry, no dedications.

"1000 and 1 Nights" set to music in Rimsky Korsakov's "Scheherazade" Monday and Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique" Wednesday (8 p.m.) on "Musicale".

To all station members accidentally reading this column, there will be a compulsory attendance station meeting, tonight Monday at 7:30 in the station.

volves a couple of star-crossed lovers who wind up in a very precarious situation. From an unrequited love, the one falls upon his sword and his beloved comes in to a similar fate.

The American Dream is a recent short piece by the author of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf. It is a seemingly simple piece of stagecraft which amazes the viewer for its shocking insights to the contemporary conscience, especially the American mind.

The cast includes a stereotyped mother and father, very unaware of what life is; a young man (The American Dream) who, typically American to the author, is egocentric and selfish; a social worker who has no idea what is going on and a grandmother who is vital and understands the story of what goes on.

Roister Doisters is one of the oldest campus student organizations, is the only independent student organization representing the theatrical world. It has presented a number of fine productions on campus.

The present officers are highly enthusiastic about the upcoming production, call it a "superb bill with a sure fire cast".

The plays will be presented January 31 and February 1, at the beginning of second semester, in Bowker Auditorium.

WHO WILL BE ON CAMPUS: FRIDAY JANUARY 10, 1964

Critique Seeks Student Help

All next week classes will be polled in an effort to secure information for a new campus publication, The Critique. Questionnaires will be passed out to students who will be asked to give an evaluation of the course content and of the professor. The magazine will be sold, at fifty cents, just prior to counseling day next semester, the proceeds going to a scholarship fund.

The main purpose of The Critique is to create a greater sense of mutual understanding and joint constructive effort between students and faculty. It is further hoped that this publication will provide students with pertinent information to aid them in their selection of courses. Other universities have similar publications, such as the Confidential Guide at Harvard, but this is the first such publication on this campus. Unlike other such publications, however, responses will not be solicited from just a small percentage of the class (the very satisfied or the very dissatisfied), but from the whole class.

Critique has the endorsement of the Faculty Senate, the academic deans, and the administration. It is jointly sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma, but membership on the staff is open to any member of the student body. Much help will be needed to compile the results and to write reports for professors, as well as the summary reports which will appear in the magazine. Anyone interested in joining the staff should sign up at the temporary headquarters in the Barnstable Room of the Student Union. People are also needed to administer the questionnaire in some eighty classes. It takes only twenty minutes and simple directions are provided. An assignment may be obtained in the Barnstable Room any day between eight and five.

East And West Gain From Visiting Japanese

The East and West have met and found it a profitable experience for both, as the College of Agriculture at the University hosts a number of visiting Japanese professors and graduate students. All are bent on further scientific study and research.

Working with Dr. Mack Drake in the department of agronomy is Toshiaki Tadano, on leave from the Agricultural Experimental Station near Kitami, Japan. Tadano learned about the University of Massachusetts through Dr. Drake who worked in the laboratories of Hokkaido University when Tadano was an undergraduate student there.

Since his graduation in 1959, Tadano has been soil and plant scientist doing research. His studies at UMass will acquaint him with methods of lowering the cost of food and improving its quality, contributing to his work in soil and plant chemistry in Japan.

Yoshihiro Maruyama, an accomplished econometrician, has been at the University since September of 1962 in the department of agricultural and food economics. Maruyama did his undergraduate work at Hokkaido University, Sapporo. He received his Master's from that institution in 1957, and his Ph.D. in 1961. Before coming to this country for further study, he was an assistant on the faculty of the department of agricultural economy at Hokkaido. Visiting Professor Maruyama has conducted significant research and published technical papers in the Journal of the Japanese Economics Society.

Maruyama has found that the most outstanding features of his studying in this country are use of the fine computer facilities, and exposure to the Americans' knack for organization and cooperation. The Maruyamas have a son, Hiroshi, born here last year, and have been especially pleased with the medical services readily available to them.

A specialist in protein chemistry, Toshiyuki Fakazawa is a visiting scientist working with Dr. William B. Esselen, head of the department of food science and technology. A 1952 graduate of Hokkaido University, Fakazawa received his doctorate from that institution in 1961, and is presently an assistant professor in the department of animal science there. He has conducted advanced research and published material on muscle chemistry. At UMass he is connected with a research program examining the physiology and thermal resistance of bacterial spores, and is practicing various research methods to take back to Japan. Fakazawa became interested in the College of Agriculture through Dr. Esselen who worked in Japan in 1960 and 1961. Upon returning to Japan, Fakazawa will teach and conduct further research in meat processing.

Dr. Noboru Kuba is working on a research program in the department of veterinary science. He is particularly interested in studying those poultry respiratory diseases experienced in Japan. Kuba graduated from Hokkaido University in 1935 where he studied veterinary medicine. He attended Nippon Institute for Biological Science, and received his doctorate in Veterinary Science from Hyogo University of Agriculture, at Sasayan, in 1960. Kuba will return to Hyogo to teach and conduct further research in poultry diseases.

A fellowship provided through research funds of the department of agricultural engineering has made it possible for Kazuki Muta to study here. Muta studied agricultural engineering at the University of Kyushu, and graduated in 1963. At UMass he is studying the mechanization of food production, particularly livestock. Muta also is taking courses in Chinese to prepare for future work in Southeast Asia.

The University is host to 12 more visiting Japanese professors and graduate students attached to other departments including electrical engineering, business, chemistry, English, and history.

LIBE HOURS EXTENDED

The library will be open next Friday night from 10 to 12 and on Saturday from 5 to 10 to accommodate students wishing to study for their finals. This has been made possible due to the Student Senate's plea to Mr. Montgomery for the extra hours.

Army Pucksters Down Redmen 8-0

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The United States Military Academy hockey team defeated the University of Massachusetts 8-0 Saturday at Orr Rink.

In the Vermont tourney during vacation the Redmen won one and lost one. They lost the first game 6-0 to New Hampshire and then bounced back to defeat Connecticut in the consolation game 6-3. New Hampshire went on to take the championship by winning over Vermont. Scoring for the Redmen in the UConn game were Pete Hurd and Charlie Glew with two goals each, with Bob Lee and Bob Edmonston scoring one apiece.

In Saturday's game the Cadets with one of the East's best sextets had a big weight advantage. The Redmen played very well for the first period giving up only one goal to Army. It was a fairly even period with both goalies coming up with good saves. Army scored three times in the second period and registered 4 goals in the last period. Junior Bart Barry led the scoring for Army with a hat trick, scoring two of the goals unassisted. Mike Buckley had two goals for the Cadets. Army's territorial edge is evident by the number of saves the goalies were called up to make. The Redmen's Skip Bowen stopped 43 shots, while Army's Neil Meiras only had 15 saves.

So far this season the Redmen's first line of Capt. Charlie Glew, Pete Hurd, and Ken Palm has accounted for 13 of the team's 19 goals. This line along with Skip Bowen's fine goaltending have been the bright spots for the Redmen. Lack of depth seems to be the main problem for Coach Steve Kosakowski. The team has had to play with just three regular defensemen-John Clayton, Dick Phillips, and Jim Mahoney. Often Charlie Glew has had to be used at this position. The second line of Bob Lee, Bob Edmonston, and Dick Forster has shown promise, but lack of a solid third line is hampering the team's effectiveness.

The Redmen play UConn Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Orr Rink. Friday UMass will play Vermont at home in a very important game. The Redmen are now 3-3 for the season.

But Fairfield never quit as Rafferty hit then after Mass lost it Burke scored and it was 88-87. Bernard was fouled and was able to hit on only the first of a one and one. Fairfield got the ball and missed a shot. With 4 seconds left Painten had the rebound but lost it and Burke picked it up under the hoop. His shot missed but he was fouled by Edwards with no time left. He missed the first and that was ball game despite the fact he made the second.

Besides, Twitchell, Edwards had 17 points with 15 rebounds, Painten had 16 and Bernard 13. Burke scored 28 points and had 13 rebounds; Branch had 19 points and 13 rebounds; Rafferty 23 points and Poole 13 points.

Coach Orr called Bernard, Twitchell, and O'Rourke his most consistent performers. The big four of Fairfield were among the most talented players seen in a long time. While lacking any great size they all have fine shooting eyes and can really rebound. Rafferty is the only senior among the group. The others are sophomores.

Rifle Team Downs Vermont

by MARK NATAUPSKY

Once again the UMass Varsity Rifle Team fired a first class team match. On Saturday, December 14, the team defeated Univ. of Vermont by a score of 1408-1372 at the Burlington range. The team is undefeated in N.E.C.R.L. competition, and should remain undefeated at least through the January 11 match between UMass and URI at the Dickinson Hall range. Only U. of Maine can stop the Redmen from winning the Yankee Conference Crown for the second straight year. The two teams will have the championship match at UMass on Saturday, February 29.

Ted Manning was top gun for UMass and the entire match at Burlington. His three position total of 287 was the best he has done this year, and was also one of the best totals by any UMass shooter.

Team captain Hal Butterworth was in the number two slot with an excellent total of 284.

Rounding off the team were Greene, Carswell and Nataupsky with scores of 280, 279, and 278.

High man for Vt. was Eaton with a 280.

Weight Lifting For Coeds

Weight training definitely improves strength and functional capacities of college women, Dr. Irma Caton of the physical education faculty told the Research Section of the Texas Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation last week.

Dr. Caton's report to the association's 40th annual convention in Lubbock was based on the results of a weight-training study at the University of Tennessee during the fall quarter, 1961, when she taught there.

Sixty-six freshmen coeds participating in the experiment were given strength and exercise tests at the beginning and end of 32 class periods of training.

The women lifted dumbells weighing 5, 7½, 10 and 15 pounds and a barbell ranging from 30 to 85 pounds to improve their strength. Sit-ups, deep knee bends and rope skipping were exercises administered.

Eighteen tests were selected to measure results of the study. Eleven tests consisted of pure strength, three tests of combined strength and endurance, two tests of power, one test of running speed and one test consisted of coordination and speed of reaction.

Dr. Caton said the results of this study appeared to justify the following conclusions:

1. Women who participate in a weight-training program will improve in bodily strength.

2. Women who engage in such a program will become more proficient in basic motor skills (running, jumping and throwing).

3. Weight training is a worthwhole activity for women and had no apparent harmful effects on those tested.

Khaki Clothes Make Man

By BRUCE HOWARD

Does military life make a man out of a boy?

As might be expected, the answer seems to depend on the professional interest of the persons questioned.

Dr. S. B. Sells, director of the Institute of Behavioral Research and professor of psychology, who has just completed a study concerning military adaptability, objected to the question because it could not be answered with a simple yes or no as implied by the question itself.

Referring to his study, Dr. Sells said, "Generally speaking, the more maturing and education a boy has behind him before going into the military, the more likely he is to adjust."

Maturity Problem

Dr. Sells, who considers himself "an observer of human behavior and not a critic," went on to say that if a boy is running away, or entering the military for the purpose of "becoming a man," he is not likely to adjust well to military life.

Dr. Sells added, that suspension from school, resentment of discipline, or lack of a high school diploma might suggest an inability to adjust well to military life.

Major C. V. Bogle, Jr., professor of Air Science, who attributes much of his maturity to the first few years of his military service, suggested that, "The military offers as good a program for developing emotional maturity as any."

Ambition Increases

"Conditioning starts very early in life," Dr. Porterfield said, "and the home, church, school, playground and community are the major contributors to an individual's character."

Joe H. Berman, instructor of business administration and personnel director of a local supermarket chain, said, "Generally speaking, a man who has a good military record makes a more enthusiastic and ambitious employee."

Dr. Cyrus W. La Grone, chairman of the psychology department summed up by saying "If a person is inclined to mature, he likely will do so over a period of time with or without military service."

Redmen Down Judges, 92-58

Second Half Spurt Victimizes Brandeis

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts rolled over Brandeis University by a score of 92-58 Saturday night at Waltham. The undersized Judges managed to make it a ball game for about 23 minutes, but then the visitors got rolling and went from a 45-38 lead to a margin that reached 34 points. Pete Bernard and Rodger Twitchell were the big guns in the deciding second half. Bernard scored on 8 of 9 field goal attempts and Twitchell hit on 5 of 5.

Brandeis fielding a team with the tallest man at 6'2" managed to keep the score down throughout the first half. This was due as much to mistakes on the part of the Redmen as to any factor on the Judges side. In the end, the homers decided to freeze the ball to prevent UMass from topping the century mark.

The Redmen lead was never greater than 9 points in that first half, despite the fact they opened the game by hitting their first three shots. During this half the visitors were unable to cash in on many fast break chances. Charlie O'Rourke with 10 points and Tim Edwards and Jim Painten with 8 each lead the team in the early going. Near the end of the half, Tom Ryan came off the bench to hit on two beautiful driving lay-ups and make several steals.

Massachusetts had a string of 9 points early in the second half to ice the game. Later they added a 13 point run as the margin mounted. Mass hit on 39 of 82 from the floor to keep their season's percentage at a strong .450. The team added 14 of 23 from the foul line. Brandeis hit on 22 of 65, including a poor 8 of 33 in the second half. They also hit on 14 of 23 from the line. The Redmen held a 69-35 edge in rebounding with Twitchell getting 14 and O'Rourke and Edwards grabbing 11 each.

Bernard lead the point parade with 22, O'Rourke added 18, Twitchell 17, Painten 14, and Ed-

by NICK PAPPAS

The Redmen met WPI in a very hard fought contest. WPI beat Tufts earlier this year, and since Tufts has beaten UMass (24-10), hopes weren't too high for the University squad. The Redmen came through with their usual drive, however, and the spectators saw a lot of spirit on both sides.

The meet started off with the 123 pound Polytech man downing Peter Clegg by a decision. In the 130 pound division, Boris Chevone demonstrated some of that terrific style that let him place in the New Englands last year. This decision was Boris' first victory of the year. At 137 pounds, Dick Shulman gave Coach Douglas five more points with a decision. In the 147 pound class, Jesse Brogan pinned his man in the first period. This was Jesse's third victory (all by falls) this year and it looks like the former New England freshman champ is going to go all the way in varsity competition.

UMass had now formed an 11-3 lead, but they couldn't hold it. George Darling at 157 wrestled a fine match, but lost by decision. Dave Balanoff wrestled a very courageous match against an opponent some twenty pounds heavier. Though Dave was pinned he should be congratulated for his fine effort. WPI went on for two more pins in the heaviest weight classes.

The absences of Dave Cafarelli and Team Captain Craig DeWallace, both due to injuries, were sorely felt at the meet. Both men should see service however, at the next meet, which is with Coast Guard on January 10.

Hoopsters Take Tourney Twitchell Unanimous MVP

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts, playing some of its best basketball of the year, swept to the championship of the First Annual Jaycee Basketball Tournament at Staten Island during the recess. The Redmen walloped St. Peter's 115-86 to gain the finals, then edged Fairfield in overtime 89-88 for the title.

In the opening game against the Jersey City team, Rodger Twitchell, the most valuable player in the tourney, scored 32 and Pete Bernard added 29 as the team tied or broke six team and individual records. They include:

1. Most points for one game—115.
2. Most field goals one game—49.
3. Most points in one half—60.
4. Most field goals in one half—25.

Individual records

5. Tied most points in one half—Rodgerd Twitchell—21 pts.
6. Tied most field goals in one game—Rodger Twitchell—14.

After the Peacocks and Redmen traded hoops, the UMass team ran off a ten point string to make the score 21-11. The closest St. Peter's could get from then on was at 32-27, but the leaders quickly ran off seven more points and were never threatened again. Twitchell almost benched before the game hit 21 points in the first half and Bernard added 16 as the Redmen led 55-38. UMass hit on 25 of 43 shots in this half as the team really sparkled.

In the second half the Redmen continued their fine play as the Peacocks were never able to get closer than a margin of 94-76 with 5:00 left in the game. A full court press, while bothersome in the half, just was not enough to overcome the fine UMass performance. Twitchell retired to the bench with better than 9:00 to go with his 32 points and 16 rebounds. Tim Edwards fouled out also, but these two minor setbacks had little effect on the outcome as the subs hit on 12 of their 16 attempts from the floor. Besides the two high men Chuck O'Rourke came in with 12 points and 16 rebounds.

In the second game, a talented Fairfield team romped over the host Wagner team by a score of 105-89 as the Stags placed four men over 20 points.

The final had a well matched set of opponents with talented players and no crowd. There was no local drawing card so a very small group saw the fine game. The first half of the game was nip and tuck with the Redmen on top 28-27 with about five minutes left in the half. From here on the UMass men could score only one point while the Stags opened a 37-28 lead, the biggest in the game. By the time the buzzer sounded the future champs had closed up the lead to 37-33. Massachusetts was not nearly as hot as their 56% from the floor of the previous night. They hit only 12 of 39 as numerous shots were wasted. Fairfield hit on 16 of 40 with powerful Pat Burke leading with 12 and Larry Rafferty with 10. High scoring Mike Branch was held to 7 points.

The second half saw a definite improvement in the quality of play. As soon as the half started the Redmen tied up the game and from then on neither side had a larger lead than four points. With Tim Edwards and Twitchell each scoring 14 points in the half, and Burke, Rafferty, and Branch pacing the Stags, it was basket for basket all the way. With 3:17 left in the game it was 73-73 when Rodger Twitchell fouled out. He left the game with 22 points and 11 rebounds. Steve Bonds then hit to give U of M a two point lead. Branch then hit on a long jump to tie it up. Mass then went into a stall and with 1:38 left Tom Ryan hit off a drive. Within ten seconds Rafferty got an easy lay-up off a defensive lapse. After a miss by Bernard, Edwards was tied up by Dave Lingua. Edwards got the tap and Mass played for the last shot. Edwards scored on a short jump with 11 seconds left as the strategy worked. But Fairfield was not through yet as Branch hit with one second left and it was 79-79 at the end of regulation time.

In the overtime, Bernard and Stan Poole hit and it was 81-81. Bonds then scored and Jim Painten followed with a hoop as the Redmen opened an 85-81 lead. After Burke hit, Painten scored on a foul shot and a hoop and the Redmen had a five point lead with :53 showing on the clock.

Senior Class Parley To Discuss Concert

Jim Medeiros, president of the class of 1964 has called a special class meeting to be held tomorrow at 11 a.m. in the Ballroom of the S.U. The meeting was called in the wake of criticism levelled at a class executive council decision to appropriate $7,000 to back a concert to be given by Harry Belafonte.

In a letter to the senior class, Medieros said that: "though I personally dislike the request to call a class meeting, I have decided that the reasonableness and feasibility of this concert is so evident . . . that all seniors will accept it . . ."

At the same time, he blasted what he termed "the treatment of the proposed Belafonte concert by the Collegian." The class president expressed opposition to several statements printed in a Collegian story concerning the concert.

Medeiros emphasized the responsibility of the Executive Council, calling it "the watchdog of the class treasury."

Regarding the concert, committee chairman Courtney Brickman stated that it was the wish of the Senior class "to promote and enhance the image of the University. This can be done by presenting a big name performer on campus this spring."

Student Union Director William Scott called the plan "the biggest thing to hit UMass."

Mr. Scott and Mr. Harold Watts, Program Director stated that the concert was feasible only if everyone co-operated. Moreover, the concert needed financial backing, thus the action of the class Executive Council.

In a 17-6 vote, the Council favored the appropriation of $7,000 to back the concert. Class Treasurer Carol Esonis sent a statement opposing a concert run solely by the senior class.

Communications Discussion

On Thursday, Jan. 9, Dan Melley of the University News office, Jeff Davidow, editor of the Collegian, and Jim O'Hearn station manager of WMUA will meet to discuss campus communications. This discussion will be heard on WMUA's Impulse at 7:00 that evening.

Unfortunately, because of scheduling conflicts, this program wil have to be taped in advance. Therefore, WMUA would like to invite all interested persons to leave their questions in the Collegian office before 2:00 Thursday afternoon.

Campus Pond Flow To Be Controlled By New Dam

by TERRY STOCK

Operations to construct a new dam for the control of water flow are currently underway at the Campus pond.

According to Mr. Edward Ryan, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, "The pond has been drained to allow work on a new dam under President's Walk to control the over flow of the pond which occurs after a heavy rain."

Mr. Ryan explained that prior to the construction of this dam, an underground wier constructed many years ago controlled the flow of water out of the pond. "This method is not sufficient to drain the pond rapidly enough," Mr. Ryan continued.

He assured Collegian reporters that the first phase of the work would be completed by the end of January or the beginning of February depending upon the weather, to allow the pond to be flooded for the Winter Carnival Weekend.

"Any additional work needed can be done after the pond has been filled," he concluded.

ATTENTION TREASURERS

All RSO treasurers are requested to bring in their treasurers books for auditing before going home during semester break. Books may be picked up after verification on or before Feb. 1, 1964.

College Bowl Team To Oppose Univ. of Dayton January 26

by DAVE HARACZ

In less than three weeks, on Sunday, January 26, the UMass College Bowl team, with finals behind it, will travel to New York. The University of Dayton (Dayton, Ohio) will be the opponent in the show, telecast nationally over the NBC television network. Locally, the show will be on channels 22 and 32, and in Boston it will appear on channel 4.

Bowdoin College became the twelfth competitor to go the distance on the show, beating Bowling Green University to win a total of $10,500 over the five weeks it stood undefeated.

Because of the pressure of finals in the various schools from which the College Bowl selects its competitors, there will be a two weeks' "intermission", after which UMass will begin the second semester schedule of shows.

According to Albert Madeira, coach of the team, the members of both the regular team (Dave Matheison, Mike Berrini, Sue Tracy, and Bill Landis) and the alternate team (Sandy Graham, Mike Hench, James Crawford, and Jeff Davidow) will remain on campus after finals until the 26th. The teams are now meeting almost daily in practice sessions.

COLLEGE BOWL TEAMS "A" AND "B".

Tonight the Senate will vote on the possibility of taking three buses to the Bowl. If the Senate approves the buses, the following will happen.

From Thursday, January 9 at 8:30 a.m. until Monday, January 13 at 5:00 p.m., those people who had purchased tickets and were on the list in the Program Office may come in and get new tickets. Then from Tuesday, January 14 until January 26, anyone may purchase a ticket.

At present the plans are to run two (2) buses from Boston with a stop in Worcester and one (1) bus from Amherst with a stop in Springfield. All buses will leave at 8:00 a.m. and be leaving New York at 8:00 p.m. The buses from Boston will cost $5.00 for the round trip and the bus from Amherst will be $3.00 for the round trip. A Good Proposal

The Class of '64 Class Gift Committee under the chairmanship of Dave Lemon is still in the midst of wading through suggestions received from seniors and a few others interested in receiving a gift from the largesse of '64. So, though the date is late, here is one more suggestion for the committee to take under study.

Why not give a gift to the Class of '64? Put aside several of the thousands now languishing in the class treasury for a minimum of 15 years, in trust of course. Then, let the proud parents inform their offspring that they have a scholarship to the University of Massachusetts awaiting them upon graduation from high school. A future generation, namely the children of parents who graduated from the University in 1964, will be guaranteed a financial start in college for the few dollars that each senior has contributed in the past four years.

Details must be worked out; but, generally, anyone who has contributed three years or more of his class taxes to the 1964 treasury would be able to apply for a scholarship in the name of his children. No one would be forced to take advantage of the scholarship, should members of the future generation wish to go to another school. The scheme, in effect, is the same as any trust fund or mutual fund, except that the money is specifically earmarked for it's usage.

Sufficient funds will be available since over ten thousand dollars will be used for a special event in May that will bring a big name entertainer to campus and class officials expect to get back every cent spent—possibly more. At a minimum of four-and-a-half percent, compounded semi-annually, the amount would nearly double. Whether a bank deposit or a mutual fund or some other plan would yield more, is a question for study. Also a question for study, is whether University scholarship procedures would be followed.

Perspective

by G. MASSELAM

It's true. I wouldn't believe it unless I saw it with my own eyes. There are those who would actually support the Junior Senator from Arizona, Barry Goldwater, for the GOP Presidential nomination. There has always been a conservative element in American society and there is no doubt that he will have a backing.

It's true that he is courageous for he does take a decisive stand. The problem is the position where he stands. In terms of foreign policy, for example, dropping out of the United Nations, stopping foreign aid to underdeveloped nations, denying recognition to the Soviet Government seems inconsistent with the modern world where communication, and world opinion, are crucial elements for world stability and peace. Then to place the United States as a perpetrator of war, by giving air coverage to an anti-Castro invasion of Cuba seems to indicate that he is more interested in world disharmony than order.

This is the latter half of the twentieth century when the United States has accepted the responsibility for the free world. This position demands active communication with those against and those neutral. The Isolationist policy that Senator Goldwater suggests has overtones of Pre-World War II days. We must look to a man who can lead us in terms of the late twentieth century, not the early.

DVP

The following is a statement of principle issued for publication by the Distinguished Visitors Program. In light of recent criticism aimed at the organization, we feel it is worthy of publishing.

To the Editor:

The function of DVP, as stated in our constitution is as follows:

"We shall strive to attract to our campus community outstanding persons in the various fields of human endeavor, who, in the community of scholars, shall impart their knowledge, ideas and opinions, always mindful of mankind's eternal search for truth."

The Committee, which receives its funds from the student body, is divided into three areas . . . Humanities, Social Sciences, and Natural Sciences. There are both student and faculty representatives on the Committee from each area. In order to fulfill our stated goals, we bring outstanding speakers to campus every year from each of the three areas, who will be of interest to the University community in general. We feel that, among other things, it is our function to bring quality speakers to campus whom departments and departmental clubs are not able to sponsor, and speakers whom students might otherwise not have an opportunity to hear. In March we have scheduled a Poetry Workshop which will include Stephen Spender among others. Next year we plan to have a social sciences workshop, followed in 1966 by a natural sciences symposium.

We feel that the recent criticism of DVP stems from two sources. One is the misunderstanding of DVP's purpose and the other, the Shirer lecture. We regret that many were disappointed with Mr. Shirer's speech, and we will not defend that spech. However, the fact that nearly three thousand people attended the lectures, indicates that DVP presented a speaker whom the University community wished to hear. We feel that much of the disappointment and anger which followed his visit has been misdirected toward DVP. DVP invited Mr. Shirer only after careful consideration of his qualifications, and anticipated his visit with good conscience. To the campus we offer, not apology, but regret.

Belafonte Concert

To the Senior Class:

I oppose without hesitation the treatment of the proposed Belafonte Concert by the Collegian of January 6, 1964. My opposition is fourfold:

1. the erroneous statement of the actual financial figure involved

2. the use of a misleading interpretation of the opinion of the class treasurer.

3. the fact that neither I, nor the concert chairman, were advised of the articles in order to provide a fair discussion of the argument.

4. the fact that the labelling of the Class Executive Council as fiscally irresponsible is a slanderous and unfair attack on a group which has done well in weighing the feasibility of the concert.

One would surmise, from the accounts presented, that the Senior Executive Council was an inept and irresponsible organization, intent on railroading events to disaster. Nothing could provide a more disillusioning and misleading account. The Executive Council of the Class has the constitutional power of financial responsibility for the Class. All money matters must, and always are, first weighed according to merit, and then voted on. In short, this representative body is the watchdog of the class treasury. It is hardly their purpose to misuse the class funds, since in the long run, they would be ransacking their own purses. In this regard, I can not appreciate the suggestion for a class meeting since it undermines and questions the authority of the Executive Committee. Indeed, it is a bad precedent to set; for if, every time there is disagreement by a minority over financial allocation, resulting in the calling of a class meeting, we would be bogged down with uncertainty, confusion, and inaction.

Though I personally dislike the request to call a class meeting, I have decided that the reasonableness and feasibility of this concert is so evident and practical, that all reasonable Seniors will accept it, thus giving this program a wider base of support. I have been outspoken against the falsity that the Senior Class would be too apathetic to work for the success of the Concert, knowing fully well that the term "apathy" when labelled to any organization is demoralizing enough to create apathy. I have been, on the other hand, outspoken for the definite enthusiasm of the Seniors, and their ability to achieve even the highest goals. Surely, a respectable attendance at the class meeting would go far to substantiate these views.

The bigness of this operation scares the weak; instead of optimism in our abilities, there is the search for skepticism in our faults. But we will be undaunted by those few who fear and oppose something new, by those who question our fiscal responsibility, and by those dissenters—so cautious and conservative—who would create a fog over progressive action.

Respectfully,
James Medeiros
President '64

Slanted Viewpoint

Since when has the Collegian policy been to grossly misrepresent the facts in "news articles" slanted towards one viewpoint? In a news article is it not the Collegian's responsibility to point up both sides of an issue and give accurate information?

What we are concerned with is the obviously-slanted, editorialized news article concerning the class of '64 executive council which appeared in Monday's Collegian. This article should have appeared on the editorial page.

It is perhaps to be expected that our "free press" at times may be inaccurate on several minor details, but when it features grossly biased and inaccurate accounts of a reasonable, deliberative and constitutionally legal decision, then we will stand in opposition.

Can it be that the personal beliefs and opinions of a member of the Collegian executive board are being inserted as campus news?

The students of the University deserve an immediate answer to these questions.

Courtney Brickman

Ed. Note—The answer is immediate and negative.

Another Suggestion

For two days now, we have been assailed concerning the accuracy of our editorial in which we discussed the expenditure of $10,000 by the Class of 1964 to back a concert by Harry Belafonte. We apologize for our error. The sum was $7,000. However, we still feel that this expenditure is unwise as it stands.

There is, however, one means which we would suggest (which has already been suggested by the class treasurer) to both lessen the risk, and enhance the chances for a successful concert. We would ask one or two of the other classes to aid the seniors, with both their money, and the time and energy of the class members. This would bring in needed help, and would also act to bring the classes closer together.

The class of 1964 should examine its motives. If the motive for having this concert is as they say: "service to the University"—then there can be no sensible opposition to this plan. However, if the motives are not as lofty as the proponents of the measure state, then we can understand the rejection of this plan.

As a final note, we would commend class President Jim Medeiros for his recognition of the rights of the members of his class: Thursday's class meeting may clear up much of the controversy surounding the proposed concert.

Amherst Selectmen To Curb Univ. Hitchhikers

The Board of Selectmen of the town of Amherst have adopted a set of pedestrian control regulations, effective January 1, 1964, which will cramp the style of University hitchhikers.

The regulation in question states that "No person shall stand in a roadway for the purpose of soliciting a ride, employment or business from the operator or occupant of any vehicle without the written permission of the Board or officers having control of such roadway or highway."

Other regulations adopted concern the proper use of sidewalks, crosswalks and control signals by Amherst pedestrians.

In an attempt to prohibit jaywalking, the Board of Selectmen has ruled that "No pedestrian shall suddenly leave a sidewalk or safety island and walk or run into the path of a vehicle which is so close that it is impossible for the driver to yield the right of way."

Not all the new regulations are for the control of pedestrians. The Board of Selectmen also expects Amherst drivers to do their part. "Every operator of a vehicle," they state, "shall exercise due care to avoid colliding with any pedestrian."

Army ROTC Instructor Cited For Heroism

CAPTAIN WILLIAM A. McGINNIS, United States Army ROCT Instructor here at UMass, recently received an Army Commendation Medal, the First Oak-Leaf Cluster, for distinguishing himself by heroism on October 24, 1963. Captain McGinnis, informed by a ten year old girl that her house was on fire, ran quickly to the home and dashed into the flaming building, locating one child at once and removing him to safety.

Realizing there were more children remaining inside, Captain McGinnis reentered the building and after a short search found a five year old girl halfway up a burning staircase; the Captain carried her to safety. Knowing one child was still inside at the head of the staircase, he again entered the building with no regard for his personal safety, and managed to carry the youngest child to safety just before the entire house burst into flames.

In a message from his commander, it was said that "Captain McGinnis' heroic action is in the highest tradition of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service."

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: PETE BERTSCHMANN

In the summer of 1961, Pete Bertschmann (B.A., 1956) completed his Navy tour and joined New England Telephone's Boston Sales Department. There, he helped business customers solve their communications problems. So capably, in fact, that when ten applicants were screened for a supervisory job, Pete won the promotion.

In his new capacity Pete handled special sales studies, wrote speeches, and, among other achievements, contributed some valuable suggestions for improving Mobile Phone Service. All this brought promotion to his current position as a supervisor of the Telephone Sales Program with responsibility for training new employees.

Pete Bertschmann, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Ships And Shapes, Fuzz And Fumes

by INEZ BRAND

UConn has recently initiated the "1,000 Ships" method of grading coeds. Basing the curve on Helen of Troy's face that launched 1,000 ships, the idea is for fellows to rate girls by the number of ships they would launch. To give you an estimate, more than 900—Wow! From 700 to 900—probably a Kappa. From 400 to 700—Are you still dating that girl from French 7? From 100 to 400—Yah, I know, Charlie, but she's my buddy's sister. Below 100—another blind date from Millers Falls.

As soon as Volney Walsworth, feature editor of the Long Beach State College Forty-Niners, admitted in print that she was taking up pipe smoking, she found herself besieged from all sides. "It just isn't done," said her mother. Feminine acquaintances disappeared as though Volney were the source of the black plague. In her mail box she received note such as "What do you think you're doing?" and "Uncle Sam does not need you." Even fellow staff members needled Volney, but she has kept her pipe lit and is looking forward to many more puffs.

We can be thankful that at UMass the feminine rage is cigarillos smoked only in backrooms and basement stairwells.

Have you noticed that the new year has been announced on campus by the return of the weird look? F'rinstance, those little wooden stacked heels, or, what used to be "sacks" but are now disguised as shifts, A-lines, or Empire. A girl who sticks to any one of these is likely to be the victim of campus rumors. ("No, Maxine, of course I'm not.") Have you also noticed that the "sacksy" look is sported mainly by freshmen, slobs (who have looked that way for years), and society leaders? The trend now is to have long, straightish hair, not quite parted yet not quite combed — "matted" is the word I'm trying to think of. The other really outstanding trend is the sporty look. You know, long baggy sweaters, clam digger boots, imitation skunkskin collars, etc. Or how about a green bag, Maggy?

The ancient Greeks clung to their beards as symbols of masculinity. Today men face the mirror to perform a nuisance. Yet if men had the chance to give up shaving completely, they probably wouldn't. In a survey cited by Vance Packard, a group of men were asked "If science developed an inexpensive "mircle" cream that in only three applications would rid you of your bothersome beard forever, would you buy it?" Less than 3% of the men showed any interest, and one who did said, "It would be okey because I have hair on my chest."

THE FOLK SCENE

Comment On Commercialism

by BOB WEBER

According to some sources in the entertainment industry, the current popular folk revival is already beginning to decline, as far as the general public is concerned. Hoots are drawing fewer people than before and it seems that the promoters are going to have to find another word which will almost automatically make them money. The rock and roll set who discovered popular folk music in the form of the Kingston Trio, PP & M, and others, are slowly returning to the area of interest from whence they came. In some of the folk music magazines, such as Sing Out!, this exodus is being hailed; the reasoning being that the popular folk music being recorded is a prostitution of good, traditional folk music. In many respects, we agree with this sentiment; however, there are some reasons why the decline of the popular folk revival should be viewed as a discouraging trend.

When the Kingston Trio first started recording folk music, they were, and to a certain extent are still, attacked by those whose interest lie with more authonetic music. Others, while not defending the bastardization of traditional material, point out that the Trio has attracted to more ethnic groups, people who might otherwise never have heard of the Seegers (Pete, Mike and Peggy), Doc Watson, Jean Ritchie, and many others. The Kingston Trio's, PP & M's, and the rest of the commercial performers have acquainted the public with one form of folk music. Again, we have seen many people who have bought "pop" folk music albums and then have gone out and bought more traditional materials. In this way, the commercial singers have served a useful purpose, though it is

Roy Ginger, chairman of Brandeis' Committee on American Civilization, will be on the UMass campus Friday afternoon to talk about fads in American historical study.

In his lecture, sponsored by the University's History Department, Ginger plans "to knock to pieces some of the aberrant 'interpretations' of late 19th century history (Hofstadter's, for example)".

A noted authority in the study of American history, Ginger is most proud of his proficiency in tennis and hiking, and his possession of a 1920 Eugene Debs campaign poster which he proudly displays in his office.

Ginger's talk will be presented in the Middlesex room of the Student Union on Friday, January 10, at 5 p.m.

Book Sale To Commence On Registration Day

Next semester will once again see the opening of the Book Exchange, managed by Alpha Phi Omega, National Service Fraternity, and Gamma Sigma Sigma, National Women's Service Sorority. The sole purpose of this non-profit project, is to serve as the middle man between book owner and book buyer. The seller himself sets the price he wants for the book, and this amount is paid to him when it is sold, or the book is returned with no charges attached.

This year, the Book Exchange will open at 12:00 a.m. on Registration Day, January 30, in order to better accommodate those students who have books to sell. Selling will commence shortly thereafter, continuing for about one week, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Music 23 Hrs. A Day

WMUA To Benefit English 25-26 Finals

Following a tradition instituted more years ago than any present student can remember, WMUA will again present classical music twenty-four hours a day for the duration of the final examination period here at the University.

The music to be presented has been specially programmed so that those more familiar works will come during the late afternoon and evening. The most famous pieces such as Rossini's William Tell Overture, Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, and Grofe's Grand Canyon Suite will be heard from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m., those being times when most people usually listen.

From 7 p.m. until 8, the special programs heard during the year concerning courses here at the University, English 25 especially, will be once again played so that those sophomores studying for that exam might be better prepared. English 26 lectures will be heard at 1 p.m. and lectures from the History 5 series will be aired at 7:30 p.m. All students taking these courses are strongly urged to enhance their studies for these finals by listening to these special programs.

Besides this, music in the Music I course here at the University will be played from 6 to 7 p.m. each night. The schedule for this music is as follows: Saturday, January 11: Dvorak: Sym. No. 5, Hindemith: Quartet No. 3; Sunday, January 12: Schumann: Piano Concerto, Stravinsky: Petrouchka; Monday, January 13; Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto; Mozart: Sym. No. 40, Schonberg: Sechs Kleine Klavier Stucke; Tuesday, January 14: Beethoven: Pathetique Sonata, Haydn: Sym. No. 94, Bach: Passacaglia and Fugue, Moussorgsky: Night on Bare Mt.; Wednesday, January 15: Ravel: Daphnis et Chloe Suite No. 2, Tchaikovsky: Romeo and Juliet, Debussy: Prelude to an Afternoon of a Faun, Mozart: Eine Kleine Nachtmusic, Smetana: Overture to the Bartered Bride, Chopin: Etude in E Major, Op. 10, No. 3; Thursday, January 16: Respighi: The Pines of Rome, Copland: Billy the Kid, Tchaikovsky: Nutcracker Suite; Friday, January 17: Bach: Suite No. 2, Beethoven: Sym. AFROTC

Special Program

Because of legislation before Congress and because several students have come to us recently asking if it is too late to enroll in the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Program, we have set up a special program at UMass to permit Freshmen and Sophomores to enroll in AFROTC, in an "out-of-phase" status, regardless of how many semesters of AFROTC they lack. If you are one of those students who were planning on a commission in the United States Air Force after graduation, contact Major Bamber at Dickinson Hall for further information prior to 1 February, 1964.

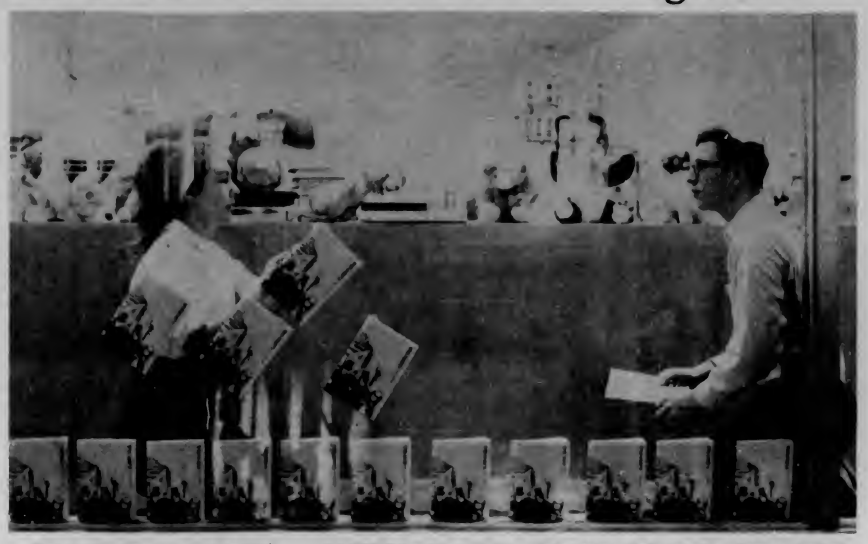
The New Caesura: Mark Of Progress



CAESURA editor Deidre Haley and staff member Dave Axelrod set up the bookstore window in a campus-wide publicity campaign for the magazine.

The word "Caesura" in technical terms means "stop" or "pause," but it far from labels the work of this year's Caesura editor and staff. In fact, the word "work" started being used when the '63 staff stepped in and changed the old name "Literary Magazine," zipped up the cover and tightened the organization.

The Senate supported them with additional appropriations last June when the campaign's results brought new budget worries. The Senate added 500 copies to this year's total number, and okayed an accompanying raise in budget money.

The English Department supported the campaign, soliciting material and handing in exceptional pieces of student work.

The '63-64 staff has carried on the newly-made tradition, beginning with an avant garde Pop Art sculpture on the cover of the commencement issue last June. This year's regime, under the editorship of Deidre Haley, has carried through campus-wide publicity campaigns and soliciting of material and support. A series of coffee hours has been scheduled for next semester.

The work of the past year and a half has made the magazine a loud, clear voice on campus. Last winter's issue set a record for student manuscripts submitted. Over 200 poems and 50 stories were amassed for the staff's selection.

When asked to comment on the advancement of the organization, the editor replied: "It has been a satisfying thing to see this heartening response. We have tried hard to make the magazine a more stimulating one, and this could well be the start of a campus-wide movement of even greater proportion in the future."

The staff is preparing for the winter issue which will appear in late February. The deadline for all manuscripts has been set at February 10th.

unfortunate that more people do not investigate the "other half" of the folk revival.

On our campus concerts on big weekends, are bringing only the most "commercial" singers. Looking at the list of performers who have been here during the past big weekends, one notices an absence of such people as Odetta, Joan Baez, Ian & Sylvia, etc. Jackie Washington, Pete Seeger, and Carolyn Hester have appeared here on off-weekends, but were here mainly through the efforts of the Pioneer Valley Folklore Society. We would like to see more performers brought to this campus, the PVFS cannot do this by itself. The interest and support of those people in the Student Activities Office is needed.

• • • •

The University of New Hampshire Winter Carnival will include a Hootenanny this year. Groups, large or small, are being invited to particiapte from all the colleges in the New England area. They are paying all expenses for acceptable performers, and are offering a $250 prize to the winning group or individual. If anyone is interested in competing, write to Thomas J. Dietz, Alpha Gamma Rho, Durham, N.H. The date is February 15th. (Perhaps something like this can be done on this campus in the future.)

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

We deeply regret not being able to open on Wednesday, January 8, as scheduled, due to a sudden fire on New Year's Day, which caused severe damage to the building and new equipment.

With the help and co-operation of all concerned, we hope to restore the entire premises within 30 days. Please be informed through your local newspaper and radio for your invitation to Our Grand Opening.

Possible Delay On Opening Of Boyden Phys. Ed. Building

by MARSHALL KAROL
SPORTS EDITOR

Recently there has been much curiosity concerning the construction progress of the new Frank L. Boyden Physical Education Building. Because of the lack of space, physical education classes are presently being conducted only once per week, without much dismay on the part of the students. This is intended to be only a temporary condition during the duration of the construction and the accustomed program meeting three times per week is to be reinstated as quickly as possible.

Midway through the present semester, it was announced that the building would be ready for operation by the beginning of the second semester. In order to comply with the construction schedule, the required phys. ed. program was altered as aforementioned, and all home gymnastic meets were delayed until this time. But, construction is an unpredictable business, and now there is speculation as to whether or not the deadline will be made.

According to the engineers of the maintenance dept., who act as the liaison between the University officials and Beacon Hill, change of orders and minor complications are the occupational hazards of the construction business. These seemingly unimportant adjustments take time which become the "disease of the trade". With the slight "possibility" of being behind in the original schedule it is reported from an "optimistic" approach that the building will be opened on time. The final inspection should take place sometime this month, if the contractors haven't left anything out, or changed the specifications of the swimming pool. Completion of the building will do much to increase all campus athletic participation when it opens next semester. However, the exact opening date is still in doubt.

Where There's Smoke There's Smokey Bear

(ACP)—Smokey the Bear is a creep, insists THE GUARDSMAN, City College of San Francisco. (California)

Ever since the Animal Decency League gave him a pair of jeans and an old Mountie hat, he's been romping around the hills shaking his shovel at anyone trying to keep warm.

Are we to stay cooped up in our overcrowded cities just because one lousy bear wants to romp around in the woods? Are we going to hold up progress on account of one rather silly-looking bear?

This was not the idea of our founding fathers. They envisioned a great nation, stretching from shore to shore, not a sanctuary for a neurotic, honey-crazed bruin. In our country's great western expansion, our ancestors met with many hardships such as starvation, bitterly cold winters and Smokey's ancestors.

But let's examine motives. Could Smokey be covering up something besides burnt-out campfires? In his fanatical efforts to stop happy campers from blazing up the forests, could Smokey be hiding his own hidden desires and transgressions?

Might it be possible that this docile bruin in long pants actually is a pyromaniac? Perhaps those pockets in his jeans are hiding the big fellow's Ronson.

After all, someone has to keep Smokey in a job. And who sparks all those fires that are attributed to lightning?

In closing, let us say that there is still hope we may be delivered from this forestry dictator. Remember, forest fires do wipe out bears!

Cigarettes On Way Out

Cigarettes may be on their way out, if the actions at two colleges are any indication.

Earlier this month, Allegheny College, in Meadville, Pa. removed the last four cigarette machines from all of its buildings. At present, students can smoke on campus, but their are no machines that sell cigarettes.

The student newspaper said, "The action is in line with the decision of the tobacco companies to focus sales efforts on older markets."

Dean of Students John O. McKean reported that there is no intention of instituting a college rule against cigarette smoking, but said that the college "would be remiss in a tacit encouragement of the practice" implicit in the presence of the machines.

At Springfield College, in Springfield, Mass. the student council has passed a motion prohibiting the sale of cigarettes on campus. It yet remains to be passed on by the student body in a referendum requiring a ⅔ vote to pass.

Redmen Bow To Providence

Early Lead Throttles UMass; Friars Survive Late Rally

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts fell before a strong Providence College team last night at the Cage by a score of 89-73. It was a night of frustration for the home club as they were bothered throughout by a height disadvantage and poor shooting. Providence came to Amherst as the top ranked team in New England and proved their worthiness of that lofty position. The Friars were forced to play without Jim Stone, their second leading scorer and third best rebounder. The slack was capably taken up by the likes of Bob Kovalski and Jim Benedict.

The Friars got rolling by hitting their first four field goal attempts to put the Redmen at a disadvantage from the start. The home team spent the rest of the night doing the chasing but could never really catch up. Jim Benedict was the big gun in the opening part of the ball game as he hit three of those early shots.

With only five minutes gone in the game the Redmen trailed by a 12-7 margin. Rodger Twitchell was about the lone bright light in the early part of the game for Mass as he scored five quick points. Providence opened first a 16-9 lead then a 21-11 spread. The closest the Redmen could get for the rest of the game was 8 points.

At the ten minute mark the spread was 25-15, but the home team could not tighten the proceeding in the next five minutes and with 5 left it was 36-25 for the Friars. Bob Kovalski playing before his home town fans was starting to hit to keep the spread. With just under four minutes left, 6'11" John Thompson got his fourth foul and had to take a breather. Despite the loss of height, the visitors managed to widen the lead to a 47-31 half time margin.

Benedict had 14 points and Kovalski 17 for the Friars, while the Redmen were paced by Twitchell's 9. The visitors held a safe 31-20 lead on the rebounds. They hit on 20 of 37 from the floor and 7 of 11 from the line. Mass could muster only 13 of 40 and 5 of 8. Bernard with 2 of 10 and O'Rourke with 1 of 8 epitomized the frustration from the floor.

The second half started with the Redmen making a spurt to get back into the ball game as they closed the margin to 51-39, but the Friars broke away again to open a 65-43 lead with a little more than ten minutes left. The team shooting was still lacking and the Friars were sweeping the boards.

Then suddenly UMass got hot and began to fight back With Bernard hitting, the home team fought back to close the gap to a nine point spread at 72-63. At this time, Providence was using Thompson in the bucket against the pressing Mass defense. The Friars called time and switched their offense by inserting Kovalski in the bucket and setting up Thompson under the hoop. He responded with three quick hoops as the visitors clinched the ball game. From there until the final guns there was just a matter of time until the end came for the Redmen.

In the final analysis, it was the matter of too much height and too little shooting. When the Redmen made their rushes, they were unable to make the really big shots. Thompson managed to play the entire second half with the four fouls and this in itself was crucial.

It was an even ball game in the second half as both teams pushed 42 points through the hoop. The Friars were paced by Kovalski with 27, Thompson and Benedict with 20 each, and Bill Blair with 15. The team hit on 34 of 73 from the floor and 21 of 30 from the foul line. Massachusetts was lead by Bernard with 20 points, 16 of them coming in the second half. Edwards and O'Rourke added 12 each and Twitchell contributed 11. O'Rourke was the big rebounder in the game with 15. The team hit on 32 of 85 for the game, far below their season average of .452. From the line, the team managed only 9 of 15. The rebounding battle was won by the Providence team with a margin begin 60 to 47. It was the ability of Mass to get only one shot that mattered a great deal in the game. By winning, The Friars now have a 8-3 season record while the Redmen have a 7-3 season with two games left before recess.

Gymnastic Team Faces No. One Ranked Penn State

by BEN BARCLAY

The University of Massachusetts Gymnastics Team will face one of the strongest teams in the country, The Pennsylvania State University, here at the University on Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. The Redman squad, which now has a 1-1 record is the definite underdog. Capt. Dave Williams, Al Cohen, and Dan St. John are the main scoring threats for UMass, but the team lacks the depth and experience which has so distinguished Penn. State.

The Nittany Lions have ten letterman returning. These are headed by Mike Jacobson and Ed Isabelle, both all-around competitors; Al Porter, a specialist on the side horse; Juniors F. P. Sforza and Pete Saponaro. Ed Isabelle, a sophomore, comes from Springfield, Mass. placed very high in national competition when he was in high school.

Gymnastics, a fairly unknown sport at the University of Mass., is one of the major sports at Penn. State. University Park, the home of the Nittany Lions, is the unofficial capital of that sport. More than 5,000 people usually pack Recreation Hall for dual meets; an amount which well surpasses the seating facilities in the Cage.

The Nittany Lions who are well known throughout the country are coached by "Mr. Gymnastics" himself, Gene Wettstone. The one-time University of Iowa Big Ten Champion is in his 25th year at Penn. State. His 1959, 1960, and 1961 teams were the nation's best, winning the NCAA title at Berkeley, California in 1959, the 1960 crown on it own home campus, and the 1961 championship at Champaign, Ill. His teams have won seven national and nine Eastern championships and have compiled an all time record of 100 victories and 31 defeats. Penn. State has produced 19 NCAA, 52 Eastern individual champions and 5 Olympians.

In 1960 Coach Wettstone directed the NCAA Championship and in 1961 directed the Russian Olympic team vs. the United States Olympic team meet at University Park. This year he will direct the Eastern Championship at Penn. State.

The Nittany Lions have a winning record against every team

Senior Class Meeting Favors Belafonte

The Senior Class, at an open meeting yesterday, voted 77-26 in favor of sponsoring Harry Belafonte in concert May 10, 1964.

Captain John Keliher, the class advisor, reiterated his neutrality in the controversy, and stressed the need for unanimity in whatever course was adopted.

The $7000 "backing" which was approved at the meeting is a guarantee of financial stability within the contracting organization (Senior Class); it is a "safety clause" which most prestige performers request.

President Jim Medeiros stated the purpose of the concert saying that "any event which attracts people to campus—people who would not normally visit the University—is doing the University a service."

New Fraternity Being Formed; IFC OK's SAMMY Colony

by KEN BERK

A new fraternity, SAMMY, is being formed on the UMass campus.

On Tuesday, January 6, 1964 the IFC voted approval of a petition presented by seven men to become a Colony to Sigma Alpha Mu (National Fraternity).

The seven founders of the Colony are; Ken Berk, Les Eisler, Steve Gordon, Joel Hartstone, Barry Rosenberg, Tom Winstanley, and Dick Zletz.

At the beginning of the school year they joined together to form the Sigma Alpha Club, with the desire to affiliate with Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity.

Sigma Alpha Mu was founded at the City College of New York in 1909, and has continued to grow to where it is now among the top ten fraternities in the country. Among the famous fraters of "SAMMY" are Allan Sherman of recording fame, and Charles Goren the World's greatest authority on Bridge.

The addition of the UMass Colony to the fifty-four other chapters will be only the second New England Chapter, the other being at M.I.T.

The Interfraternity Council's meeting on Tuesday, completely revised its old colonization rules, and in continuance of their progressive ideas approved the Colony to Sigma Alpha Mu.

The installation of "SAMMY" is in keeping with the IFC's planned expansion program of one new fraternity about every two years. The last fraternity founded was Zeta Nu, and that was in 1961.

Senate Votes Approval For Busses And Constitution

by DON JOHNSON

THE STUDENT SENATE, riding herd on a full calendar, held a meeting lasting over two hours Wednesday night. The meeting was highlighted by approval of the "Bus Bill" and debate concerning Bay State Special Forces.

Unanimous Senate approval was given a bill providing for "the expenditure of five-hundred dollars as a subsidy for the purpose of sending three buses to New York City for the College Bowl TV program on January 26." Senator Ross Jones (Brett) explained that a tentative schedule has been set up whereby the two buses leaving from Boston will stop in Worcester and the one leaving Amherst will make a passenger stop in Springfield.

THIS SCHEDULE is dependent upon the number of students leaving from either point. Senator Jones also announced that priority will be given to those students who purchased tickets for the trip that was postponed in November.

The Senate also made it possible, via approval for expendi-

Libe Extends Hours For Finals

The Administrative Officers of the University Library have considered carefully the Student Senate petition for increased Library hours on Friday and Saturday during the examination period 1964.

Arrangements are being made to keep open the Reserve Desk and the 3rd and 4th level reading rooms until midnight on Friday, January 10 and Saturday, January 11. The main Circulation Desk and Psychology Reading room will close at 10 p.m. on Friday and 5 p.m. on Saturday.

College Bowl Tickets Available In RSO Office

Students who purchased tickets for the trip to the College Bowl in November will have first preference on those for the January 26 appearance. Tickets will be available through Monday in the Program office, for those who previously purchased tickets only. Those remaining will be available to the entire student body from Tuesday, Jan. 14 until the actual date of the Bowl.

The present plans are to run two buses from Boston with a stop in Worcester, and one bus from Amherst which will stop in Springfield. All busses will leave their respective cities at 8 a.m.

Buses from Boston will leave from the Park Street Station. The price for the trip from Boston is $5.

Buses from Amherst will leave the University. The price for the Amherst bus is $3.

It is possible to get a studio ticket without purchasing a bus ticket; however, this will follow the same priority as previously mentioned.

Persons having any questions concerning the tickets are asked to contact Mary Alden in the Program Office.

Robert McCartney Named To Secretary Post

Robert J. McCartney has been named Secretary of the University of Massachusetts and Director of University Relations, it has been announced by President John W. Lederle.

Mr. McCartney comes to UMass from the University of Maryland where he has been director of University Relations for the past eight years. In his new position he will serve as Secretary to the UMass Board of Trustees and will coordinate communications in the areas of news, publications, radio and television.

IN ANNOUNCING THE appointment Pres. Lederle said, "Mr. McCartney has done an outstanding job at the University of Maryland. He has worked very closely with President Elkins on policy planning and has attended all meetings of the Maryland Board of Regents. Amherst Hitchhiking Dictum Raises Comment

Keep Cool And Careful; Cops Won't Enforce It

by TERRY STOCK

Last year the Town of Amherst Board of Selectmen received a list of Pedestrian Laws from the Massachusetts Department of Public Works.

Although these laws were immediately approved in many of the State's communities, and although the Amherst Board was urged to approve them, they delayed doing so.

Recently, however, citizens of Amherst have shown concern about the hitch-hiking practices of the University and Amherst College students. It was this pressure from town drivers that caused the Selectmen to approve the new Pedestrian Laws.

It is true that many students stand in the middle of the road forcing cars to pick them up; that groups of girls take advantage of the "thumbing" practice by hitching short distances; that many hikers are discourteous to the drivers who give them rides.

Unfortunately, however, hitch-hiking is the only means of transportation for many University students who do not live in the immediate Amherst area. To campus residents, hitch-hiking is generally a convenience. To these commuters, it is often a necessity.

Will these laws be strictly enforced? If students continue to jeopardize safety for rides and to abuse the practice, the police will be urged by Amherst citizens to act.

On the other hand, consideration of drivers and caution while thumbing will go a long way in allowing the police to neglect these inconvenient rules.

Letters To The Editor

Transportation And Business

To the Editor:

It might be a good idea if the Selectmen of Amherst were to provide rides out of their fair city if they wish to enforce the statute concerning "thumbing" and its use by members of this campus.

It seems that many people fail to realize that the University of Massachusetts is not Amherst College concerning cars and money. Due to the parking restrictions concerning undergraduates not 21 years of age and the limited parking facilities on campus, many find that the only way home is to use the educated thumb. This plus the fact that it costs money for an education which limits the ownership of automotive conveyances for many also causes one to "thumb."

Many of the undergraduates find the cost of bus transportation too expensive to allow them to return home when they wish. Others have found that bus transportation is non-existant to their home areas. These problems have been solved for many by the "educated thumb."

If the town of Amherst is against "thumbing", then seeing that the student body of this institution provides the town with its major industry, education, it might be a polite gesture if the town were to provide free transportation to its border while this low cost means of getting home is not possible.

J.K. '66

To the Editor:

Wouldn't it be a shame if the retail businesses in the town of Amherst were to find their business falling off sharply in the next few days and weeks. This is the probable result though of the new hitch hiking law now being enforced. Because hitch hiking is one of the most popular, practical and fastest ways of getting in and out of town students have long found it a convenient way of operating.

If the hitch hiking law should be rigidly enforced, I'm afraid that many of the businesses in town would suffer great losses. After all, not too many people will be eating in the town's restaurants, buying clothes in its stores and in general doing most of their shopping there, if the only way to get in is either to own your own car or walk. Most students just don't have either the time nor the inclination to walk in and out of town very often.

Lost And Found

Why No Return?

One of the strange aspects of the Student Union Lobby counter is the lost and found department. The personnel of this department work for the stuednt, but for some reason some students don't want to be helped.

It is policy that when items with names are found on lost articles, post cards are sent to students involved. Yet many students refuse to comply with these cards. Their articles remain piled on pile.

The lost and found is there for the students. Let's hope they use it.

What This School Needs

To the Editor:

As a departing senior who has an interest in the future of the University, I offer a few final words to the student body.

I have found the University to be a place which any student can learn to enjoy if he so desires. The academic and extracurricular opportunities open to the student are virtually limitless. The associations which he chooses to make can be varied and rewarding. In short, the University offers the individual the means to "succeed" in college. But what does the student give in return?

I have found the main problem with this school to be the student. Not only does he often fail to take advantage of the educational opportunities offered him, but he also lacks pride in his school even if he enjoys it. I am not suggesting that each student hang banners proclaiming pride in the University or even cease to criticize the actions of the administration. I am merely asking that students extend the goood name of the University and realize that the administration is making an honest attempt at bettering the University.

What this school needs is a bit more loyalty and understanding on the part of its students. Once this is accomplished, the student will have done his share for the University.

Bob Brauer

Now We Believe It!

To the Editor:

It's true. I wouldn't have believed it unless I read it with my own eyes. There are those who would actually support spending U.S. tax dollars to support communist or communist-theory dictatorships in Yugoslavia, Poland, Indonesia, and Ghana; who support supplying, through the Alliance for Progress, funds used by South American countries to nationalize privately-owned industries. There are people who would tolerate the existence of a communist satellite ninety miles off our coast powerful enough to send saboteurs to the United States and Latin American countries, and to influence an American citizen to assassinate our president. There are those who advocate continued negotiations in good-faith with a country which has sworn to "bury us" and has defaulted on over fifty treaties.

With regard to pre-World War II days, a direct cause of this war was the results of the Munich talks, where the free world leaders decided to appease Hitler. In the latter half of the twentieth century, with a growing communist menace, we must rely on a man devoted to the perpetuation of individual freedom in America, who will not appease dictators with money gifts, nor shirk his responsibilities to enforce the Monroe Doctrine. Yes, Mr. Masselam, there are those who support Senator Goldwater.

Operatta Guild Announces New Auditions

The Operetta Guild announces that auditions for its spring production, The Boy Friend, will be held in Old Chapel tonight from 6 to 8 p.m. and tomorrow from 2 to 4 p.m. Actors, singers, and dancers are needed.

The Boy Friend is a witty, stylish cartoon of the Jazz Age. Book, lyrics, and music are by Sandy Wilson.

A London hit, originally starring Julie Andrews, it came to the U.S.A. and won similar enthusiastic reaction when it opened in 1954. Besides its uniquely funny style, it also spoofs the mechanics of old-style operetta, using flapper-type music and lyrics.

The Boy Friend will be directed by Mrs. Albert P. Madeira, wife of Prof. Madeira; musical direction will be by Paul Bartsch.

Mrs. Madeira is well known for her work in the theatre in this area. A graduate of the Leland Powers School of the Theatre in Boston, she has directed plays for many schools and community theatres, among them the Patterson Players in Amherst and the Circle Players in Northampton.

She has played leading roles with the Patterson Players in summer stock and at the Kirby Theatre, where she is an honorary member of the Amherst College Masquers. She has also been active with the Amherst Community Opera and is currently teaching drama at the Stoneleigh Prospect Hill School in Greenfield.

Film On Proposed Park To Be Shown In Amherst

The Sierra Club film "Wilderness Alps of Stehekin" will be shown at the Amherst College Moore Chemistry Laboratory lecture room at 8 p.m. Friday, January 10. It is open to the public free of charge.

This is the same film that has been shown recently at the Appalachian Mountain Club in Boston and at the Atlantic Chapter of the Sierra Club in Concord, Massachusetts. It is being used to support the current sampaign, now approaching its climax, for the creation of a new national park in the North Cascades in the state of Washington. In addition to the mountain clubs, The Wilderness Society, the National Parks Association, the Nature Conservancy, the Audubon Society and the Garden Clubs of America have been active in supporting the national park proposal of the North Cascades Conservation Council in Seattle.

A study team appointed by the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture completed an extensive exploration of the area during the past summer, and in the fall conducted hearings in the state of Washington. Hearings in Washington, D.C. are now proposed. Local lumbering, mining, and grazing interests in Washington state were naturely very strongly opposed.

The conservation groups are now trying to interest the whole country in the National Park calibre of this important but little-known area.

1964: YEAR OF DECISION

Well sir, here we go into 1964, which shows every sign of being quite a distinguished year. First off, it is the only year since 1954 which ends with the Figure 4. Of course, when it comes to Figure 4's, 1964, though distinguished, can hardly compare with 1444 which, most people agree, had not just one, not just two, but three Figure 4's! This, I'll wager, is a record that will stand for at least a thousand years!

1444 was, incidentally, notable for many other things. It was, for example, the year in which the New York Giants played the Philadelphia Athletics in the World Series. As we all know, the New York Giants have since moved to San Francisco and the Philadelphia Athletics to Kansas City. There is a movement afoot at present to move Chicago to Phoenix—the city, not the baseball team. Phoenix, in turn, would of course move to Chicago. It is felt that the change would be broadening for residents of both cities. Many Chicago folks, for example, have never seen an iguana. Many Phoenix folks, on the other hand, have never seen a frostbite.

There are, of course, certain difficulties connected with a municipal shift of this size. For instance, to move Chicago you also have to move Lake Michigan. This, in itself, presents no great problem, what with modern scientific advances like electronics and the French cuff. But if you will look at your map, you will find Lake Michigan is attached to all the other Great Lakes, which in turn are attached to the St. Lawrence Seaway, which in turn is attached to the Atlantic Ocean. You start dragging Lake Michigan to Phoenix and, willy-nilly, you'll be dragging all that other stuff too. This would make our British allies terribly cross, and I can't say as I blame them. Put yourself in their place. What if, for example, you were a British costermonger who had been saving and scrimping all year for a summer holiday at Brighton Beach, and then when you got to Brighton Beach there wasn't any ocean? There you'd be with your inner tube and snorkel and nothing to do all day but dance the Lambeth Walk. This, you must agree, would not help make you NATO-minded!

I appeal most earnestly to the residents of Chicago and Phoenix to reconsider. I know it's no bowl of cherries going through life without ever seeing an iguana or a frostbite, but I ask you: Chicagoans, Phoenicians—is it too big a price to pay for preserving the unity of the free world?

I feel sure that if you search your hearts, you will make the right decision, for all of us, whether we live in frostbitten Chicago, iguana-infested Phoenix, or narrow-lapelled New Haven—are first and foremost Americans!

But I digress. We were speaking of 1964, our new year. And new it is! There is, for one thing, new pleasure in Marlboro Cigarettes. How, you ask, can there be new pleasure in Marlboros when that fine flavorful blend of tobaccos, that clean efficient Selectrate filter, have not been altered? The answer is simple: each time you light a Marlboro, it is like the first time. The flavor is such that age cannot wither nor custom stale. Marlboro never palls, never jades, never dwindles into dull routine. Each puff, each cigarette, each pack, each carton, makes you glad all over again that you are a Marlboro smoker!

Therefore, Marlboros in hand, let us march confidently into 1964. May good fortune attend our ventures! May serenity reign! May Chicago and Phoenix soon recover from their disappointment and join our bright cavalcade into a brave tomorrow!

100 Students Sign-Up As Tutors To Holyoke Area

Nearly 100 students from Amherst and Mount Holycke Colleges have signed up as tutors for school children with learning difficulties in the nearby city of Holyoke, and have begun making daily trips to a Holyoke church to meet their "tutees."

The tutors are providing individual instruction to boys and girls of junior high school and high school age who require help in one or more academic subjects: English, mathematics, social studies, science or foreign languages. Sometimes the tutors themselves have to bone up on rules of grammar, or on other matters they have long forgotten. Each spends one and a half hours weekly with a pupil assigned to him.

"Often you don't know where to start," said one of the Amherst tutors. "You have to feel your way. We're learning a lot, perhaps more than the tutees."

The project was established with the collaboration of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in whose classrooms the sessions are being held, but many other community agencies are cooperating. The Holyoke Tutorial Committee, sent letters announcing the project to welfare officers, school officials, the YMCA, the YWCA, clergymen and many others. The letters indicated that the program was established for young people who cannot afford professional help or tutoring, who are drop-outs or potential drop-outs, or who are doing poorly in their studies. So far about 150 applications have been received but the Committee is still looking for additional students who need assistance. In a number of instances students from middle class homes who were already receiving average or better than average grades applied. They were sent home after one or two sessions. Pupils who are in real need of help are still being sought.

The tutoring sessions are held each afternoon from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. in the classrooms of St. Paul's; individual rooms are assigned to each tutor and his pupil. Each tutor uses whatever materials seem most appropriate: the tutee's own schoolbooks, magazines, other books, or just blank paper. "Is the verb transitive or intransitive?" "Two times what is sixteen? . . . now we can replace the number we don't know with an x . . ." "Then they sailed to the West Indies for rum, and they sold their slaves in . . ."

"I can remember some of the simple rules of grammar," said one of the Mount Holyoke students, 'but I had to work hard to deal with gerunds. I'd forgotten all that."

When the project was organized early in November some 70 students at Mount Holyoke and approximately 30 from Amherst signed up as volunteers. They met at Amherst to receive instructions and advice from Timothy Parsons, an Amherst senior who spent all of last year as a tutor in Philadelphia, and from others who had experience in tutorial projects. They also met with high school teachers from the area to discuss teaching methods in various fields.

In addition to the students and to various community agencies, the leaders of the project have enlisted other help. The head of the Mount Holyoke group, Gene Kemble '66 of Morris Plains, N.J., who is assisted by four sub-chairmen in scheduling and supervising the 70 Mount Holyoke undergraduates, reports that some 15 faculty members and faculty wives are assisting in advisory capacities or providing transportation for the Mount Holyoke

37 Initiated Into UMass Angel Flight

by SHARON O'HARA

Although Christmas has left the campus, angels are still here. They are the thirty-seven newly initiated members of Angel Flight, a national social and service organization in conjunction with the Air Force ROTC Arnold Air Society.

Iinitiation ceremonies were held Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in the Officers' Open Mess at Westover AF Base.

Before each girl received her pin from Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., she placed a lighted candle beside the others to form a flaming pair of Air Force wings.

Dinner was followed by the guest speaker, Capt. Eleanor M. Carey, WAF special nurse, New Haven, Conn., who has had extensive world travel. As a member of Angel Flight she said one would learn a great deal about the military, assist officers preparing for a military role, learn about national security and the part the armed forces pla yin it. Capt. Carey gave a brief resume of Angel Flight history and, echoing a phrase from the oath the "Angels" took, she emphasized that each girl should be committed to the organization "with true faith and allegiance." "Think Big," she added and "be proud to be a part of the Air Force."

Sitting at the head table with Capt. Carey were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., Major Sheila Mullane, '64, Angel Flight commander, and Major Peter Gillon, commander of the Arnold Air Society. Also were Capt. Alice Pierce, '64, executive officer, and Cadet Sandra Borden, initiation chairman.

Other members are: seniors, Mary Lou Willard and Mary Wolfram; juniors, Pat Appicelli, Claire Bohlin, Patricia Gully, Marcia Gustin, Wendy Hall, Faith Henry, Marilyn Jones, Sue Lydon, Marilyn Martyny, Carolyn Pearson, Martha Seibel, Sue Slayton, Pat Vernell and Nancy Winer; sophomores, Carol Atwood, Bonnie Blake, Mary Ann Brady, Barbara Esielionis, Pat Gillis, Andrea Pinkul, Jacquelyn Smith and Carol Steafanik; freshmen: Bonnie Blittersdorf, Susan Koons, Kathrayn Mitchell, Leonora Mullane and Ruth Zoller.

All the "Angels" were in heavenly attire—uniforms of dark blue skirts with light blue blouses and patent leather heels to match the colors of AFROTC.

Faculty Senate Muddles Through Year-Round Operation Debate

In a meeting that pleased none, angered many and accomplished little, the Faculty Senate discussed Year-round operations Wednesday afternoon.

Reports of what transpired at the meeting are conflicting and confused, and most people, including many Senators, will have to wait until the meeting's minutes are published before things can be totally understood.

However, from what can be pieced together, it appears that after lengthy and allegedly unnecessary debate the Senate turned itself into a committee of a whole, to discuss certain motions pertaining to Year-round operation.

These motions, prepared by a Senate committee, are basic principles which the Senate must accept or reject before any discussion of Year-round operation, in concrete terms, can be undertaken.

After more lengthy debate two proposals were passed and one defeated. The two that were given affirmative votes by the Senate stated that in any form of Year-round operation a basic policy of two successive semesters of teaching followed by another period of non-teaching should be followed, and, that in any Year-round operation system those teachers teaching more than two semesters be compensated with salaries comparable to the ones received during other semesters.

The Faculty Senate defeated a motion that stated teaching during the summer months would continue to be optional unless compulsory attendance was demanded from the students. Many Senate members, wary of the fact that if students are made to attend summer sessions faculty must be provided for them, voted against and defeated the motion.

The meeting adjourned at 6:00 and it has been reported by usually reliable sources that much of the language heard outside of the Council Chambers after the meeting was unscholarly, ungentlemanly and entirely appropriate.

Program For Critical Languages Established At Princton Univ.

..BECAUSE OF ITS MARKED SUCCESS TO DATE, an additional 100 colleges and universities are being invited by President Robert F. Goheen to nominate candidates for the Cooperative Undergraduate Program for Critical Languages at Princeton University. Other colleges interested in the program may also participate upon application.

Established to help meet the growing national need for persons thoroughly familiar with critical languages, the program offers talented students an opportunity for intensive study of languages at Princeton which are not taught at an advanced level on their home campuses. These include Arabic, Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Turkish and Russian, with relevant area studies in the humanities and social sciences.

The essence of the program is that a student spends his or her junior year at Princeton, having acquired at least an elementary, and preferably, an intermediate knowledge of the language he or she wishes to study, either on the home campus, if available, or by attending an intensive course at an approved summer school. For such intensive courses in the summer financial aid is available (through the program) from the Carnegie Corporation.

After one year at Princeton, students will normally return to their own colleges as seniors to complete their undergraduate education. In certain instances, however, candidates may continue for a second year of intensive work before returning to their home campuses for senior year, thus taking five years to complete the requirements for an A.B. degree.

In a letter inviting the additional 100 institutions to participate, President Goheen observes that gifted students may develop an interest in critical languages and related areas after they are enrolled in colleges that do not offer them. Princeton has pioneered in the teaching of these subjects at the undergraduate level. Students enrolling in the program, therefore, should attain a third year of competence in the languages of their selection.

Each participating college appoints a campus representative through whom applications are made. The colleges nominate candidates and, since only forty to fifty undergraduates can be accommodated, the policy committee relies heavily on these selections.

FOURTEEN STUDENTS, including five young women, were selected for the current academic year. Mr. Blair states that they are doing well scholastically and have adjusted with little difficulty to life on campus. All were invited to join the Woodrow Wilson Society where most of them take their meals. The society has a Russian and a Chinese table where only those languages are spoken, thus providing further language practice.

Russian and Chinese were the languages chosen by twelve of this first group, with one working in Japanese and one in Persian. Mr. Blair said the committee hoped to encourage more students to choose the latter two languages, as well as Arabic and Turkish.

"While the year has not ended we believe that the program has proved out in action," Mr. Blair said. "Most, if not all of the students, will have achieved such a high level of linguistic competence by the time they return to their home campuses that, when they receive their degrees, they should be well qualified for graduate work."

the Cage in presenting a double concert there, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

He mentioned the "universal appeal" of the performer and stressed that if any class was in a position to carry out successfully the program it was the Senior Class, since other organizations do not have adequate funds to sponsor a program of this calibre.

He said there have been frowns from members of the administration regarding the necessity of having tickets on a sliding scale and said: "We force no one to buy tickets out of their financial position. We recognize some sort of maturity in students to decide for themselves what they can and cannot afford."

In a discussion which followed, Elwin McNamara mentioned the many uncertainties and probabilities which remain unresolved and presented argument in opposition.

Senate President Fife spoke in hesitation of the concert since he felt there was doubt concerning the facilities available—Boyden Gymnasium.

President Medeiros said we must work with what we have available and that if we wait until the University has a 10,000 seat auditorium we may never realize anything of this sort on campus.

In conclusion, he said, "The University, in size, is growing big, in thought, its thinking remains small. We would be doing ourselves and the University a great disfavor if we were to renounce this opportunity."

Lack Of Cigarette Advertising Service To College Students

Thanks to Dr. E. Cayler Hammand of the American Cancer society, the decision of cigarette manufacturers not to advertise in college newspapers may be the biggest service they could have done for American youth.

Dr. Hammond, speaking to the American Medical Association in Portland, Oregon, revealed the results of a long range study of cigarette smokers. Almost 37,000 male smokers in 25 states were matched by 17 different characteristics to 36,795 male nonsmokers. All were over age 30. Matched characteristics included race, height, age, exercise, sleeping habits, nervousness, marital status and alcoholic consumption. During the 30 month period of the study, more than twice as many of the smokers (1,385) than nonsmokers (662) died.

"It is hard to ESCAPE the conclusion that this difference in number of deaths was due to the difference in smoikng habits!"

In recent years, one-fourth of the revenue from national advertising received by the Daily Nebraskan was from cigarette manufacturers. This summer, hidden under the guise of a new approach to advertising, the cigarette men agreed to discontinue advertising in the college press. Accompanying this decree was an agreement to remove from future advertisements, references to youth, vigor and other attributes associated with the younger generation.

Their aim, they said, was to appeal to the established smoker. A large cash savings to the manufacturers (in the neighborhood of $5,000 at Nebraska alone) resulted. Also, such absurd resultant campaigns such as "Luckies separate the men from the boys, but not from the girls" were almost enough to make anyone stop smoking Luckies.

There is still no conclusive proof that lung cancer or any other specific disease is caused by smoking, but the fact remains that twice as many smokers DIED as the identically matched nonsmokers.

The specific cause of disease is not important to me. I have long respected the facts of science. There seems to be absolutely no other conclusion to draw from Dr. Hammond's report. Each smoking participant in the study was matched as closely as possible with a nonsmoker. Dr. Hammond was the first to link cigarette smoking and lung cancer in the early 1950's. But now for the first time, he has eliminated the "third factor" argument.

Those who have defended smoking have cited, willingly, the statistics linking cancer and smoking. But also, we have argued that both could be caused by a "third factor" such as heredity, diet or nervousness. These arguments are no longer valid.

Again, maybe the cigarette advertisers have saved measureable amounts of money with their "adults only policy." Also, it is probable that until now they haven't lost a measureable amount of college smokers. But at least now, the possibility exists that the "thinking man"—college students included, will switch from Viceroys to Wrigley's Spearmint.

As ad campaigns stand now, Luckies Dr. Froog and crazy questions are no more. Also, Salems can refresh your taste if you're over 40, and 21 great

Donated By Daughter

Frost Library At NYU

THE PERSONAL LIBRARY OF ROBERT FROST, famed American poet and four-time Pulitzer Prize winner who died in Boston a year ago this month, is being given to New York University by the poet's daughter, Mrs. Lesley Frost Ballantine. The initial portion of the library was given to the University at Christmas.

The Frost library of approximately 3,000 volumes will be housed in a seminar room in a projected new library building at New York University. It will be available to scholars when cataloguing has been completed. Personal papers, correspondence, press notices, photographs, and plaques and citations honoring the late poet will be added later by Mrs. Ballantine and by friends of the poet.

The Frost collection was formerly in his home at 35 Brewster Street, Cambridge. Many of the books were assembled during the years when Frost's earliest books appeared. Included in the early books are presentation copies from his friends Edward Thomas, William Butler Yeats, Ezra Pound, Walter de la Mare, and John Masefield. Frost's interest in American history, politics, and archaeology, as well as in poetry, is reflected in the collection. Other volumes are first editions of Frost's poetry, including the Number 1 of the Limited Editions.

"We are extremely pleased to accept this initial portion of Robert Frost's personal library," said Dr. Charles F. Gosnell, director, New York University Libraries. "A special room for the collection is being set aside in the plans for our new library building at the Washington Square Center. Temporary headquarters for the collection will be arranged in the General University Library, 100 Washington Square East."

Colleges Need Restoration Of Joy In Life And Learning

Palo Alto, Calif—(I. P.)—COLLEGES NEED TO RESTORE A SENSE OF JOY IN LIFE AND LEARNING, a Stanford University researcher suggests. Discussing the future of women's colleges, Research Associate Mervin B. Freedman of Stanford's Institute for the Study of Human Problems says:

"The college years are characterized less and less by education in the classic sense and more and more by sheer hard work and stress. Under the pressures of increased competition for entrance, the demands of the cold war for scientific and technical performance, and perversions of the concept of excellence, our colleges increasingly resemble obstacle courses.

"Their catalogues contain bold words about the liberating cultural and personal experiences they offer their students, but let a student take some time to reflect on such matters, rather than to plug away laboriously at his courses, and he finds that he is gasping for breath in the attempt to catch up."

Instead of presenting themselves as pale copies of the prestige men's schools, Researcher Freedman suggests women's colleges should take the initiative in restoring "our aesthetic sense, our awareness of the complexity of nature and life. Women's colleges can more effectively resist antiliberal and antihumanistic pressures. The world is all too much with men's education and colleges."

Discussing other opportunities for educational inspiration and innovation by the women's colleges, he says, "many of our colleges actively support early marriage, or at least bow to what seems to be the inevitable by providing housing and other facilities for married students.

"Some women's colleges have taken the lead and set themselves the goal of countering the tyranny of early marriage. But this cannot be accomplished simply by issuing policy statements and opinions. Students can be induced to forego the customary social and sexual pleasures of their contemporaries only to the extent that other activities, their studies, for example, have captured their spirit and imaginativeness. Grim, pedantic scholarship will never do this."

Freshmen Gymnasts Prep For Upcoming Meets

by JOHN LEDWICK

Talent, experience, depth; enough of each is present to keep coach J. Gundershiem moderately optimistic when talking about his freshman gymnastic squad.

The 9 man team centers around a nucleus of 4 highly talented and experienced performers. Pete Grasso and Dave March, both high finishers in last years state meet, will be competing on the still rings. In addition, Pete will also work in vaulting and floor exercises while Dave goes on the high and parallel bars. A good share of points is also expected from Al Carver and Dave Lizzotte. All have had excellent records during their high school careers.

Of the remaining 5 members, all but 2 have competed in various scholastic meets. Tomorrow's meet with Tantasqua R.H. and the following one with Springfield Tech should give all those who have not had much competition a chance to break in gradually before their big meet with Springfield College Feb. 20.

If the squad is able to develop to the full potential of it's members, coach Gundershiem will have a team capable of competing with some of the best in the area.

Stockbridge Prevails Over Northampton, 80-79

The Stockbridge Basketball team won its second game in three starts Wednesday night at the Cage, edging out Northampton Commercial College in overtime 80-79. Stockbridge was trailing by as much as 14 points in the first half but rallied and was only three points down at the end of the half. The Aggies rally was led by sub Al Hunter as he excelled at blocking shots, rebounding, and also finished with 17 points before fouling out near the end of the game. Five other Stockbridge players finished in double figures, with Wendy Nooth at 15, Ed Mathews 13, Jerry McCarthy 11, John Halunen 10, and John Barrett with 10. Northampton's Joe Murray led all scorers with 23 points. It was an excellent team victory for the Aggies and they are eagerly looking forward to their next home game on Saturday in the Cage vs. Athol YMCA at 2:00 p.m.

ture for the University to be represented at a conference on civil rights to be held in February at Bryn Mawr College. Senate President Jon Fife, in urging passage of this motion, declared that "it is time the students of this University be made aware of what is being done on other campuses about this problem."

AN "AD HOC COMMITTEE on Leadership Honor Societies" was also formed by the Senate. The committee, consisting of a representative from each of the Honor Societies, plus six Senators (to be appointed), will concern itself with the study of the function and future role of these societies on campus. This is in anticipation of greater participation due to greater enrollment in the future.

An appropriation of fifty dollars was granted to a University committee which is investigating establishment of a John F. Kennedy Memorial on campus.

SENATE APPROVAL, thus R.S.O. sanction, was given four organizations through acceptance of their respective constitutions. They are: The Horticultural Society, The Forensic Society, The Concert Association, and The Bay State Special Forces.

This last, an organization connected with the Army R.O.T.C. program, was the subject of much debate. Senate President Jon Fife turned the chair over to Vice President Joan Labuzoski to engage in debate on the floor. He called attention to the "purpose and function" of the organization in leading the forces for approval.

Katie Londergan, winner of the recent special election, was sworn in as Senator-at-Large '66. The Senators were advised of the resignation, from the Senate, of Ginny Mallison (Van Meter), chairman of the Public Relations Committee and Jim Watson (At-Large '65), chairman of Men's Affairs Committee.

AFROTC

Special Program

Because of legislation before Congress and because several students have come to us recently asking if it is too late to enroll in the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Program, we have set up a special program at UMass to permit Freshmen and Sophomores to enroll in AFROTC, in an "out-of-phase" status, regardless of how many semesters of AFROTC they lack. If you are one of those students who were planning on a commission in the United States Air Force after graduation, contact Major Bamber at Dickinson Hall for further information prior to 1 February, 1964.

TOM RYAN and JACK FROST will not make the trip to Vermont with the varsity basketball team Friday. Ryan is in the infirmary with a mild concussion while Frost has a virus infection.

Frosh Swimmers Downed By Worcester Junior

The frosh swim team was defeated Wed. night by a powerful Worcester Junior College team by a score of 71 to 21.

The sole bright spot of the day was an only win by Dick Lennon in the 200 yd. Indoor Meley. His time was 2:20.6. A second excellent effort was later washed out by a controversy in which Lennon was determined by judges as the loser in the 100 yd. breaststroke, even though his time was best.

The free style relay, composed of Kip Watt, Steve Levy, Tom Schwartz and Norm Lovitch, looked very much improved. They were less than a second away from the winners, a close race.

Dick Brown, after winning a second in the diving event, handily took another second in the 100 yd. Butterfly—only to be disqualified by a poor turn.

Fred Cooke, the teams only backstroker, took third in the 100 yd. swim, while Tom Fayan settled for fourth place in the rough 50 yd. free style sprint. Later, Tom was rescued from drowning in the shower.

Although his team didn't win, Coach Joe Rogers was pleased with the swimmers improved performance and spirit.

The next meet will be in home waters against Conn. on Feb. 12.

Pucksters Rebound; Defeat Connecticut

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts hockey defeated the University of Connecticut 7-2 Tuesday night at Orr Rink. The Huskies suffering from a lack of depth played extremely well at the start of the game. In the first period UConn had a 1-0 lead and later led 2-1. But the Redmen came back with three goals and led 4-2 at the end of the period. Two of the goals were scored within 11 seconds. The Redmen scoring was led by Capt. Charlie Glew and Dick Forster with two goals apiece. Bob Lee, Ken Palm, and Pete Hurd each scored a goal. Coach Steve Kosakowski used both Skip Bowen and Eric Swenson in the goal but they were forced to make only 15 saves.

This is the Redmen's second victory over Connecticut this season with UMass also beating the Huskies 6-3 in the Vermont tourney.

Friday night at 7 p.m. at the Orr Rink UMass plays a tough Vermont team in a very important conference game. The Catamounts playing their first year of varsity hockey will give the Redmen a good game. They are led by forward Pete Kidder from Dixfield, Maine, who was a high school All-American, and defenseman Tim Toomey of Lynn who along with goalie Bob Sausville made the Vermont tourney all-star team.

This will be the last game for the Redmen before intercession. The hockey's first game after vacation will be against Amherst February 5. The Redmen are now 4-3 for the season.

To date, the most serious problem is in finding pupils who really need help, and who cannot afford to get it elsewhere. "Everything has gone well," said one of the Amherst students, "except that the other day the girls stole one of our tutees." The girls deny it.

Redmen On The Road

Hoopsters Travel North; Invade League Leaders

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts basketball team heads north for a two game stand this weekend in the Burlington, Vermont area. Tonight they take on the University of Vermont Catamounts in an important Yankee Conference game. UVM presently holds first place in the conference due to a two game sweep over Maine early in December. The Cats feature a young team that could be the dark horse of the race this year.

Then on Saturday night, the Redmen will play St. Michael's College from nearby Winooski. The Vermont team is paced by high scoring Rich Tarrant who has averaged over thirty points a game for the last seven games and is averaging about 27 for the season. The Knights have three other men averaging around double figures.

After the Providence game, Pete Bernard leads the Redmen in scoring with a 16.8 average. Rodger Twitchell is scoring at a 14.9, Tim Edwards is averaging 13.0, Chuck O'Rourke is scoring about 11.6, Jim Painten 10.6, and Tom Ryan 10.2. The squad is continuing to get fine team performances and is scoring well as a unit.

The team is still averaging about 86 points a game far above that of previous years. The overall percentage is still high despite the performance against the Friars. In rebounding O'Rourke is fast catching Edwards. Tim now leads Chuck by only two, 117 to 115, due to the big 15 pulled down by O'Rourke in the last game.

About the only two bright lights for the Redmen in the game against the Friars were the second half performance of Bernard who got 16 of the 20 point total he had for the night, and that of Charlie O'Rourke who in addition to his 15 rebounds scored 12 points and held John Thompson to seven points in the first half. It was only after the Redmen shifted to a zone press and Chuck was taken off the big center that Thompson began to hit.

Kovalski and O'Rourke renewed an old personal battle in the game. O'Rourke attended nearby Amherst High while Kovalski went to school across the river in Hatfield at Smith Academy. Since both schools are in the same league, the two met often. Chuck has improved greatly since his high school days. Kovalski has maintained the same fine touch he had in high school where he averaged near 40 points a game and lead his team to the New England championships. Kovalski and O'Rourke both have fine outside shots, something you don't expect in big men.

Double Dribbles: In the Fairfield game, Mass faced Pat Burke and Stan Poole of Hartford Public who led their team to the New England championship the year after Kovalski graduated. . . . Mass faces Iona in Madison Square Garden on Wed., Jan. 29. . . . the team then returns home to play Colby on the 30th and Maine on the 1st of Feb. . . .

On the national scene, UCLA has moved to the top of the lists in the country . . . Loyola of Chicago had been first, but after a loss to Georgetown they fell back to third . . . Then Kentucky made the top spot, only to lose

Redmen Face Big Test

Trackmen Enter K of C Meet

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity indoor track team will make its debut Saturday night in Boston at the annual Knights of Columbus Meet. Only a few Redmen will be entered since most of the events are limited to invitations only. A varsity mile relay team composed of Gene Colburn, Bob Ramsay, Doug Sloan and John Collins will compete in one of the many collegiate mile relays. It is not known against whom the Redmen will compete.

Jim Wryan will run in the New England Collegiate Mile. Entered against Jim will be some of the top collegiate milers in the area. Ed Meehan of Harvard and Dave Farley of Brown head the list. Dave Dunsky of Northeastern and Sumner Brown of M.I.T. will also be threats in the race. Jim has been running very well in practice and should give any of the people entered a run for his money.

Dick Ward will head the field events contingent. While Dick has used up his athletic eligibility at UMass., he is still training here as he works toward his degree. The former UMass. great will enter the 35 lb. weight throw and the shot put. In the weight event Dick has been throwing it 64' which is 3' further than he has ever thrown before. He should finish in the top three. John Mederios, last year's top point man for the frosh, will compete in the broadjump.

College Bowl Team Wins First Contest

Health Council Asks Cigarette Sales Ban

by ELWIN McNAMARRA

The University Health Council, in a unanimous decision, recommended that the sale of cigarettes on campus be terminated. According to Health Service Director, Dr. Robert W. Gage, MD, the decision was based on "recognition of the health hazard."

Dr. Gage added that the Service has long been concerned with excessive smoking, and has in the past conducted displays pointing out the dangers of smoking. He said that while the recent Public Health Service report was an important factor in the recommendation, the problem has been under consideration for some time.

The doctor, a non-smoker, saw a paradoxical situation in the sale of cigarettes by vending machines in the dorms. The machines, he said, are partly supporting the University's athletic program, athletics being traditionally associated with good health.

The Health Service plans to conduct an extensive educational campaign to alert students and faculty to the dangers of smoking.

In addition, they will conduct a clinic for those who wish to give up the habit. Dr. Gage hesitantly likened the clinic to Alcoholics Anonymous, in that it will consist of groups of students and faculty joining together to discuss their particular smoking problems.

Index, MUA Collegian Meet On Incentives

by ANN MILLER

"A student puts in 30 hours a week heading a major student extra-curricular activity; he's performing a community service the community needs performed. It seems he deserves compensation in some form!"

This statement was made by Index Editor-in-chief Joe Bradley at a recent meeting of the heads of the three major campus communications organizations.

At the meeting, Collegian Editor-in-chief Jeff Davidow, WMUA Station Master Jim O'Hearn, and Joe Bradley laid plans to seek student opinion on financial remuneration some of those who work the hardest in the area of campus communication.

"There are arguments pro and con on this subject," Davidow said, "and we are convinced the pros outweigh the arguments against compensation.

"UMass is making rapid progress in many ways—but in the area of compensation for student leaders, it has fallen far behind.

"For instance, I cite the results of a recent survey of 20 Texas college newspapers, representing colleges with student populations from 800 to 21,000, including public and private schools.

"Every one of these schools provides remuneration for the editors of their student paper."

"There's more than one angle on this," O'Hearn stated. "It's not only that these people are performing semi - professional service work and deserve remuneration — for you can always get the argument that it is volunteer work, that nobody makes them do it.

College Bowl On Radio

If you missed last Sunday's College Bowl when UMass defeated Dayton College you'll be glad to know that you can hear a rebroadcast of that show this Saturday night from 7-7:30 WMUA. You'll also be glad to know that you can hear this Sunday's College Bowl at 5:30 over campus radio WMUA, 91.1 FM) when UMass meets Rollins College.

by JOE BRADLEY

At the whistle, it was UMass 150, Dayton 125.

But at the half the issue was in doubt, with the score tied 65-65. The University's College Bowl squad jumped to an early lead and shut out Dayton's team for the first several minutes of play.

Dayton shot back briefly when the UMass team scored penalties to set them back 10 points. However, at the final whistle there was no doubt that the University had won its first College Bowl encounter.

THE UMASS COLLEGE BOWL TEAM of Mike Berrini, Bill Landis, Sue Tracy and Dave Mathieson.

Sue Tracy took individual honors as she rattled off answers to bonus questions at a speed that astounded the predominantly Massachusetts audience as evidence by the gasps that rippled through the crowd.

Dave Matheison set Daytons team agog when he answered a question that host Robert Earle hadn't finished asking. "Teddy Roosevelt," responded Matheison at Earle's mid-sentence.

The question: "President Kennedy was the youngest man elected to the White House, (Mathieson sounded his bell and answered at this point) but who was the youngest man to enter the White House as president?"

But the final whistle disspelled tenseness at the NBC Peacock studio and the packed auditorium shrieked and shouted its approval for the squad of Mike Berrini, Captain Bill Landis, Matheison and Tracy.

Next week the quick answer kids take on Rollins College of Florida. Once again the team will be without a coach since the death of Mr. Albert P. Madeira.

Some interesting sidelights . . . One Dayton team member was believed to be suffering from nervous hives shortly before airtime. Subsequent examinations by doctors in Ohio confirmed that the Dayton player had measles. Both teams had fraternized freely before the match.

Mrs. Mildred Miller of Jack Parr Show fame was waiting in line at the NBC studios for tickets for the Parr show that was being taped later the same evening of the College Bowl match.

Mrs. Miller asked for tickets to

State House Blamed For Yamasaki Loss

by RICHARD RYAN

The blame for the loss of Minoru Yamasaki as architect of the proposed Fine Arts Building has been placed on boondoggling in the State House.

In a special report to the Faculty Senate, Kenneth Johnson, University Treasurer, gave the history of the Yamasaki affair.

According to Johnson, Yamasaki visited the campus last summer and indicated his willingness to design the Fine Arts Building. University officials were pleased over the prospect of having such an internationally renowned architect, he was the subject of a Time magazine cover story, to design such an important addition to the campus.

Mr. Yamasaki gave October 1 as the date the revised contract for the design should be signed. Several specification were added to the proposed building to make it larger and more palatable to Yamasaki. The contract, however, had to go through the office of the Commission of Administration and Finance in Boston.

Johnson made reference to the repeated calls of University official to the Commissioner, urging him to sign the contract. The Faculty Senate Rejects Trimester System

The Faculty Senate has voted down the institution of any sort of trimester year round operation system at the University of Massachusetts.

In a close vote at its last meeting, the Faculty Senate approved a motion by Mr. Jay Savereid of the Speech Department which acknowledged "the serious academic disadvantages of the trimester system and the strong faculty objections to it."

The motion also recommended that any further study of the ad hoc Committee on Year-Round Operation on "the better utilization of the University's physical plant be within the framework of the existing two semester sytem with an improved summer school."

Savereid's motion came while the Senate was discussing thirteen motions proposed by the ad hoc committee which were to be used as basic principles upon which any type of year-round operation would be based.

Major objections to the motion included an argument which emphasized that definite exclusion of a specific calendar (trimester) should not precede the adoption of basic principles, and that the Committee was being directed to further study year-round operation without a set of Senate-approved principles to govern that study.

The motion was supported on the grounds that the Senate members themselves were confused concerning the implications of the passage or defeat of the thirteen proposed motions, and that the trimester system would have adverse effects on the academic program.

Other points offered in favor of the motion, and against trimester, were the possible deleterious effects of such a system on the entire learning process, student health, extracurricular activities, faculty research and Four college cooperation.

Three faculty memorandums composed by the members of the History, Psychology and Philosophy departments which opposed the trimester system and which have been circulating through the faculty in past weeks received the endorsement of the departments which authored them and the Departments of English, Government, German - Russian, Sociology and Botany.

Mr. Richason registered the negative action of the Chemistry Department on the History resolution.

In a secret ballot vote Mr. Savereid's motion was passed 36-32. However, according to one Faculty Senator who supported the motion the slim margin of passage was not indicative of the overwhelming faculty sentiment against trimester.

Campus Visited By Crime Commission

The Massachusetts Crime Commission has established a beachhead on campus.

The reason for their presence has not been divulged by either the University or the chairman of the State Crime Commission.

University of Massachusetts President John W. Lederle met with two members of the Massachusetts Crime Commission Friday Jan. 17 in his office, and welcomed them to the campus. He said, "We are proud of our operation here at the University, and welcome the opportunity to show what we are doing. We will cooperate with members of the Commission in every way, just as we do with other official agencies of the Commonwealth, such as the State Auditors."

Cigarette Smoking
The Problem & The Individual

by JOHN B. CHILDS

There seems to be little doubt that problems centering around smoking are serious. Many doctors consider smoking a danger to health. Cigarette manufacturers consider the doctors' consideration as a danger to their pockets. The report of the Surgeon General has brought to the foreground, in America, these and other problems concerned with smoking.

It is encouraging to note the concern of the University Health Service as regards smoking. It is encouraging to note the constructive suggestion of the Health Service that a clinic be available for those who wish to stop smoking.

However the recommendation by the University Health Council that the sale of cigarettes on campus be terminated hardly seems to be a constructive answer to the "problem."

A simple examination of the milieu in which we exist points up the fact that we exist in a "sea of cigarettes", so to speak. They may be bought in town, in other towns, in other states. To halt sales on the University campus would probably have an effect on cigarette sales, the effect would probably be one of increasing sales in town.

But there is a more important issue here than that of the impracticability of halting sales on campus. It is our firm belief that smoking is dangerous to the individual's health. However because it is the individual's health we feel it is an individual concern. If a person feels smoking is a problem for himself then such institutions as a clinic would probably serve an extremely beneficial service. On the other hand because it is individual concern we feel the problem of smoking is not one which can be solved by supra-individual punitive action. Such action is contrary to an emphasis on individual liberty which this country is more or less built around.

Smoking is a problem.

It is an individual problem.

Help the individual to solve the problem if that individual wants help.

If he doesn't want help, this is his prerogative. Let it go at that.

Letters To The Editor

Collegian Article Questioned By Faculty

To the Editor:

The Collegian's acount of the January Faculty Senate meeting, published on page 4 off your January 10 edition, was almost wholly unrecognizable to those of us who were there. In an attempt either to ridicule the Senate or to obscure what really happened, or both, your source of information gave you fiction instead of fact.

We respectfully suggest that you publish, when it is convenient, that portion of the Faculty Senate minutes which deals with the year-round operation debate and decision, for the Senate's action in this matter was critical and we believe, most beneficial to the entire University community—and to the students in particular.

In sum, the Faculty Senate rejected the project leading to a trimester system and urged further study of ways to use our summer school to expand educational opportunities for students who choose to attend. The various arguments against the trimester are summarized in the Senate minutes, but the main concern of the system's opponents is not sufficientiy emphasized. That concern is with the quality of education. While purporting to expand educational opportunities for Massachusetts students, the trimester system would in all probability seriously dilute the quality of those opportunities and endanger our quest for excellence. No first-rate American college or university has adopted that system, for many good reasons. To adopt it here would be to put a confused concept of "efficiency" above the ideal of providing education of equal excellence to public university students.

Finally, let no one accuse the faculty of mere negativism in opposing trimester. On the contrary, we want very much to provide education of high quality to larger and larger numbers of qualified young people. We support the improvement of the summer session, the continued growth of the University in Amherst, and the development of fine state and community colleges elsewhere. Most of the same men who opposed trimester are, on the other hand, enthusiastic about the spirit of the plan for establishing residential colleges at the University—surely a more "radical" departure. The reason is simple. The residential college plan began with a concern for the central purposes and spirit of a university, for the students' own educational experiences, for the quality of their opportunities. So it is with proposals to re-study our present curriculum, our required courses, our faculty-student ratio, improvements in the dormitories and library.

Being for or against innovation as such is meaningless. Whatever begins with genuine concern for the intellectual and cultural development of students will have our support. Whatever begins with a concern for "efficiency," for administrative or faculty "convenience," or for our "public image" will continue to get, and deserve, our critical examination and probable rejection.

"A Group of Faculty Members"

ED. NOTE The Collegian welcomes letters from Faculty members, and, in this case, agrees with the authors to a certain extent. The original account of the Faculty Senate meeting which appeared in the Collegian was in some ways erroneous. However, we would like to remind the authors that because the Faculty Senate has continually refused to allow the Collegian to report its meetings first-hand, this paper must rely on various sources, some not as reliable as others, for information concerning Faculty Senate meetings.

We suggest that in the near future direct steps be taken jointly by the Faculty Senate and the Collegian which will insure the accurate and informative news coverage that the campus community demands.

ALBERT P. MADEIRA

Albert Madeira has passed away. To those that knew him, his untimely death was truly a loss.

Much can be said about this man who spent so much time concerning himself with the welfare of his students both in and out of the classroom.

His active participation in numerous campus extracurricular organizations, including being advisor to the Index and the Collegian, coupled with his excellent teaching ability as a professor earned for him a respect and devotion rarely equalled.

Let it suffice to say, that in life we all honored, respected, and loved Mr. Madeira, and in death we shall forever remember him.

Critique Offers Apology

Before the fruits of the labors of the first issue of the Critique are brought into the critical view of the faculty and student body on May 4, we the permanent staff wish to offer the following thanks and apologies:

To the student body:

We not only wish to thank those students who so unselfishly gave of their time to administer the questionnaires but also look forward to having you work with us again in the hope of making the next issue as much of a success as we're sure the forthcoming one will be. You can assure us of your future assistance by registering any time next week in the Barnstable Room of the S.U. All future meetings will be announced in the Collegian.

To the faculty:

We wish to both thank and apologize to you. Thank you for generously giving of your precious class time which enabled us to properly administer our critical questionnaire. We apologize wholeheartedly to those of you whose classes were not covered by our agents. This was indeed unfortunate, but due to the pressing of time and the added complication of final examination preparations complete course coverage was impossible. We further appreciate your cooperation in spite of the short notice given you. This semester you will be contacted well in advance, for your convenience.

Critique will appear on sale May 4 just prior to counselling day. Thus, the Critique will aid students in choosing courses for the fall semester.

Advance subscriptions to this first and limited edition of the Critique can now be obtained at the APO & GSS Book Exchange in the S.U.

Thank you sincerely,

Faculty Pay Raise; Salaries Equal To National Average

National ratings indicate that the UMass is now in a competitive position with other universities in regard to professional salaries as a result of passage of the pay raise bill last fall.

On February 1, the average salary for UMass faculty members will be $9496, an increase of $1196 in the average over the November, 1962 average of $8300.

The pay raise for University faculty members came in two parts. All state employees who had worked during fiscal year 1962 received a 10 per cent pay increase in October, retroactive to July 1, 1963 or to September 1, 1963, depending upon terms of service. The state Legislature also authorized the Boards of Trustees of the State College and University to grant an additional increase not to exceed 10 per cent of the total professional payroll. This discretionary increase will go into effect on Feb. 1. The University's Board of Trustees voted on pay raises at their Jan. 15 meeting.

Under provisions of state law, all professionals at the University will now be placed on the State General Salary Schedule at the same time they receive their pay increase. This means that the automatic annual step pay increases of the past will be eliminated.

Commenting on the merit increases passed by the Board of Trustees, University Pres. John W. Lederle said, "The action by the Governor and Legislature in passing the pay raise bill helped the University in seevral ways. We were woefully behind the national average in salaries for teachers in the upper academic ranks. By concentrating our major adjustments in the upper ranks, we have become fully competitive with other universities in the country at all levels. This means that we are better able to keep top faculty members and to attract more outstanding teachers in order to provide the best possible education for the young people of Massachusetts.

"We appreciate the Legislature's abiding interest in higher education in Massachusetts, and feel certain that as colleges throughout the country provide more equitable salaries for faculty, the Legislature will help the University maintain its current competitive position."

Based on the action of the Board of Trustees, faculty members are being paid as follows starting Feb. 1, 1964: full professors, on a year-round basis, from a minimum of $13,086 to a maximum of $16,822; associate professors on a year-round basis from a minimum of $10,826 to a maximum of $13,192; assistant professors on a year-round basis from a minimum of $8,567 to a maximum of $11,484; instructors on a year-round basis from a minimum of $6,679 to a maximum of $9,425.

For those teaching on a 10-month basis the salaries being paid are as follows: full professors from a minimum og $11,773 to a maximum of $16,624; associate professors from a minimum of $9,740 to a maximum of $12,-719; assistant professors from a minimum of $7,680 to a maximum of $10,169; instructors from a minimum of $5,592 to a maximum of $8,796.

Commissioner, however, did not seem to understand the meaning of the October 1 deadline.

According to another source, the contract lay on a desk in the Commission office for over a month without being signed.

At one point Horace M. Chase, Director of Bureau of Building Construction, stated that, "There was never a contract" in the Commission office. Mr. Chase later changed his earlier statement when the Collegian presented evidence which contradicted him.

Despite all the footdragging in the State House, Mr. Yamaski extended his deadline for two weeks. The Commissioner, Mr. Waldron, also broke that deadline but he eventually signed the contract on October 16. By that time Yamasaki had accepted other work and could not accept the commission for the Fine Arts Building.

When attempts were made by the Collegian to contact. Yamasaki by telephone, he was consistently "in conference" or "not in", and he even refused to answer a special delivery letter sent to him.

Although there can be no definite statement as to why the Commissioner waited for so many weeks before signing the contract, there have been rumors that the Commission in Boston was hostile to any out-of-state architect designing a building for UMass.

It should be noted that until recently all buildings on campus have been designed by Massachusetts natives.

University officials, however, still plan to have a nationally distinguished architect design the Fine Arts Building, and they have recommended the firm of Eero Saarinen and Associates of Hamden, Connecticut.

Compensation ...

"More than that—the student body is being cheated. No reward for the job—no assurance of a job well done."

"This school will have 20,000 students in a few years," Bradley pointed out. "Certain jobs—like that of Collegain editor—are going to be almost full-time.

"What if you have a good editor and he discovers he has to work 15 hours a week to finance his education. He can't do both, and the quality of the student paper will suffer if he has to quit. Conceivably there might not even be a student paper."

For a start, the group hopes to sound out student opinion on the subject, and to present, through a series of editorials in the Collegain, full discussion of the proposal.

"I'm a senior," O'Hearn said, "I won't get anything out of this, so I feel free to push my point. After four years at UMass, the direction of our errors in student activities is becoming clear. It we want top-notch service, in the form of outstanding publications and communications, we just have to do something firm about getting them."

"Right now, we're just sending out feelers," Bradley said. "When we find out how student and administrative opinion sways on the subject, we'll decide what the next step should be."

SPORTS STAFF MEETING

There will be an imperative meeting of the Collegian Sports Staff Sunday at 4:45 P.M. in the Collegian Office of the Student Union. Attendance is mandatory for those members of the staff who are to continue writing this semester.

dinner at the Hotel Astor.

Speakers and guests of honor at the Award Dinner included Stephen Spender, Joseph Auslander, and Edsel Ford. Judith Anderson and Maurice Evans presented scenes from Shakespeare.

Prof. Langland, who came to UMass in 1959 from the University of Wyoming, is also the author of "The Green Town", published in 1956 by Scribners in their "Poets of Today" series. This collection was among the final nominees for the National Book Award.

Langland is co-editor, with Paul Engle, of "Poet's Choice," a book including the favorite poem of each of 103 contemporary poets. Published last year by Dial Press, "Poet's Choice" has been adopted for publication by the "Time" Reading Program paperback series.

Langland's poems have appeared in several anthologies, and have been recorded for Folkways Records and for the Archives of the Library of Congress.

Prof. Langland will act as lyricist for the American Telephone and Telegraph vocal and dramatic musical performance at the New York World's Fair.

Last year he represented UMass on ABC television's "Meet the Professor" series.

Langland was born in Spring Grove, Minn. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the State University of Iowa, and spent scholarship and fellowship terms at Bread Loaf, Harvard University, and Columbia University.

He has also taught at the State University -of Iowa and Dana College, and has been guest lecturer at the University of British Columbia and the Poetry Center of San Francisco State College.

Prof. Langland is poetry editor of "The Massachusettts Review".

The team members went to the opera Saturday evening to see Il Travatore at the Metropolitan Opera House.

In three practice sessions before the match, UMass beat Dayton twice but went down to defeat in the final dress rehearsal 235-210.

RD's One-Acters This Weekend

This weekend's production of three one-act plays by the Roister Doister Dramatic Society will be dedicated to the organization's former advisor, Albert P. Madeira, officers have announced.

The plays—Edward Albee's The American Dream, Tennessee Williams' Something Unspoken, and "Pyramus and Thisbe" from Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream—go onstage tonight and tomorrow night, in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15.

Junior Paula Norton and Freshman Jerri Siegle portray Cornelia and Grace in the tense one-acter by Tennessee Williams, "Something Unspoken."

Senior Jane Abbiati, Junior Larry Wilker, and Senior Deena Ferrigno play Grandma, Young Man and Mrs. Barker in highly satirical review of America in the 1960's, "The American Dream" by Edward Albee.

Although the plays were cast before Christmas vacation, work was reserved until after finals. Close to 50 students involved with the production remained over intersession, working at rehearsals, set building, costumes, round the clock since the last day of finals.

The Plays—Varied

The plays were selected because they are outstanding and because they are widely varied in subject and tone.

"It should be especially interesting to see Albee and Williams on the same stage at the same time," an RD spokesman said. "For years, Williams has been considered the playwright of the American theatre, but in the last few years, Albee has been steadily moving up toward the lead position."

Something Unspoken is a highly tense drama in dialogue form between only two women characters; the end, as in many of Williams' works, is frustrating and clearly unended.

The American Dream aims at portraying a typical American family of the 1960's, a mechanical family whose members lack passion or depth.

A baby, or as it is referred to in the play, a "bumble", had been previously adopted by Mommy and Daddy. When it grew up having faults, it was gradually dismembered by them.

52 Years of Active Tradition

This weekend's production will be merely another nitch in an already proud tradition of student theatre by the Roister Doisters. Since it's inception, the Society has presented over 90 productions.

Roister Doisters was formed under that title (although there had been a student drama group on campus for some time previously in 1912) being named after the first English comedy, Ralph Roister Doister, by Nicholas Udall.

From 1920 to 1927, RDs was under the direction of Frank Prentice Rand of the English department. Under him, they turned out such shows as She Stoops to Conquer, in modern dress.

The 40's and 50's saw such plays as I Remember Mama, and Midsummer Night's Dream.

More recent years have seen presentation of Teahouse of the August Moon, Inherit the Wind, and Auntie Mame.

Cigarettes . . .

Dr. Gage stated that there could be "little doubt that smoking danger cannot be dismissed casually," adding that none of the physicians affiliated with the Health Service are cigarette smokers. He pointed out that the difficulty in persuading smokers to break the habit was that the pleasure is immediate, while the consequences are postponed, ending in fatal cancer, or in one of the many chronic lung diseases.

It was these diseases, excluding cancer, which do much of the damage to smokers. Dr. Gage pointed out that these, while in many cases not fatal, disable many persons.

Student Union Director William Scott, a cigar smoker, said that the Union will not cease the sale of cigarettes "until a University policy is set, or action is taken by the board of Governors."

Dean of Students William Field, a former two pack a day smoker, indicated that his office was studying the recommendation. He stressed that student attitude will be important in any decision made, suggesting that the elimination of the vending machines might not be effective in reducing smoking. Field added that he will do everything possible to show students the hazard of cigarette smoking.

All contractors, have been informed of the possibility of elimination of the cigarette machines as well as the intention of the University to conduct an intensive educational campaign against smoking.

Robert O'Connell, representative of the Athletic Council in charge of vending machines, stated that he had not been informed of any change in University policy with regard to cigarettes as yet.

THE NEW CHRISTY MINSTRELS

Christy Minstrels At Carni

The appearance of the New Christy Minstrels on this campus during the Winter Carnival weekend promises to be one of the highlights of the concert season. Recognized across the nation as one of the foremost folksinging groups in the country, they were singled out for special honor when they were called upon to entertain at the White House during the recent state visit of President Antonio Segni of Italy.

Patterned after once famous Christy Minstrels who immortalized the work of Steven Foster during the mid nineteenth century, this group has been in no small part responsible for the revival of folk music in recent years.

Everyone in this group is a soloist in his own right. Many attribute their success to the fact that, although they are a group, they sing as individuals.

Tickets for their performance on sale now in the S.U. ticket window at $1.50 apiece.

Dennis Moffatt sought a job with responsibility

He found it at Western Electric

Dennis Moffatt, B.A., Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, '57, joined Western Electric in 1961 after two years of graduate work at the State University of Iowa and two years with the Army. Most important to Dennis was the fact that WE offered him the chance to move ahead . . . fast. Dennis started at Western Electric's Hawthorne Works in Chicago as a Staff Trainee in Industrial Relations.

After only a year with the Company and the completion of one of WE's training programs for college graduates, Dennis became a Personnel Placement Analyst. Advancing rapidly, Dennis was recently promoted to Section Chief, Employment and Placement, Systems Equipment Engineering.

If you, like Dennis Moffatt, want a career with a company that will recognize your skills and abilities, and have the qualifications we're looking for—let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, as well as for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. Get the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. Work Of Professor Perkins Featured In Ceramics Show

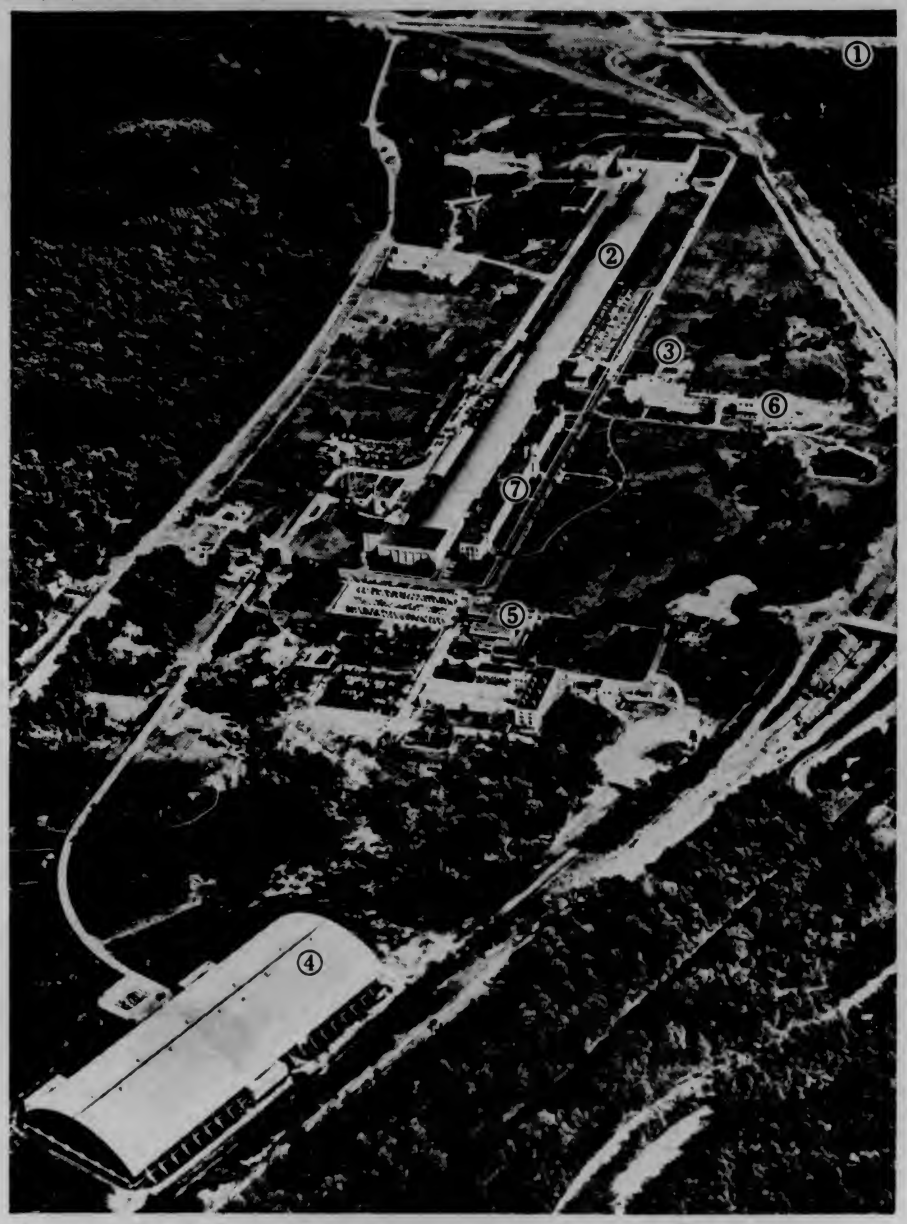
The newly-formed ceramics division of the department of art at UMass will hold its first public exhibition of ceramic forms next week.

The show, consisting of the works of Dr. Lyle Perkins, associate professor of ceramics, is an expression of the changing concepts in ceramic study. It illustrates a study in expressive forms undertaken in a fine arts approach rather than a utilitarian approach.

The pottery and metal forms by Dr. Perkins, former Ceramic Department Head at Rhode Island School of Design, will be on exhibit in the foyer of Bartlett Hall from February 4 through the 21st.

In conjunction with the opening, the student Art Club will present a film at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 4. There will be no admission charge for either the exhibition or the film.

Dr. Perkins has travelled and pursued independent study in Mexico, Brazil, Spain and Italy. Currently, he is represented by two works in the Syracuse Ceramic National, touring the United States, and in the New York showing of "Craftsmen of the Northeast Region."



You are high over the Potomac River just 12 miles from the White House... and viewing 186 acres of extraordinary research activity

Of course, from this height you can't see much detail, which makes the imposing expanse of the two main buildings all the more intriguing. Perhaps you can guess their functions, but it's also what you can't see (and this is summarized in the adjoining column) that makes the David Taylor Model Basin a completely unique fundamental and applied research organization — and a place you should seriously consider for your career as a professional scientist or engineer. As the Navy's advanced facility for research into submarine, surface ship, aircraft and missile design concepts, the Model Basin can offer the young graduate certain specific opportunities hard to find anywhere else.

1. Reach the $10,000 to $12,000 level WITHIN 4 YEARS.
2. Take graduate courses for advance degree with Navy help.
3. Gain diversified RDT & E experience with the best equipment and facilities of their kind.
4. Work on research projects of recognized national importance.
5. Attain recognized professional stature sooner, at which point a number of futures are available.

Watch for the David Taylor Model Basin interviewer when he visits your campus, or contact Mr. S. Di Maria directly for information.

This Laboratory is concerned with speed, stability, control and seakeeping qualities of floating or submerged naval designs, and with fundamental naval hydrodynamics.

③ APPLIED MATHEMATICS LABORATORY facilities include the latest, largest computer systems, and feature the LARC, the IBM 7090, and a 1401. This is BuShips' primary computing facility, working on engineering, research logistics, and numerical methods. Work carried on here involves mathematic simulation of the life cycle of nuclear reactors; automatic calculation of ship lines; and applications of computers to management problems.

④ In this giant new Maneuvering and Seakeeping facility, both fixed and free-running models may be tested under any sea-state condition. You may also work with the High-Speed Phenomena Division at Langley Field, Virginia.

⑤ AERODYNAMICS LABORATORY facilities include several wind tunnels—ranging from subsonic through hypersonic at Mach 10—which are used to determine and improve static stability, control and heat transfer characteristics of helicopters, VTOL's, supersonic aircraft, missiles, etc. Air flow studies also involve bomb design, bridge structures, aircraft turbulence when approaching carriers, and other government and private problems.

⑦ The ACOUSTICS AND VIBRATION LABORATORY was just established to intensify research and development of ships of improved detection capability, and reduced vibrations and underwater sound output. Fundamental and applied research in hydrodynamics, structural acoustics, mechanical vibrations, and signal processing are supplemented by conduct of acoustic and vibration trials, and development of acoustic and vibration instrumentation.

To staff these five operating Laboratories, we are seeking college graduates with BS, MS, or PhD degrees in Aerospace, Electrical, Electronic, Mechanical or Structural Engineering; in Applied Mechanics, Mathematics, Physics, and Naval Architecture.

Pistol Team Splits Meet

The UMass Pistol Team lost to Navy in a three-way match at MIT on Saturday, January 11. The Middies swamped the Redmen 1380 to 1298. MIT placed third with a 1297. The UMass shooters looked less than impressive and were having a great deal of trouble with nervousness. Top gun for the Redmen was junior Dan Sullivan with 276. Sullivan has been high shooter in every match except one so far this season. Following Sullivan's lead was Dave Naylor with 260, Jack Kelly with 258, sophomores George Wietecha with 254 and Eric Mussen with 250.

In spite of shaky performances against Brown and Navy the team has received and accepted a bid to compete in an invitational meet at Kings Point on March 7. Last year UMass rifle and pistol teams placed 19th nation wide in a field of over 400 colleges and universities.

Finley B. Hess, president of the Brockway Glass Co., Brockway, Pa., representing the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, presents UMass Pres. John W. Lederle with a portrait of Nicolas Appert, commemorating the establishment of the University's first endowed Chair, the Nicolas Appert Chair in Food Science and Technology.

First Chair Endowed By Glass Container Manufacturers Inst.

Establishment of a professional chair "to further research and garduate work in the field of food preservation" was announced here by the University and the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, Inc. (GCMI).

The joint announcement was made by President John W. Lederle and Finley B. Hess, chairman of the GCMI special committee that arranged for the Chair.

Major support of the professorship, to be named the Nicolas Appert Chair of Food Science and Technology after the inventor of the technique for preserving perishable foods in glass containers by heat processing, will be provided by GCMI, the trade association of the glass container industry. It will be established within the UMass College of Agriculture's Food Science and Technology Department, the oldest department of its type in the country. The Nicolas Appert Chair is the first endowed chair in the 100-year history of the University.

The Chair, according to the joint announcement, will make it possible for "a highly qualified professor to devote his efforts to increasing the fundamental knowledge of color, appearance, acceptability, nutritional value and microbiology of food products, particularly those foods packaged in glass containers."

Mr. Hess, President of the Brockway Glass Company, said that "the endowed professor will be an authority in the field of food science and technology who can lend his knowledge and experience to research and teaching projects at the University."

He said, "To the best of our knowledge, this will be one of the first endowed professorial chairs in food science and technology in the United States."

Pres. Lederle pointed out that establishment of the professorship marks the 25th anniversary of the formation of a sustaining research fellowship by GCMI in the University's Department of Food Science and Technology.

"Research conducted under this Fellowship, which is probably one of the oldest of its kind in the ocuntry, has resulted in many basic advances in the food processing sciences," he explained. "Furthermore, in this quarter century, some 70 graduate students have been aided financially and assisted in their advanced work as research fellows under the GCMI Fellowship.

"Support of the University by GCMI can well be pointed to as a splendid example of cooperation between industry and an academic institution."

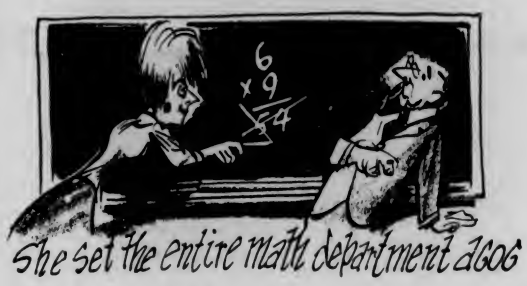
A GUIDE FOR THE GUIDERS

One of the most interesting academic theories advanced in many a long year has recently been advanced by that interesting academic theorist, E. Pluribus Ewbank, Ph. D. who holds the chair of Interesting Academic Theories at the St. Louis College of Footwear and Educational Philosophy. Dr. Ewbank said in the last issue of the learned journal, the Mount Rushmore Guide to Scholastic Advancement and Presidents' Heads, that we might be approaching the whole problem of student guidance from the wrong direction.

Dr. Ewbank, a highly respected pedagogue and a lifelong smoker of Marlboro Cigarettes, (I mention Marlboros for two reasons: first, to indicate the scope of Dr. Ewbank's brainpower. Out of all the dozens of brands of cigarettes available today, Dr. Ewbank has had the wit and taste to pick the one with the most flavorful flavor, the most filtracious filter, the most soft soft pack, the most flip top Flip Top box: I refer, of course, to Marlboro. The second reason I mention Marlboro is that I get paid to mention Marlboro in this column, and the laborer, you will agree, is worthy of his hire.)

But I digress. To return to Dr. Ewbank's interesting theory, he contends that most college guidance counselors are inclined to take the easy way out. That is to say, if a student's aptitude tests show a talent for, let us say, math, the student is encouraged to major in math. If his tests show an aptitude for poetry, he is directed toward poetry. And so forth.



She set the entire math department agog

All wrong, says Dr. Ewbank. The great breakthroughs, the startling innovations in, let us say, math, are likely to be made not by mathematicians—whose thinking, after all, is constrained by rigid rules and principles—but by mavericks, by nonconformists, by intuitors who refuse to fall into the rut of reason. For instance, set a poet to studying math. He will bring a fresh, unfettered mind to the subject, just as a mathematician will bring the same kind of approach to poetry.

By way of evidence, Dr. Ewbank cites the case of Cipher Binary, a youth who entered college with brilliant test scores in physics, chemistry, and the calculus. But Dr. Ewbank forced young Cipher to major in poetry.

The results were astonishing. Here, for example, is young Cipher's latest poem, a love lyric of such originality that Lord Byron springs to mind. I quote:

He was her logarithm,
She was his cosine.
Taking their dog with 'em.
They hastened to go sign
Marriage vows which they joyfully shared,
And wooed and wed and pi r squared.

Similarly, when a freshman girl named Elizabeth Barrett Sigafoos came to Dr. Ewbank to seek guidance, he ignored the fact that she had won the Pulitzer prize for poetry when she was eight, and insisted she major in mathematics. Again the results were startling. Miss Sigafoos has set the entire math department agog by flatly refusing to believe that six times nine is 54. If Miss Sigafoos is correct, we will have to re-think the entire science of numbers and—who knows?—possibly open up vistas as yet undreamed of in mathematics.

Dr. Ewbank's unorthodox approach to student guidance has so impressed his employers that he was fired last week. He is currently selling beaded moccasins at Mount Rushmore.

Hoopsters Rebound ...

Marty Conlin added 24. Scrappy guard Pete Bernard was a standout again as he hit for 26. O'Rourke hit 20 and Twitchell added 11 before being injured.

LAST NIGHT THE REDMEN finally came home and rewarded a large turnout with a well deserved victory over Colby. The home team really had on its running shoes as they downed the deliberate Mules. The Redmen led through much of the early going, but the visitors rallied to take a brief lead at the intermission. Massachusetts outdid the Mules in the first half in everything but foul shooting as the Mules hit on 13 of 15.

In the second half, Chuck O'Rourke and Pete Bernard led the way as the Redmen opened leads that reached as high as 12 points. Charlie Kingston was the big gun in the early going for the home team. O'Rourke, Edwards and Gullicksen all took the walk after fouling out. Bernard scored 22 while Edwards added 14. Kingston and O'Rourke added 12 each while Painter scored 10. Ken Federman led the losers with 25 points. The Redmen no longer have the services of Tom Ryan or Steve Bonds who have left school. The loss of bench strength could be vital later on but it appears that Kingston, Gullicksen and Benjamin will fill the gap.

Hat Trick For Lee

Redmen-UVM Tie

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts sparked by Bob Lee's hat trick came back in the third period to tie the University of Vermont 5 to 5 on January 10. The fast-skating Catamounts jumped off to an early 2-0 lead in the first period with goals by Ozzie Swett and Marshall Stevenson. The Redmen's Dick Callahan scored his first goal of the season with an assist to Allan Johnson to make the score 2-1. But with 2:35 to go in the period Vermont's George Cook scored giving his team a 3-1 edge at the end of the period.

In the second period the Catamounts increased their lead to 4-1 when Cub Barrett scored. The Redmen fought back with Ken Palm scoring assisted by Charlie Glew and Pete Hurd. Bob Lee then scored his first goal on a pass from Dick Forster. The score was then 4-3 but Vermont's Ozzie Swett came back with his second goal to make the score 5-3 at the end of the period.

In the third period Bobby Lee scored two goals in 33 seconds to even the score at 5-5. The first goal was set up by Bob Edmonston and the second by Dick Forster and Dick Phillips. There was a ten-minute sudden-death overtime but neither team was able to score.

Bernard Sinks 22 Points

Redmen Down Colby, 82-77

Hoopsters Rebound After Recent Away Defeats

by JOHN GOODRICH

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS has run its season's record to 9 wins and 5 losses. The Redmen still playing away from home quite a bit split a two game series in Vermont, downing St. Michael's 92-90 in triple overtime after dropping a Yankee Conference game to the Catamounts 98-85. The next encounter saw the Redmen bowing Wednesday night to the Gaels of Iona 80-71 at Madison Square Garden. Last evening the Redmen marked their fourth home game of the year with an 82-77 triumph over the Colby Mules.

LEAGUE LEADING VERMONT trailed the Redmen through most of the first half as Rodger Twitchell held the hot hands. In the second half, the Catamounts managed to open up the game as the visitors were plagued by foul troubles. Twitchell, Charlie O'Rourke, and Tim Edwards all made early exits. It was the steady popping of Pete Bernard that kept the Redmen in the game. The visitors matched the home club from the floor, but the Cats made 22 foul shots as compared to 9 for UMass.

BERNARD LED THE WAY for the Redmen with 25 points and Rodger Twitchell added 19. Jim Painten, Edwards, and O'Rourke all scored 12. Dave Strasberg had 27 with 19 in the second half to lead the winners.

THE NEXT NIGHT Mass downed the Purple Knights after being forced to play three overtimes. This time O'Rourke, Edwards, and Dick Benjamin fouled out, as the visitors continued to be bothered by fouls. The Knights played the game very close in the first two overtimes by keeping the ball for almost the entire period. In the third session Massachusetts came on strong after being down 90-85 with little time left. O'Rourke led the scorers for the winners with 24 points, Bernard added 18, and Painten scored 15. Twitchell, who scored the winning hoop, added 18. Richie Tarrant scored 39 for the losers in the wild game.

IN THE IONA GAME, the Redmen were up against one of the better teams in the New York area, and it was only a tough night shooting that cost the visitors the game. The game also cost the Redmen the services of Rodger Twitchell who sustained a fractured nose.

The Massachusetts club rallied twice in the second half to close nine point gaps, but the Gaels were not to be denied. Warren Issac hit for 19 points in a hot shooting first half as the home club lead 41-32 at halftime.

Mass led 66-63, but was unable to connect for 5 minutes as the Gaels racked off 12 points. Mass then hit 6 in a row but the Iona quintet iced it with foul shots. Issac ended with 35 points and

Yan-Con Basketball Resumes

KINGSTON — The red hot Yankee Conference basketball race will swing into high gear this weekend after the usual break for mid-year examinations and the top contest will find the Catamounts from Vermont entertaining Connecticut Huskies at Burlington on Saturday night.

THE CATAMOUNTS have registered three straight victories and currently are on top in the standings but Connecticut, the perennial champions, are back in the thick of things as a result of their 43-41 victory over Rhode Island two weeks ago. Vermont has scored two victories over Maine and a resounding triumph over Massachusetts while Connecticut, in addition to the victory over Rhode Island, has defeated New Hampshire and Maine while losing a one-pointer to Massachusetts.

IN OTHER ACTION, the University of Massachusetts Redmen, will meet the University of Maine Black Bears at Amherst on Saturday.

UMass Hitchhikers Nabbed By Police

Thumbers And Walkers Have ID's Confiscated

by TERRY STOCK

At least fifteen I.D. cards were confiscated by Amherst Police from student hitch-hikers and from two University men who were merely crossing the street in the center of Amherst late Saturday night.

Mike Smilnak ('65) said that he and Philip Johnston ('67) were crossing the street when they saw the police cruiser pull up to a large group of hitch-hikers and begin collecting I.D.'s.

"WE STOPPED in the middle of the road to watch for a second and then continued to the other side of the street," he explained.

Smilnak said that the policeman yelled to him, "Hey you, come here!" He and Johnston walked over to the cruiser and produced their I.D. cards upon request. When the police began to leave with the two I.D.'s, Smilnak asked to have his returned to him and was told to "Go see the Dean, Sonny."

Upon calling Dean Hopkins, a Collegian reporter said that the Amherst Police had not yet been contacted. He called them himself and later informed the two boys that they could pick up their I.D. cards at the Amherst Police Station.

AMHERST POLICE WERE INTERVIEWED by Collegian reporters early on Sunday and questioned about the University Handbook ruling which states that "under no circumstances is the student required to surrender his card to anyone. The card belongs to the student and is surrendered only upon withdraawal from the University."

The police said that they had received a letter from Dean Hopkins which said the same thing but which had the additional stipulation that I.D. cards could be confiscated "under certain circumstances".

WHEN ASKED WHAT EXACTLY WAS MEANT BY "certain circumstances", they remarked, "Why anytime, as far as we're concerned."

The officers added that they are only enforcing the "No Hitch-hiking Laws" when they feel students are causing a dangerous traffic hazard or displaying disorderly conduct.

"Several hikers have been arrested for yelling obscenities at drivers who refused to stop and for being drunk and disorderly," one policeman remarked.

RANDOM SAMPLING

Students Favor Compensation

by ANN MILLER

A brief, random survey of students yesterday afternoon in the Student Union revealed a 4-2 vote favoring financial compensation for certain students in campus service organizations.

A "man-on-the-street" poll was taken by this Collegian reporter on the issue of compensation, in light of the rising controversy over the subject.

The results were as follows:

Bob Coffin '64, Chadbourne: "The students working in such organizations as Index, Collegian, WMUA put in a lot of hours weekly and deserve financial reward. But there should be a ratio set up between the cash awarded and the hours put in.

"In these service organizations, you're doing volunteer work — but you're risking your average. You deserve reward, and it should come from the Student Senate—the administration has enough trouble paying the faculty what they deserve.

"Compensation would not necessarily help raise the standards of the organizations, but should be intended simply to help the students."

Joe Jones '64, TEP: "Cash compensation would provide an incentive to induce more capable students to participate in community service organizations. If these services directly benefit the students, I don't see why the Student Senate shouldn't pay such compensation. If they are for the benefit of the whole University community, leaders should be compensated from the general University funds."

Larry Dowling '64: "I'm fully opposed to such rewards. Why, the University can't afford to keep good students here through scholarship—let alone money for extra-curriculars. As for the Student Senate providing funds—I have enough trouble paying my own bills, let alone helping to pay somebody else's.

"There is enough incentive to participate in these organizations without cash remuneration. It wouldn't make any difference in the quality.

"If an organiaztion, especially the Collegian or Index, is closely connected with a major department and has supervision given by teachers in the department, there should be some form of academic credit awarded."

Ernest Dinsmore '65, Butterfield: "Compensation—fine, and it should come from the student tax fund. It would definately be an incentive to get more people to compete; though I don't think it would make an appreciable difference in the quality of the

UMass Bowl Team Sends Rollins College Reeling

The UMass varsity scholars extended their win streak to two as they rolled to a 310-150 triumph over Rollins College last night on the General Electric College Bowl.

The victory was a team effort, in which every member of the squad shone as they answered questions ranging in topics from chemistry to literature.

Mike Berrini opened the UMass drive with his lightning answer to a question which entailed the mixing of two liquids and the adding of two powders. The answer: salad dressing! Berrini went on in these fast answers, showing a complete recovery from his nervousness of last week.

David Mathieson jumped the gun to successfully answer several questions before they had been completely asked. One of these included a question about the N.B.C. Philharmonic Orchestra which David answered much in the same manner of his lightening fast "Teddy Roosevelt" of last week.

Susan Tracy and Captain Bill Landis again did their share to help win the exciting battle of wits.

The I.D. And The Hitchhiker, Where Do We Stand?

by JOHN B. CHILDS

It was night, Mike Smilnak crossed the street at the center of Amherst. In so doing he became involved in a maze of confusion surrounding his status as a student.

On that night Mike Smilnak was stopped by the police, accused of the crime of hitch-hiking, and deprived of his I.D. card. Did Mike Smilnak have to surrender his I.D.? Did the police have the right to take the I.D. from him?

The University handbook states, "under no circumstances is the student required to surrender his card to anyone. The card belongs to the student and is surrendered only upon withdrawal from the University."

Nabbed—One Alleged Hitch-hiker

Walking across a street is hardly withdrawal from the University, yet Mike's card was taken.

Are we to assume then that the University ruling does not apply to the town? Or are we to assume that the town is ignoring the University ruling?

No official statement has appeared before the student body regarding I.D. cards, University ruling, and town action. In such a situation the next time a Mike Smilnak walks across a street in town he is walking between University and town thinking without being able to tell where the two merge if indeed they do at all.

Where do we stand?

The Shape Of Umite Is Promising

That provocative blue shape advertised as Umite (pronounced U-mit-ee) whose meaning was subject to much speculation, proved not to be a seminar in embryology, but a new discussion group on campus. The University of Massachusetts Informal Trends in Education (the origin of the initials) was a concern instituted last semester as a discussion group for Freshmen. The groups made several field trips to provide topics for discussion, but after a semester, it was decided that an extension of membership to include all undergraduates, graduates, and faculty on campus would provide wider interests and activities.

Students on work scholarship with an interest in such groups have been trained by the UMass Counseling Service as activity leaders. Each group will meet at its own convenient time and place, allowed to pursue any direction or goal for any length of time. The program will not be merely an "honors colloquium for low cum students"; it will not be faculty led. Members meet on even ground to "mingle socially and intellectually," to "explore the 'way out' ".

Application for placement in one of the groups can be made by leaving your name and hour-schedule at the Guidance Office in Machmer.

The Collegian welcomes this new attempt to stimulate the campus intellectual scene, and hopes to give future feature coverage to its events.

Registration Merry - Go - Round

by OLEH PAWLUK

Registration Day at UMass can prove as nerve-wrecking as a game of Russian roulette. The numerous perplexities that befall the student can trigger off an acute case of frustration.

To begin with, IBM, the device so ardently relied upon by the administration, has the uncanny capacity of scheduling a student for two different courses for the same hour. Also, unless a student registers early in the morning, he finds little or no opportunity to change subjects or sections, for enrollment in courses is quickly filled up and no openings remain.

Moreover, the various departmental sections are so poorly designated in the S.U. Ballroom, that after waiting an hour to get a course changed, a student discovers to his dismay that he has been standing in the wrong line and must repeat the entire rigamarole.

Finally, there is no equilibrium between the number of faculty present and the number of students seeking help. While some departments have a large staff to process course changes for a small number of students, larger departments often have only a single professor to aid a multitude of students.

It seems like a reasonable request for the administration to take definite measures to facilitate registration. Simple innovations could bring about such a transformation.

First of all, instead of being confined to a nine hour period, registration could be extended to encompass at least two days, allowing students ample time to register. Another improvement can be realized by increasing the enrollment capacity of courses, so as to insure maximum student admittance. Thirdly, the disorder of registration could be further eliminated if the various departments in the S.U. Ballroom (perhaps an even larger hall than the ballroom could be utilized for course changes) were clearly designated and adequately staffed.

The preceding suggestions are by no means conclusive. Undoubtedly, other procedures could be devised which would further facilitate registration. However, it is due time that the archaic system of registration now in operation be altered to fit the needs of the students so that the words "frustration" and "registration" no longer remain synonymous.

Getcha Program

Program! Getcha program! Can't tell a Senator without a program!

North Texas State University has come up with a new innovation to stir interest in their student senate: a large green badge will be worn by each Senator on the day before each meeting.

We hesitate to ask our senators to place identification on their persons—public figures are in enough jeopardy nowa-days without further enticements for crank pot-shots. But each year the Collegian does ask its student body to look into student government, and attend one of the regular Wednesday night meetings.

Actually, we have no real reason to prod our Senators. They haven't done anything lately for us to get after them. It's just that this is a new semester and a few needles will start our senators out on their toes.

WMUA, INDEX, COLLEGIAN

A Statement Of Principle

We believe ...

That a growing University, of its very nature in size and scope, must assure adequate communications media throughout its community.

That with their present staff arrangements WMUA, the Collegian and Index will be unable to serve the campus community to the extent necessitated.

That to assure the interested response of capable students in campus communications media, monetary compensation to certain members is demanded by the situation.

We believe also ...

That student participation in this area should be motivated by true enthusiasm and a commitment to serve.

That such monetary compensation be moderate, so as not to appeal to those motivated by personal aggrandizement.

That such compensation be determined and awarded in an equitable manner by an impartial, student oriented board.

We believe ...

That the Student Senate should approve enabling legislation to study further the needs, appropriateness and applicability of a system of monetary compensation for the prime communications media of this campus.

Letters to the Editors

To the Editor:

During the course of the wrestling match between the Coast Guard and the University on Friday, January 10, one of the contestants suffered from an injury to his hand. He retired to the edge of the mat to seek assistance, but there was none to be found. It is my opinion that if a student is willing to make the personal sacrifice required to represent the name of the University as a member of an athletic team, the University should satisfy its obligation by providing that student with whatever facilities and personnel may be needed.

Wrestling, like football, is a contact sport. If it is desirable to have a doctor and salaried trainers at a football game, it seems that someone who is similarly qualified should be in attendance at a wrestling meet. As it was, the University provided only a student trainer, whose qualifications were limited to having an automobile operator's license that enabled him to drive the injured party to the infirmary.

Although the injury was not serious this time, it may be in the future.

A REVIEW

An Evening of One Act Plays

by JOE BRADLEY

"An Evening of One Act Plays" proved at least interesting and often exciting, thanks particularly to an excellent presentation of Williams Something Unspoken. The Misses Norton and Siegle contrived to keep this two-character play moving, vital, always exciting. Paula Norton as proud, destructive, autocratic Cornelia Scott, maintained tense, running dialogue, as crisp as the spark of an electric arc. Freshman, Jerri Siegle, as Cornelia's simpering, shy minion, acted convincingly enough, with a voice small enough to catch an audience's sympathy. The smoothest production.

Edward Albee's The American Dream, as curtain raiser, partook of excellent performances served up by Jane Abbiati and Deena Ferrigno. Miss Abbiati as old, crotchety, but perceptive Grandma continually brought down the house in this biting comi-tragedy. Miss Ferrigno was more than adequate as the impersonal club woman, Mrs. Barker.

Performances by Carol Ann Russell, Kenneth Feinberg and Lawrence Wilker suffered somewhat in their line delivery. Albeit, the characters of Mommy, Daddy and the Young Man are unaware, lacking in vitality and meaning, the players tended to rush their lines as though in a quick reading, thus losing some of the effect of lack of awareness for one of disinterest.

Pyramus and Thisbe occasionally rammed ham down the spectators' throats; but it was tangy—perhaps deviled. David Axelrod as Thisbe cannot be ignored. Neither can Tom Kerrigan as Quince (slapstick seems to be Kerrigan's specialty, as in UT's Androcles and the Lion), nor James Wrynn as the many-death-dying Pyramus. Kenneth Feinberg, here, shone as Moon, Roland Laramee cringed as the timid Lion, and John Urban's performance as Wall were so much spice to the witty extraction from Shakespeare's A Mid-Summer's Night Dream.

Puckish Patricia Long and bored Hippolyta (Erica Savereid) handled well the only female parts. All plays were well handled technically, especially Pyramus and Thisbe, which involved complicated lighting patterns, particularly in the woods scene when the transformed Bottom (James Wrynn) is teased in a dream by the voice of Titania. A pink shaft of light suggested the dream quality of the scene.

Directed by Mrs. Elizabeth Forest of Northampton, this otherwise all student production did well. By nature one act plays are dangerous. Selection alone could have been catastrophic. Yet the Roister Doister executive staff perfectly balanced their productions, and moved smoothly from one to the other with a minimum of audience disturbance.

"An Evening of One Act Plays" was also well rewarded with near full houses both Friday and Saturday evenings. can expect another good evening with the Roister Doisters next year.

130,000 Scholarship Aid Worlds Traveling Students

Nearly 19,000 American students attended foreign universities during 1963, while 78,000 foreign students were enrolled in American schools. The rapidly growing trend toward international studies is world-wide, a phase of the "education explosion." More than a quarter of a million students are at schools outside their own countries. They are aided by thousands of free fellowships and scholarships.

More than 130,000 scholarships and fellowship worth hundreds of millions of dollars are available to assist the world's traveling generation of students. The grants covers every branch of learning and come from universities, governments and foundations in 116 countries. Some are for periods of a few weeks, others extend for as much as seven years.

Many of the opportunities for foreign study are offered under broad headings such as literature, languages or science. Others are more specific. For example, an American student of oceanography, can find more than sixty grants in his specialized subject available in countries as diverse as Canada, the Dominican Republic and Monaco. But a student of acting would find only five opportunities specifically earmarked for the theater, all of them from the International Theater Institute.

International and intergovernmental organizations, including the United Nations, provide more than 10,000 scholarships. More than 290 American universities and colleges offer assistance to students from abroad. Most of them also grant fellowships abroad to American students. The United States government and private foundations have thousands of additional fellowships available for Americans as well as for students from overseas.

A comparison with previous aid listings reveals how political and economic changes affect education. Castro's island now offers only three types of scholarships. Last year, Cuba gave nine. Russia now provides foreign undergraduates with a living allowance of 80 rubles a month, reduced from 90 last year.

On the other hand, Russian grants to scholars for advanced training have been increased to 150 rubles monthly from the former maximum of 100 rubles. Scholarship grants to students from Africa, this year as last, include a 300-ruble allowance for warm clothing.

In Japan the number of grants available to Americans has been almost halved from last year's 87 to the current 49 but Japanese students are being offered increased opportunities by their government and universities for study outside their country.

Internationally Known Feiffer Cartoons Added To Collegian

A cartoonist who is best known for his captions . . . a satirist whose strong point is tenderness and pity . . . a humorist whose subjects include such mordant topics as nuclear destruction—all these are various aspects of Jules Feiffer.

In less than four years Feiffer rose from the status of a struggling artist, contributing free drawings to a weekly Greenwich Village newspaper, to that of a cartoonist internationally syndicated by the Hall Syndicate, whose contract includes the provision that not a single word of this material may be changed. He is also the author of two plays and a novel, and several collections of his cartoons have appeared in book form. Feiffer has been called "the most talented social commentator in cartooning in our generation."

The weekly cartoon satire of Jules Feiffer begins in the Collegian Wednesday.

Weekly Feiffer cartoons are distributed to some hundred other American newspapers, also magazines and papers in Paris, Stockholm, Tokyo, South Africa and elsewhere. He also draws some regular and occasional cartoons for magazines.

Feiffer transplanted some of his cartoon characters to the stage in a satirical revue entitled "The Explainers," which opened to critical and public praise at a Chicago nightclub in 1961. That same year a one-act play by Feiffer, "Crawling Arnold," had its premiere at Gian-Carlo Menotti's Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy. It has since been performed on American and Canadian television and in colleges and universities throughout the country. It caused a debate in the Canadian parliament and started a demand for an investigation of the Canadian Broadcast Corporation. Feiffer was, of course, delighted.

Other than that he claims to get little hostile reaction to his work, a fact that leaves him nonplused. Feeling that pictures seduced the harshness of his message, Feiffer dropped them completely to write a novel published in 1963, "Harry, the Rat With Women," It was attracked as much as it was praised and Mr. Feiffer returned happily to his cartoon with the feeling that he was beginning to break through.

Lutheran Club Discusses Play

Rolf Hochhuth's controversial new play, "The Deputy," scheduled to open on Broadway this month, will be discussed at a meeting of Lutheran Student Federation, Sunday, February 9, 6:45 p.m. Two Amherst College professors, Donald White and John Ratte will join Lutheran pastor Richard Koenig in discussing the play which deals with Pope Pius XII and the Nazi extermination of the Jews during World War II.

The meeting will be held in IOOF Hall, 17 Kellogg Ave., Amherst, at 6:45 p.m. All are welcome. "The Deputy" has met with violent reaction wherever it has played. Since its opening in West Berlin in the summer of 1963. Hochhuth has been subjected to severe criticism for his portrayal of Pius XII. The play has had its defenders as well.

The Lutheran Student Federation hopes to present as balanced an appraisal of the work as possible by means of the trialog involving two Roman Catholics and a Protestant pastor. Professor White is professor of German at Amherst College and Professor Ratte teaches history. After a resume of the play has been given, participants will make their comments. There will be opportunity for discussion and questions following the presentations.

Collegiate Press Reporter Cites S. African Atrocities

EXCLUSIVE TO CPS — Approximately one out of every 12 adult South Africans is in jail today. It is possible, under existing law in the Republic of South Africa, to arrest a citizen with no charge whatsoever and hold that person incommunicado for 90 days, at the end of which he may be ordered held for another 90 day period, ad infinitum. The only person such a prisoner may see during the 90 day period is the federal minister of justice, who most likely signed the order to put him away.

In the Republic of South Africa it is a crime punishable by death to paint a poster or make a speech advocating any change whatsoever in the social or economic system of the country. The law does not spell out what sort of change is to be prohibited from public utterance—this is left to the government to define.

The South African government may declare a state of national emergency at any time, throwing the country into martial law and giving the government power to rule by decree. Certain areas of the country, such as the Transkei, have in fact been ruled in such a manner for extended periods of time.

Any person in South Africa not of the white race must carry on his person at all times a complicated set of identification papers and a pass to be in the area where he works and perhaps lives. This pass must bear the signatures and up-to-date authorizations of his tribal authorities, his employer, the local and national police agencies, and numerous other officials. Any African may be arrested and jailed for up to 48 hours for simple failure to produce the pass on request—and who is to say whether or not he had a pass on him except the police who arrested him?

In the Republic of South Africa, the Communist party has been banned since 1950. The African National Congress, the Pan-African Congress, and all other vehicles of native expressions have been banned in the last decade. The opposition Liberal party, though not banned, is constantly harrassed, and the editor of its fortnightly paper has been arrested. The only sizable multi-racial organization in the country, the National Union of South African Students (NUSAS) was recently raided by the government police and it appears that the government plans to ban NUSAS as well.

Some 4,000 books have been banned by the Republic government as unfit for the eyes of South Africans, white or black. Among the authors on the banned list are: Peter Abrahams, Richard Wright, James Baldwin, Nicholas Monserrat, D. H. Lawrence, Emile Zola, Francoise Sagan, Ernest Hemingway, Tennessee Williams, Robert Graves and John Steinbeck.

"I'm against compensation; the experience gained from work in such organizations as the Collegian, the Student Senate, WMUA, is enough of a reward.

"Besides, offer cash for the job, and you'll get people trying out for it that are interested only in the money involved and not in the work itself."

Kathryn Timpson '65, Mary Lyons: "In a small school, compensation isn't needed; but here, where these student jobs will be getting more and more demanding of time and effort, it is needed.

"Compensation would not necessarily act as an incentive, since people who can do the job would probably be interested anyway, but it's unfair to ask a student leader to put in so much time on an activity so needed without reward of some kind.

"Such reward should come from the students rather than the administration, since these people are, after all, working for the students' benefit."

Colorado Coeds Say Rules "Help Them"

Boulder, Colo. — (I.P.) — University women evidently believe that "rules are just helping them," says Polly Gerhardt, president of Associated Women Students on the University of Colorado campus.

Miss Gerhardt, in an interview, said that coeds generally accept hours regulations, not because they are less responsible than men, but because the rules are helpful in arranging their daily routines. "Maybe women will always want this," she said.

"I suppose there are some women who feel their rights are being impinged upon: I don't know," she said. "They have representation on AWS. Why don't they use it it they aren't satisfied?" She said women should feel free to bring up anything they want to discuss at AWS meetings.

Do women resent the difference between their rules and men students' rules? "I think there is a basic difference between the way men and women look at things," she said. "It's not a cut and dried thing."

According to Miss Gerhardt, AWS House and Senate can change women's rules on hours, but their decisions are naturally subject to review by University administrators and the Board of Regents. This year a constitutional provision that only the Senate can make rules was suspended to give both houses a par in decision-making.

The more freedom University women want, the more responsibility they will have to take, she said. "And they are taking it slowly but surely." Women's hours regulations have become more lenient here because women have asked for changes. Miss Gerhardt cited the change several years ago from an 11 p.m. to a midnight curfew on Sunday night, and senior key privileges, first granted in 1955.

Yale Frosh As Test Case

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CPS) —A Yale University freshman has volunteered to be a defendant in a civil rights test case in Clarksdale, Miss., next spring.

Richard L. Van Wagenen of Washington, D. C., was arrested last October in Clarksdale for "littering." Van Wagenen was passing out leaflets for the mock election of Aaron Henry at the time of the arrest.

Also arrested at the same time were four local Negro workers. They were convicted, but Van Wagenen had to return to New Haven before his trial came up.

Van Wagenen said his defense was being provided by the legal fund of the NAACP. The NAACP has agreed to use Van Wagenen's trial as a test case because of certain irregularities regarding his arrest, the Yale freshman said.

His expenses down to Mississippi are being provided by the Democratic Central Committee of the District of Columbia.

Van Wagenen said that his case will be appealed if he is found guilty There is no jail sentence for littering.

Independent Facilities To Equal Fraternities

Fargo, N. D. (I.P.) — President H. R. Albrecht sees an abrupt change in the area of student affairs on the North Dakota State University campus. He emphasized that every effort will be made to give independent students facilities similar to those now available to fraternities; housing and feeding in one unit, recreation rooms, lounges and a chance to compete together in athletic and other contests.

As it now stands, President Albrecht said, Greek members have the advantage of belonging to a group which does the organizing for them; however, he said he did not feel that this same function was beyond the independent student organization.

In the future, Greek affiliations will decrease from the present 26-27%, President Albrecht said, although their numbers will likely increase. By 1970, when the enrollment is expected to reach 7,200 on this campus, President Albrecht said he thought only 12-13% of the students would be affiliated with a Greek organization. The independent student organization, in his opinion, can be a guidance for direction in the future, something for the independent to "cling to."

President Albrecht agreed with what he called a widespread opinion, at least among independents, that the non-affiliated students could control most, if not all the campus elected positions if they would get out and vote. However, a group or an individual gaining office by either election or selection has an obligation to apply its efforts to the program of the University, Dr. Albrecht concluded.

Ideas About Dropouts Revised

Urbana, Ill. (I.P.) — Common ideas about the rate of college dropouts are drastically reversed in a study by the University of Illinois Office of Instructional Research. It indicates that the 10-year rate of graduation for men in state-supported institutions may be more than twice the four-rate, and that 70 per cent earn degrees within 10 years of starting in college.

This is a contradiction to statements of certain academic figures who have said that 40 to 60 per cent of students who begin college never achieve degrees. The study involved 1,332 men who came to Illinois as freshmen in 1952. Through persistent follow-up, a 94 per cent return was achieved in data obtained. The project found that of every 10 freshmen who came to the Illinois campus in 1952, seven had college degrees 10 years later:

Five earned their degrees within four years, four of these from Illinois and one from some other institution.

Five had dropped out during the four years, but three came back to college, one to earn a degree from Illinois and one to earn one at some other institution.

And of those who did not have degrees, some were still, 10 years after starting as freshmen, working toward them.

"The prolonged academic career of the dropout who came back to graduate stresses importance placed upon attainment of a college degree," the report states. "The prolonged careers cannot be explained entirely by lost time due to academic failure.

Nittany Lions Prevail

Penn State Downs Gymnasts

by BEN BARCLAY

A powerful, experienced Penn State gymnastics team defeated the Redmen gymnasts on Sat. night, Jan. 11. The valiant attempt by the Redmen against one of the top squads in the country was witnessed by approximately 1500 people.

THE FIRST OF THE SIX EVENTS was the Floor Exercise. This is the only event that has a set time limit, 50-60 seconds. Movements of strength, balance, tumbling, and flexibility must all be demonstrated. In this first event the Nittany Lions displayed their talent as they swept the top three places. Ed Isabelle of Springfield, Mass., took first place while teammates Pete Saponaro and Jim Culhane took second and third places. However, there was one bright spot for the UMass squad as Bill Heinold, 3rd man in the event for the UMass, scored a 6.15, his best yet, and outscored Ed Frado and Stan Brallier, the number one and two men, to capture fourth place. The scoreboard at the end of this event was Penn State—25.30, UMass—16.60.

ON THE SIDE HORSE, the second event, the visiting gymnasts again showed their skill as they again swept the top three positions. Al Porter, Ray Cherry, and Mike Jacobson took the respective honors. Dave Williams, who was a little under par in the event took fourth place. Dan St. John and Jim Dusenbury both had good showings, but the Penn State depth of talent was just too much for the young inexperienced UMass squad.

THE HIGH BAR, the third event, followed the same pattern as the first two events. Mike Jacobson, Jim Culhane, and Ed Isabelle took the top three place for Penn. State. Dick Cardiff, the number one man for the Redmen fell off as he dismounted thus allowing Stan Brallier to capture fourth place.

AT THIS POINT the Redmen squad, knowing that they could not win the meet, displayed a zealous effort which gave the enthusiastic crowd something to cheer about. Al Cohen captured 2nd place for UMass by doing a swan from the neck vault on the long horse. Al was the first high scorer for the Redmen. Pete Saparono, F. P. Sforza, and Tom Burnett took 1st, 3rd and 4th places respectively for Penn State. The score was now 104.45-80.45 in favor of Penn. State.

THE PARALLEL BARS were the bright spot in the meet for UMass fans as Capt. Dave Williams gave an excellent performance to beat out Jim Culbane of Penn State for first place. This was the Redmen's only first place in the meet. Mike Jacobson and Ed Isabelle followed Culhane for the 3rd and 4th positions for the Nittany Lions. The score was now Nittany Lions 130.2, UMass 103.3.

The determined Redman squad also left its mark in the last event, the Rings. John Martin took an easy first place for Penn State as he thrilled everyone with his great performance. Second place honors went to sophomore Dan St. John for UMass. Dave Williams and Bill Jenkins tied for third place. The final score of the meet was Penn State 154.80 and University of Mass. 126.85.

This was the second loss for the Redmen gymnasts and they now hold a 1-2 record. Although the Redmen lost it was their best performance thus far and they still are improving. The team is practicing for its next meet against Temple.

Model of new football stadium to be completed by Sept. 1965.

Plans Completed For New Stadium

The UMass Building Authority exhibited the first model of the University's strikingly designed football stadium Thursday.

The Stadium was designed by Gordon Bunschaft, designing architect for the firm of architects Skidmore, Owen and Merrill. Engineer for the Stadium is Paul Weidlinger Structural Engineers.

The stadium, scheduled for completion by Sept. 1, 1965, is being built by the Building Authority, a special agency established by the Legislature to provide physical facilities at the University, to be paid for on a self-liquidating basis. Facilities that have been constructed by the Authority at no cost to the taxpayer include dormitories and dining commons.

Authority Chairman George Pumphret said that the stadium will have a seating capacity of about 20,000. The design is such, that the stadium can be expanded at a later date.

The design of the stadium is rather unusual, and has not been seen in this part of the country before. Unity is achieved by placing related facilities such as dressing rooms, showers, athletic offices, equipment, storage and first aid rooms in the end zone sections.

According to Dr. Victoria Schuck, Chairman of the Authority's committee on architecture, work on the stadium will begin this summer. She said that the new facility will be constructed of re-enforced and prestressed concrete. The stadium will be located on the southwest corner of campus near the Hadley line by Route 116.

Kingston, Edwards again and the ever present Mr. Bernard who held the game for the Redmen.

After the Redmen broke from a six point lead at 70-64 to a safer 81-70 margin, it was simply a matter of seeing how many Bernard could add to his total. He also got ample support from O'Rourke who finished with 16 points to go along with his fine rebounding effort, Edwards had 12 points and 14 rebounds, and Charlie Kingston with 10 points and several sparkling assists. Rating special mention is the performance of Paul Gullicksen. Paul has the difficult job of filling in for the injured Rodger Twitchell and in this his second game he performed admirable. He scored 11 points and pulled down 14 rebounds in his term of action.

The visitors were led by Gillette with 25 points, with Capt. Dave Svendsen and MacKinnon adding 14 each. Only Garland Strang was able to reach double figures in the rebounding depth as he pulled down 13.

Massachusetts hit on 39 of 91 from the floor for a solid 43% average. Maine hit on 32 of 77 for 41%. Once again the opponent managed to outdo the Redmen from the foul line as Maine hit on 14 of 21 to 9 of 18 for Mass.

MASSACHUSETTS NOW SPORTING A 10-5 RECORD are off until next Friday night when they will attempt to upset one of the conference leaders, the Rhode Island Rams. A win in this game would really improve the standing of the Redmen as they try to get back in the top spot in the league. Another loss could be a real blow to the hopes of the home forces. It is hoped that Twitchell will be available for at least limited action.

K. of C. Opens Season

by GENE COLBURN

THE VARSITY TRACK TEAM opened its season at the Knights of Columbus meet Jan. 11, and the results left Coach Footrick both happy and sad.

ON THE PLUS SIDE of the ledger was the fine performance in the field events by sophomore John Mederios, who took a second in the open high jump (6'2"), and a fourth in the broad jump (22'9"). Jim Wrynn, competing in the New England Collegiate Mile, ran a fine race as he took third behind Dave Farley of Brown and Walter Hewett of Harvard. Jim's time of 4:21 was very good considering he had various illnesses during the previous week.

THE VARSITY MILE RELAY team took fifth in its heat as the boys showed the effects of lack of conditioning. This was due to the long Christmas vacation as many of the runners have no place to work out at home. This bothered Coach Footrick since between finals and the semester break many of the boys also were not able to work out. The team will have only 3 weeks to get in shape for its first dual meet of the season against UConn on Feb. 22.

bare minimum of defensemen. Glew willingly took on the assignment although it meant a decrease in his goal-scoring chances. Charlie finished third with 8 goals and 5 assists but UMass won its last five games for the longest winning streak since the 1930-31 season.

With last year's two top scorers scholastically ineligible Glew has moved back to forward and has helped the team to a 4-3-1 mark at the semester break. Charlie has notched 9 goals along with 7 assists for 16 points, tops on the team. He now ranks fourth on the all-time UMass point list with 41 goals and 21 assists for 62 points; second on the goals list with 41; and fifth on the assists list with 21. A strong second half could boost him close to the top in all departments. But a winning season is what would really make Charlie happy.

Glew has been getting help this winter from his two linemates, junior Ken Palm (Melrose) and soph Peter Hurd (Natick). Palm has 4 goals and 8 assists for 12 points and Hurd has 5 goals and 4 assists for 9 points.

UMass Five Throttles Maine

Redmen Shine In Victory

Bernard Re-Writes Book

by JOHN GOODRICH

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS scored a big victory over a stubborn University of Maine quintet, 87-78, Saturday night before a good crowd at the Cage. The victory kept the home team in contention for the conference crown. All of the other teams in the league have at least one loss and the Redmen have two, so the race is still wide open.

THE GAME WAS TIGHT THROUGHOUT with the largest spread being late in the first half when the Redmen opened a 50-36 lead. In the second half, the Black Bears made several threats to take over the lead from Mass, but the Orrmen were equal to the task.

The key to the game was the red hot shooting of Capt. Pete Bernard. The scrappy floor general scored 21 points in the first half to tie a school record. He added 11 more after intermission to finish with a total of 32. He also broke the school record by hitting 15 hoops from the floor.

The game opened in the tightest of fashion with the team exchanging hoops for the first ten minutes. Bernard had 12 points during the stretch which found the home forces on top 25-24. Then Pete hit on his long jumper again and a beautiful feed from Charlie Kingston to Tim Edwards ended in a three point play and the Redmen were on the way. Maine never got closer than five points after that. Pete hit on 10 of 15 from the floor in the opening session.

THE FIRST HALF was well played by both teams with good shooting and lots of action throughout. The well drilled Bears overcame a height deficit to make it an interesting contest all the way. In the end it was the domination of the boards that was the difference. Mass held a 70 to 43 edge there as Chuck O'Rourke pulled down 23 rebounds, 15 of them in the big first half.

The Redmen came out in the second half and started off in a fashion that was almost a complete about face to the fine opening stanza. Fortunately Maine was also experiencing shooting difficulties and Mass got a chance to recover. Maine kept pecking away at the margin behind the steady popping of John Gillette and Bruce MacKinnon, but the Redmen were always able to make the big hoop to kill any hopes the visitors had. First it was Edwards, then O'Rourke,

Mermen Attack Records Down Coast Guard 52-43

by BUD PRATT

JOE ROGERS' VARSITY SWIMMERS broke a three-meet losing skein, but needed record-breaking performances to do it against an unexpectedly fast Coast Guard squad on Jan. 11.

ALTHOUGH MASS. TOOK FIRST PLACE IN NINE OF THE ELEVEN EVENTS, lack of depth found them trailing up to the last minute. Following a defeat in the opening medley relay, UM countered with a first and third in the 200-yd. free-style as Sophomore Dick Daniels covered the distance in 2:05.5, just five seconds off Mike Rothschild's record of last year. Wilson secured the third place point.

CO-CAPT. MIKE ROTHSCHILD then won the 60-yd. free-style in 29.6, Tom Hanley taking third. Beatle-haired Co-Capt. Mike Bjornholm tied the meet at 17-all with a first place in the individual medley.

But Tom Hanley's third place was all UM could get in the diving competition, and they entered the 200-yd. butterfly trailing 25-18.

The butterfly is generally conceded to be the most taxing stroke in modern intercollegiate swimming, and only in the past two years has Joe Rogers trained swimmers for this event. The turning point in the Coast Guard meet was Jim O'Sullivan's highly unanticipated victory. Jim not only became the first UM swimmer to win the 200 Butterfly, but established a college record with a scalding 2:49.9.

Still within striking distance, the Rogersmen were able to emulsify Coast Guard's lead. Rothschild won the 100 (53.1) and Bjornholm the 200 backstroke (2:27.8); next, Daniels and Wilson placed one-three in the 500 free-style to pull to within one point. Charlie Monnier (1) and John Grybko (3) smothered Coast Guard in the 200 breast stroke to put UM ahead 45-43, the entire meet to depend upon the 400-yd. free-style relay.

But Joe Rogers had shrewdly saved his fastest men for this event, and the quartet of Bjornholm, Wilson, Daniels, and Rothschild won going away in a UM-record-breaking 3:40.7. In this event Bjornholm went out in 53.9 and Rothschild came home in 52.2.

DURING INTERCESSION the co-captains worked out extensive-

Bateman Speaker For Sports Night

John Bateman, Head Football Coach at Rutgers University, will be the featured speaker at the First Annual Newman Center Sports Night at the University of Massachusetts on Feb. 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Bateman has turned out some of the East's top teams in the past few years at Rutgers. He is recognized as an entertaining and interesting speaker. Bateman will help honor the undefeated University of Massachusetts football team at the event. Redmen Coach Vic Fusia will show the highlights film of the 1965 season.

The event will be open to the public as well as student body of the University.

Redmen Sextet Back In Action

"Unspectacular but steady . . . Hard-working and effective . . . Good scorer but strong team player." These phrases describe UMass' varsity hockey Captain Charlie Glew (Framingham).

The senior forward has been a key Redman for three varsity seasons and has developed into one of the top all-time UMass point-producers. Glew had a great spohomore season as he set a UMass goal record of 2. The Redmen first line that winter included Charlie's brother Bob and stellar center Jim Ellingwood. They totaled 51 goals and 48 assists for 99 points. In those days Glew seldom worried about playing any defense.

But last year Coach Steve Kosakowski found himself with a

Appendicitis Hits Mathieson; Recovery Seen For Iowa Clash

by JOE BRADLEY

Plucky Dave Mathieson exemplified the old college try last Sunday evening as he stuck through the College Bowl game despite an infected appendix.

At present, Dave is resting comfortably at Northampton's Cooley Dickinson hospital where his condition is described by nurses there as "good".

As early as Friday afternoon in the Hatch, Dave complained of a feverish feeling. His sister, Anne Mathieson, suggested that he go to the infirmary.

But Dave declined, saying the fever would go, and "I wouldn't miss the College Bowl for the world."

Early Sunday morning at his New York City hotel, Dave complained of stomach pains. According to University News Editor Dan Melley, faculty assistant to the team, Dave seemed then to have no fever.

Melley gave Dave aspirin and covered him with more blankets. Later that morning Dave felt better but the pain continued. At that time his appearance on the show was doubtful.

Later in the day Dave felt better and went through with the program doing a creditable job in the 310-150 shellacking of Rollins College.

When the team returned Sunday evening, Dave was advised to see Infirmary doctors first thing Monday morning. University physicians sent him to the Cooley Dickinson where a blood count was performed.

The blood count proved inconclusive and the surgeon at Northampton decided to operate. It was then that the appendix was found to be infected. Doctors described the infection as "low grade."

The attending nurse said yesterday Dave is in good condition and "looking forward to his appearance on the next College Bowl program", a week from Sunday against Iowa State.

Six Suspended For Book Store Thefts

Men's Judiciary announced that late last semester that six students were suspended from the University, for at least one semester, for thefts that they committed in the University store.

The Judiciary had announced in the early weeks of last semester that, due to heavy losses incurred by the store each year as a result of thefts, serious consideration would be given to suspension of students guilty of further violations in the University store.

Thefts and shoplifting are becoming an ever-increasing problem not only at the University but in all segments of modern society. Men's Judiciary hoped that its earlier warning would be sufficient but because the above mentioned students seemed to have taken no notice of the warning, they were suspended.

Chief of Men's Judiciary Bruce Albro has stated that "when a student steals from the University Store, he is not stealing from some large impersonal corporation in which he has no interest. Funds from the store go directly toward the support of the Student Union in which each student of the University has a definite interest. Thus, a student that steals from the store is in effect stealing from himself and from his fellow students. It was for this reason, and because of the very serious nature of theft that these students were suspended."

Hopkins, Police To Talk On I.D. Card Policy

by ELWIN McNAMARA

Amherst Chief of Police Francis Hart stated yesterday that he dislikes picking up University students, but warned that any person obstructing traffic flow while hitchhiking will be prosecuted.

The chief and Dean of Men Robert Hopkins will confer in the near future to discuss the taking of student I.D. cards by town police. Hopkins reaffirmed the ruling that the student I.D. is the personal property of the student, and should not be given up except on withdrawal from the University.

Hopkins feels that it is a minority of students who are causing the hitchhiking problem in the town.

Everett Kosarick, chairman of the Amherst Junior Chamber of Commerce, emphasized that town merchants have an interest in University students. He felt that the anti-hitchhiking law was far from an indication of hostility toward students on the part of townspeople.

Chief Hart concurred, saying that the law was merely a small part of a many faceted pedestrian control act passed by the Selectmen. The Chief strongly stated that there was no hostility toward students on the part of Amherst police.

No action has been brought against the two students apprehended for "crossing the street" last week.

Total Scholarship Need Paid To All Qualified

For the first time in the history of the University every upperclass student who was eligible for a scholarship for this academic year 1963-64, not only received a scholarship but received the total of his or her financial need as computed through College Scholarship Service techniques.

Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement & Financial Aid Services, with office located in Machmer Hall, states that in 1963 the Legislative Body of the Commonwealth became more cognizant of the requirements of the University for adequate funds to meet the financial needs of worthy students and granted a budgetary appropriation allowing for monetary scholarships, undergraduate assistantships (work scholarships) and matching money for National Defense Loans.

This was a giant stride forward and enables the University Committee on Financial Aid & Scholarships to move in the direction of developing a program which will continue to encompass the total financial need of students who have proved such need and have worthy scholastic records.

MR. DAVID P. LAWRENCE, Assistant Director of Placement & Financial Aid Services, urges all

Lester Lanin's Band Hilites Carni Ball

Lester Lanin, King of High Society Dance Music, has been cited as perhaps the most famous dance band leader in the world today. The Lanin Orchestra will be featured at this year's Winter Carnival Ball, Friday, February 14. The ball will kick off Winter Carnival Weekend.

Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Red Nichols, Benny Goodman and the late Glenn Miller all matured as musicians under Lanin's tutelege, showing the esteem held by Lanin in the musical world.

The Junior Class in presenting this 1964 Winter Carnival has chosen to dedicate it to William Shakespeare and to the stage he loved. All events will be titled with lines from his writings, with the theme of the ball set as "A Mid-Winter's Night's Dream."

Highlighting the ball along with the music will be the crowning of the Carnival Queen at intermission.

Tickets for the ball are $4.00 per couple, and are presently on sale in the Student Union.

SENATE OPINION VARIES

Boyd, Kiernan Introduce Compensation Study Bill

by ANN MILLER

Destined to hit the Student Senate floor tonight is a bill calling for establishment of a Senate study committee on compensation for members of certain vital campus service organizations.

S73 will be introduced by Senators Don Boyd '65 and Tom Kiernan '65, following several weeks of rising interest in providing financial compensation for selected students.

The bill is worded as follows:

"Whereas, there has in the past and at the present time been much discussion concerning monetary incentive or grants-in-aid to the members of the staffs of the primary communications agencies on campus; and

"Whereas, these organizations have experienced and will continue to contend with the problems of staff morale, staff retention and quality of production; therefore "Be it resolved that the President of the Student Senate appoint an Ad Hoc Committee composed of at least five (5) Senators with the financial advisor of RSO serving in an ex-officio capacity; said committee shall have the responsibility of soliciting the opinions of interested members of the faculty and administration as well as from representatives of the organizations concerned. Upon completion of these duties, the committee shall report its findings and recommendation to the Senate."

Senate President Jon Fife '64 expressed confidence that the bill will pass.

Said Fife, "I don't see any reason for the Student Senate not to vote a study committee through. As for the end result of such a committee—no idea—but they will come out with something."

Senator Elwin McNamara '64 said that, "The recently issued state audit shows that about $80,000 a year is put into athletic scholarships at the University. This money comes from the students, either directly through athletic fees, or indirectly through profit from the vending machines on campus.

"If the students here can see their way to paying $80,000 for excellence in athletics, then they should not feel any hesitancy toward paying 5% that amount for excellence in communications."

Budgets Committee Chairman Frank Laski '64 expressed approval of "the basic intention of compensation. My only fear is that such a system could get out of hand."

"I agree there are students in responsible campus positions who deserve such remuneration; but, unless handled properly, undeserving students could be receiving compensation.

"Thus, I'm all for a committee to study this problem and present a definite plan of operation."

Senate Treasurer Ross P. Jones expressed opposition to the motion stating that he felt such a committee "was superfluous and unnecessary."

Jones contends that the matter of compensation is one which concerns itself mostly with finance and should be dealt with by the Student Senate Finance Committee and not by a special committee. Jones is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Munching on his pipe and lauding his committee Jones continually reiterated his statement that the entire subject of compensation should and can be handled within the scope of the standing committee.

Bill Can Only Help Situation

It is encouraging to note that some members of the Student Senate are attempting to relate the actions of that body to the needs of the campus.

The resolution proposed by Senators Boyd and Kiernan which would establish an ad hoc committee to study the problems involving compensation to certain members of campus service organizations is a good one.

The cloud which surounds this entire controversy can only be pierced by such a committee which has as its main and only task the further study of this most important situation.

It is generally conceded that such a committee will have to meet numerous times in the next few weeks to assemble all the data, assess the same and make appropriate recommendations concerning legislation to the Senate.

No existing committee could possibly handle as effectively such an immense task without seriously hampering its already established functions.

It must be continually reiterated that passage of the Boyd-Kiernan Bill will in now way prejudice the case, either pro or con, of such compensations.

Pasage of the bill will merely indicate that the Senate is sufficiently sophisticated to realize the sizeable implications of the granting of such compensations and is willing to be totally objective in its assessment of the function or dysfunction of such a system. J.S.D.

PEACE

New Delhi To UMass

Seventeen months ago two Indians, Stish Kumar and E. P. Menon began a march from New Dehli to Washington by way of Moscow, Paris, London, and New York.

The purpose of this march is to emphasize what they feel is the immediate need for total disarmament, both East and West. They urge non-violent action as the means by which "all peoples should defend and extend the values they hold dear."

This Thursday these two Indians will be in the Student Union as they move down to Washington to continue their 7,500 mile "Walk For Peace". Whatever one's political views the courage and determination of these two is to be admired. Rather than see political bias keep people away, let us hope that political interest will bring people to meet these two and discuss with them the problems which they feel face this world. J.B.C.

Unanimous Vote A Surprise

To the Editor:

Thank you for the generous space you provided your reporter for his covering the story of the University Health Services' recommendations concerning sale of cigarettes. We realize that this problem of smoking is fundamentally one which must be resolved by each individual. At the same time we feel responsible for reflecting to students our concern for the effect upon their future health of consistent cigarette smoking now. If there were a closer relationship in time between cause and effect, or if the effects were reversible, events would speak for themselves and we could feel less clearly compelled to speak out in general. The article was an accurate reproduction of the interview with your reporter. Two small inaccuracies I should like to correct:

1. Members of the University Health Council (comprising 5 students and a faculty representative from each school or college) will be surprised to learn of their unanimous vote, especially since it won't meet until Thursday, February 6th. It was the medical staff of the University Health Services which took this action.

2. I could be characterized more accurately as a former smoker, rather than a non-smoker. In the content of this article the distinction is significant.

Thank you again for your generosity in assignment of space.

Sincerely,
Robert W. Gage, M.D.
Director,
University Health Services

Wrong Time Mister DeGaulle

by KENNETH FEINBERG

French recognition of Red China has brought sharp protest from the American state department. Critics of our foreign policy argue that by acknowledging the Communists, France has "weakened United States influence in Asia," and also strengthened China's chances of U.N. admittance. They argue that President DeGaulle is attempting to improve the influence of the French in the Asian sphere at the expense of the Atlantic alliance. This explanation of DeGaulle's aims in Asia is not entirely correct and needs evaluation.

Since assuming power in France, DeGaulle has altered the French position within the alliance on numerous occasions, so his recognition of China was no surprise to the western powers. The United States warned DeGaulle that French recognition of the Communists would put France in an awkward position, for they have acknowledged the Nationalist regime on Formosa as the "true China." DeGaulle however has succeeded in gaining the acknowledgment of both Chinas thereby establishing a precedent and ending unnecessary allied fears.

Perhaps DeGaulle's mistake rests with his timing in recogninzing the Communists. At a time when the Chinese are provoking aggression in Southeast Asia, the French have greatly increased Communist prestige in the Asian sphere and at the U.N. as well. The new French African nations, impressed by the initiative of France, may follow suit. At this time France has neither the power nor the influence to be a dominating factor in Asia. The Asian sphere needs development which the United States must continue to handle. France's recognition hinders this U.S. project. DeGaulle's decision, although acceptable, has come at the wrong time.

The Senatorium

by MARC CHEREN

Twas the semester before Christmas, and of the whole house but eleven were stirring, fourty-four played the mouse . . . why was it that fourty odd senators were so quiet last semester? Are they all the strong silent type? It appears not, for an even larger number did not see fit to frame motions for the consideration for the assembly. This problem of lack of participation by the majority of the Senate membership seems to have been the natsy disease that weakened the operation of the body.

There is no excuse for the lack of participation of a few of the veteran senators and only half an excuse for the lack of involvement exhibited by most of the newer representatives. While these newer senators might have argued ignorance and inexperience for the first month or two, the fact that countless common sense issues hardly drew a peep from most of them is unexplicable. The total elapsed time to date makes ignorance of senate workings or issues unnecessary and delinquent.

If more of these new members had seen fit to register their disgust at the immature actions of certain older members when they were first exhibited, some of the low points in Senate performance last semester might have been avoided. And if in addition these new senators had helped the older senators to formulate a program of definitive goals (infused with new ideas from these new senators) we might all have gained a much better idea of what the Senate was accomplishing through careful planning rather than of what it accomplished in the hit or miss fashion which now seems to characterize its actions. Presently, some of the best legislation seems to happen by accident.

But the new senators do have half an excuse. Many of the older senators have been running one man shows as committee chairmen. They complain of lack of help from new members when they have never tried to delegate any responsibility. It is this one man team operation in many committees which causes some of the new senators to feel "out of it", or excluded from the "clique". The diversity of opinion expressed on the floor shows how inaccurate the notion of a special clique is. The only in-group out-group line that is drawn is between those who get involved with Senate activities and those who stand on the sidelines as quietly as department store manikins. The fault then lies with the new senators for not asserting themselves and with the old for not providing direction and guidance.

These problems are complicated by the absence of a thorough training program for new members when first elected. A short personal interview with the Senate President is not sufficient to cover the ground. As a result, new senators are often assigned to committees for which they have no appetite or aptitude.

Has there been any direction in the Senate? While President Fife has been a fairly competent and agile parliamentarian, and skillful in getting the Senate out of frequent scrapes, he has not led in the formulation of the needed program of definitive goals referred to above. While he may have been doing something of the sort behind the scenes, his failure to alert the whole Senate and the rest of the student body of his intentions is unfortunate. The promised appearance of articles from the public relations committee on activities of the various Senate committees would be a good first step in the right direction.

It is suggested that the delineation of a program of goals would transform the Senate from a reacting body to an acting one. It might also help to keep Senate objectives in focus so that resolutions passed or tabled are not quickly forgotten. For example, what ever happened to the Senate's suggestion to President Lederle and the Board of Trustees that something be done immediately to strengthen the inadequate fire department of the town of Amherst? Why is it that there still hasn't been any report on the Conflict of Interests Bill until tonight's meeting? Why hasn't there been a report on just how the area judiciary is taking shape? Why is it that there still hasn't been a thorough investigation of academic and athletic scholarships at the University?

Another bastion of silence is the Siberia of committee membership on non-senate committees. Senators belong to approximately thirteen important committees around campus, such as The Discipline Board, The Campus Religious Council, The WMUA Policy Board, The Collegian Publishing Board, and The Athletic Council. It would seem that a report from Senators participating on these committees would be in order at least once a semester.

Some good work did come out of first semester, such as the bill making unexcused early departures from meetings count as an absence, the appropriation of funds to send delegates to a national conference on civil rights next weekend, and the work done by the ad hoc committees on Housing and Tri-Semester, but it remains to be seen whether or not private telephones in dorms, commuter mailboxes, a longer reading period before finals than the two days scheduled for next year, and articles on the activities of Senate committees are followed up.

It seems, then, that each and every member of the Senate has a lot of work to do next semester and that part of their job should be to stop and consider where they want the Senate to go, and how it can get there.

One problem, and perhaps the most basic, remains. There are not many leaders in the Senate and even less who consider the Senate their most important extra-curricular activity. Bear this in mind when you vote to fill the many vacancies in the coming special elections. The Senate needs leaders with ideas, not "Good Joes," and it needs members who will put the Senate before everything but studies. A long list of organizations under a person's name doesn't make him a good senator; active interest in student affairs, creativity, and a willingness to shoulder responsibility do.

Amateur Radio Club Offers New Service

There are about a quarter of a million amateur radio operators across the country today. About twenty of these "Hams," as they are called, comprise the University of Massachusetts Amateur Radio Association, headed by President Barry Allen, '66. The club advisor is Professor Donald E. Scott of the Electrical Engineering Department.

As a public service the association is prepared to transmit important personal messages to anyone, almost anywhere in the world, free of charge by means of contacting other amateur stations for any member of the student body or faculty of the University. This relay system can deliver a message within the continental United States in a matter of hours.

In order to send a message, it is only necessary to write out the message and place it in the RSO office—box 306, or in W1PUO's mail box in the downstairs lobby of the Engineering Laboratory Building. The only restrictions are: the message must be less than 20 words and must be addressed to persons outside of the state of Massachusetts. The name, address and telephone number of both the sender and addressee are also necessary.

The club's transmitting and receiving facilities, licensed by the F.C.C. are located on the ground floor of the new Engineering Laboratory Building. The club room is open for inspection to anyone in the company of a club member. It is expected that sometime in the future the restriction on in-state messages can be lifted.

students interested in financial aid for the next academic year (1964-65) to make immediate application. Students will qualify for the many scholarships to be awarded by having and maintaining a 2.5 or better cumulative point average and by proving a financial need based on family income, assets, number of dependents, educational and medical expenses, certain types of debts, and unusual situations, as well as summer earnings.

Completed applications must be submitted by March 17 and since it involves completion of the financial statement by parents it behooves those interested to apply now. Those who received scholarships this year must reapply since most scholarships are granted on a year to year basis and receipt of financial aid this year does not guarantee similar aid in subsequent years.

Mr. Lawrence points out that students receiving monetary and/or work scholarships which do not meet their financial need based on $1,450 per year for total expenses may be able to take out loans under the National Defense Act or through other loan plans available.

Mr. Lawrence asked that all students interested in applying for scholarships, visit the Placement & Financial Aid Services in Machmer Hall to discuss their financial problems with him and file for scholarship or other financial aid.

THE NEW DAM to control the flow of the Campus Pond is now in operation and working effectively.

Unrest Increases In South Africa; White Army Grows

Faced with increasing African unrest during the last decade as a result of government apartheid policies, the Nationalists have passed a series of laws, which in the words of the International Commission of Jurists, " . . . surpass the bounds of civilized jurisprudence."

In 1958 the Strijdom administration eliminated the Cape Coloureds from the voting rolls, and secured passage of the Bantu Education Act, which totally segregated all schools in the nation and placed the control of education of native Africans completely in the hands of the government. Strijdom also originated the Criminal Law Amendment Act, which virtually outlawed non-violent and peaceful demonstrations against the government.

Most important of these items of legislation are the Sabotage Act and the General Laws Amendment Act, which together have turned South Africa into a small scale replica of Nazi Germany.

The Sabotage Act makes it a crime punishable by not less than 5 years with a maximum penalty of death to disrupt any public facility or service, commit burglary or trespass, or strike for higher wages, and a great many other things, if the accused cannot prove his act was not intened to, among other things: a) cause or promote general dislocation, disturbance or disorder, b) further or encourage any political aim designed to bring about change in the economic or social structure of the Republic, and c) embarrass the administration of the affairs of state. The other "incidental" matters referred to in the Act make it in effect illegal to protest the policies of the government in any public manner.

Under the Suppression of Communism Act, all newspapers in the country are required to deposit about $30,000 with the government, which is automatically forfeit if the government decides that the newspaper is furthering the "aims of Communism."

The Afrikaner response to charges that South Africa has become a fascist police state is that the government is in the process of assuring self-government and economic progress for the African through the creation of autonomous ' 'Bantustans" throughout the country, to be infused with massive amounts of government aid. In fact, these Bantustans are and obviously will remain under the direct control of the national police. Together, the Bantustans, which are located in some of the worst geographical areas of the nation, constitute only 13 per cent of the land area of South Africa, on which about 75 per cent of the population is expected to live.

The independent nations of Africa have begun to send assistence to rebels and violent elements in South Africa, and a civil war, a war that will probably surpass Algeria's in bloodshed, can be expected to erupt within a year or two. Given the fact that a civil war is already underway in neighboring Angola, a civil war in preparation in Mozambique, and rumblings of violence in Southern Rhodesia, the entire Southern portion of the African continent is likely to erupt into violence of the worst sort shortly. The League of Nations mandate of Southwest Africa is currently under review by the International Court of Justice at The Hague, and it seems obvious that the mandate will be returned to the United Nations, where the Afro-Asian bloc will most certainly push for action to take the territory from South Africa, by military force if necessary.

Pollywogs To Dinosaurs - For Low Budgets

Remember when everything, or almost everything, that was fun was within your finances? Well, the good old days can come back if you want them to.

Those days of penny candy ... licorice, bubblegum and jellybeans. There's a little fruit store right next to the Amherst Theater with a whole wonderland of goodies. The fireballs are just as hot, the gumdrops stickier, the shopkeeper just as patient as in those days when you couldn't see over the counter. Inflation hasn't hit yet—malted milk balls are still two for a penny.

With the popularity of horror movies today, it's a wonder that so few people know of prehistoric monsters existing in the town of Amherst. No, not the Selectman who passed the rule-of-thumb hitchhiking ban, but honest to goodness dinosaurs. Pratt Museum of Amherst college has one of the best collections of fossils in Western Massachusetts, and is open every afternoon for FREE! The displays include everything from solidified primeval ooze to the twenty foot jaws of a miocene shark. And there's a mastodon skeleton and a hairy mammoth, victims of archaic elephant jokes.

All thwarted cowboys should make it a point to visit the University stables. Visiting hours are every afternoon before 5 p.m. supper. We have some of the finest Morgan horses in New England and Manager Dick Nelson will be glad to show any interested student their many trophies.

Pratt museum dinosaurs are painful to red licorice...

Want a free pet? It's almost pollywog time, and the in campus pond should yield a bumper crop. And the psych department gives away its rodent subjects after they are sufficiently frustrated. Be the first kid on your corridor to have a paranoid rat!

1. I've been giving a lot of thought to the future—career-wise and goal-wise.

I've been pretty busy working on my hook shot.

2. As recipients of a college education, I feel it is incumbent upon us to work in areas which allow us to make a contribution to society.

3. Material reward is important, too—so long as the job is one of profound significance.

4. What's more, the company I work for must be forward-looking and encourage initiative.

5. How about you? What are your goals?

I'd like to score 30 against Tech.

THE FOLK SCENE

Negro Folk Music: Part One

by BOB WEBER

Ed Note: This is the first of a three part series dealing with the evaluation of American Negro folk music.

The first form of American Negro folk music distinguishable from the traditional music which the first Negro slaves brought with them is called the field-hollor by authorities on Negro folk culture, such as Allan Lomax and Pete Seeger.

This form consisted of an unorganized call or hollar which was repeated by one or more of the nearby workers in the fields. To ease the burden of their captivity and to make the work go by faster, they usually sang about current events, their problems, or their desires and dreams. For example, the line "go down ol' Hannah" functioned as a verbal expression of their desire to see the sun set; for then, they could return to their living quarters.

Before they were brought to this country, the Negroes' form of singing was based on the call and response pattern.

The group leader would sing a line and the rest of the group would respond with an established refrain. This pattern was kept intact in the field hollar and the later development—the work song. This next form in the evolution of American Negro folk music was very similar to the field hollar except that the work song was used to set the pace of the work in progress; for example, swing picks and axes on chain gangs. It was in this context that the work song developed to the form with which we are familiar. At the end of every line the men on the chain gang would, for instance, swing their axes. A verse from Huddie Ledbetter's (Leadbelly) "Take this hammer" is a good example.

Ivory Towers And The Ideal Life

by LINDA G. PERLSTEIN

The changing times have brought with it new and improved changes in curfews and general dorm regulations on many campuses. To various degrees the rules governing women's life on university campuses have been steadily liberalizing, curfews are later and freedom in the dorm has also improved.

On the U. of Maine campus, freshmen women have recently obtained upperclass privileges, in relation to late (12:00) permission, after eight weeks, if a sufficient point average is achieved. On our own campus the freshmen four-week seven o'clock curfew period has now been abandoned. Later permission has also been granted to juniors and seniors. One of the most beneficial policies to come from this process of liberalization is the late library permission which is now granted to freshmen women for the second semester on this campus.

One of the more unusual changes to be made on any campus is that made by U. of R. In September of last year U. of R. announced the opening of its new plush coeducational dormitories, the "Towers," which seemed to be meeting with quick popular acceptance. The "Towers" appears to be something entirely new in coeducational housing. Although men and women are housed on alternate floors they may move freely from floor to floor. There is a lack of both curfews and dormitory advisors which adds to the freedom of the students.

Unlike our own campus, long corridors and gang bathrooms have been eliminated. Instead, coming off a small lobby on each floor are two four-man and two six-man suites and a kitchenette (with no one living in it) complete with an electric stove. The suites themselves are plush, with a picture window lounge furnished with curtains, a couch, an easy chair, and a card table. There are four single bedrooms and a completely tiled bathroom, a storage closet and a hall closet. (A far cry from housing here!)

New social regulations that have been necessitated by the new layout of the Towers. Three of the more interesting of these are (1) members of the opposite sex may be entertained in the lounge area of the suite only, (2) the consumption of liquor shall be limited to the area of the suite, and (3) standards of good taste in relation to dress and conduct shall be maintained at all times.

There are problems to this arrangement. Two of the major problems are communication between the Administration and residents for such purposes as publicizing regulations, and the establishment of some sort of government in the dormitories. The first will probably be solved by the completion of the Towers Dining Center.

A general trend towards liberalization can be seen in university policy, especially with respect to housing and co-ed rights. Plush living in an atmosphere that acknowledges individual needs and mature adjustment may yet be available to university students.

ALL SENIORS WHO HAVE ORDERED PHOTOGRAPHS are encouraged to pick them up promptly in the Index's Student Union office.

South Africa ...

The South African government is preparing for war. All males in the country from elementary school age up are currently receiving military training, and the government is even considering the drafting of women into the army. Production of arms has tripled in the past three years.

The United States with some ¾ billion dollars invested in So. Africa, has to date refused to vote for strong action against So. Africa in the United Nations. It would appear reasonable to assume that the U.S., along with Britain will be forced to "put up or shut up" on the So. African question within the next year, and it is necessary that all American students study the problem and communicate their views to their Congressmen—for it may soon be too late in So. Africa for the U.S. to do anything about the situation there.

Take this hammer (huh)
and carry it to de capt'in (huh) (repeated 3 times)
tell him I'm gone, boys, tell him I'm gone.

Not only did these songs serve the purpose of aiding work, but they often commented, as did the field hollor, on the thoughts of the men who sang them.

Next week: the development of country blue.

140 Teams

University To Compete In Bridge Tournament

by GAIL MANDELL

The University of Massachusetts will be one of the more than 140 colleges which will participate in the 1964 National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament February 1 through 22.

Professor Harold Smart will serve as tournament director for the university for the competition, which is sponsored by the Association of College Unions.

Traveling trophies and plaques will be given the college participants winning the national titles —one cup for the college of the team scoring highest on the East-West hands and one cup for the college of the North-South hand winners. Each of the four individual national winners will receive a smaller cup for his permanent possession.

All play will be by mail and will be conducted on the individual campuses on a date fixed by the Tournament Director between February 1 through 22. The University of Massachusetts will hold competition on Thursday, Feb. 13th. Players must assemble and register at the latest by 6:45 (one of a pair can do this provided the other player gets there by 7:00). Late comers cannot be accommodated.

The hands will be judged by William Root and Lawrence Rosler, contract bridge authorities.

The National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee, a part of the Games Committee of the Association of College Unions, is interested in developing contract bridge as an interesting supplement to the collegiate social program.

The current competition is the 15th annual renewal of the tournament.

Negro Student Leaders Resign Over New T.V.

PRAIRIE VIEW, Tex. (CPS) — In their latest activities against segregation in Hempstead, Tex., 60 students of Prairie View A & M College picketed two restaurants in the town over the last two weekends.

The all-Negro college was integrated this fall by its board of directors, but so far no white students have enrolled.

The demonstration was part of a continuing economic boycott of Hempstead, population 1,500, by students of Prairie View A & M.

The boycott began last summer in protest of the town's segregation policies concerning entertainment and business facilities.

Students and faculty began to shop in near-by centers or in Houston, about 30 miles away, withdrawing their economic support from Hempstead.

The administration of the college has not taken a stand on the segregation policy of Hempstead, and in an effort to elicit a stand, 3,000 students met in the gymnasium Oct. 31 to applaud 46 student leaders who resigned their campus offices in protest.

The mass resignation was touched off by the purchase at a Hempstead store of a color television set for the student union, by T. R. Solomon, dean of student life.

Maude Ferguson, named Miss Prairie View, resigned her title, saying "I can no longer respect the action of the dean of student life."

Solomon said of the television set purchase, "I had no idea it would cause all this trouble."

The idea for the boycott of Hempstead originated last spring in a business class when a student asked how much buying power the college's faculty had over Hempstead merchants. It was estimated at 60 per cent.

Later faculty members spearheaded a drive in June to talk with town merchants about desegregating. Discriminatory signs in Waller County Court House and other places were removed and 10 merchants hired 13 Negroes.

Ski Season Opens With Fine Showing

by DAN GLOSBAND

IN ITS FIRST TWO OFFICIAL MEETS of the '64 season the UMass Ski Team had 16 wins over other teams while being beaten only four times. At giant slalom held at Cannon Mountain on Saturday, UMass beat Northeastern University, Brown, Tufts, Boston College, Boston University, Bowdoin, AIC, and Keene State College, while losing to New England College and Amherst. The four racers that counted for the University were Peter Plastridge taking 9th place, Richard Woods 10th place, Tom Clark 12th place, Walt Swiatels 39th place. Also skiing were Norm Carpenter and Don Burgess.

ON SUNDAY a two run slalom was held at Cannon in which UMass defeated the same teams as on Saturday and again lost to New England College and Amherst. Scoring for the University were Dick Woods taking 5th place, Pete Plastridge 11th place, and Tom Clark 17th place.

Walt Swiatek and Don Burgess also skiied. Most promising for next year is the fact that Tom Pitterdreigh, a sophomore transfer student, took sixth place.

IN A SPECIAL PRE-SEASON PRACTICE RACE held on January 11 at Pat's Peak in Henniker, N.H., the UMass Ski Team defeated AIC, Tufts, and Brown, while losing to New England College. Racing for the University were Dick Woods 6th, Tom Clark 10th, Tom Pittendreigh 11th, and Pete Plastridge 18th.

The next races for the team are the giant slalom and downhill held at Thunder Mountain on February 15 and 16. The team is improving well, as it has moved from 5th to 4th place in league standing the past two years, and presently stands 3rd.

Little Redmen Down Worcester Jr.

by NEIL BAKER

THE UNIVERSITY'S FRESHMAN BASKETBALL TEAM chalked up their third victory of the year against four defeats with a 90-80 victory over Worcester Junior College.

Worcester, with only six players in uniform, ran into foul trouble late in the second half and had to forfeit the game when Kaplan fouled out . . . after Leserence. This left Worcester with only four players on the floor, and they had to forfeit the game. Kaplan was allowed to continue playing, and eventually was assessed a sixth foul.

THE LITTLE REDMEN controlled the opening tapoff and Bob Murphy quickly gave the frosh a 2-0 lead. This was about the only thing that went right in the first half. The game got off to a slow start, as both teams were cold from the floor, and made many offensive mistakes. With the score 9-9, the frosh put on a brief four point spurt with Murphy and Martin providing the two pointers. But Worcester put on a little spurt of their own and led at the halfway mark of the first half 19-13. Constantly losing the ball, the Little Redmen couldn't mount a sustained offensive attack, and fell deeper in the red, 29-17.

But then, things started clicking. Stewart took a feed underneath for an easy layup. Mike Meola blueprinted the play, and Lisack worked a three point play on a beautiful driving layup that cut WTC's lead to five 29-24. The frosh kept scoring from underneath as Worcester used the long bomb to try and keep their lead. The Redmen finally pulled into the lead at 17:59 on Martin's driving layup that made the score 35-34. Worcester's Dave Kotel sunk a soft jumper seconds before the buzzer to knot the score at 39-39, halftime.

Evidently, Coach Jack Leaman had a few choice words for the Little Redmen at halftime, as they looked like a different team in the second half.

MASS AGAIN CONTROLLED the tapoff, with Murphy again providing the opening two points. The frosh never lost the lead again. Nine more straight points, with Murphy, Lisack and Babyak combining on the inside gave the frosh a 50-39 lead, which for all intense purpose, was the ball game. At one time the lead was 23 points, 75-52.

Indoor Track ...

THE OTHER THREE COMPETITORS for UMass are certainly not of a lesser caliber than Mederios or Wrynn. Juniors Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey will be competing in the mile. Both boys performed extremely well during cross-country, and appear ready to keep up the good work. Art Resendes is entered in the dash and the high hurdles, and should do well.

THE REDMEN'S FIRST REGULAR MEET of the season will be on Feb. 19 against Brown and Tufts.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Redmen Prepare For Rhodie Rams

by JOHN GOODRICH

THE LATEST STATISTICS show that Co-Capt. Pete Bernard now leads the individual records of the Redmen. Bernard with his steady popping has upped his season's average to 19.3 points a game. The injured Rodger Twitchell still holds second place with a 15.2 average.

Despite the loss of two men at mid-season, the Redmen are holding their own thus far by winning two of the three scheduled games. The worst is yet to come however as the team must face Rhode Island twice, UConn, St. John's, and small college power Northeastern. The first of these big contest is this Friday evening against the Rhody Rams. The sharp shooting visitors have plenty of firepower and the Redmen will need about their best effort of the year to win.

GETTING BACK TO THE INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS, Bernard has put in 289 points so far this year. He now holds down seventh place in the list of all-time scorers. He need only eight points to reach sixth place. If he can hit for 73 more points this year he will move into fourth place. The present record is 1257 by Doug Grutchfield. Second at the moment is Jack Foley with 1081. At this time, however, it would appear that Twitchell could end up second since he has scored 1044. Bernard would have to average in excess of thirty points a game to out pass Foley.

BESIDES THE TWO BIG GUNS, there are three other Redmen still averaging better than ten points a game. Charlie O'Rourke is hitting at a 13.3 clip, Tim Edwards is scoring about 12.3 and Jim Painten is averaging 10.1. The leading rebounder is O'Rourke with a 12.7 average. He is followed by Edwards with an 11.3 average and Twitchell with a 9.8 average.

CO-CAPTAIN PETE BERNARD hopes to continue his fine shooting against league powerhouse Rhode Island. The Redmen meet the Rams Friday night in the Cage.

AS A TEAM the Redmen stand a good chance of setting a few records. At present they are averaging 84.8 points a game while the highest previous was 76.6 in 1954-55. They could also better the records for most points in one season, most field goals in one season, and best field goal percentage for one season. All of these in addition to the four records they have set in a single game this year.

All of these figures goes to point out how easily the Redmen have taken to the transition of coaches and their respective styles of play. Despite the fact that Coach Orr came to a school that could boast of not a single loss by graduation, it is always hard to change the style of play for a team used to playing in a different manner.

THE TEAM RECORD itself stands at a commendable 10 and 5. The league record is only 2 and 2 because of the two upset losses to UNH and Vermont. The independent part of the schedule shows the Redmen with an 8 and 3 record with the losses coming at the hands of Holy Cross, Providence, and Iona, three of the top independent schools in the east. The problem at hand is to improve the standing in the conference, and with the schedule as such, the Redmen can take care of that problem without any help from the others in the league, although any coming their way would be appreciated. The standings have UConn on top with a 4-1 slate followed by Vermont with 3-1, Rhode Island 2-1, Mass 2-2, New Hampshire 1-3 and Maine 1-5.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES: The leading scorer in the conference is UNH standout Jim Rich who is around 25 points a game . . . Despite their record, the Wildcats also have two others in the top 15. . . . The only Redman up there is Bernard who was averaging about 15, but with the big effort aaginst Maine he has lifted his average to almost 20 . . .

While Mass was edging Maine Saturday, UConn dismantled previously undefeated Vermont 79-46 . . . This was done despite the fact UConn star Toby Kimball spent much of the second half on the bench with four fouls . . .

ON THE NATIONAL SCENE, UCLA still has an undefeated record and holds the top spot on all the polls . . . Michigan had been second but they were defeated Monday . . . Kentucky is climbing again after a couple of losses as is Loyola of Chicago . . . The biggest surprise of the year is the plunge taken by Cincinnati who was supposed to be a threat in their conference . . . The veteran team has dropped five in a row to fall from the national rankings and out of sight in their league . . .

Army Defeats Pistol Team

THE WEST POINT PISTOL TEAM displaying the power that ranked them the top team in the nation last year downed UMass 1397 to 1328 at West Point on Saturday. The Redmen putting on one of their best performances of the year just didn't have enough to keep pace with the Cadets. As a tribute to the UMass squad West Point Coach Herb Roberts and Team Captain Everett Grimes commented that the Redmen were the best non-service academy team to oppose the Pointers this year. No other civilian institution has scored over 1300 points against the mighty Knights of the Hudson.

THE REDMEN SHOWING ALL THE CONFIDENCE that has been lacking in previous matches placed three firers in the 270 bracket. Leading scorer Dan Sullivan led with 274, while Seniors Dave Naylor and Captain Jack Kelly each garnered 270. Kelly had been in a bad slump and it appears as though he has beaten the jinx. Rounding out the scoring were sophs George Wietecha with 262 and Eric Mussen with a 252.

TOP GUN SULLIVAN was the recipient of an award from the Cadets as the highest scoring opponent. The big guns for West Point were Phil Olmstead with 283 and Jim Normyle with a 282. Both these lads have been nominated for All-American honors.

Indoor Track Awaits N.E.A.A.U.

by GENE COLBURN

THE VARSITY INDOOR TRACK TEAM will take its last tuneup before the season officially begins when it competes in the New England A.A.U. Indoor Track and Field Championships this Wednesday at M.I.T. Jim Wrynn and John Mederios, who starred for the Redmen in the K. of C. meet, will lead the UMass contingent. Wrynn will compete in the 1,000 and the mile. Jim has been showing consistent improvement in practice and should do very well. Mederios will compete in the high jump, broad jump, and 50 yard dash. At the K. of C. Meet, John came within 4" of Fred Lewis' indoor broad jump record (23'2"), and with a little luck he should come even closer this meet. He should also do well in the high jump and the dash. Mederios high jumped 6'2" at the K. of C. and ran :05.7 in the 50 at the B.A.A., his best ever.

Senate Votes Passage Of Compensation Study Bill

by M. ANN MILLER

Hectic passage of S73, a bill establishing a study committee on compensation—monetary or otherwise—highlighted Wednesday night's Student Senate meeting.

The passage of S73 completely overshadowed the peaceful death of the previously controversial "conflict-of-interest bill."

Also, at the meeting, resignations were accepted from three Senators—Alden Blodgett ('66, Hills North), Peter Graham ('64, Fraternities), and Charles Seavey ('67, Plymouth). This brought the total number of senatorial vacancies to nine.

Leading the charge for passage of S73 were sponsors Don Boyd ('65, Freenough) and Tom Kiernan ('65, Hills South).

Principal opposition to the bill was offered by Senate Treasurer Ross Jones ('65, Brett) and Marilyn Singer ('65, Johnson).

Opposition flared at placing the study in the hands of a special Ad Hoc committee, instead of the standing Senate Finance Committee.

Senator Boyd, speaking for his bill, emphasized that a "vote for the bill is not a statement favoring incentives; it is not a committment; it merely favors setting up a study committee."

"Duplication of Effort!"

"The findings of this committee, since it would be dealing with monetary affairs, would have to go to the Finance Commtitee anyway," said Senator Singer.

"Since the shortest distance between two points is a straight line, I see no need for a triangle."

"Setting up a special committee," Senator Jones, chairman of Finance Committee, stated, "would be a duplication of effort and drain of time on the part of Senators on the special committee, since its subject is within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee."

Speaking for the bill, Kiernan, a member of the Finance Committee, said that the purpose of the bill is "to find out if there is a need for incentives —monetary or otherwise. Only matters of actual appropriation," he pointed out, citing Article 5, Section 5, of the Senate By-laws, "come under jurisdiction of the Finance Committee."

"There are only five or six weeks left to investigate this matter before budgets are on the floor for next year," he added. "This Ad Hoc committee would have to meet four or six hours a week, aside from their investigations. Asking Fi Com to take on this task would be to require its members to put in an over-abundance of time."

The formerly "hot" S33 "conflict of interest" bill was withdrawn by its sponsors, Senators Elwin McNamara ('64 Commuters) and Dave Mathieson ('64 At-Large), following a report of a special committee set up to study the bill.

The committee, headed by Senator John Murphy ('65-Hills North) urged defeat of the bill.

Passed without discussion was S60, amended, which provides that "Permanent and Ad Hoc Committees shall have the option of taking the following action on motions referred to it by the floor of the Senate, or other suggested legislatioi;

"They may report that the bill does pass, they may report the bill without recommendation or they may report that the bill does not pass.

"The Chairman of the Permanent or Ad Hoc committee must make a report on a tabled bill within two legislative weeks of tabling. The bill shall then be subject to action by the floor at that meeting or thereafter."

Sponsor, Senator Jones, pointed out that the purpose of the bill is to prevent Senate bills from being "bottled up indefinitely."

Also passed at the meeting was an appropriation of $385.20 to the University Chorale toward purchase of platforms.

President Jon Fife ('64-At-large) read Senator McNamara's resignation from the Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Student Housing and McNamara's request that the dissolution of the committee be considered.

Appointments made by Fife included appointment of Senator Boyd to chairman of Senate Public Relations Committee, Senator Kiernan to chairman of Men's Affairs Committee, Senator Jones to the Fine Arts Council, Senators Kathleen Londergan ('66-Comuters) and John Reynolds ('65-At-large) to Activities Committee.

Women's Judiciary To Hold Elections

Many campus elections are more publicized than those for Women's Judiciary, but few can compare in importance and seriousness. Women's Judiciary is a democratic organization of five women undergraduate students—one member from the Sophomore Class, two Juniors, and two Seniors. One Senior customarily acts as Chief Justice while the other serves as Clerk for the group.

Women's Judiciary has as its main purpose the reviewing of disciplinary cases concerning infractions of the Handbook Rules and Regulations which are revised each year by the Senate. The majority of its cases are those which have already gone through the individual dormitory House Councils, and being more serious than a slight infraction of rules, have been referred to Women's Judiciary.

Furthermore, Women's Judiciary handles some cases which have been referred directly to it because of a higher degree of seriousness. In still other cases, it has the authority to refer cases to the University Disciplinary Board, of which both Chief Justices of Men's and Women's Judiciary are members.

Members of Women's Judiciary are chosen is a campuswide election in which all women undergraduates have the opportunity to participate. Anyone is eligible to take out a petition, but because of the serious nature of the position, all candidates must be interviewed by the present members of Women's Judiciary and the Women's Affairs Committee, who look for certain qualities which are necessary for one to qualify as a final candidate.

Reading Course Offered

The School of Education is offering to undergraduate students a course designed to improve reading techniques and related study skills. The group will meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m., for five weeks.

Candidates for the course should complete registration in the Counseling and Guidance Office, Room E 12, Machmer Hall no later than 4 p.m. February 10.

Peace Corps Starts New Campus Drive

The Peace Corps has inaugurated a new program by which to better relations and communications on college campuses. The first instance of this program in action was the recent Boston Area Workshop for Liaison Officers and Student Coordinators held at Harvard University, at which the University was represented by Mr. Robert Morrissey, Director of Financial Aid and Placement, and Donald Boyd, Chairman of Senate Public Relations Committee.

Although there was no set format for the two day series of meetings, emphasis was placed upon improving the dissemination of information on Peace Corps activities, selection and training, and establishing student support groups on individual campuses to facilitate the efforts of the Liaisons.

This "marvelous and extraordinarily important piece of yeast", as Dean John Monro of Harvard College termed the Peace Corps, has continually attempted to convert stereotyped opinions with regard to the Peace Corps into more factual ones. An attempt at achieving these goals is reflected in the pilot Peace Corps Senior Year Program.

Under this program, nearly 700 college juniors who have applied for the Peace Corps will be allowed to attend a six-week summer training camp to prepare themselves for eventual overseas assignments.

Mr. Gale announced the kick-off of a recruiting drive in the Massachusetts area that will bring a team of volunteers to the University of Massachusetts campus on March 9, 10, 11. Over thirty UMass students have already served overseas in some capacity since the inception of the Peace Corps.

Compensation Coverage

The Accusation

A Senator Complains

To the Editor:

In the past few issues, the Collegian has been advocating financial compensation of its editor, the Index editor and the WMUA station manager. There has been, to quote page one of the February 5, 1964 Collegian, ". . . rising interest in providing financial compensation for selected students."

The present editors and station manager feel that compensation is necessary in order to insure or increase excellence in communication.

I would like to say that, although I am strongly against the payment of "selected students" for their extra-curricular activities, that perhaps the action of the Collegian in presenting the "news," in advocating a program of compensation so strongly and covering so much space, without giving information on the other side indicates, indeed, that there is a need for excellence in campus communication; there is a need for excellence in our newspaper.

The Collegian, I would like to point out, is the cause of the (to quote the Collegian) "rising interest in providing financial compensation for selected students."

In recent issues, the Collegian has published a joint letter advocating this compensation; it has published a random poll of student opinion (six students) which reported that students favor this compensation; four students favored this, two did not. On this same front page, this random poll was considered more news worthy than our college bowl team, whose performance was given much less space in a less conspicuous place.

The Collegian has also increased our information as to the adviseability of the Senate bill to look into this compensation in a five column front page news story and this news item was supported by a Collegian editorial in the same issue.

I have recently spoken to other senators, as well as to many of my constituents who are opposed to compensation. I would like to see coverage of the negative arguments about "compensation for selected students." I would like to see excellence in our Collegian even though its editor is presently uncompensated. I hope that this excellence may be found in the Collegian reporting of the results of the Ad Hoc Committee inquiry into the advisability of compensation.

Publius Strikes

To the Editor:

Last Monday, our most fearlessly unbiased campus newspaper—that is, our only campus newspaper, published the results of a vast, extensive, and reliable survey, which they deemed important enough to warrant approximately 30% of the printed matter on the front page. It must have been an immensely time-consuming effort, since it presented the total opinions of all six of its participants. (That's right, kiddies, not six thousand, not six hundred, not sixty, but six participants!) The paper proudly hailed its effort as a "brief random survey." As usual the Collegian was accurate. It certainly was brief!

We attempted to establish the statistical validity of the survey, but unfortunately our statistician reported that it was too small to be calculated. On the basis of this survey we can only wonder how the Collegian arrived at its headline "Students Favor Compensation!" It is our humble opinion that the headline should have read "Four Students Favor Compensation," since this was the conclusion of the article. It is certainly a thrilling and reassuring experience to observe our own "free and responsible press" carefully gathering the opinions of the students—one by one!

If the famous quotation by Will Rogers—"All I know is what I read in the newspapers"—is followed on this campus, then the students of the University of Massachusetts are in serious trouble . . .

Publius

Beta Chi Bites

To the Editor:

We think the Collegian, the Index and WMUA have jointly lost sight of some important principles in the running (mostly oral) furor over monetary rewards to hard-working staffers.

The communications shortcomings on campus, we think, are not the result of a lack of personnel, but of a lack of capable personnel. We're for quality rather than quantity. We would rather see a better Collegian, Index and WMUA than more of the present tripe.

If monetary compensation will improve the quality, which is now in an eminently improvable state, then by all means let the astute Mr. Fife and his sterling senate go ahead and cover themselves with glory. Maybe they could vote themselves a pay raise, too. The same principles would seem to apply.

Beta Chi

The Answer

In its attempts to bring to the campus community all sides of the questions surrounding compensation, the Collegian has published the three letters to the left of this column.

It is not the purpose of this editorial to rebut or refute, and thus lend dignity, to the charges that this paper has been biased in its reporting. Let it suffice to say that the Collegian has been totally objective in its journalistic endeavors, and anyone who doubts this has only to look at past issues wherein we have quoted students, both Senators and otherwise, who have voiced beliefs contrary to those expressed in the Collegian editorial columns.

Rather, the purpose of this editorial is to express alarm over the accusation that the Collegian has given too much space to the whole subject of compensations.

True, in recent issues the Collegian has allotted a number of column inches to articles dealing with compensation, but the claim that there has been too much space devoted is false and groundless.

There is no such thing as too much space when this newspaper is dealing with topics that are of prime importance to the campus.

Be it Yamasaki, trimester, ID's, the assassination of a President, the housing situation or compensation the Collegian has continually striven for balanced news stories, not balanced news pages.

Any newspaper which deliberately reduces the size and "the play" of a story that is of primary importance, and offers for an excuse the fear that their readers may become bored with the whole topic is betraying its function.

The aim of the Collegian is not merely to inform the campus, but also to bring to the forefront of campus thought those issues which we, with a deep regard for our social responsibility, have ajudged topics worthy of public notice.

A distinguishing factor of this year's Collegian has been the tenaciousness of this paper in attempting to bring to the campus the whole story, and not just part of the story.

There was more than one article on the Yamasaki Affair, more than one article on the trimester system, more than one article on the ID's and more than one article on many other topics concerning pertinent campus situations, including the matter of compensation.

The Collegian will not compromise. We will refuse to bury or forget those topics which we feel are worthy of campus consideration.

Why Be An Officer

by MIKE HENCH

As the boys in blue and olive drab head for their date with good old Uncle Sam, perhaps this ex-Air Force enlisted man might offer a few questions in terms of the service. One might start with "Why be an officer?"

Now this would seem simple enough. We all want to the leaders, the chiefs, the wheels. Officers get paid more, have an easier life, learn more, etc. Or at least that's the way it's supposed to be. Yet if I had it to do over again (God forbid), I'd still want to be an enlisted man.

The advantages start almost immediately. While the young officer candidate is being hazed, the enlisted man is sitting in a classroom. Then come the tests. Now a pretty sharp enlisted man can get his pick of various excellent career fields . . . facing much less competition than the officer. While the big Uncle is paying for the enlisted man's uniform, the officer is paying for his own uniforms. But both will be putting up with a considerable amount of "chicken" and "Mickey Mouse" games for the first few months.

But it is after the initial training that differences begin to manifest themselves. For some reason officers are always under the gun. They are meeting formations, spit and polish, bucking for promotions, grappling with paper-work, etc. The e.m. is not. Promotions come pretty easily to the guy with a little on the ball in the enlisted grades. The money may not seem like much on paper, but when you're getting three squares, clean sheets, shopping at the BX and drinking at an enlisted man's club, your money goes pretty far.

Top man in a tech school class gets choice of duty assignments. Now if you think you can be top man, by all means be an officer. But there just aren't as many good duty assignments for officers and the competition is rougher. And once again the e.m. has the advantage. Now, once your in civilian clothes, wandering around Paris or Munich, no one really cares if you're an officer or e.m. You're a rich American, and when you start spending your pay, you begin to believe it.

Of course, if you happen to make it through flight-training and manage to avoid SAC, a pilot's life can be a happy one. But for four years or more you'll still have the same sort of "chicken" that you had in cadets. You will, by this time, love flying. (Though I suggest you swing a jet ride before you go hog wild on the glamor of flying jets.) Having seen more crashes and accidents than I'd care to admit (from my nice safe vantage point in the control tower), I am somewhat soured on the glory of flying. Add to this the discomfort of sitting on a parachute and breathing oxygen while attached by lines and hoses to the instrument panel with a stick between your legs, and you get an idea of the reality of flying jets.

But most ROTC grads won't fly. I suggest that they get in touch with a few officers and a few enlisted men. Ask them? You may be surprised at the answers.

Debaters Place Ninth In Williamsburg Match

Stacking up eight impressive wins, the University's Forensic Society returned victorious this week as it placed ninth out of thirty competing colleges at the annual debate Tournament held at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

The Society shocked such southern and eastern powers as S.M.U., West Point, Villanova, the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Virginia, and the University of South Carolina.

In addition, Steve Jenkins and Larry Rutstein, debating the negative side of the topic, defeated highly-touted Wayne State University in a close-fought match.

Wayne State was ranked second in the tournament, losing only two rounds. Mike Farrell and Marshall Goldberg, debating the difficult affirmative side of the question, managed to win three out of seven rounds, which was actually better than the average affirmative at this strenuous tournament.

Jenkins and Rutstein on the negative, fared somewhat better, winning five out of their seven rounds. This placed the University with an 8-6 record, an obvious improvement over their 5-9 result of the previous year. The team's overall record now stands at 42 wins and 28 losses or .600 pct., one of the best records in New England.

This weekend the Society travels to B.U. for a varsity switch-side tournament, in which members will be asked to debate on both sides of the question. In two weeks, the two top varsity members will travel to M.I.T. for a tough switch-side tourney, hoping to bring back another trophy for the school.

The Forensic Society is still hoping to add more novices to its roster. Prospective debaters and interested students are encouraged to drop in at 389 Bartlett to discuss the team's activities with Mr. Biddle, the Society's coach.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: STANTON PEEL

With Southern New England Telephone in New Haven, Stanton Peel (B.S., 1962) handles important engineering assignments for the Current Plans Office.

His projects have been as short as a matter of minutes, as long as several weeks. They have ranged from studies such as he made on the telephone facilities layout around Saybrook and Middlesex Junction, Connecticut, to the very comprehensive package he put together on Weather Announcement Service. Even though he's been with Southern New England Telephone less than a year, Stanton Peel has already established an enviable reputation for his thoroughness and keen analytical ability.

Stanton Peel, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Exchange students include one from the University of New Mexico, Barbara Goodloe, two students from Southern Florida, Joan Angle and Carol Pfitzer, and two from Florida State, Joyce Railton and Mary Lois Stone. Returning from the University of New Mexico are Sue Barret and Terry Wright. Virginia Spence is returning from Florida State.

We also said goodbye last week to Ann and Ellen McGregor who were selected to go to the University of New Mexico this semester as exchange students. Also leaving Hamlin last week as a graduate was Marcia Grueter '64, an education major and also a house counselor. Maureen Keenan '65 will be taking her place this semester as counselor.

The first dorm supper after vacation was held Saturday evening, to provide a chance for the girls to meet the new exchange students and make them feel more at home at the university.

Sorority News

PI BETA PHI

Things are settling into the old familiar routine, but there are a few changes at 388 North Pleasant St. Joan Congdon has gone to New Mexico for the semester on the exchange program, and Pam Brady and Terry Wright have returned from Florida State and New Mexico, respectively, where they were exchange students last semester. It's great to have them with us again and to hear about their experiences on their adopted campuses. There has also been a new addition to our pledge class. All of us are happy to welcome Sue Farley, class of '67. Congratulations are also in order to Judy Seddon who was elected Operations Officer (Activities Chairman) of Angel Flight.

We would like to thank the brothers of Zeta Nu and Phi Mu Delta for making our exchange suppers with them so enjoyable.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Kappa Alpha Theta recently held its annual scholarship banquet. We were pleased to have as our guests Dr. Schumer of the University psychology department, Mrs. Richard Harper, our scholarship advisor, and Mr. Harper. The sisters were seated according to academic average.

To encourage scholastic improvement in our pledge class this year, we have initiated a tutoring program whereby pledges who desire help in specific courses may go for aid to a specific sister who majors in, or has done well in, the particular subject. We have brought up to date our files of old exams which are available for study at all times for the sisters and pledges.

The pledges are also encouraged to take advantage of the house study rooms if they find their usual study quarters unsatisfactory.

With these aids and the untiring work of Nancy Stack, our scholarship chairman, we hope to foster better academic habits and understanding among all our sisters and pledges.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

After a hectic intercession, the Lambda Phis' promptly started second semester with a weekend of bedlam in the Pledge-Sister exchange.

We are pleased to announce the initiation of eleven new sisters: Nancy Stanton, Frani Savage, Frani Basil, Joan Bracker, Jeannie Brown, Bonnie Blittersdorf, Carol-Ann Bollenbach, Jane Grazziano, Janet Keough, Carolyn Surmon, Judy Stevens and Netty Wong.

Welcome, also to Sandy Marchetti who was pledged Tuesday night.

MAINE CAMPUS, Univ. of Maine: UMass isn't the only school on the rapid rise. UMaine recorded a record enrollment of 5,291 students, with a recent state appropriation of $3,903,000 to build on.

The formation of a new military-oriented group is in the wind at UMass—The Scabbard and Blade. UMaine apparently already has one of these groups which held a bivouac for incoming pledges: "The afternoon practical exercise, with seniors acting as the aggressor's force, included running into aggressor fire and maneuvering capturing . . . issuing patrol orders . . . and finding booby-trapped equipment." Handy things to know on a college campus, no?

THE SKIFF, Texas Christian Univ.: Six TCU students, acting as an unofficial "junior jury," sat in the jury box at a recent juvenile traffic trial in a Fort Worth Corporation Court. After listening to the evidence, the students retired, deliberated, and finally delivered a recommendation of corrective punishment. The project was sponsored by the Collegiate Educational Service Corps, A TCU campus organization which is concerned with "making responsible citizens out of college students." Sounds like a good plan for putting "book learning" to practical use, through actual participation in community activities.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY NEWS: High Life Dept.: BU gave its students a chance to "get away from it all" this intersession, but not to Fort Lauderdale and vicinity. The Student Union program director headed a week's holiday tour in Paris, complete with sightseeing trips to the Eiffel Tower, the Arch of Triumph, the Sacred Heart Cathedral, the Place de la Concorde, the Tomb of Napoleon, and the Hotel des Invalides. Total cost per student? Only $335.

TRINITY THIPOD, Trinity College, Conn.: Tired of compulsory Phys. Ed.? Being forced to build a healthy body? Consider yourself lucky. The Trustees of Trinity College are concerned with building a healthy soul. Present college rules require all students "to attend at least nine Sabbath services at the place of worship of their choice. At the end of each term students are to sign a pledge attesting to the fact that they fulfilled the requirement." Campus groups are urging that the rule be abolished, but not, they say, "because it was violated by 80 per cent of the campus."

Nothing Really Matters Does It?

by JAY ISGUR

Question: Player X and player Y go on the court for a tournament match, and as X hits a ball toward Y for the warm up, Y says to the umpire: "I do not wish to warm up. I wish to begin play immediately." The regulations for this particular tournament say that a three-minute warm-up is allowed. What should be done?

Answer: Here we have the age-old conflict of training vs. non-training, of scientist vs. non-scientist, of man vs. animal, of rational vs. irrational, order vs. chaos, construction vs. destruction, building up vs. breaking down, synthesis vs. respiration, inhaling vs. exhaling, American Tobacco Company vs. A.M.A.

What shall we do? Shall we worship order, or shall we accept chaos? Should we place the artificiality of man-made order over the chaotic—but perhaps far more objective—order of the artist who faces chaos, tries to record it as chaos, and usually succeeds in becoming rather chaotic himself?

shall we accept chaos? Should we place the artificiality of man-made order over the chaotic—but perhaps far more objective—order of the artist who faces chaos, tries to record it as chaos, and usually succeeds in becoming rather chaotic himself?

This artist has not imposed order on the reality of the meaningless swarmings of matter. Instead he has faced the limbo, the immortal flux of existence. He has faced it and had the courage to laugh at it (rather hysterically), and say, "I'll play anyway." At which point he is usually locked up.

Why do we not face life as this artist does? Why do we not give curselves a chance to experience reality? What we think is experience is what come one else has told us exists.

Throw off your chains. Go out and seek your very own experiences. Yell, scream, burn your books. Experience. Revel, dissipate, riot, Experience! Maim, ORGIE!

At least go to a movie.

All through? Good. Now sit down. Take a deep breath. Relax. Wasn't that fun? Didn't we really have some great experiences? Real experiences! How about that girl w—ahem, well, ah—mmmm, yes.

But wait a minute good buddies. Before we start again, why did we run riot anyway? Why did you listen to me when I was actually saying that you should listen to no one; that you should find your own experiences in your own ways.

Ah well, too bad. And I hear boys. And if you're caught, don't sirens. Better take to the hills, put the blame on me for inciting you to riot. Remember, I said to listen to no one.

But perhaps some readers are beginning to see the subtlety—indeed, the genius—of my ideas. In brief, they who understand my philosophy of life will never read what I write again; in fact, they will never read anything again. And the ones who merely do what I say will end up jailed, deported, or dead.

And so I must admit to you that I am at the brink of realizing my most revered goal, which is to persuade you who have read these articles not toe believe a word of them, and never to read any of them again.

Then and only then shall I continue writing, continue turning out my volumes supersaturated with wisdom and immortal truths.

Then and only then shall I glory in the attainment of this, the greatest of all my dreams; that all these words shall be spoken in vain, and shall be forever forgotten.

AROUND THE WORLD TREK

Peacewalkers Visit Union

In June, 1962, two young Indian men began at Ghandi's grave in New Delhi a walk for world peace that has carried them over 7,500 miles and through 12 countries to date.

Last night in the Union E. P. Menon and Satish Kumar related their adventures, their views and the reasons for their round-the-world walk to a group of students and professors.

The idea for their journey was set off by the mass demonstration staged by and subsequent arrest of veteran fighter for peace, Bertrand Russell, in London, 1961. Almost a year later, they began the trek from India, both without a penny. Their first encounter was with Pakistan, which, they said, is thought of in India much as we think of Cuba. They purposefully looked for hostility, but (surprisingly enough) found "no enemies". During the early months of that winter, they marched on through Afganistan, and Iran, and finally into the Soviet Union.

In village after village, the people turned out to meet and talk with them. In Moscow, they were received by the Chairman of the Supreme Soviet to whom they suggested unililteral disarmament as a means to world peace. He admitted that the USSR is "ready for disarmament at any time", but is afraid and suspicious. The people of Russia know what war is, so are strongly in favor of real peace.

From Moscow, they walked through Poland, East Germany, through the Berlin Wall, West Germany, Beligium, and France. By the time they reached Paris, the Test Ban Treaty was signed by England, the U.S. and Russia, but France had refused to sign. Arrested in Paris ("unless the French Government signs the Test Ban Treaty, we will stay here forever"), they fasted for 50 hours in prison, until the French officials gave up and sent them on to England.

In London, they met Bertrand Russell, "92 years old, and still young". The British Peace movement financed their trip to the United States. Boarding the Queen Mary, they received the news of President Kennedy's assassination. In this country, they began walking in New York, and ended in Arlington, Virginia . . . "from Mahatma Ghandi's grave in India to Kennedy's grave in America".

From here, they will go to Japan, the first victim of The Bomb, and to China, now in conflict with their own homeland of India.

Critique Staff Hard At Work

Due to the efforts of the students working on Critique, much progress is being made toward completion of the first magazine of this type on campus. The Critique staff, under the direction of Editor-in-Chief Mark Cheren, is active in assimilating the evaluations of courses gained from students and professors throughout the University into separate critiques for the magazine to be made available for sale before Counseling Day, May 6.

From the material gained by the Resarch Staff under Tony Amico, sample critiques have been written by various students in order to study possible article form and to discover potential contributors to the writing staff. The editorial staff, consisting of Sandra Graham, James Crawford, and Lois Baker, have discussed the future feature articles which will be entered in Critique along with the course evaluations and will consist of constructive suggestion for the improvement of academic techniques.

New Seniors' Colliquium Started

This spring, for the first time, a Senior Honors Colloquium will be available to interested students who qualify with an average of 3.0 or better or with a record of a successful semester in an earlier colloquia. This is a plan for interdepartmental honors work whereas the usual Senior Honors program involves a departmental thesis and a departmental advisor.

The new program is entirely experimental. If it is successful, it may be continued. It will be limited to one group this year (ten to fifteen persons). Seniors already doing a Senior Honors thesis or project may also enroll. Persons interested are advised to leave a note of application and a statement of their qualifications in the office of the director, H. L. Varley, in 457 Bartlett Hall.

Redmen In Pivotal Contest Tonight; Bernard And O'Rourke Are The Keys

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts takes on one of their toughest tasks of the year when they face the powerful Rams from the University of Rhode Island this evening. Despite the fact the Rams have only a 2-1 record in the conference, they rank as probably the best team in the league. If the Redmen are to have any hope at all in the league, they must defeat the Rams.

The visitors feature five players that can hit and most anyone on the team can break up a ballgame. Yet with as much talent as they have, the Rams are not invincible. They have suffered five losses this year. Last weekend they bowed to Providence by a score of 83-76. The loss that matters most is the one handed them by the UConn team. The score in that one was an unbelievable 43-41. The Huskies took to the real slow game and with coach Shabel calling the plays and Don Perno the key to the offense, UConn took a big game.

The big scorer for the Rams is all-conference choice Steve Chubin. Despite the fact he was held to seven points in the UConn game, he still ranks among the league leaders. Chubin likes to drive from the corner and use short jumpers. The other forward is Dennis MacGovern. He was scholastically ineligible second semester last year so the Redmen have not faced him yet. He was the leading scorer in both the losses mentioned above. At center is Frank Nightingale from New Bedford. The 6'7" man is the top rebounder and has blossomed in to a good scorer this year.

The guards are Jim Cymbala and Ron Rothstein. The former is a transfer from the Naval Academy. As a freshman he was the leading scorer for the Middies. The latter is the captain of the quintet and the play maker. He will have the job, most likely, of guarding our Pete Bernard. This could develop in to a very interesting duel.

As a team, the Rams like to play a type of ball very similar to that of the University of Massachusetts. Both teams like to run, and shoot well. It would seem that if both play their usual style of ball, this could be a high scoring game.

The status of Rodger Twitchell is still unknown. If he is not available, it is expected that the Redmen will go with the same quintet that brought them wins in the last two outings. This would have Paul Gullicksen and Charlie O'Rourke at forwards, Tim Edwards at center, and Charlie Kingston and Pete Bernard at the guards. While no one will have an easy task defensively, O'Rourke will probably be on Chubin with the hardest one.

There are many keys for the Redmen if they are to win this game. It will probably require the top effort of the year by every member of the team. If the team can stop Cubin from driving and control the backboards, then the team will be in a strong position. At any rate, the Redmen will give a strong account of themselves before what is expected to be one of the biggest crowds of the year. The game will start at 8:15 and will be proceeded by a prelim featuring the little Redmen against Holyoke Junior.

Double Dribbles . . . Rhode Island warmed up for the game by defeating a good BU team Wednesday night 92-76 . . . BU however no longer has the services of big Dick Moreshead . . . In another game of interest Wednesday, Rutgers defeated UConn 68-67 . . . Mass had defeated the Scarlet Knights by a score 101-82 early in the season . . . The Knights sported a 2-10 record before the game so this would have to qualify as a big upset . . .

Providence still holds the top spot in New England, as they now have won ten in a row to run

Hockey Team Wins 2-1 Over Amherst; Glew Continues As Top Goal Getter

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts hockey team defeated Amherst College Wednesday for the second time this season by a score of 2-1.

Playing without the services of starting defenseman Jack Clayton, who is out with an injured foot, the Redmen maintained a wide territorial edge. Amherst's goalie, Dave Stringer, was called upon to make 32 saves, while the Redmen's Skip Bowen had to make only 18.

All the scoring took place in the second period. UMass scored first on a disputed goal by Bob Lee. The goal judge did not flash the red light, but the referee declared it a goal. It was Lee's sixth goal of the season. The assists went to Dick Callahan and John Lasher who was playing his first game of this season.

With 50 seconds remaining in the period Capt. Charlie Glew registered his 10th goal of the season by knocking a rebound shot over Stringer who had fallen to the ice making the save on the initial shot. Pete Hurd and Ken Palm assisted on the goal. With only 22 seconds left in the period Amherst's Deming Sherman got a breakaway and beat Bowen for the Jeff's only goal.

In the last period Bowen made many big saves to preserve the Redmen's one goal lead.

The Redmen who are now 5-3-1 for the season play two home games this weekend. Friday night at 7:00 they face off against University of Pennsylvania and Saturday at 4:30 they play Colgate.

Greek, Dorm Hoop Action Heightens

Last Wednesday three basketball games were played in the intramural league.

Led by Mevnier and Allen, Q.T.V. downed A.E.P. 40-11. In a hotly contested game T.C. shaded P.M.D., 30-25. T.C. had a halftime lead of 14-12, and held the lead through the second half to win the match.

In a hard fought contest, a powerful T.K.E. team overcame a 19-12 deficit to defeat an also strong L.C.A. team 40-35. Both teams had good shooting and a lot of height, but the spirited T.K.E. team was not to be denied.

With thirteen points, Rod Cory

Belafonte Concert Off; Star Doesn't Sign Contract

Harry Belafonte will not appear in concert on the UMass campus this spring.

In an announcement issued late last week, Senior Class President Jim Medeiros made public the fact that Belafonte will not appear.

According to Medeiros the filming of a movie in May has made Belafonte's appearance here impossible.

Medeiros expressed regret over not being able to sign a final contract with the noted star, and added that "we had anticipated that perhaps something of this sort might arise since the first steps of contracting were laden with uncertainties, and until the final step of putting our signatures on paper is realized, we can never be sure. Obviously, we did not make that final move."

The appropriation of $7,000 as backing of the concert from the senior class treasury raised a few eyebrows and some complaints from members of the senior class early in January.

At the time of the appropriation senior executive council member, college bowl star, and victim of appendicitis, Dave Matheison was highly vocal in his objections to the expenditure.

Matheison, along with a number of other seniors, forced a class meeting to more fully discuss the advisability of the concert.

The class meeting voted 77-26 to support the move of the Executive Council and appropriate the necessary funds.

Medeiros stated in his announcement of the failure to sign a final contract with Belafonte that the Senior class "has every intention of sponsoring another program for the same date."

When asked who might be the featured performer, Medeiros

Campus Police Urge Parkers To Move Along

by TERRY STOCK

Students were surprised to have campus policemen tapping on their car windows to check I.D.'s and urging them to move along just before curfew on Friday and Saturday nights in front of the Women's dormitories.

Col. John Marchant has announced that these policemen will be on duty every weekend to help control the flow of traffic.

He explained that cars will be ticketed for double parking as this practice has caused many traffic tie-ups in the past and the situation has recently become worse.

"Boys double park, walk their dates to the door, and then discover they have ten minutes left before curfew. So they stand on the dorm steps for ten minutes and leave their cars in the middle of the road blocking traffic."

"I realize they're only young," he said. "I was young once myself and I did the same thing, but I didn't have a car to park in the middle of the road," he laughed.

"We hope that this additional traffic control method will also keep many girls from being late because of traffic jams," he concluded.

Umies Study Coleoptera

A GROUP of over three hundred bemused University students crowded into the Student Union's Cape Cod Lounge last night to study some weird Coleoptera. The vastly popular singing group, The Beatles (as they are more commonly known), made their first appearance on American television much to the delight of those assembled.

Three Students Attend Civil Rights Conference

Three University students have returned from a weekend of attendance at a civil rights student conference held at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania. Bill Donovan, Philip Johnson, and John Childs spent three days at the conference which saw over 400 delegates from 55 colleges and universities in attendance.

The conference was convened through the auspices of the Bryn Mawr-Haverford Committee in hopes that through contact with persons directly involved and highly placed in the civil rights movement students would better conceive of the problem of civil rights.

A heated verbal clash between James J. Kilpatrick, segregationist editor of the Richmond News Leader and James Farmer, Executive Director of the Congress of Racial Equality opened the conference. Kilpatrick proclaimed that the "Negro is inherently inferior to the white man and consequently integration is wrong." Mr. Farmer dismissed Kilpatrick's argument, citing anthropological data and went on to say, "The basic issue here at hand, is not inherent superiority or inferiority but is one of giving rights to all citizens." Kilpatrick continually called

Terry And Lederle Discuss Med School

Upcoming medical school program at University of Massachusetts was among topics discussed in informal meeting between Dr. Luther Terry (right), Surgeon-General of the U.S., and UMass President John W. On a visit to Western Massachusetts to see his son Michael, a student at Deerfield Academy, Dr. Terry viewed growing UMass campus in Amherst and met with the institution's chief executive.

Marchant Makes Public Parking Fee Totals

by TED WEINBERG

Figures, showing totals of the controversial UMass parking fees were released Friday by John C. Marchant, head of campus security.

The parking fee had come under scrutiny of the state comptroller's office; as well as much criticism from car-owning students.

The following figures were released to point out how the money has been spent:

$11,404.60 was received from August 1, 1963 to December 31, 1963, from the registration of approximately 4,000 automobiles, the report stated.

An estimated receipt of $900 is expected from January 1 to July 31, 1964, resulting in a total gross income for the 1963-1964 period of $12,304.60.

The report indicated expenditures for the 12 month period to be $9,723.31. Of the amount, $5,520.21 was incurred from Aug. 1 to Dec. 31, 1963. The expenses for Jan. 1 to July 31, 1964 is estimated at $4,203.10.

These expenditures are the result of the printing of auto tags and decals; the use of weekly manual labor; and the purchasing of cabinet files and other necessary supplies.

The report disclosed net income for this 12 month period to be estimated at $2,581.29. This money will be used to help absorb the initial expenses of the registration period beginning in September, 1964.

Crises Time For The White Liberal

This rather general editorial is the first in a series which will attempt to investigate in more specific ways the civil rights movement in the North, in relation to the northern college student.

by JOHN B. CHILDS

There was a time when "south of the Mason-Dixon line" meant just that. Anything south of the Mason-Dixon line was, in essence, foreign and didn't belong in the north. This included racial injustice.

That time is no more, it has not been for quite some while.

At a conference held this weekend at Bryn Mawr, entitled the "Second American Revolution" which this writer attended, James Farmer of The Congress of Racial Equality stated, "The white liberal movement in the north is undergoing a fundamental crises. We should not minimize our goals—the white liberals must maximize theirs. If they do not, then white liberals are finished as a progressive force."

Farmer's statement underlines the fact that the "Front" of the battle for civil rights has spread north. Sit-ins are not only in Birmingham but Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Hartford. Liberals who use to scan the comfortable 200 mile distance southward and curse the racial injustice of Dixie now have only to look out of the bay-windows of their own homes.

"I got on the wrong bus," says the Negro in a joke, "and ended up at Chestnut Hill. During the five minutes that I waited for the next bus, property values dropped 70%." So goes the joke. It is exaggerated. But its exaggeration centers around a core of truth.

What is this core of truth? Governor Wallace pointed up this core of truth when he spoke at Smith some months ago. "The Southern system is a philosophy" he said, "and as such the philosophy is to be found not only in the south, but in the north." The philosophy of racial injustice in any of its myriad forms, prevailing throughout the land regardless of geographical location, is the core of truth behind the 70% drop in property values at Chestnut Hill in the joke.

But one does not have to go to Chestnut Hill, nor does one have to go to a White Tower in New York or to the Eastern Shore in Philadelphia to find this insidious philosophy. Jim Crow flies high and he flies wide. His shadow falls upon many things including college campuses.

This is where you come in. You are in the north. The battle for civil rights will be fought with increasing determination right next to you, including you. Are you prepared to act?

OUR NORTH

Civil Rights . . .

Farmer "my brother" throughout the discussion.

The conference moved into working gear on Saturday with over thirty seminars on various aspects of the civil rights movement being held. Appearing at these seminars as "source people" were active members of SNCC—Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, all of whom had been in jail at some time for their civil rights stand.

The meaning of the civil rights movement to American society was brought into perspective at the close of the conference by Howard Zinn, advisor to SNCC. Zinn declared that in the deep south federal presence "is nonexistent." He continued by stating, "We need a federal presence in the deep South, F.B.I. agents stand around and take notes as people are being beaten." As for college students at the conference Zinn confessed that he felt "conferences are antiseptically estranged from the issues they discuss." He urged students to take action from their talking.

Delegates Donovan, Johnson and Childs have indicated that they will attempt to take some action within the coming months as regards the local area.

The local newspaper in the Bryn Mawr area described the conference as a "Communist hotbed."

Chief Justice Criticized

To the Editor:

I was amazed and shocked to read in your paper the reasons given by Chief of Men's Judiciary Bruce Albro for the suspension of six students involved in University Store thefts.

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, fifth edition, defines "steal" in part as follows, "To take, and carry away feloniously . . . ". According to Albro, these students were being punished primarily because they in effect stole from themselves and their fellow students. In my code of ethics, I feel that it is wrong to steal from anybody. Please, let us have no more of this type of wishy-washy thinking on a subject so vital to our human relations and conduct.

Yours truly,
John H. Dittfach
Faculty

To the Editor:

I am a little surprised at the statement of the Chief Justice of the Men's Judiciary regarding thefts from the University Store in the Collegian of February 5, 1964.

It appears that stealing from a small corporation is bad but stealing from a "large impersonal corporation" is not so bad, and that stealing from oneself and from other students is worse than stealing from just people in general. Stealing is immoral, whether the theft is from fat people, skinny people, corporations, companies, the state, students, rich people, poor people, old ladies or pretty girls. This is the point and this is why these persons who steal should be punished.

Noisy Women In Protest

To the Editor:

We, the freshmen of four South Knowlton House, would like to protest the award to Dwight House for the Noisiest Women's Dormitory at UMass. We feel that we are members of the noisiest and most unruly corridor and dorm on campus (second only to Baker House, of course). We would like to know how this decision was made, since we have viewed the Dwight girls in action and know they cannot compare to us. We have been known to douse floors with water and Rice Krispies, have snowball fights in the corridor, and start fierce feuds by locking john and shower doors from the inside, removing shower curtains, and stealing doorknobs.

If you fel that you cannot now reconsider your decision, we feel that we at least deserve recognition for our earnest efforts.

Thank you.

Winter Carnival Weekend To Honor William Shakespeare

The award winning movie Romeo and Juliet starring Lawrence Harvey, Susan Shentall, and Flora Robson will be shown in Bowker Auditorium on Wed., Feb. 12, at 7:45.

Professor O'Donald of the English department will give an interesting introduction to the movie at 7:00.

It is a magnificent motion picture, faithfully following Shakespeare's classic. The picture was elaborately filmed in Italy, taking full advantage of the breathtaking Italian countryside. Shown are all the castles, marketplaces, costumes, and monasteries as they were in the time depicted. The expert cast gives sensitive performances, capturing the love, beauty and tragedy of the original play.

The movie is being presented in conjunction with the Winter Carnival Weekend as a part of the Carnival tribute to William Shakespeare.

was unable to state definitely but mentioned the names of Bob Hope, Jonathon Winters, Victor Borge, and Sammy Davis, Jr.

Medeiros did not quote the prices that any of these performers were asking, but in all probability they will be nearly equal to the figure asked by Belafonte.

A new facet will be added to the Winter Carnival this year with addition of combined dormitory parties on Saturday night. Groups of two or three men's dormitories will combine their efforts for the Saturday night parties, all with their own bands.

Meanwhile, a three-group hootenany, or folk singing concert, will travel from party to party to add their talents to the evening's agenda. The class of "65" supplies the folk singers while dorms will handle the rest of the entertainment.

WINTER CARNI TO BE FEATURED ON CHANNEL 40

The 1964 UMass Winter Carnival will be featured on the Barbara Bernard show at 1:30 on Wednesday, Feb. 12, on Channel 40, Springfield. The five Carnival Queen finalists, Diane Klein, Roxanne Giles, Pam Chace, Marty Brockway, and Ann Creedan, (pictured above l-r) will be presented on the show.

Several tapes of lasts year's Carnival will be shown and a complete run down of this year's Weekend will be given.

Elmira College Study

Student Interest Indicated By Seat

(I.P.)—WHERE A STUDENT HABITUALLY SITS IN A CLASSROOM may affect her learning, indicate something about her personality, or her attitudes toward the course and teacher, judging from research being carried out by Dr. Edward R. Ostrander, associate professor of psychology at Elmira College.

Previous studies show that students do tend to choose either the same seat or area of a classroom day after day and that there is some correlation between their choice of seats and their interest and achievement in the course, said Dr. Ostrander. His research, therefore, may have bearing on seldom considered factors in the teaching-learning process.

Dr. Ostrander's interest in this subject was first roused about two years ago when one of his advanced psychology students explored the seating habits of 120 high school students in a term research project. She found that three quarters of them consistently sat either in the center or around the borders of the classrooms as they changed from class to class. When she classified their seating as "in front or at the back of the rooms," slightly over half were found to occupy the same section in each of their classrooms.

Another of his students distributed questionnaires to about 70 women in their residence hall. These students indicated where they habitually sat in their various classes, their grades in the course, and rated, on a scale, their liking for the course and instructor.

Interestingly, she found no relationship between seating and grades, possibly because most college classes are small; but she did find that those who gave a high rating to both course and instructor tended to sit in the center of the room rather than around the edges.

Last year another of Dr. Ostrander's students attempted to find a correlation between seating habits in classes, the students' interest in their work and their grade expectations. After they had taken their first five weeks test, students were asked what grade they had expected to receive in the course when the course began, what they expected after the first five weeks, and whether they found the classes interesting.

Students who expressed high interest and whose grade expectations went up after five weeks contact with the course tended thereafter to sit farther forward in the classroom. Those with high interest, but who felt discouraged after five weeks, tended to move farther back, and those who admitted that they weren't much interested in the course but were not worried about their grades were likely to stay where they were.

Dr. Ostrander has received $3,000 from the National Institute of Health which will enable him to employ a professionally trained person to carry out the statistical analyses.

Northampton State Hospital Orientation To Be Held Thurs.

On Thursday evening, February 6, an orientation for students interested in doing volunteer work was held at Northampton State Mental Hospital. The orientation program serves the purpose of introducing students to hospital volunteer work, and acquainting them with the different programs available. In addition, all situations that the volunteer might encounter while at the Hospital were discussed.

A variety of programs will be offered for student participation. Remotivation, a very popular program in the past, will be held on Thursday evenings, and a program of socialization will again be held on Wednesday evenings. Other fields that have established programs include arts and crafts, dance therapy, recreation, and various forms of occupational therapy.

Last semester the student volunteer program was far more successful than ever before. It is hopeful that this coming semester's volunteer work will prove even more successful than that of the past.

Any student wishing additional information may call Jerry Kagan or Harvey Kanter at AL 3-7498.

Swimmers Win 54-41 Over Holy Cross

by BUD PRATT

Surprised by a much stronger-than-usual Holy Cross Varsity, the University swimmers had to go all out to beat Holy Cross in a meet at WPE last Thursday.

UM started off with a victory in the 400-yd medley relay, with Koss, Monnier, O'Sullivan, and Daniels covering the distance in 4:18.5. THE 200 FREESTYLE WAS STRICTLY BETWEEN MIKE ROTHSCHILD AND THE RECORD BOOKS; Mike went out (swam the first 100 yards) in 54 seconds flat—a fast enough time to win the 100. But this pace is practically a physical impossibility for the full distance, and Mike covered the last 50 in 35 painful seconds. Emerging from the pool, he gasped to coach Joe Rogers, "Boy, am I out of shape." Out of shape or not, Mike's 1:59.8 established him as the first UM swimmer to break two minutes in the 200. While Mike is not "out of shape" in the usual sense, it may be safely anticipated that he will continue to improve for the New Englands next month.

At this point Holy Cross began to scramble and UM's lead in the meet became precarious. Watt's second in the fifty, Hanley's second in the diving, and O'Sullivan's second in the 200 butterfly were all the points we could get in those events. And so close was the 200-yd individual medley that it took the officials ten minutes to name Mike Bjornholm the winner. O'Mara was third, while Holy Cross's Foley was declared second.

After the 200 fly, UM's lead had been shaved to two points, but from this point on, the Mass. varsity is a tower of strength. Nevertheless, Holy Cross scrambled. SOPHOMORE DICK DANIELS WON THS 100 FREESTYLE by the length of a finger. Again, Holy Cross's Foley was the victim. Leading 32-29, UM had all its guns saved for the remaining events. Bjornholm and Koss finished one-two in the backstroke; ROTHSCHILD AND WILSON PLACED ONE-THREE IN THE 500 FREESTYLE; and Monnier and Grybko took the first two places in the 200 breaststroke, Charlie's winning time being a fast 2:37.3.

Nevertheless, Holy Cross had given a good account of itself, and co-captains Mike Bjornholm and Mike Rothschild hurried back to Wheeler House to compose a letter congratulating Holy Cross on its much-improved team. The letter expressed hope that soon Holy Cross would have a pool of its own for practice and competition.

Wednesday the varsity meets Connecticut in what will probably prove to be its toughest meet of the remaining season. The Mermen have won their last two meets and stand at two wins, three losses for the season to date. The Connecticut meet will take place at three o'clock, WPE.

Basketball ...

In the second half, UMass did a sharp about face and hit for 60 points to tie a record as they made 26 of 45 from the floor to tie another record. Bernard added 19 points to reach 22 for the night. He also pulled in 11 rebounds. O'Rourke had 18 points and 10 rebounds in a really fine effort. The ever improving Paul Gullicksen had 15 points and an equal number of rebounds. Edwards hit for 11 points and 14 rebounds, mostly in the second half. Charlie Kingston added 10 more. Mike Shea managed 19 for AIC who were simply outclasses in the second half.

THE NEXT GAME for the Redmen is the crucial visit to Storrs to take on UConn in another important game. The Huskies are still on top in the league and a win is a must for the Redmen.

HOCKEY SEXTET displayed valiant effort only to lose to top ranked Colgate. The Redmen, who now stand 5-5-1 for the season, meet Williams College on Wednesday at Orr Rink.

were scored unassisted.

LATE SATURDAY afternoon the Redmen tangled with Colgate University. The Red Raiders from Hamilton, New York, one of the East's top sextets, were heavily favored in this game.

Early in the first period Bobby Edmonston scored his 4the goal of the season to put the Redmen ahead 1-0. Dick Feldhoff took a face-off to the left of the Colgate goal, passed to Edmonston alone in front of the goal and Bobby faked goalie Curt Brown out of position and shot the puck into the net. Later in the first period Capt. Charlie Glew was knocked head-first into the boards and had to be taken to the infirmary. Without Glew the team was severely handicapped on offense.

ARCHER (SKIP) BOWEN'S superb goal-tending preserved the Redmen's one goal lead until Colgate's Jukoski scored with three minutes left in the second period. At the end of two periods the score was tied 1-1.

IN THE LAST PERIOD Colgate scored 4 goals. Sam Olriksen, Tom Meehan (his 16th), Brian Edgerly, and Ralph Kelley got the goals. The final score was Colgate 5, UMass 1.

The Redmen's Skip Bowen had 35 saves to 14 for Colgate's Curt Brown.

THE REDMEN ARE NOW 5-5-1 for the season; Colgate is 10-4. Wednesday at 7:30 the Redmen play Williams College at the Orr Rink.

Matmen Maul M.I.T. Preserve First Victory 18-14

by NICK PAPPAS

LAST SATURDAY AT M.I.T., Coach John Douglas' Matmen upset the favored Boston team, breaking a four meet losing streak. With the outcome resting on the last match, tension ran high to the last minute. The meet got off to a fast start when Boris Chevone's fine effort in the 123 pound class gained a pin for UMass in the last period. Bad luck seems to have been following Boris since the beginning of the season but he certainly proved what he could do in this match. Then Charlie Sisson won a decision over M.I.T.'s Connely in the 130 pound class. Charlie is in great shape and he wrestled a really fast match.

THE M.I.T. MEN began a comeback with the 137 pound division. Dick Shulman wrestled a fine match but lost by decison. Then Whitman pinned Redman Frank Phillips to bring the total match score to 8-8. This was Frank's first match after a long absence due partly to injuries and it is hoped that he will see a lot of service from now on.

ONE OF THE HIGH SPOTS of the day was the 157 pound match between Matman George Darling and M.I.T.'s Williams. Despite some tremendous effort on Darling's part, especially in the first period, the Boston wrestler won three more points to push his team into the lead. Then Wells of M.I.T. managed to get through Dave Cafarelli's strong wrestling style for three more points.

UMass took the lead and kept it with the two heaviest classes. With Kelly back on the team at 177 pounds and the potentially great Milt Morin in the unlimited class, UMass is almost sure to dominate the heaviest classes, no matter who the opposing school is. Kelly won five points for Coach Douglas with a spectacular pin in 4:48 time. Then Morin completely overpowered Sloat and pinned him at the start of the second period. The match score now stood at 18-14, the Redmen's first victory of the season.

Despite the absence of 137 pound star Jesse Brogan (due to a slight hand injury from the action with Coast Guard), the Redmen really outclassed their opponents and, on the whole, showed real potential. The UMass team scored three pins while the men from M.I.T. could muster only one. With Sisson, Kelly, and Morin now wrestling steadily, it looks as though Mass might place high in the New England Tournament this March. The Matmen's next encounter is with Williams, an away meet on February 15.

Independent B-Ball In Full Schedule

by RONALD PASTERCZYK

As Independent Basketball got under way last Thursday night, the Phys. Ed. Grads, with the stellar playmaking of Julius Gundersheim, and the great board work of Ed Sullivan, were tabbed as the team to beat. Their smooth combinations led them to an easy win over the Land Arch. boys by the score of 47-23.

IN OTHER TOP ACTION Stewart popped in 19 points as the Baker Independents topped their brother club the Baker Bombers 41-22. The remainder of the schedule saw the Traitors trip WMUA, as Karagosian scored 21 of his team's 25 points; ASP Pledges take Greenough C; the Chem Club beat Grad House; the Buggars over Civ. Eng.; PE Majors over the Roadrunners and with the "Shadow" clearing the boards, Greenough B topped the SPE Pledges to complete the action.

Hoopsters Victimize Rams

A.I.C. Steamrolled 84-70; Redmen In League Contention

by JOHN GOODRICH

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS remained in contention for the Yankee Conference crown with an impressive 88-75 win over the University of Rhode Island. The game was marked by a fine team effort that placed six men in double figures, the leader, as usual, Pete Bernard with 29 points. On Saturday night the Redmen visited Springfield to play American International College and despite a shooting performance in the first half that threatened to return the game to the peach basket stage, the visitors were victorious by a score of 84-70.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S GAME AGAINST URI called for one of the best team efforts of the year and the Redmen made that effort and more. The game was only close for the first half as the teams traded hoop for hoop for about the first ten minutes. The referees were really calling the game closely and there were many violations during this stretch. Finally at the midpoint of the half Mass was on top 19-17. Then Bernard hit for a hoop and a foul shot and Charlie Kingston scored on a three point play and the home team was off.

From that point on the closest the visitors could get was four points, the margin at half time 38-34. The Redmen held this lead despite the fact that they made only two points over the last 4 and a half minutes. The key in the opening session was the fine defense shown by the team as a whole. In fact only Steve Chubin was able to score consistently for the Rams as he hit for 18 points before intermission. Those he garnered mainly on some real fine driving layups. He also picked up three fouls during this stretch which along with close guarding was to limit his actions in the second half.

BERNARD LED THE REDMEN WITH 13 POINTS and Tim Edwards added eight as all of the team got into the act. Bernard deserves special mention for his efforts because of the fact that he was closely guarded by Ron Rothstein. But by the effective use of picks and screens Pete was able to get free to continue his hot shooting. Despite the fact that the Redmen were out-rebounded they were still able to grab off the shots when needed. The close guarding of the team also forced the Rams to hurry their shots and miss a great many.

If the Redmen played well in the first half, they were superb in the second. The team came out and scored six quick points to open a ten point spread and the Rams never got closer than 10 after that. Bernard really cut loose and hit on 7 of 10 shots to lead the blitz. The team shot around 60% for the half as they left little doubt about who the better team was this night. As if the shooting didn't hurt the Rams enough, they lost Rothstein their ace playmaker on fouls with over 14 minutes left.

Not to be over looked either was the great defensive job Chuck O'Rourke did on Chubin holding the high scorer to just four points in the second half. Besides this O'Rourke finished with 14 points and 12 rebounds.

ONLY SIX MEN SCORED FOR THE REDMEN but they were all in double figures. Besides Bernard and O'Rourke, Edwards had 14, Paul Gullicksen 11 with 11 rebounds, Kingston had 10 and Rodger Twitchell, playing with a face mask to protect his fractured nose, hit for 10, mostly in the late stages when the Rams tried to press. The team finished with 34 of 68 from the floor in a sparkling performance. The Rams got 22 points and 13 rebounds from Chubin and 11 from the hobbling Frank Nightingale, but that was about all. The Mass defense held the Rams in check so much that one finds it hard to believe that they had been ranked number 2 in New England behind Providence.

AGAINST THE ACES, Coach Orr feared that there might be a let down after the big effort the night before. That is exactly what happened as the Redmen just could not find the hoop. They managed to score only 24 in the first half as they trailed by 7. The team hit on only 11 of 44 as Kingston and O'Rourke led the team with six points each. Exceptionally close guarding by Mike Shea and Tom Cannon held Bernard to 3 points. The Aces were not hitting much better, but held a wide edge on the foul line.

PETE BERNARD continued his torrid pace and led UMass to victory over highly ranked Rhode Island. This gave the Redmen their third league win.

Hockey Team Downed By Pennsylvania And Colgate

by MORRIS SHUBOW

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS HOCKEY team lost to the University of Pennsylvania 6-2 and to Colgate University 5-1 in games played this past weekend at Orr Rink.

Friday night the Pennsylvania Red and Blue coached by former Colby All-American Ron Ryan got a hat trick by Buzz Raborn to defeat UMass 6-2.

THE REDMEN SCORED FIRST after only 18 seconds of play with Ken Palm scoring his 5th goal. The assist went to new defenseman Ken Demars. But less than a minute later Penn tied the score on a goal by Jimmy Robbins. UPenn went ahead 2-1 on John Ahlgrem's goal but with 20 seconds left in the period Ken Palm sent Capt. Charlie Glew in alone and the speedy center scored his 11th goal of the year making the score 2-2 at the end of the first period.

THE REDMEN WERE UNABLE TO SCORE AGAIN and Penn came up with a goal by Steve Connett and three goals by Buzz Raborn to make the final score 6-2.

UMass out shot Pennsylvania 26 to 18 but it was Penn's ability to take advantage of opportunities that decided the outcome of this game. All of Penn's goals

"All The World's A Stage;" Winter Carni Begins Friday

A hard-working Junior class has planned a full round of events for this year's Winter Carnival, slated for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. This year's carni theme is "All the World's a Stage."

The UMass ski team will kick off the weekend with a ski speed contest on the hill behind Thatcher Dormitory. Competition is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. Following the ski team, all University students will be invited to participate in races. Medals will be given in both men's and women's divisions.

At 8 p.m. the Winter Carnival Ball will commence, with dancing to the music of Lester Lanin's Orchestra. To highlight the ball, the Queen of Winter Carnival will be crowned during intermission.

During the ball, starting at 9:30 p.m., sleigh rides will be given around College Pond. Dance music will be piped out onto the terrace of the Union for outdoors minded visitors.

The theme "All the World's a Stage" will prompt all participants in the snow sculpture contest—fraternities, sororities, dormitories, and commuters—to base their creations on the theatrical stage since Shakespeare's time. Class ocers are expectantly awaiting a promised snowfall which would make the weekend a total success.

Outdoor activities will start early, and continue through the day on Saturday. At 10 a.m., fraternities will compete in the now traditional toboggan race down to the pond. The Class of 1967, assisted by Revelers, will sponsor this event, awarding prizes to the winners. Following the races, the run will be open to the public until 4 p.m.

Sleigh rides and dog races will begin in the area of the pond at about 1 p.m.

The fashion show, titled "As You Like It" will depict a weekend in the life of a University co-ed with fashions ranging from sports to formal wear. The colorful show begins Saturday at 1 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

A music hour is scheduled for 2 p.m. on the terrace of the Union.

The speed skating trial will be contests against time, in the true Olympic tradition. Contestants will race in two heats, the 3 best combined times for a residential area will give that area a prize. The first place men in dormitory and fraternity competition will then face off for the campus championship.

Jack Walter, representing Baker House, was North American indoor speed skating champion in the intermediate class in 1961.

The pond will be the scene of the Powder Puff Hockey game to be held at 4 p.m. Dormitories and sororities will compete, using brooms and volley balls.

Fraternity and dormitory parties and the Stockbridge sponsored Sno-Ball in the Student Union Ballroom will comprise the evening entertainment, along with a UMass vs. Vermont basketball game.

The New Christy Minstrels will wind up the weekend festivities with a Sunday concert at 2 p.m. in the Cage. The largest group in the folk field, the group takes their name from one founded in 1842.

LOVELY MICHELE HOLOVAK will be one of the models in "As You Like It," the Saturday afternoon fashion show presentation of the Winter Carnival Committee.

DORMITORIES, FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES are all awaiting the promised snowfall so that work may commence on this year's Winter Carnival Snow Sculptures.

International Affairs To Be Discussed At Smith College

Prof. David Leonard of the UMass History Department will participate in the National Student Association Winter Regional Conference on International Affairs to be held Feb. 14-15 at Smith College.

The conference will open Friday night with a keynote address by author and educator Dr. Harold Taylor, who will discuss "The Student in American Society". Dr. Taylor is former president of Sarah Lawrence College.

Joan Chasan, conference coordinator sees the conference as a study of the student as he is—or is not: "as a factor of change in his own society." Miss Chasan stated that the conference should lead to a "better understanding of the role of a student."

About 200 visitors are expected coming from the entire New England area, including several from the University.

Delegates will meet Saturday and participate in student led seminars to consider the student in specific areas, with special emphasis on Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East.

NSA officials will examine the roles of the students, based upon their own experience in dealing with the more than 70 foreign student associations having relationships with NSA.

Co-ordinator Chasan told the Collegian that the conference is especially important due to the fact that students from several of the countries under discussion are attending one of the Four Colleges, and that many will be at the conference to give delegates first hand information on their respective nations. She added that this was especially applicable to Tanganyika; that "we will be dealing with those who will eventually lead the government."

Miss Chasan added further that students around the world have a great interest in the United States. She cited the huge volume of mail received by NSA national office after the assassination of President Kennedy.

The Collegian will be represented by John Childs, recently returned from the Second American Revolution Conference at Bryn Mawr. Childs is a student of Middle East anthropology.

Area Legislators File UMass Night School Bill

Two area legislators have introduced a bill to establish evening classes at UMass. Reps. David Bartley of Holyoke and Walter Kostarski of Montague defended their bill at hearings held before the Committee on Education Monday. Bartley told the committee that the time had come for a "bold, new approach."

Bartley further pointed out that the annual budget for the University now exceeds 25 million, with a value of ten times that attached to the campus buildings.

He charged that the Trustees have been too "slow in examining avenues of approach to the education problem." Saying that there has been shown a need for more use of facilities, and citing the need for 25,000 places in the next ten year, Bartley said that even with the present plans for extended year-round operation there still is insufficient use of buildings at the University.

The two representitives insisted it should be possible to use the classroom and lab facilities for more than 8 to 10 hours a day. For examples they singled out some European colleges which use their facilities all day and into the night.

The establishment of an evening school would afford this full-time use, the two claimed.

Sat. Morning Deadline For Sculptures

Sculptures must be completed by 7:00 a.m. 15 February 1964, and final judging will take place on Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon. This year's judges are Mr. A. H. Mathiesen from the engineering department, Mrs. Meida Riggs from the women's physical education department, and Mr. Allen Torrey, the town manager of Amherst.

The criteria which they will follow are: Originality, craftmanship, (details, etc.), pertinence to general theme, general appearance (no dirty snow etc.), and adherence to general rules and regulations.

Local Lawyer Addresses Pre-Law Club

Attorney Bruce Brown of the law firm of Brown and Kaplan, Amherst will speak on the "Practice of Law" at a meeting of the Pre-Law Association, Thursday, February 13, 1964 at 4:00 p.m., in the Colonial Lounge. An election of officers will be held prior to the address by Atty. Brown. The Association, newly formed, is beginning to launch a coordinated program of speakers and activities for all University students interested in the field of law.

The American Bill Of Wrongs

by CARI CLARK

History has an embarrassing habit of creating new problems and situations while old solutions and institutions are still flying their flags. Nations caught red-faced in this predicament must either plug their ears to charges of hypocrisy or shift gears and head in the new direction. Since we Americans pride ourselves on our progressive, liberal image, the latter course is the only honorable way for us to redeem ourselves. And change is undeniably needed, especially in that anachronism, the Bill of Rights. Take a quick look: Prince Edward County has redefined the term "public education"; Governor Wallace has put "states rights" ahead of "human rights" in his amoral dictionary; Southern congressmen have taken it upon themselves to limit the legislative power of the majority; and freedom of assembly throughout the country has been refined and improved by official permits judiciously issued. Recognizing this great need for reform, The Blade of Toledo, Ohio, has rewritten the out-moded Bill of Rights and, in keeping with current national feeling, has entitled it the American Bill of Wrongs. It is a document of which Americans can be justly proud.

Article 1. Freedom of speech and press shall not be abridged so long as the views expressed are popular. The right of the people to peaceably assemble and petition for the redress of grievances shall not be denied except south of Latitude 39 degrees.

Article 2. An unregulated militia being necessary to the security of the United States, the right of juvenile delinquents, adult hoodlums, and cranks to bear mail-order pistols and switch-blade knives shall not be infringed.

Article 3. No U.S. soldier shall be quartered in or near any American community unless the right of local merchants to serve the customers of the color of their choice is maintained.

Article 4. The right of people to be secure in their homes and persons against unreasonable searches and seizures shall be violated only by police agents and vigilantes.

Article 5. No person shall be deprived of due process of law except those suspected by congressional investigators and duly chartered patriotic groups.

Article 6. All citizens shall have the right to know the nature of charges against them and to confront their accusers so long as this meets with the approval of public officials, elected or unelected politicians, and noncharitable private societies.

Article 7. The right of trial by jury shall be preserved wherever verdicts conform to local public opinion.

Article 8. There shall be no cruel or unusual punishments, and even those suspected of unpatriotic views shall only be ostracized, stripped of reputation, and barred from employment.

Article 9. The enumeration of these particular rights in no way deprives the people of other rights, especially the inalienable right of the majority at any time to deny the rights of unattractive, peculiar, or nonconforming individuals.

Article 10. All powers not given to the United States Government belong to the states; provided, however, that the U.S. Supreme Court under Chief Justice Earl Warren shall be prohibited from making any decisions that deny states the right to withhold the full privileges of citizenship from inhabitants who dwell in cities or whose complexion is un-American.

The Brain Pickers

Those seniors with enough youthful pride left after four years in college have a problem facing them, one which we must all face at some time. This problem consists of the various psychological tests and questionnaires demanded by the prospective employer seeking you. For my own part, I refuse to answer them as a matter of principle. This principle started with George Orwell's "1984" and was nourished by Vance Packard.

But many of you will bow to the testers and reveal your innermost self. If you don't like flashy ties, had a lovely relationship with your parents, get along with everyone, like a neat desk, don't want to be an astronaut, etc., you are in good shape . . . at least as far as the company is concerned.

Yet, there will undoubtedly be a place on your questionnaire asking "Will you submit to a lie detector test?" Now this may not annoy you as much as it does me, but it certainly demonstrates something in terms of the corporate mind. You will probably check the "Yes" box like any good prospective employee with nothing to hide. But before you do this ask yourself how your heart and skin will respond to a question such as, "Do you have any homosexual tendencies?" You may be surprised how your answer and the machine's answer will differ. But it's all for the company . . . right?

Freedom For All

by KENNETH FEINBERG

With the argument for the end of colonial ties being stressed throughout the world, perhaps we, as educated Americans, can realize the grave consequences involved in allowing freedom for those unprepared for it. I speak especially of those African republics and in particular the independent nation of Rwanda, for this nation dissolved colonial ties with Britain too soon.

The argumennt for independence is a valid one, but as colonial assimilation ends, so does government and social assistance to a large degree. The results in Rwanda are a factual example.

Last week, ten thousand human beings of the Watutsi tribe were massacred by the neighboring Bahuta tribe in a form representing genocide. The massacre was in fear of government uprising by the Watutsi. The Rwandan government, established in 1962, instructed the Bahutas to "take whatever action necessary against suspicious Watutsis."

Independence is a natural right; however, it is not a sudden process. Colonial nations should realize the problem of Rwanda and prepare their possessions for independence when independence comes, thus assuring "freedom for the free."

To Give Americans A Chance

To the Editor:

A primary principle of democratic elections is that the electorate be given the opportunity to make a mistake. For the first time in many years there appears on the American political scene a representative of a precise and distinct political persuasion whose possible presidential nomination offers such an opportunity.

The American voters can now be given the chance to choose between the lethargy of true conservatism and the progress of at least quasi-liberalism. Barry Goldwater who represents the essence of Republicanism to which all true party members must adhere should be the Republican nominee. Similarly, and concurrently Americans can be given the chance to commit another great folly. "Maggie" Chase Smith would be the perfect running mate for the Arizona "rocketeer." In spite of her claims of moderacy she has, via her voting record, followed the same road back to the nineteenth century. But most important we can have the opportunity to either accept or reject the prospect of femininity in the federal government.

Discrimination And Credit Cards

by PAT LONG

State Univ. News: Michigan's President John A. Hannah stated recently that he would like to see students banned from premises where known racial discrimination exists.

Present University housing policy says that a person found guilty of such discrimination is dropped from approved housing lists, but President Hannah seems to feel that this is not enough. "People who practice discrimination should be at a disadvantage," he said. "But how can the University say a student over 21 may live where he pleases and then place a limit on this?" A good question.

THE SKIFF, Texas Christian Univ.: College students these days apparently carry check books and credit cards instead of cold, nard cash. Merchants in the vicinity of the TCU campus report that a greater number of goods and services are being paid for with checks, often ranging from fifty cents to five dollars, or with the ubiquitous, all-purpose credit card. Can it be that a sort of "Diner's Club Syndrome" is setting in? Will the beautiful greenback soon go the way of the silver dollar?

THE ARROW, Southern Colorado State: While UMass students were screaming for a reading period before final examination, (And did they scream in vain?) undergrads at Southern Colorado were patting themselves on the back because they were given one day as a study time. Ordinarily, it seems, exams begin right on the heels of the last classes. "This new system," THE ARROW reports, "is being tried and whether or not it will become a standard policy depends on the reaction to it." A taste of the blessings of a reading period, we suspect, will only give Colorado students a desire for more.

CHUNG-ANG HERALD, Chang-ang Univ. Korea: Ever wonder whether there are brains behind the bright facades of beauty contest winners? Here is one school that takes no chances. Miss Shin-Ja Kim, a 22-year-old Pharmacy major recently named "Miss Chung-ang," was chosen from a group of senior women students with an average of "B" in their academic records, recommended by the department chairmen. The contest is judged by faculty members. Query: Why let the faculty have all the fun?

THE INNER MAN

College is fun and frolic and fullfillment—except for one melancholy omission: we don't get to enjoy Mom's home cooking. (In my own undergraduate days, curiously enough, I did not undergo this deprivation; my mother, a noted cross-country runner, was never home long enough to cook a meal until her legs gave out last Arbor Day.)

But most of us arrive at college with fond gastric memories of Mom's nourishing delicacies, and we are inclined now and then to heave great racking sighs as we contemplate the steam tables in the campus cafeteria. Take, for an extreme example, the case of Finster Sigafoos.

Finster, a freshman at one of our great Eastern universities (Oregon State) came to college accustomed to home cooking of a kind and quantity enjoyed by very few. Until entering college, Finster had lived all his life in Europe, where his father was an eminent fugitive from justice. Finster's mother, a natural born cook, was mistress of the hauté cuisine of a dozen countries, and Finster grew up living and eating in the Continental manner.

He arose each morning at ten and breakfasted lightly on figs, hot chocolate, and brioche. (It is interesting to note, incidentally, that brioche was named after its inventor, perhaps the greatest of all French bakers, Jean-Claude Brioche (1634-1921). M. Brioche, as we all know, also invented croissants, French toast, and—in a curious departure—the electric razor. Other immortal names in the history of breadstuffs are the German, Otto Pumpernickel (1509-1848) who invented pumpernickel and thus became known to posterity as The Iron Chancellor; the two Americans, William Cullen Raisin (1066-1812) and Walter Rye (1931-1932) who collaborated on the invention of raisin rye; and, of course, Hans Christian Andersen (1805-1875) who invented Danish pastry).

But I digress. Finster, I say, breakfasted lightly at ten a.m. At eleven a.m. his Mom brought him his elevenses. At twelve she brought him his twelveses. At 1:30 she served his lunch: first a clear broth; then a fish course (porgy and bass); then an omelette; then the main course—either a saddle of lamb, an eye of sirloin, or a glass of chicken fat; then a salad of escarole; and finally a lemon soufflé.

At three p.m. Mom served Finster low tea, at five p.m. high tea, and at ten p.m. dinner—first a bowl of petite marmite (she trapped the marmites herself); then a fish course (wounded trout); then an omelette of turtle eggs; then the main course—either duck with orange or a basin of farina; then a salad of unborn chicory; and finally a caramel mousse.

And then Finster went off to college, which reminds me of Marlboro Cigarettes. (Actually it doesn't remind me of Marlboro Cigarettes at all, but the makers of Marlboro pay me to write this column and they are inclined to get surly if I fail to mention their product. Mind you, I don't object to mentioning their product—no sir, not one bit. Marlboro's flavor is flavorful, the filter filters, the soft pack is soft, the Flip-Top box flips, and the tattoo is optional. Marlboros are available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states of the Union. Next time you're in the U.S.A., try a pack.)

But I digress. We were speaking of Finster Sigafoos who went from Continental dining to dormitory feeding. So whenever you feel sorry for yourself, think of Finster, for it always lifts the heart to know somebody is worse off than you are.

© 1964 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro, can't say whether European food beats ours, but this we believe: America's cigarettes lead the whole world. And this we further believe: among America's cigarettes, Marlboros are the finest.

When The Walls Close In

by INEZ BRAND

Do you find yourself campused more than seven nights a week? If so, you may want a few hints on how to amuse yourself when the walls start closing in.

Mary Louise Goo, an expert on this subject for the Montana State Exponent, offers some activities for a swinging weekend in the dormitory.

First, lather the corridor with soap suds, find a large piece of cardboard, and ski. Then, put your roommate's bed in the elevator and send it to the basement. If you have a single room, use your counselor's bed. Next, roller skate through the halls at 3 a.m. Finally, ride a mattress down the stairs. When you get to the bottom, you're all set to sack out.

If you suffer from insomnia and need further activities, you can find a supplemental list in a letter to the Editor, Feb. 10.

* * * *

Are you annoyed when people borrow your hair spray? Do you wish they'd squirt it in their eye? If this is your peeve, you may be interested in how five Brigham Young co-eds solved a similar problem. These five roommates were annoyed by the sixth girl in the room, who always borrowed their sprays, but never bought her own. The girls, realizing their mutual problem, united in purpose to purchase a can of spray enamel. Yes, you guessed it. They removed the label and substituted another from a hair spray can. Just as suspected, "Borrow-bits" came into the room, picked up the can, and with a press of the finger, enameled herself like a mahogany bust. The funniest part about it all is that to this day she has the shiniest hair on campus and still doesn't know what she's using.

Hospital Volunteers To Meet

On Thursday evening, February 13, an orientation for students interested in doing volunteer work will be held at Northampon State Mental Hospital. The orientation program serves the purpose of introducing students to hospital volunteer work, and acquainting them with the different programs available. In addition, all situations that the volunteer might encounter while at the Hospital will be discussed.

A variety of programs will be offered for student participation. Remotivation, a very popular program in the past, will be held on Thursday evenings, and a program of socialization will again be held on Wednesday evenings.

Anyone interested in attending the orientation program this Thursday should be in the main lobby of the Student Union at 7 p.m. Transportation will be provided. Anyone with a car is urged to bring it.

For further information, call Jerry Kagan or Harvey Kanter at 253-7498.

Busses To Quiz Bowl

Tonight the Senate will be considering a bill to subsidize a bus to the College Bowl this coming Sunday, February 16. If it is passed, those that want to go may sign up in the Program Office. The round trip fee will be $3.00.

Smoking Report Causes Some Changes On Campus

by SHERRY SPEAR

Umies who still want to smoke had better bring their own cigarettes to the Hatch because the smoke has considerably decreased since the Government smoking report.

Not too long ago, people officially heard about something they'd long suspected and ignored: that there is a definite link between cancer and cigarettes.

Reactions varied from the happy-go-cancer students who assumed the old Alfred E. of "What me worry?" to a Texas coed who swore to quit ts "as soon as I finish this pack."

The announcement by Surgeon General Luther Terry came during finals when most students suffer their most violent nicotine fits. Resolutions were: "after finals".

Righteous citizens have demanded the stoppage of the sale of cigarettes, especially on college campuses and hospitals. This is a rather strange attitude considering that these same citizens can walk into any store they want and purchase their favorite brand of "cancer sticks".

One positive result is that most of the major tobacco companies have decided to stop advertising in college publications. Alas, you'll no longer see that campus beauty and the all-American football hero puffing away at you from programs and magazine covers.

Gradual withdrawal methods have now elevated pipe totin' Mamie Yokum from the hillbilly granny to the epitomy of good taste in smoking moderation.

It used to be believed that the only reason the Dining Commons stopped putting ashtrays on tables was to prevent them from being taken but its now realized they were only prematurely public spirited.

An experiment will show that cigarette smoke blown through a clean white handkerchief leaves a dirty, tan circle. If anything, it only proves that if you're going to smoke, don't mess up handkerchiefs by smoking through them.

A few students at Lehigh University have donated this epic advice: Write down reasons for wanting to give up smoking (Everyone who doesn't can chuckle on from here). Switch to a brand you don't like. Hold off as long as you can between cigarettes. Once down to seven cigarettes a day, set a date to stop completely.

TV Room Too Crowded For You? WMUA Will Air College Bowl

by SHERRY SPEAR

THE TELEVISION ROOM WAS WALL-TO-WALL UMIES-WITH not A Beatle onscreen—just the UMass College Bowl team rattling Rollins. If this week the TV room is so crowded sneak in your transistor and hear WMUA air the UMass team versus Iowa State (Sun/5:30)

SPEAR HEARS: Mary Louise Apelian's "Around the World" has crossed the International Dateline and now will be on Wednesdays instead of Thursday . . . Don't cut English 26 and tune in on Wednesdays at 7:30. Beginning Monday, Feb. 17 the new time slot is Monday at 7. This semester the English 25 series begins Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 7 p.m.

You don't have to make a pilgrimage back to that little log cabin in Illinois because we'll be celebrating the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. It'll be a Lincoln treasury with the works of Carl Sandberg, ballads by Burl Ives and masterpieces as the "Gettysburg Address" read by Orson Welles.

A TURNTABLE TREAT awaits the fans of Paul Desmond and Gerry Mulligan when Carl Alsin spins "Two of a Mind", a jazzfastic disc where they play alto and tenor sax on one side and then swap instruments for the other. (Thurs./10 P.M.)

The latest disc jockey to tack up his license is Bob Brush the new host of "Musicale". Bolero or Bach, Musicale is WMUA's classic corner weekdays Monday-Thurs. at 8.

If the Cage is too long a walk, trot over to your radio and give a mighty shove to hear WMUA broadcast home basketball games. This Saturday night, it's the UMass Redmen versus the Univ. of Vermont at 8:15.

Are you sick, yes sick of a quiet Sunday? Want some action, say a gruesome murder or two with the most despicable of villans and the handsomest of heroes? Dr. W. Mua again emerges to prescribe "Don't murder your roommate but hurl that radio dial to WMUA where the CBC (Canadian Broadcasting Corp.) dramas are now being featured Sundays at 4:30."

Voting members of WMUA take heed, if next year the pack you want to lead. You'd better come to next Wednesday (the 19th) station meeting at 7:30.

MILDER...MUCH MILDER

At left is depicted a typical professor during the regular session at The University of Wisconsin. He is worried about his heating bills; his children have the croup; his '37 Nash won't start on cold mornings; he feels a twinge of lumbago. He is about to grade 243 mid-semester tests. At right is the same professor during Summer Sessions. Note his healthy tan, his casual attire. He is about to dismiss his class and go boating on Lake Mendota. Surveys show that Summer Sessions professors are milder . . . much milder. Student Christian Movement To Sponsor N.H. Conference

by LINDA PEARLSTEIN

The Student Christian Movement will be holding a Mid-winter Conference in Pembroke, New Hampshire beginning February 28, and ending on Sunday, March 1, 1964. The theme of the conference has been announced as "The Walls That Separate Us Do Not Rise To Heaven." The conference will be one on Protestant ecumenicalism in the light of unity developments with Roman Catholic and Orthodox Christians.

There are many revolutionary breaks today in both secular and religious walls. Can the Church respond to the challenge—can she be flexible, recognizing and translating the ways in which God may be overcome?

This conference invites all members of the university community, the committed and the nominal Christian, the agnostic and the skeptic, the secularist and those who accept no label, to join in confronting these issues. All Catholics, Orthodox Jews and Protestants are also invited to attend.

Speaking on Protestant ecumenism will be Dr. Harvey Cox of the Andover-Newton Theological School faculty, just returned from a year of fraternal mission in Berlin, and most recently a participant in the Williamston, North Carolina civil rights efforts. Two additional leaders, representing Roman Catholic or Orthodox and laymen's viewpoints will be present.

The discussion leaders will be from these various colleges: Springfield College, Union Seminary, Yale Divinity School, Boston University, Yale University, Univ. of Maine.

All those who are interested in attending should contact the Protestant chaplain as soon as possible.

32 Lb. Study Aid

Bomb Scare In USC Library; Caused By Students "Time Safe"

(ACP)—Steve Quan, a young man who devised an ingenious plan on his way to becoming a genius, won't change that plan, no matter what, notes The Daily Trojan, University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

Steve inadvertently started a bomb scare at the university when he left his time safe in USC's main library while studying in the Science Library. While he was gone from the main library, someone telephoned officials there and reported a bomb within its confines.

The library was evacuated and a police bomb squad moved in to find a ticking device which was removed to the Coliseum. Later, the squad learned it was Steve's time safe, designed to thwart temptations that could interfere with his studies.

Steve had set the timer on his safe, which contained his carfare and dinner money, for 5 p.m., to assure uninterrupted concentration—even if he happened to get hungry or decide to knock off and go home.

A week has passed. Steve is not the least bit enthralled by all the publicity. By now, in fact, he is sick of it, and he'd like to return to concentration on trigonometry, algebra, history and two chemistry courses.

"As a regular user of USC's library facilities, I was disgusted by the waste of time and money caused by the incident," said the personable Dorsey High School senior. He said he does not know who called the university to set off the scare but he wants to express apologies to Trojans whose studies were disrupted.

"I owe much of my success in school to my utilization of USC libraries and would not want to do anything to injure my privileges there," he added.

Steve said he plans to keep on using campus libraries and his 32-pound time safe, which he dreamed up last summer as a study aid which successfully keeps his mind on his studies.

Dr. Paul A. Gagnon, assistant professor of history is the author of a new historical study, "France since 1789," published by Harper and Row of New York City.

Dying Caesura Makes It Last Call For Help

Although not quite as "dying" as it appears, Caesura still pleads student support for the coming issue. The editor has issued a final appeal to the campus for creative works and essays. Last deadline is today at 5.

The magazine is open to graduate students as well as undergraduates. The editor emphasized that there seems to be a prevalent opinion that the magazine is open to only four-year students, but this is a "misconception."

This year's staff has carried through a campus-wide publicity campaign for material and support, and plans a series of coffee hours for next semester. This issue is the second of three published during the year. The magazine will appear in early March.

Amherst College Masquers To Present "Twelfth Night"

The Amherst College Masquers are in final rehearsals for their production of William Shakespeare's comedy "Twelfth Night" which opens at Kirby Theater February 21.

The play will be performed February 21, 22, 23, 28, 29 and March 1 and 2 at 8:15 p.m. There will also be a matinee performance on February 29 at 2:30 p.m. ticket sale begins at Kirby Theater Box Office Friday, February 14.

"Twelfth Night" is a combination of two types of comedy; a comedy of love and a comedy of manners characterized by the nonsense and contradictions of Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek and the 'puritanical' Malvolio. Music permeates the play; it is danced to, sung to, or alluded to in nearly every scene. For the Amherst production Prof. Walter Boughton, the director, is using traditional Elizabethan music and original songs composed by Robert Elowitch, an Amherst junior from Portland, Me. Playing classical guitar accompaniment for the comedy are Tom Morton, a senior from Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Tom Turgeon, a senior from Amherst.

"Twelfth Night" was first performed before the court of Queen Elizabeth on January 6, 1601 — as a twelfth night entertainment. The Amherst production, in celebration of the 400th anniversary of the bard and the 25th anniversary of the theater, uses a single set, a garden exterior, designed by Prof. Charles Rogers.

Noted Anthropologist Talks To Univ. Women

Dr. Gertrude Huntington will present an illustrated lecture, "The Hutterites, An Experiment in Communal Living," under the sponsorship of the University Women at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 12, at Skinner Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts. This lecture is open to the public.

Dr. Huntington, an anthropologist now residing in Northampton, spent more than two months living in a Hutterite settlement in Montana last summer. She was accompanied by her family. Her work was part of a grant given by the U. S. Department of Education studying the Hutterite methods of training for communal living and teaching values to children.

The Hutterites are descendants of the Anabaptists, who are distinguished from the Mennonites by their belief in a community of goods. They came to North America via Russia and settled in South Dakota in the 1870's. There are communities now in South Dakota, Washington, Montana and Alberta and Manitoba provinces in Canada.

Mrs. Mack Drake is chairman of the program. Mrs. Jane McCullough will be in charge of the tea following the talk.

I.F.C. And Dorm Basketball

THE MODERN AND VAST FACILITIES of the Boyden Physical Education Building have allowed the athletic department to initiate a highly commendable intramural program. With six full length basketball courts at the disposal of dormitory, fraternty, and independent leagues, the season has proven to be a success as exemplified by the keen interest of the competitors and fans. At present, both dorm and independent leagues are beginning to shape up.

AS OF MONDAY NIGHT, three teams — PSK, BKP, and QTV were tied with 2-0 records for first place in the I.F.C.'s A League, while five teams — Phi Mu, Lambda Chi, KS, TKE, and TC were deadlocked with 2-1 records in the B league.

ON MONDAY NIGHT in the most exciting game of the young season, Sig Ep battled to a 37-26 victory over QTV in overtime. After regulation time the score was even at 26 all, but a strong Sig Ep team tallied 11 points, while QTV could only manage to get 2. High scorer for the winners was Ed Goodhue with 11, while Richie Allen netted 10, to lead the scrappy QTV team.

IN OTHER GAMES it was ASP 16, PSK 24, LCA 42-33 over KS, TKE 36-18 over TC, BKP 33-AEPI 15, and PMD 57, ATO 16.

In the dorm A league, Hills North and Gorman lead with 2-0 records, and Greenough is pacing the B league with a record of 2-0. In dorm league play it was Greenough 38-28 over Mills, Hills North 40-9 over Brett, Gorman 38-33 over Baker, Chadbourne 25-21 over Butterfield, and Hills South 36-20 over Wheeler.

TONIGHT, the I.F.C. swings into action again with AEPi meeting the current league leader SPE, while BKP vs. PSK, QTV vs. TEP, ATO vs. ZN, PMD vs. TKE, TC vs. KS and PSD vs. LCA.

College Years Should Be Devoted To Experimentation

—Palo Alto, Calif.-(I.P.)-College should give students a chance to try on different identities, to decide what kind of people they want to be, declares Prof. Sanford M. Dornbusch, executive head of Stanford's Department of Sociology. "The best direction of student effort is toward self-testing. The B.M.O.C. (Big Man on Campus) in high school is not exploring the world when he stays in the same groove of extra-curricular activities at Stanford.

"College years should be years of excitement, experimentation, self-realization, and change. We can best create this atmosphere by being supportive. Students will be cowardly if their elders are critical. Self-confidence is related to risk taking. We can make a major contribution by providing a background of warmth and approval where their errors do not produce fear or blame.

"From this point of view, switching majors and changing boyfriends should not be disquieting. All of us tend to applaud the student who knows where he's going and steadfastly plods towards his target. But his persistence may be a sign of excessive caution. Early choices may be immature, and we are wrong to make a virtue of sticking to an early decision. Students are not junior adults . . ."

Both students and their parents should be wary of putting too much emphasis on report cards. Dornbusch said. "The average grade at Stanford today is the same as the average 20 years ago, but the level of academic preparation and commitment is much higher.

"An 'A' or 'B' at Stanford means the student is floating on top of the cream. There is very little milk in the bottle. If every one of our students worked twice as hard and learned twice as much, there would be no difference in the typical grade. All that an 'A' or 'B' refers to is a competitive position that is a means of ranking students.

"If a student is doing fairly well, I do not believe it is all true that the best investment of further energy is worrying about or preparing for these barnacles on the academic ship known as tests."

Those Without Training Still Can Apply

(ACP) — Lack of journalistic experience shouldn't deter a student from joining the staff of his or her college newspaper, says the REDLANDS BULLDOG, University of Redlands, Redlands, California.

A novice often has journalistic qualifications of which he is unaware. He also is the one who stands to benefit most from the discipline and experience offered by the college paper.

The beginner even may have an advantage over the student who worked on a newspaper in high school.

Although some high schools produce excellent publications, many fail to maintain high journalistic standards, and some high schools produce little more than gossip sheets.

Even the schools which strive for quality often are hampered by obsolete concepts and techniques. Since students on such papers often assimilate bad habits, it usually is easier to teach journalism to students who have no previous training.

So, with or without experience, freshmen and transfer students who wish to become better acquainted with the University and its people should consider joining the Collegian staff.

Professor Blames Colleges For Student Ignorance

Oxford, O. — (I.P.) — Higher education must accept blame for American ignorance in foreign affairs, then move to build a remedy, according to Dr. Charles Ray Wilson, provost of Miami University. He outlined several plans, including Miami's own international studies program, as possible patterns for that remedy.

Subject matter and mode of presentation of many college courses must be revamped extensively "to contribute to breaking down the insufferable complacency, self-righteousness and provincialism of the typical American undergraduate," he proposed.

Dr. Wilson charged that much of American higher education is "only superficially attuned to the times." He said too many professors either resist change or are narrowed by their own specialization; that language-teaching too often is both inadequate and dull, and that courses generally are "strictly content-centered and narrowly nationalistic."

He suggested these basic needs:

1. A required two-semester course covering some given area of the world with little regard to traditional subject-matter limitations, aimed primarily at "greater understanding, sympathy and tolerance."

2. Improvement of language training by starting earlier, insisting on full proficiency and enlivening study by inclusion of material now offered in various "civilization" courses.

3. Complete re-study of the entire collegiate curriculum to provide "something more than the strictly content-centered and narrowly nationalistic orientation our courses traditionally have had."

4. Adoption of special international studies programs at the undergraduate level, for those expecting to live or work abroad.

5. Genuine coordination of existing activities of an international nature on the campus, including a Coordinator or Director of Foreign Studies.

Dr. Wilson was Colgate University history department chairman and originator and director of the annual Colgate Foreign Policy Conference before returning to his Alma Mater in 1961 to take charge of its academic programs as provost. Miami's Undergraduate Center for International Studies began to take shape soon after he took office. It now has 75 enrollees.

Miami's program, he explained, includes 36 hours of common curriculum work, ensuring a high degree of diversification with sequential and coordinated courses in economics, geography, history, anthropology, literature, philosophy, religion, the fine arts and the international aspects of political science. Language is required throughout the program.

He urged educators to examine such programs as the Glen Falls, N. Y., secondary school Project on Improving the Teaching of World Affairs; the "University of World Study" being planned at Buffalo under direction of Warren Hickman, formerly Dean of the Faculty at Ithaca College, with alternate campuses in Western New York and Switzerland; the non-western area courses of Colgate; the projects under way at Yale and Northwestern Universities on foundation grants, and various regional cooperative approaches.

Redmen Stiffled By UConn, 72-50

Slow First Half Proves Of Detriment To Orrmen

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Connecticut soundly trounced the Redmen of the University of Massachusetts before a screaming crowd at the Storrs arena. The visitors fell behind early in the game and were never in the contest after the first ten minutes. Big Ed Slomcenski in a season long slump for the Huskies played brilliantly as he led the victors to a 33-16 half time margin.

It took Massachusetts four minutes to find the range and by that time the Huskies had hit for six. Mass then went 3 more minutes before they added a foul shot and by that time the score was already 12-3. At about the ten minute mark the home team was on top by a 16-5 margin as the visitors just could not find the range. The Redmen were bothered by the tight defense put on them and simply poor shooting.

There was little doubt that it was to be a long night for the Redmen as the home team just kept adding to the lead and the Redmen continued their poor play. Slomcenski hit for 17 points to completely wipe out the fine job that Chuck O'Rourke did on big gun Toby Kimball. He held the big man to just six points, but Slomcenski used his height to perfection as he rolled up 10 of the first 14 Huskie points.

The statistics for the first half bear out the performance on the court. The Redmen hit for a woeful 17% in the stanza on 5 of 30 from the floor. The home team meanwhile hit on 14 of their 28 shots to make a very convincing showing. The visitors were slowed right out of their fast break offense as the UConns resorted to the possession game. In addition to the wide shot margin, the Huskies also controlled the boards and the Redmen seldom got more than one shot at the hoop.

The second half opened with a quick hoop by O'Rourke and the small UMass cheering section had high hopes that the team would respond as they did against AIC, but there was nothing the visitors could do to solve the tight zone defense.

Massachusetts resorted to the press in an effort to get back into the game, but the cool Huskies led by Dom Perno played it easy and consistently found the clear man under the hoop. In effect it was the situation of the Rhode Island game in reverse with the Redmen in the chasing end.

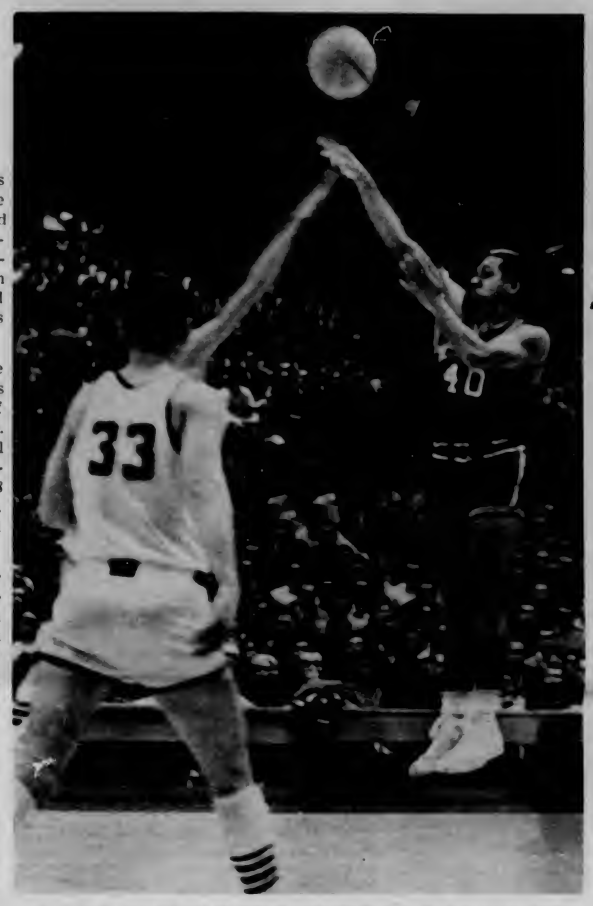
Mass closed to a 20-34 margin but the home team hit for two hoops to go 18 points up. After Jim Painten hit the Huskies ran off 17 points before O'Rourke hit. Eight of these were by Perno and 7 by Kimball as the margin swelled to better than 30 points. From then until the end, the Redmen continued to press but Coach Shabel left his starters in until there were less than five minutes to go.

The Redmen never quit in this game despite the fact they were out of contention. They continued to press right until the end despite the fact they lost Tim Edwards on fouls with more than 10 minutes left and Pete Bernard was really missing. It just was not Massachusetts' night.

The final figures show the Huskies hitting on 24 of 43 shots with the addition of a fine 24 of 30 from the free throw line. Slomcenski with 23 and Kimball with 19 led the home team. Between them they pulled down 28 of the 43 rebounds the team had. Dom Perno added 14 while Bill Della Salla chipped in with 11.

About the only bright light for the visitors was the performance of O'Rourke who came through with 15 points. Pete Bernard added 11 but most of these came very late in the game. The team could muster only 18 of 61 off of the floor for a 29.5% far below the season's average of 44%. The team hit on 14 of 20 from the foul line. The team could muster only 32 rebounds.

The next home game for the Redmen will be against Vermont Sat. night. The team now stands at 12-6 for the year and 3-3 in the conference. The Huskies are well out in front with a 6-1 conference slate and it would appear only Rhode Island could stop them.



PETE BERNARD fires one at the hoop. Bernard was the Redmen's second high scorer with 11 points.

TIMMY EDWARDS goes up against Toby Kimball in the opening jump-ball. The Huskies got the tap, scored, and never lost the lead.

Pay Hike Discrimination Charged

Senate Rebuffs Wheeler; Athletic Dept. Scored

Debate over a controversial appropriation to Wheeler House highlighted Wednesday's regular meeting of the Student Senate.

The measure, sponsored by the Senate's Finance Committee would have reimbursed the dorm for $71.50 "expenses incurred by the intramural football team in going to the University of New Hampshire." The bill's chief proponent, Sen. Ethan Pollack ('64 Wheeler) told the Senate that the team had been refused reimbursement by the intramural program director. Pollack said that the dorm's athletic chairman was told that the money had not been budgeted. Senate Treasurer Ross Jones ('65 Brett) added that each year the intramural director had budgeted the item, but that it had been eliminated from the budget "by higher ups".

Opponents of the measure charged, in the words of Sen. Elwin McNamara ('64 Commuter) that "athletics was not the business of the Senate"; that the money should come from the athletic department. He added that the athletic department receives over $200,000 in student fees each year, of which about $2500 is devoted to intramurals. "They must" he charged, "be able to find the money somewhere."

It was further pointed out in debate that many opponents were such because of a feeling that the intramural program had an obligation to make good the expenditure.

The bill was tabled back to Finance Committee for study.

In other action, the Senate tabled a motion by Sen. Dave Mathieson ('64 at Large) which would have dissolved the committee on Student Housing. Mathieson, author of the legislation which initially set up the committee, told the Senate that while the committee had "fulfilled the purpose for which it was intended", the problem of housing will remain. He then proposed that the responsibility for student housing be given to the Services Committee.

Also considered and passed was a Finance Committee bill which gave permission to Caesura to hold a coffee hour for its staff. Senate financial policy states that no organization may spend student money on such gatherings without Senate permission.

A motion by Sen. Don Boyd ('65 Greenough) added to the responsibilities of the Public Relations committee by giving it charge of orienting new Senators.

Phantom Committee's Letter Bared As Statewide Controversy Rages

by ELWIN McNAMARA
News Editor

A PHANTOM COMMITTEE, supposedly composed of UMass faculty, has touched off a statewide controversy over the recent pay hike given to faculty members at the University and state colleges.

The committee sent letters, signed merely "The Faculty Committee on Ethical Practices," to Boston newspapers charging discriminatory treatment in the allocation of the raises. They claimed that the hikes were "whopping increases to the favorite coterie" of the administration.

BY RECENT ACTION of the General Court, all state employees were given a 10% pay hike. At the same time the Boards of Trustees of both the University and the state colleges were given a sum equal to another 10%. This they could apportion as they saw fit.

In the case of the University, much of the amount was so distributed to raise the average pay of the upper level faculty, in order to make the University pay scales more competitive nationally.

At present, the lower ranks compare with top wages paid anywhere in the nation, having an A to A+ score on the American Association of University Professors comparison charts.

GOV. ENDICOTT PEABODY

The upper ranks did not, but now more closely approach this.

A DAY-LONG investigation by a team of Collegian reporters turned up no information as to the identity of the members of the committee.

Calls to Boston brought out that the letter was not signed with any person's name, but rather with the committee title. A number of faculty, representing all schools and colleges of the University were interviewed. All disclaimed knowledge of the composition of the committee. Many asked what the group was, stating that they had never heard of it.

It appeared to many faculty that the group, if it is a group, was composed of a small number of faculty, if it is composed of faculty.

Rep. Dave Vigneault of Springfield, a former student at the University, took strong exception to the statement of the committee. In a strongly worded letter to the Collegian, he stated: "I have never seen such crass ingratitude in my life. It leaves a bitter taste in my mouth."

Elected while still at the University, Vigneault went on to state that Governor Peabody had "gone to the cross three times for these teachers." This was in reference to a committee charge that the Governor had been naive in his trust of the University, and had lost much "grass roots" support in the campus community.

"IT APPEARS," Vigneault said, "a public official receives less ingratitude when he fights for no pay increase at all."

Boston sources told the Collegian that Gov. Peabody will seek legislation requiring a uniformity in all future pay raises.

Marchant Replies

Students Hit Closing Hours ID Check

by TERRY STOCK

The newly inaugurated Campus Police policy of checking I.D.'s at closing hours on Friday and Saturday nights in front of the women's dormitories has not gone un-noticed by the student population. The following letter is typical of the complaints received by the Collegian about this practice.

The university seems to be falling on hard times—first it loses Yamasaki, then Belafonte. As if this were not enough, news comes that the redoubtable Colonel Marchant, guardian of the campus parking lots and self-proclaimed protector of our coeds' chastity (do they need protection?), is going to check ID cards at the Friday-and Saturday-night happy hours.

Colonel Marchant has gone too far this time. What have we left for our three dollars?

The nocturnal tete-a-tetes the colonel wants to discourage are really personal matters, it seems. We think the efforts of the campus police should be summarily restricted to the realm of spectator sports.

One more suggestion for the serenity of the campus: Since we've lost Yamasaki and Belafonte, why not lose Marchant too? Maybe the much relieved students (and staff) would be willing to take up a collection to buy the colonel a car as a going-away present. Nobody can do any thing about your lost youth, Colonel.

Beta Chi

When asked why student I.D.'s are being checked, Colonel Marchant said that only the drivers of cars with no campus decals are being asked to show their I.D.'s. This method has produced many unregistered and illegally operated autos.

"Secondly," said the Colonel,

Honors Convo Dropped; Attendance Blamed

There will be no honors day convocation this year.

In a report given to the Faculty Senate, Dr. Howard Quint, chairman of the University's History Department, announced that the University's Honor Council had decided to not have a convocation this spring.

Quint cited as the main reason for the Council's decision the poor attendance at last year's convocation which he termed "an embarassment and a black mark against the University."

Other topics in Quints' report concerned changes in the Senior honors programs in the departments of Mathematics and Zoology, and a progress report on the honor's colloquia system. The latter program "is working out reasonably well, despite a great deal of attrition" which Quint termed as quite common in programs of this nature.

Asked about a possible increase of credit from the present one point for the Honors colloqula, Quint answered that he felt confident that the Honors Council would probably approve of such an action, but of course the final decision would have to come from other sources.

Quint told the Senate of the plans of the Council, now in effect, to extend the Honors colloquia into the senior year, thus affording students the opportu-

The Phantom Committee

Representative Vigneault Charges UMass With Crass Ingratitude

To the Editor:

On the editorial page of the Boston Herald of February 12 in Thomas Gallagher's column I was extremely chagrined to read in the letter of the "Faculty Committee on Ethical Practices" to Commissioner of Administration William Waldron the following words: "It is abundantly clear on campus that Governor Peabody's naive confidence in academic integrity here, and at many of the other state institutions of higher learning, has not won him enthusiastic support at the 'grass roots level' of the campus community."

I have never seen such crass ingratitude in all my life. It leaves a very bitter taste in my mouth. Governor Endicott Peabody went to the cross three times for these teachers, twice on the two pay raises, and once on the accelerating the collecting of corporation and income taxes in order to pay for these pay raises.

As a representative I know that in my district he took his lumps and lost votes because of his courage in acting in this area. None of these raises or acts were ever foregone conclusions, by any means.

It appears a public official receives less ingratitude when he fights for no pay increase at all.

Who is being naive here? It is just such naive action by teachers as exhibited by the statement that has ruined chances for previous favorable action on pay raises and on other matters.

Also, I think these teachers should be informed that there is another branch of state government down here in Boston that is known as the legislative branch. This legislative branch consists of two parts and the inhabitants thereof are known as senators and representatives respectively. They should be informed that any act such as this pay raise has to be voted on in the affirmative by a majority of said senators and representatives and that any praise or abuse for any act of state government applies to all involved.

Apparently, they are unhappy with a pro-education Governor such as Endicott Peabody and would prefer an anti-education governor of which Massachusetts has many.

As for myself, as a legislator that was elected while a student at UMass and as a result very education minded, I will keep this action in mind.

In the future when I'll know that in response to heeding their pleas for pay hikes or other action that my reward for sticking my political neck out for them will be the most callous of ingratitude.

Sincerely,
Dave Vigneault

Collegian Attempts To Answer Charge

To Representative Dave Vigneault
State House
Boston, Massachusetts

Dear Sir:

The Massachusetts Collegian appreciates the fact that you have come to this publication to voice your disapproval of the actions of what you believe to be a recognized segment of the University's faculty.

As the story on page one of this issue indicates, "The Faculty Committee On Ethical Practices" is a sham; a phantom committee with no identifiable members and positively no recognized status on this campus.

As far as we have been able to ascertain, this committee is at the most a collection of one or two disgruntled faculty deadwoods, if they are faculty members at all.

As far as this campus is concerned, they are unknown, unrecognized, and, most of all, unappreciated.

The faculty and students of this University realize and appreciate the work done by Governor Peabody and those Senators and Representatives in the State House who have aided him in his efforts to provide our professional staff with pay raises.

There is no "crass ingratitude" at this University towards the actions of the Governor or of his legislative supporters.

Quite to the contrary, it is quite safe to say that the Governor's prestige has been greatly enhanced by his fruitful efforts to provide this University with the best possible faculty.

Also, as far as can be perceived, the faculty is generally quite pleased with its pay raises which range from 12 to 30 per cent.

We realize that in some of the other state's institutions of higher learning there has been controversy over the dispersion of the pay hikes, and that the Governor is, in all probability, quite peeved at what appears to us to be rank indifference on the part of many of the Commonwealth's smaller public colleges.

However, no such controversy has been stimulated at this University and again, as far as we can establish, the Governor's wishes as to the manner in which the pay raises were to be granted have been more than substantially respected.

It is unfortunate that a miniscule portion of this faculty (and again there is no proof that they are members of the faculty) were able to perpetrate this hoax.

We apologize for them, but reiterate that it is quite obvious that the Governor's actions in regards to the payment issue on this campus have been greatly appreciated by both the students and faculty of this institution.

Sincerely yours,
The Staff of
The Massachusetts Collegian

Tote Bag Community

Profit Sharing Flourishes In Poverty Stricken Tenn.

by PHILLIP JOHNSON

The economic condition of the American Negro, particularly the Negro who lives in certain areas of the South, has in recent years reached the point where untold thousands are finding it increasingly difficult to survive. Eric Weinberger, speaking in Machmer Teusday evening, discussed this problem and told of his ideas for alleviating the financial and racial pressures which are the fundamental causes of this misery.

For the past three years, West Tennessee has become a focal point of social and political unrest because of the movement to register Negro voters in that area. Economic reprisals against Negroes who have attempted to register have been widespread and many sharecroppers have evicted from their land by the white landowners. Mr. Weinberger told of his plan, which he derived from the teachings of Gandhi, to create a profit-sharing community in Heywood County, Tennessee.

Under the auspices of the Congress of Racial Equality and the Committee for Nonviolent Action, he organized a program which involved seventy-five evicted sharecroppers who make suede leather "tote bags", for sale by mail. The project has been an unqualified success, and the income derived from these sales presently constitute one-quarter to one-third the total incomes of the sharecroppers.

Weinberger's project is significant because it is a fundamental departure from traditional economic thinking in the United States. Hitherto, we have looked to the federal and state governments for economic assistance, and the idea that progress can be achieved on the community level has usually been dismissed as being impractical or "too Utopian."

Weinberger feels that the success of his pilot project in this area will give rise to a wave of such communities in many areas of economic deprivation.

Turning to the civil rights movement in general, Weinberger proved himself to be an eloquent proponent of the effectiveness of nonviolent action in bringing about a sweeping social, economic and political revolution in this country. In an attempt to show that nonviolent methods will ultimately reach more people than violent means, he spoke of several experiences with this problem that he has endured.

One incident concerned police brutality directed against him for marching in a Southern town for Negro rights. Although he was bitten several times by a police dog and beaten by the local police, he remained nonviolent and, upon receiving a jail sentence, fasted for thirty-two days, until his release from jail.

Mr. Weinberger's speech was co-sponsored by the Students for Civil Rights and the Young Independents. Following his talk, money was raised to assist Weinberger in financing another speaking engagement. In March, he will return to the South, where he will organize a sandal-making co-operative community.

When Is A Winner A Loser

When, might we ask, is a winner a loser?

We would answer that it's when they play intramural football. The recent request by Wheeler House for a reimbursement for funds expended when the dorm team went to UNH as the University intramural football champions was refused by the Athletic Department, forcing the destitute dorm to seek aid from the Senate.

We must ask why.

Why should a dorm, or fraternity, for that matter, participating in events sponsored by the Athletic Department (which, incidentally, collects in student fees upwards of $200,000 a year and have now an excess of over $100,000) have to pay to compete in an event which has been set up by that same department?

The Athletic Department has been the sacred cow of the University for too long. Much of the money—the majority of the money—used in the athletic program is STUDENT MONEY.

We students want our question answered.

School Of Engineering Presents Seminar; "The Place Of Technology In Society"

On February 26-27, 1964, the School of Engineering will be presenting another "first" to accompany the series of innovations which are fast becoming part of its overall educational structure. In response to a need which has been felt for some time by many students, faculty and alumni, the school will conduct a seminar, on the two days noted above, on the "Role of Technology in History." This seminar is being presented primarily for the students in the School of Engineering. However, it is hoped that all other interested students will attend.

Due to the rigor and rigidity of engineering department curriculum requirements, there is normally no room available for coursework which allows the student an opportunity to study in the areas of history and philosophy of science and technology. A desire for work in these topics cannot even be fulfilled by proper choice of the few elective courses since, although a course in History of Science was offered for a short period some time ago under the Department of History, such has not been available in recent years.

With this in mind, Dean Lindsey, in late October, appointed a committee of faculty and students to plan a seminar which, if successful, might be the forerunner of a series which would held fill the void cited above. The committee has arranged the seminar outlined below and has procured the service of Dr. Melvin Kransberg of Case Institute of Technology as speaker and resource person.

The assistance and support of each member of the School of Engineering student body is required to make this seminar a success. If it goes well, it might lead to a continuing program which would be of inestimable value not only to our school but also the entire University.

Precisionettes To Start Campus Recruiting Drive

The Precisionettes, the all-girl drill team at the University of Massachusetts, are now in the process of becoming a new and exciting organization on campus.

During the past months they have drawn up a constitution which is presently awaiting Senate approval. Sponsored by Army R.O.T.C., the Precisionettes enjoy a study and meeting room where new routines and drills are worked out.

Preparations for the Spring Program have recently begun, as invitations to march in parades in the local area have come in.

Before next fall, the Precisionettes plan to have new uniforms with a new Precisionette crest. Along with new uniforms, they will feature snappy drills and intricate routines.

Recruiting for new members will begin soon in order to organize for the full Spring Program.

In Morrill

Rock - Bound Geology Musuem

In Morrill Science Center can be found boxes filled with carefully wrapped rocks. Big rocks, little rocks, some not really rock at all, but rather fossils or minerals, compose the geological museum of the University.

A busy staff, interested students, and generous donations as well as purchasing power, has increased the selection of specimens until it now covers all common types of rock, minerals, and all the span of fossiliphorus rock.

The geology collection may be divided into two sections, one in the field of petrology and the other in the field of paleontology. In the area of the latter we find that a fossil is any record of past life preserved in rocks, typically shells and bones representing parts of animals or imprints of shells, bones, and footprints. These footprints result from low ground with the print sinking and sand and mud washing into it. Most fossils are laid down under the sea, and thus, most fossils are marine forms such as fish outlines and skeletons and invertebrates. When one is found, a genus and species is given after the age of the fossil is determined by deciding which sedimentary layer it came from. Abundant fossils can still be found in layers dating as far back as 600,000 million years.

The fossil collection is used for courses in geology and paleontology and is also employed as a library for comparative purposes and research. In research the fossils are not studied for themselves alone, but rather with interest in the strata, for the fossil is a tool for learning more about the environment in which it lived.

On examination of the collection itself we find coral skeletons, bones, shells, and arthropods embedded in rock. In fact, after detailed observation, a "plain old rock" turns into a picture of life 40,500 million years. Corals which appear fish found in Sunderland on a flat rock dates back 30,000,000 years ago. Corals which appear like little dried twigs were found in New York and date back 300,000,000 years.

The next time you are in the Student Union, take a look at the wall along the stairwell on the south side of the main lobby; it is shell limestone, a slightly polished fossil.

In the department of petrology we find a vast representation of all forms of rock—igneous which formed from melted materials, sedimentary which formed from materials being deposited on surfaces, and metamorphic, a combination of the other two heated and thus reformed.

Collections come from all over the world: Spain, South Africa, a notable collection from Norway by Dr. Robinson of the department, and a donation of the Robert Balk collection from the area of Quabbin Reservoir, Millar's Falls, and Bernardston.

Research in the field of rock deformation and graduate student studies of metamorphic and igneous rock in New England is now being done.

Economic importance of rocks is impossible to be overlooked. Quartz, a substance looking like glass, but with an internal structure nothing like it, is used in electronic equipment. Marble is used for building purposes. Knowing what is underneath the ground surface is important to road builders and those putting in wells.

The Folk Scene

The Country Blues

by BOB WEBER

(Ed. Note: This is the second in a three part series dealing with the evolution and devolpemnt of American Negro Folk music.)

As the American Negro slave became more inculcated with white culture, he began to make his own musical instruments, in addition to learning to play those of the white man. By the turn of the 20th century, the banjo, guitar, piano, and harmonica had been adopted to the musical needs of the Negro. With his newly acquired use of musical instruments, a form of negro music called the country blues began to emerge. This from is distinguishable from its later form, the city blues, which will be dealt with next week.

As pointed out in the first installment of this series, Negro music in America maintained the traditional African call and response pattern. The basic foundation of the country blues is twelve 4/4 bars which follow a fixed cord pattern. Vocally, these twelve bars were divided into three four bar lines following the pattrn a-a-b. The first line was repeated and then the verse was concluded with a different line. On his Columbia album (#WL-111), Big Bill Broonzy explains that the reason for repeating the first line over again was so that "If you didn't get it the first time around, you'd get the next."

The greatest of the country blues singers as yet recorded is Robert Johnson, who recorded abaut eighteen cuts in the 1920's. Twelve of these have been re-issued by Columbia on a record entitled "Robert Johnson, King of the Delta Blues singers." This album contains some of the best country blues ever recorded. Johnson's technique for playing guitar is noteworthy, for instead of fretting the strings with his fingers, he used knives, bottles, short lengths of pipe or the like, across the bridge. This give the guitar a tinny, whinning sound, which was very effective in producing a blues "mood."

Other leading proponents of this form of blues include Big Bill Broonzy (Columbia, Folkways,) and Leadbelly, the acknowledged king of the twelve-string guitar (Folkways, Capital, and Stinson.) All of the early recordings of both these men are good examples of the Country blues.

This Saturday night, Ian and Sylvia will share the bill with Odetta at the Municipal Auditorium, in Springfield, Mass. Tickets may be purchased at the record store in Amherst. This should be one of the best concerts put on in this area in recent years.

New Folks For Three Dormitories

This year's dorm parties will see for the first time entertainment provided for them by the Class of 1965. The entertainment will come from the music and voices of the "Roving Minstreis", a traveling hoot comprised of three groups from the Greater Boston area. The Hiliside singers: Paul Page plays guitar and bango, Dick Pattenon wash tub base and guitar, Ritchie Sullo on guitar.

Al Wilson and John Nichols form a guitar-harmonica duo, who are artists of the harmonica blues field.

The Orpheum Three is comprised of Jack Reynolds and Dick Carroll on guitars on Ron Crocker on wash tub bass.

The Roving Minstreis have the tentative schedule of playing at the dorm parties of Butterfield, Chadbourne and Greenough.

Wesley Foundation To Present Play By The "Espresso Priest"

THE "ESPRESSO PRIEST", the reverend Malcolm Boyd, Protestant Episcopal chaplain at Wayne State University in Detroit, has written a one-act play which will be produced on Sunday, Febraury 16, 1964 at 7:00 p.m. at the Wesley Methodist Church.

Members of the Wesley Foundation will star in the production of "They Aren't Real To Me" The play presents a reverse situation in which a white man plays a negro, and a negro portrays a white man. The audience is projected into the future where there has been a revolution after centuries of enslavement of the "Whiggers". The white man in the play is one of the first to qualify for an executive post of the new order, and the drama shows the conditions he faces.

The play is designed to raise sharp questions about the human condition and to harass an oversimplified exploitation of race.

This play is designed to be shown before racially mixed audiences, and Boyd insisted on this when the plays were first presented in November of 1962.

The Wesley Foundation fellowship supper will be served at 6:00 p.m., and there will be time for small group discussion after the play.

John Lauritzen wanted further knowledge

He's finding it at Western Electric

When the University of Nevada awarded John Lauritzen his B.S.E.E. in 1961, it was only the first big step in the learning program he envisions for himself. This led him to Western Electric. For WE agrees that ever-increasing knowledge is essential to the development of its engineers—and is helping John in furthering his education.

John attended one of Western Electric's three Graduate Engineering Training Centers and graduated with honors. Now, through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, John is working toward his Master's in Industrial Management at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. He is currently a planning engineer developing test equipment for the Bell System's revolutionary electronic telephone switching system.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, both educationally and professionally, we should talk. Western Electric's vast communications job as manufacturing unit of the Bell System provides many opportunities for fast-moving careers for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, as well as for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. Get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

University Forensic Society Places Fourth At B. C.

On Monday, the University Forensic Society returned to campus after placing fourth at the annual Boston College debating tournament. The University entered two independent "switch" teams that were required to debate on both sides of the proposition. The varsity switch team of Mike Farrell and Steve Jenkins placed fourth out of the twenty competing schools. In addition, Jenkins placed third out of forty competing speakers with Farrell ranking sixth. The team lost two rounds while winning four for one of the best records at the tourney. They lost two close rounds to MIT and Harvard, while adding Army, the University of Maine, Mount Holyoke, and Boston College to their list of vanquished.

Larry Rutstein and Paul Rodman, comprising the novice switch team, had more difficulty as they compiled a 2-4 wins-losses record. They did, however, hand MIT its only loss of the tournament. The University's overall record now stands at the commendable total of 49 wins and 33 losses.

Next weekend, the team travels to another switch tourney, this time at MIT, hoping to maintain their high record. In the coming weeks the team also expects to attend tournaments at AIC, Mt. Holyoke, Ciy College of New York, and a national tournament at Butler, Indiana.

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

With dishpan hands, paint streaked hair, aching muscles, and a new dog, the old Kappa house is under new management. While things were still in a dither Chi Omega came over to welcome us with an original song, and we proudly showed them what had been done. Two weeks have been spent in hard labor to organize what we have and to find out what we need. Things have now settled down despite a noticable lack of living room furniture. Our housemother, Mrs. Eddy, is a jewel, and if we don't get fat it is not the cook's fault.

The first initiation was held in our living room, Wendy Neilson having the honor of being the first to be initiated. Mrs. Eddy is also an honorary member.

Sue Barrett returned from Mexico just in time to get caught up in all the havoc of moving in, but she didn't seem to mind.

SIGMA KAPPA

The members of Angel Flight have elected Mary Pat Carroll, pledge trainer, and Nancy Baron, administration officer.

Good luck to the Sigmanauts, Debbie Quirk, Nancy Baron, Pat Appuicelli, Jane Lunney and Sally Howe in the toboggan race.

The sisters would like to thank Dr. Robert Gage for his interesting discussion. We were one of the first sororities to have Dr. Gage as a guest.

Sigma Kappa would like to welcome its new pledge, Helen Burn.

A new addition to 19 Allen St. is a 5 ft. cooper on wood Sigma Kappa crest. The crest is a gift from the parents.

The sisters would like to thank the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa for the pizza party.

TRI SIGMA

Exams are over, marks are in and Tri Sigma is once again bustling with activity as it prepares for the second semester. As a climax to the rush, the girls initiated ten sisters. They bid welcome to the new initiates who are: Nancy Ramstedt, Joan Fello, Debbie Bush, Diana Carey, Sandy Nordstrom, Sue Uelland, Marilou Prentice, Jean Latino, Mary Ellen Sweeney and Gela Tibbetts.

Not to be forgotten, though, are the new pledges who are: Judy Godin, Agnes Wyant, Gail Drummond, Karolyn Forsburg, and Judy Davis, '64, and Marilyn Miller, '67.

February is a month of many events for the sisters beginning with initiation, continuing with Winter Carnival Weekend and ending with Pledge Formal which will be held this year at the Hotel Northampton February 29. At this affair the new pledges will be presented.

Coming up in March will be another visit to the Gamma Iota Chapter of Mrs. Henry W. Morrison. Currently she serves as the National Historian and chairman of the Memorial Headquarters Committee of Sigma Sigma Sigma. She will visit with the girls for a week-end and assist them in their work.

GSS Initiates New Members

Gamma Sigma Sigma was proud to initiate 21 girls of the Babs Stabler pledge class Monday night. The new sisters are Jeanne Beaucheane, Linda Carlson, Diane Cavalier, Nancy Eyler, Maria Femino, Judith Forbes, Barbara Hulick, Sally Kyle, Angela Lanza, Nancy North, Mary Reed, Pamela Reiser, Sharyn Rikkola, Joan Snyder, Karen Taylor, Ann-Marie Young. G.S.S. was pleased to have installed their first honorary member, Miss Maureen Flavin, secretary in the RSO office. Congratulations are also in order for Ruth Ames, who was installed as Second Vice President.

Gamma Sigma Sigma which began as the Women's Service Organization in 1961, became a chapter in the national service sorority in June, 1963. The new sisters represent the ever increasing interest taken in GSS, which has gone from a membership of 14 to 41 in one semester. These new members will enable GSS to provide more efficient service to the campus and the community.

nity of four years of work in the program.

Quint asked the Faculty Senate for suggestions that would make the Honors Day Convocation a better attended function.

One suggestion made "half-seriously" included incorporating some College Bowl type action into the ceremony. Quint replied that he will bring the suggestion to the Honors Council, but cautioned against equating academic excellence with the process of quick recall.

Quint also stated that he plans to ask the Student Senate for their suggestions on how to improve the traditional spring convocation.

Other business on the agenda included a report by Dean Edward Moore of the Graduate School Council, and a report by Dean Fred Jeffrey which concerned itself with changes in the Constitution of the Faculty Senate.

A motion that would have established a special ad hoc committee to reexamine the value of midsemester grades was defeated in favor of asking the Standing Senate Committee on Records and Admissions to consider the topic and report to the Senate at its convenience.

The remaining controversial motions dealing with year-round operation were not dealt with due to the lack of time.

The meeting was the first this year to which a Collegian staff reporter was admitted.

Frosh Cagers Even Season Record; Back In Action For Saturday Tilt

by JOHN GOODRICH

For all of you early goers to the Redmen home games, this article does not apply. You have already seen the fine type of basketball being displayed by the Little Redmen this year. Again this Saturday the team will be in action against the squad from Chamberlayne Junior College in a 6:30 game.

THE SCHOOL CAN BE PROUD of this team and the way they have played this year. The team features no one over 6'3" on the starting squad. Frank Stewart, John Lisack, and Bob Murphy all reach that figure. Jim Babyak measures up to 6'2" and Mike Meola reaches 6'0". Yet by means of a sharp defense, speedy fast break, and great desire the team has reached a 5-5 record against some of the top opposition in New England.

STEWART CARRIES much of the rebounding load and combines a good jump shot with some real hustle. Lisack picks up a lot of his points on fancy drives and jump shots. Despite his size he moves well and gets many rebounds against many bigger men. Murphy is a real scrapper who drives hard. When the defense moves up on him he really can go. Babyak was the top scorer during the early part of the season, but of late has turned to playmaker and has put in some really sparkling assists. The top scorer in Western Mass a year ago, he was picked the outstanding player in this neck of the woods. Babyak always goes all out and is a real hustler. Last but certainly not least is Meola. This smooth working guard from New York has a great jump shot and is also among the top scorers with Babyak and Lisack. He also plays well on defense and can drive.

Top sub for the team is Larry Martin, a real hustler and playbaker. Craig Ericson has a strong jump shot and has proved to be a valuable reserve. When the Redmen get up against a real tall team, 6'6" Bob Foley goes in the game. Am improving center, Bob hit for 10 points against the AIC frosh. Jim Hadfield, Robert Hanson, and Phil Serrano are all improving as the year progresses and they see more action. Hay, Sherman, Larson, and Williams joined the team at mid-semester and are playing well in their limited stints.

The team has been badly beaten only once this year, and that was against the BC frosh 113-77. In all of their other games, they have never lost by more than 10 points. This includes a six point loss to Providence, with a frosh team ranked 1 in New England. The frosh has split with the highly touted UConn frosh winning 74-69 before dropping Tuesday's game 74-70.

The one quality that this team seems to have is tremendous spirit. There is no really outstanding performer on the team, and any one of the first five can break loose for a good night. They feature real fine passing and seem to concentrate on taking the good shot.

Coach Jack Leaman has done a good job in rounding this team into a unit. The only reason they were beaten so badly at BC was the height factor. The Redmen just could not combat the big men on that team.

So drop by the Cage early Saturday night and see this team in action. There is one thing for sure and that is that the team will be providing a real exciting brand of baskeball for the fans to enjoy.

Frosh Swimmers ...

points to the score.

Dick Brown, after comfortably taking second in the diving, swam to third place in the 100 yd. Butterfly behind team-mate Steve Levy, who finished second.

Norm Lovitch captured third place in both the 200 yd. and 100 yd. freestyle. Dwight Hamblet, a newcomer to the team, wound up a close fourth in the 100 yd. freestyle.

Steve Levy, the team's butterflier, took second in that 100 yd. swim, and again second in the 50 freestyle.

The freestyle relay team of Schwartz, Levy, Lovitch, and Lennon, put the finishing touches to the close meet by walking-er, swimming away with that event.

The freshmen's next meet is against Babson Institute on Feb. 20th in the new Boyden pool (we hope).

Ind. Basketball

by RON PASTERCZYK

In major action Tuesday night Dick Baird's ACES almost upset the PE Majors only to lose in the final minute by 36-35. Leading most of the way, the ACES could not contain the hot shooting Terry Swanson (25) to hang on to the victory. This was due mainly because they played the waning minutes of the game with just four men when their fifth man got into foul trouble.

In a similar game the Traitors with Karagosin's 26 pts. tripped BBC 27-26.

Disregarding the Buggars 33-30 win over the Chem Club the other games on the slate proved to be runaways. With Boyle and Yando setting the pace the Baker Independents outclassed Greenough B 53-11; the Roadrunners placed four men in double figures in their 55-15 conquest of WMUA; the Baker Bombers took Greenough C 33-13; the ASP Pledges defeated the SPE Pledges 38-29, and completing the slate, the strong scoring of Stu Balin and Paul Majeski helped the Phys Ed Grads overwhelm the Grad House 49-22.

Redmen vs. UVM ...

have a lot to say about the league. In the friendly confines of their home court they have come within one point of URI (91-90), beaten Vermont 103-82, and bombed the Redmen 98-73. The team lost to UConn by a 73-60 margin at Storrs. While this idea might be called grasping at straws, a little hope is better than none at all.

As the season gets down to the closing, it bcomes quite evident just how much the losses to UVM and UNH have hurt the chances of the Redmen to reap a conference crown. At any rate, in the chance that the three way tie does occur, the league officials would make the decision as to who makes the trip to the NCAA playoffs. If its done on overall record the Redmen are superior to the other two. Perhaps a play off would result to give the Redmen a new life.

No matter how the league turns out, Coach Orr and the team deserve a lot of credit for the fine performance turned in in this his first year at the helm.

Little Redmen Looking For Good Track Year

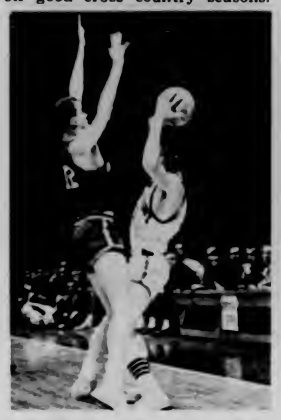
The Freshman Indoor Track team this year is potentially a very strong group. Although many of the boys have not competed yet this year, their high school records and present practices show fine promise for a good season.

LEADING THE DASHMEN will probably be Aba Johnson, with a 10 flat hundred to his credit, and also Art Larvey and Deane Christopolis.

In the hurdles, Fred Pilon, Andy Mann, and Dan O'Leary will handle the chores.

John Anderson, a strong runner with plenty of speed, will do well in the 600, but he'll be challenged by a fine runner in Bill Thoms, a record threat in his own right.

In the 1000 yard run, Thoms and Steve St. Clair should share the honors. Both boys are coming off good cross country seasons.



Paul Gullickson on defense against UConn.

St. Clair is a good man in any event from the 1000 to the two mile.

THE MILE RUN should be led by Terry Carpenter, Mike Sheely and Jim Parker, while the two mile looks to be dominated by Carpenter and Charlie Mitchell. These boys, too, ran well in cross-country this fall.

In the weight events, two very good shot putters could push each other enough to break the existing record in that event. The two are Bob Davis and George Tokarczuk, both of whom are throwing well in practice. The 35 pound weight throw, an event with which few college freshmen are familiar, will probably be handled best by Davis.

Dave Peoples and John Hall will high jump, while in the broad jump Art Larvey and Deane Christopolis have turned in previous jumps of 21'5" and 21' respectively.

John Fitzgerald is the only pole vaulter, but he's a good one. His best is 12'6", a respectable height to clear.

Tombarelli Wins ...

He advised the Redmen to "enjoy the plaudits of the crowd", but to forget this and work once spring practice begins. Bateman is a graduate of Columbia, class of 1938. He has played for the N.Y. Giants and the Jersey City professional team.

Also present at the Newman Center Sports Night were UMass coach Vic Fusia; Dr. William Tunis, UMass registrar; and Frank Navarro, head coach at Williams College.

In presenting the award, Rt. Rev. Msgr. David J. Power, chaplain to UMass Catholic students, said, "In offering this first annual award, it is our desire to approve and foster the high standards of Coach Fusia and his staff in their training of young men."

Mermen vs. UConn ...

Bjornholm won the 200 backstroke as Dick Koss chased him for a close second.

Tom Hanley came from behind with an excellent final dive to take second in the diving competition, while Charlie Monnier and John Grybko finished two-three respectively in the 200 breast stroke. In addition, Bjornholm took second in the 50 freestyle; Hoffman took third in the butterfly, Daniels third in the 100 free-syle, and Wilson third in the 500.

With the meet clinched, the 400 free-style relay team set out for a new UM record and succeeded as D. Daniels, H. Cowern, F. Bjornholm and J. Rothschild won in 3:39.0. The co-captains were really fast in this event, Bjornholm doing his 100 in 53.0 and Rothschild coming home in 52.3.

Riding the crest of a three-game winning streak, the Varsity travels to U. of Vermont tonight. A vicory will bring the season's record to 4-3 with two home meets remaining. Joe Rogers speculates, as he rarely does, that his charges have an excellent chance to improve last year's 5-4 mark. Next week UM hosts Worcester Polytech. Wed. nite, seven thirty, WPE.

wing, fired the puck, and on the rebound Pete Hurd scored his 6th goal making the score 4-3. The Redmen tried valiantly to get the tying goal but were not able to score again.

Near the end of the game Ken Palm and Neil Peterson got into a fight and both players were given major penalties and disqualified for the remainder of the game. Skip Bowen had 18 saves for the Redmen; John Foster of Williams had 17.

UMass now 5-6-1 for the season takes on the University of New Hampshire Wildcats, winners of the Vermont Christmas Tourney, on Saturday at 2:00 at the Orr Rink. U.N.H. beat the Redmen in the tournament 6-0.

Redmen Face Catamounts In Winter Carnival Clash

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts smarting from the loss to UConn takes on the Catamounts from the University of Vermont in a Yankee Conference game Saturday at the Cage. The Redmen will be seeking revenge for a 98-85 loss dealt them by the Cats in January. At that time the UVM men were riding on top of the league, but since then they have been slaughtered by UConn, UNH, and Rhode Island, the latter two both scoring over 100 points. The Rhode Island victory came on the night after their loss to Mass and featured Dennis MacGovern's 31 points.

THE LOCAL NEWSPAPERS have written off the rest of the season for the Redmen. The Eastern Mass papers as usual remain silent on the University. Terms such as "torn to bits" and "shattered season" were common after the UConn game.

There can be little doubt that the Redmen have their backs to the wall. There is still, however, a slim chance in the league. The Redmen would have to win their four remaining league games, including the one at Rhode Island. URI must also take on the UConn team at Kingston and are expected to make it very tough for them. If they did win, it would leave UConn on top with 2 losses and Mass and URI with 3 losses. The question is where will UConn's third loss come from?

Records Fall As Mermen Down Connecticut, 58-37

by BUD PRATT '65

Joe Rogers' Varsity Swimming Team staged another assault on the record books Wednesday as they doused a heavily favored UConn 58-37 at WPE. Altogether three UM records were revised as a total of over fourteen seconds disappeared from the books.

UM STARTED OFF with a victory in the opening medley relay and never relinquished the lead as they surpassed all Coach Rogers' expectations.

The meet was especially gratifying for co-capt. Mike Rothschild, who twice defeated Olympic swimmer Ami Trauber (Israel); in last year's New England competition Trauber edged Mike by a tenth of a second in the 500 free-style. Wednesday, Mike disposed of Ami in the 200 in 1:58.6 (UM record), then romped him in the 500, casually covering the distance in 5:29, accidentally coming within 2.4 seconds of his own record of last year. Mike appears ready to improve that mark whenever he intends to.

JIM O'SULLIVAN KNOCKED eleven seconds off his own varsity record in winning the 200 butterfly in 2:38.0. Redmen dominated the individual medley with Danny O'Mara winning in 2:36.8 while Tom Hoffman took second; Likewise co-capt. Mike

Tombarelli Wins Newman Center Sports Award

Sam Tombarelli was the recipient of the first Newman Center Sports Award last Tuesday night at the first Annual Sports Night to be held at the Newman Center.

It was decided to give the award this year to a member of the football team in recognition of the team's first undefeated season in almost 80 years. The award was a gold pen and pencil set.

EACH MEMBER OF THE TEAM was asked to vote for the member who best fitted the listed qualification. The award winner did not necessarily have to be the season's most outstanding player. The team was to choose "A well-rounded athlete."

This was defined as one who is conscientious at practice as well as games; who manifests sportsmanship bringing credit to UMass; who is serious in his desire for a good education; and who is "known as a gentleman on and off the field—one of whom we can all be proud".

The Redmen chose Tombarelli.

Dr. John Bateman, head coach at Rutgers University, was the main speaker.

Dr. Bateman spoke of the three main aspects of life—the spiritual, mental, and physical. "Work", he said, "is the solution to any problem in any of the three fields."

Pucksters Nipped By Williams, 4-3

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts hockey team dropped their third game in a row to Williams College 4-3 Wednesday night at the Orr Rink. The Redmen had to play without the services of Capt. Charlie Glew, who is out for the remainder of the season with an injury he received in the Colgate game. Glew was the leading scorer on the team with 11 goals and 7 assists.

The Ephmen from Williamstown, Mass. scored three goals in the first period and one at the start of the second to jump off to a 4-0 lead. Scoring for Williams were Sam White, Bob Bradley, Dave Pfaelzer, and Torrey Orton.

THE REDMEN SCORED THEIR FIRST GOAL with just seven minutes left in the second period. Jack Clayton, who had been out with a foot injury, took a long slap shot from behind the Williams blueline that goalie John Foster appeared to have saved. But the puck skidded through his pads for the goal. It was Clayton's first goal of the season. Two minutes later the Redmen's Dick Phillips sent Jim Mahoney in alone on a breakaway and Mahoney scored his first goal of the season making the score 4-2 at the end of two periods.

Frosh Swimmers Lose Close One To UConn

The Frosh came close to knocking UConn freshmen down the drain Wednesday night with a score of 49-43. But success just wasn't with UMass., despite the excellent efforts which the team displayed. It was 'nip and tuck' right down to the final relay. No matter how much the team has been tossed around, (0,4 record) the 'fish' still return to try again. They seem to thrive better playing as the underdogs.

DICK LENNON, for the third time this season, broke his own University record in the 200 yd. Indiv. Medley. His record time was 2:18.0. Later, Dick won the 100 yd. Breaststoke, and then anchored the freestyle relay team to success. He was the only UMass swimmer to take two first places in the meet.

Fred Cooke outdistanced his opponent to take first in the 100 yd. Backstroke. Coach Joe Rogers was pleased with the tremendous improvement in Fred. 'Windmill' Brynes settled for second to Cooke to add three more

College Bowl Team Beats Iowa State

GOVERNOR ENDICOTT "CHUB" PEABODY discusses the UMass College Bowl team with its captain, Bill Landis. The two met on Friday evening when the Governor was on campus to participate in Winter Carnival activities.

Second Week Opponents' Score Doubled

The UMass College Bowl squad scored another smashing victory on Sunday afternoon as it mauled its counterpart from Iowa State University.

For the second consecutive contest the UMass team more than doubled the score of its opponents. Sunday the UMass foursome drubbed the all-male Iowa team by a score of 285-140. In its last appearance, two weeks ago, on the national television show the UMass team pulverised a Rollins College squad, 310-150.

Once again it was a team effort with all four of the squad taking part in the victory. Mike Berrini, Bill Landis, Sue Tracy and Dave Mathieson each answered their share of questions, with perhaps, Berrini putting in a little more than the others.

IT LOOKED like it might be a long night for the Redmen squad when Iowa capitalized on a wrong UMass answer to the first toss-up question and rolled off thirty points before the UMass squad had put anything but a double zero on the scoreboard.

However, the UMass squad sprang into action and before the half-time whistle blew it was leading 180-70.

It was an easy glide to victory after that with the Redmen picking up another 105 points in the second half while the men from Ames, Iowa could only muster an additional 75.

The project has been scheduled for July 1 through August 15, and may be preceded by a brief seminar in Lima. U.S. participants, as well as Latin American ones, will of course be personally enriched as a result of the Spring-Like Weather Precedes Blizzard

Weather Wreaks Havoc With Winter Carnival

by DAVE HARACZ

ROBERT BURNS' LINES ABOUT "the best laid plans" seemed to overshadow those of Shakespeare as unpredictable weather forced cancellation of many of the Carnival activities for lack of snow, then necessitated a postponement of yet another event for too much.

"All the World's a Stage," a tribute to William Shakespeare by the class of 1965, had presented a well-rounded slate of activities for the Carnival weekend, but, during last week doubts began to be formed when it began to look as though it might be a snowless weekend.

Skys were clear last Wednesday as UMies swarmed around the area of the campus pond, tying up traffic in pursuit of free tickets to Carnival events dropped from an airplane above the campus. Later that evening, Professor O'Donnell of the English department introduced a film version of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" at Bowker Auditorium as the beginning of the tribute to the bard of Stratford.

BY FRIDAY, THE HOPED-FOR SNOW HAD NOT YET APPEARED, forcing cancellation of all the snow-oriented events of the weekend, such as the construction and judging of snow sculptures, a ski meet behind Thatcher, sleigh rides around the campus pond during intermission of the Carnival Ball, toboggan races, and dog sled races.

Saturday afternoon's activities included the fashion show 'As

Senate Elections

The special elections which will be held tomorrow will probably see the biggest voter turnout for any student election with the exception of the fall and spring general ones. Twenty three students have filed nomination papers for the vacancies in Hills South; Hills North; Van Meter North (2) Gorman; Plymouth; Commuter; At Large 65, and Fraternity.

The polling for the last three will be held in the Student Union lobby from 8:30-5:45. The dormitory balloting will take place from 6-9.

Ethical Practice?

by DON JOHNSON

The infamous Faculty Committee on Ethical Practices has dealt the students and innocent faculty members, to say nothing of the University's "academic integrity," a severe blow. Whether or not there was, in fact, "discriminatory practices in the handing out of pay raises" as this committee (whose members prefer to remain anonymous) has charged, is not the issue here. The objection is to the highly unethical manner in which this group chose to make known their grievances.

This heterogeneous collection of X's chose to write an anonymous letter to a newspaper. This is comparable to tossing an unsigned note, tied to a rock, through a person's window.

Their attitude appears even more base when you consider that this minority unhesitatingly indicted their entire family of colleagues by labeling their group a "faculty committee." In addition they have undermined the good faith and trust of the University students in the corps of faculty. It is a sloppy dishonesty.

Let the members of this group come forward and identify themselves. Only by so doing can they erase the grievous wrongs done to the majority of honest faculty and a body of trusting students.

A Beatle Note

Their good beat and rock 'n roll style makes the high school set scream and throw up their arms—as well as a few of the older generation. These people are obviously enthralled with the Beatle youngness and their ability to pound out that exciting rhythm.

But for the more sophisticated—or those who "can no longer hear the Elvis call," the Beatles succeed in a more subtle appeal. This club laughs with them, not only at the Beatles, but at the screaming audience itself. You can almost hear the Beatles thinking, behind the

I think that one must really give the four credit. Scream at them, or laugh with them, theyre unique. They're talented performers, as well as comics. Drum on, Ringo!

A Significant Detail

by MARC CHERON

A new restaurant has opened in Amherst. So what? A lot of new business establishments are opening in Amherst. But there was something quite unique about this restaurant. To the stranger visiting Amherst, there's nothing very special about it, but to the student of the University there is definitely something very special about this restaurant.

On an otherwise bare wall in a room off to the side are four banners, two big ones, and two smaller ones. From top to bottom they are school banners of: The University of Massachusetts, Amherst College, Smith College, and Mount Holyoke College.

The town of Amherst is beginning to acknowledge the presence of its stepchild on the north side of town. This, hopefully, is the significance of the pennant arrangement in The Tasty Tower, and it's about time.

Texas School Integrates

The following is an editorial which appeared in the Texas Christian University newspaper THE SKIFF on February 4, 1964.

The greatest challenge of the University's 91-year history has been faced and a decision has been made. Texas Christian University is totally integrated, from classrooms to dormitories.

The policy was enacted by a recently called Board of Trustees meeting during which Chancellor M. E. Sadler said, "I am convinced that all members of this Board share a common view in one respect—that in the sight of God and the law of our land, all men, all races share equal rights."

For most, this decision brings mixed emotions, torn between traditional beliefs and the feeling of what is right and just. The policy's adoption heralds a soul-searching conflict between what one is accustomed to and what one believes to be a moral obligation.

The integration problem has been at hand for many years, according to Amos Melton, assistant chancellor. Brite Divinity School dropped racial bars more than 15 years ago and during World War II Negroes attended specialized Evening College classes upon request of nearby military installations. Harris College of Nursing opened its doors to junior and senior students two years ago, urged by a need for local Negro nurses. Negroes from both Brite and Harris have been permitted in undergraduate classes to fulfill deficiencies.

Mr. Melton noted that the Board of Trustees for some time has been under "urging" to drop racial bars but that the Board has not permitted outside urging to drive it into any quick action on the problem.

Integration, indeed, is a delicate area. And, for some trustees, it is a very touchy subject. Acknowledging the less-than-unanimous passage of the integration proposal by trustees, Mr. Melton said, "Some wonderful people think this is bad for TCU."

The move has been made—all races have an opportunity for learning here. Equality cannot be bad for TCU.

Students and faculty alike have expressed a desire for this action. The administration now has to guide the program to fulfillment.

An obstacle to the University's greatness has been hurdled and TCU now moves ahead.

Student Interest In Gov't Hurt By Fiscal Frugality

WASHINGTON (CPS)—President Johnson's oath to fiscal frugallty is wounding one of the late President Kennedy's favorite plans to woo top college students into federal government careers.

The Civil Service Commission (CSC) last week reported that it will be tougher for U.S. college students to find summer employment in the federal government this year because of the administration's pinch on pennies.

The CSC said:

"Student interest in summer employment has been mounting in recent years, so competition for the limited number of jobs will be keen."

With a big helping hand from the late President, top college students from all over the nation were urged to seek federal employment during the past two summers. Kennedy hoped to induce scholars into a career in public service after tasting the opportunities available in the federal service.

The White House drew charges of political payrolling from the CSC after it was reported that campus Democratic clubs had a hand in securing summer federal jobs for their membership.

Normally, about 6,000 students are hired by federal departments and agencies during the summer months. But the CSC said that number will be reduced this summer.

A CSC spokesman said many agencies would be looking for clerks, typists and stenographers to replace vacationing employees. Some agencies also will employ students to aid in professional and technical fields.

There will be some seasonal jobs such as park ranger and rodman on surveying teams, the CSC said.

"But the outlook in each case will be for fewer opportunities than have been available in the past years," the CSC spokesman said.

Giving all college students a fairer chance at the limited number of positions will be a new CSC order banning nepotism.

The CSC order prohibits the hiring of sons or daughters in agencies or departments where a parent works.

The order was expected to have a big impact on student summer employment since nepotism has been rampant in summer federal jobs selection.

Three Williams Fraternities Lease Houses To College; Eight Total

Williamstown, Mass., (I.P.)—Three more fraternities have decided to lease their property to Williams College, which means that eight, one more than half the fraternities on the campus, have made their properties available to the College or have announced their intention of doing so before the next academic year.

Phi Sigma Kappa is now under College operation as a new residential house; authorities have signed a three-year lease retroactive to the start of the current academic year. Alpha Delta Phi fraternity officials have advised the College that they are ready to negotiate a two-year lease of the property beginning July 1, 1964. Trustees of Delta Upsilon fraternity also plan to sponsor a new residential unit in the fall of 1964.

The transition timetable to a residential system, anounced last year by he Board of Trustees, provided that the present undergraduates could finish their College careers under the old fraternity system, but that the Class of 1967 and all subsequent classes would go through their four years at Williams under the new residential house system.

Ed. Club Presents Panel On The Education Block

"Having been on the Block, what is your impression of student teaching?"

James Coopee, secondary school science: "Student teaching is a unique experience. I learned more from my experiences than I could ever learn in a text."

Lura Smith, elementary: "I feel that student teaching is not the end of a teacher's training. It opened my eyes to the enormity of the teacher's task and equipped me with the basic program and confidence on which to build."

Beverly Christo, secondary school English: "I was a practice teacher and lived."

Jim, Lura, Bev, and Dick Kmon (elementary) will participate in a panel discussion at the Education Club Meeting, on February 19, at 7:00, in the Education Building Auditorium. Much of the program will consist of a question period in which the audience will take part and ask the panel such questions as, "What problems did you encounter?" "Did practice teaching meet your expectations?"

Dr. William G. Kornegay, one of the faculty advisors to the Club, will be the moderator. Refreshments will be served after the meeting in the Marks Meadow cafeteria.

English Dept. Presents Moliere Lecture Tuesday

The English department will sponsor a lecture on "The Comic —Theory and Practice" by Dr. Paul Lauter on Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

Dr. Lauter's talk will deal especially with the comic drama of Moliere.

The author of some 30 monographs and articles, his "Theories of Comedy," an anthology with introduction and notes, will be published in the Doubleday Anchor series this summer.

Dr. Lauter is acting as director of studies for the peace education division of the American Friends Service Committee.

Dr. Lauter has taught at Dartmouth University and at the University of Massachusetts. He has accepted a position in the English department at Smith College starting next September.

Reveler Applications Are Available Now

Applications for Revelers for the 1964-1965 school year have been circulated throughout all dorms, fraternities, and sororities. The applications must be returned to the Suden Union Lobby by Wednesday, February 26, 1964.

All underclassmen with a 2.0 cume, are eligible for membership in Revelers. Selection is based on interest and willingness to participate in extracurricular activities on campus and to promote school spirit and tradition in the rest of the school's population. Among the various activities sponsored by Revelers are the Freshmen 'Pep Night', the Freshman Ball, various dances, The Freshman Picnic, and Campus Varieties.

A major event organized by the Revelers is Student Activities Night which is intended to give the Freshman Class a chance to acquaint themselves with campus organizations.

The new Revelers will be 'tapped' on Student Leaders' Night in April.

Wheah Y'all Goin On That? Motorcycles Are Coming In

(ACP) — Want the acceleration of a Ferrari, the economy of a Volkswagen, the parking ease of a bicycle? Try a motorcycle, says THE DAILY TOREADOR, Texas Technological College, Lubbock.

But wait — do not sneer! One does not have to be the epic madman of Highway 101 to enjoy this adventurous outdoor sport, and you don't have to be Steve McQueen to get away with it socially. In fact, the recent European motoring influence in this country has started a trend which may go so far as to bring motorcycles "in."

There are shortcomings. Texas Tech classrooms have no hooks for hanging helmet and goggles. And sometimes the leather jacket arouses the suspicions of our agents of the law.

On one occasion, after being on the road for seven days, a Texas Tech student was stopped in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, by police — not for breaking the law but for being dirty. A friend was on the back of the machine. Both were unshaven, sunburned, covered with road film.

The following conversation ensued:

"Wheah y'all goin' on that thing?" "Texas." "Wheah y'all comin' from on that thing?" "Boston, Massachusetts." "What the' hell y'all doin' in Louisiana on that thing?" "Going to Texas." "Then git goin'."

So they did.

Negroes In "Ole Miss" Hampered By Law And Custom

To be in Mississippi is to witness the ill lot of the segregated at the hands of the segregator. It is to observe the operation of the government economy and society which is designed to insure that the little opportunity which exists be more available to the whites than to the negroes.

The impoverished negroes of Mississippi live in a state which ranks 50th in both per capital income and educational expenditures per pupil. Their income is less than ½ the average of the whites. "Segregated but equal" schools rarely have students beyond the sixth grade. Their homes are built from material from wrecked buildings and are shacks, in inhumane neighborhoods.

The Government

The government is so organized that Mississippi negroes have neither a say in it nor the privilege of its protection. For instance less than 6% of voting age negroes have registered since 1960. 70 thousand have applied to vote and 63 thousand have been turned down. While working on voter registration projects, negroes Robert Smith, George Lee, Gus Courts, Herbert Lee and James Travis have been shot. Three of these men failed to recover. And in some cases civil rights workers such as Medger Evers, Mississippi Field Secretary for NAACP, have been shot to death on the spot.

Customs

There exist innumerable customs designed to constantly impress upon the negro his inferior position. Negroes are traditionally addressed by the term "boy" or by their first name alone. Signs marked either colored or white only are ambiguous insuring vigorous segregation of all facilities open to the public from restaurants and hotels to restrooms and drinking fountains. Inter-marriage is illegal and many forms of social mixing are considered evil.

The worst aspect of segregation in Mississippi however, cannot be directly observed. "There is nothing more destructive and cruel than for a person to be perpetually told he is inferior—that he is lesser because of his negro ancestry."

White's Position

Coming fully aware of the injustices of their treatment, the negroes face the tragic fact that those who control Mississippi are dedicated to the preservation of segregation. This position of the whites is more than a reflection of a cultural heritage. The white Mississippians are able to remain indifferent to the victimization of the negroes because of such factors as ignorance, selfishness and insecurity.

One Half Of All Berkley Students Spend Weekend Drinking

(ACP) — THE DAILY CALIFORNIAN, University of California, Berkeley, says an educated guess (all guesses are supposed to be educated around here) is that one half the University students spent part of their weekend drinking.

That's very much in keeping with the traditional idea of the undergraduate. From the "Student Prince" all the way to "Franny and Zooey," students are supposed to live high—at least on weekends.

But there are a couple of hindrances to getting the alcohol. First, there is the state minimum age for liquor purchases. You've got to be 21.

There is another drinking problem, though, which faces only those students who have achieved the legal liquor age. California has more cars than any other state, but there is a large segment of the population which does not drive and does not have driver's licenses. You shouldn't have to drive to be able to drink.

What happens to the poor person who is really of age and yet cannot prove his maturity? Birth certificates will work in some places, but even armed with a photostatic copy, one often is turned away hot and thirsty.

Such a problem could be solved by establishing an agency issuing identification cards, sponsored by the state or national government. Applicants would have to pay a service charge — perhaps $3, the cost of a driver's license. They would have their same information which appears on a driver's license recorded.

Students could lobby for such a program.

work camp and the close contacts that will undoubtedly develop between North and South America participants.

Important corollary purposes of the project then, are to extend general student awareness of Latin American development opportunities and to build bridges of understanding between the students of the two continents.

The cost to participants is listed at $600. per person, however, Campus Chest has let it be known that it will sponsor one University student and will pay all expenses.

Applicants should submit their names to Campus Chest, Box 301, R.S.O. Office, Student Union.

Pucksters Bow, 6-5 As Palm Scores 4

by MORRIS SHUBOW

Ken Palm scored four goals but the University of New Hampshire came back from a three goal deficit to defeat the University of Massachusetts 6-5 at the Orr Rink Saturday afternoon.

A big Winter Carnival crowd watched the Wildcats score first on a goal by Capt. Buzz Littell at 24 seconds of the first period. Ten minutes later Redmen senior Bobby Lee took a pass from Jack Clayton, skated down the right wing, and scored his 7th goal of the season.

With five minutes left in the period junior right wing Ken Palm scored his first of four goals on a rebound shot. The assists went to Pete Hurd and Dick Phillips. Then two and a half minutes later Palm got another with the assist going to Jack Clayton. At the end of the first period the score was UMass 3, U.N.H. 1.

In the second period Palm continued where he had left off. After only 34 seconds of play he scored his third goal of the game, assisted by Dick Feldhoff and Pete Hurd. Here New Hampshire got to work again with Burt Myer, Buzz Littell, and Bob McCarthy scoring goals to tie up the game at the end of the second period, 4-4.

In the third period Littell scored his third goal of the game followed by McCarthy's second to give the Wildcats a 6-4 lead with 12 minutes to play. With less than seven minutes remaining a fight broke out between the two teams. As a result Redmen Pete Hurd and Dick Feldhoff and Burt Myer and Jim Churchard of New Hampshire all were given major penalties and disqualified from the game.

With six and a half minutes left New Hampshire's Ty Peabody was called for handling the puck in the goal crease and the Redmen's Dick Phillips was awarded a penalty shot. Phillips faked out New Hampshire goalie Doug Dunning but his shot hit the post. With 4:44 left Ken Palm got a breakaway, had his shot blocked, but while lying on the ice knocked the puck into the net for his fourth goal of the game. This game brought Palm's goal production to 9 for the season.

The game ended with New Hampshire ahead 6-5. Skip Bowen had 28 saves for the Redmen; Doug Dunning had 19 for the Wildcats.

through with a winning performance. Dan St. John was second and Stan Brallier third to give UMass the first three places in a total of three events.

The vicory was chiefly a team effort, with help from team captain, Dave Williams, who collected 38.35 points in five of the six events he entered. The victory now makes the seasons's record two wins against three losses. The next meet for the Redmen is Saturday, Feb. 22, when the team travels to Cortland, New York to meet the Cortland gymnastics team.

Intramural B-Ball

Kappa Sig opened last Wednesday night by squeaking by Theta Chi by a score of 33 to 29. At the same time Sig Ep upended AEPi 67 to 17. TKE took the victory from a fast-moving PMD team, the final tab being 36-25. ATG took Zeta Nu by a score of 27-21, while QTV overpowered TEP in a 43-22 meeting. The Phi Sigs were an overpowering quintet in the game—final score PSK 42, BKP 26. LCA trounced PSD with Rana bucketing 19 points to aid in the 69-17 win.

IN DORM BALL Wheeler nipped Brett 41-35. Mills came out on top, with a 24 to 17 win over Hampshire. Gorman downed Hils South 36-28. Chadbourne defeated Greenough 31-24 and Hills North capped a 35-28 victory over Baker.

Mermen Romp Vermont 64-29 As Four New Records Recorded

by BUD PRATT

Joe Rogers' Varsity Swimming Team rolled to its fourth straight victory and the Yankee Conference Championship in a meet held at Vermont Saturday afternoon.

After Koss, Monnier, O'Sullivan, and Wilson combined to win the 400 medley relay, Mike Rothschild broke his own 200 freestyle record for the third straight time, lowering his time to 1:58.0. Dick Daniels '66 pushed Mike with a 2:04.0 for second place.

Swimming his best meet of the year, Mike Bjorholm tested some adjustments in his freestyle stroke and then blitzed the field with a 23.2. Kipp Watt took third. Dan O'Mara continued to increase UM's lead, winning the 200 yd. individual medley in 2:32.9.

The only event which Mass. failed to dominate was the diving. Here Tom Hanley turned in his best performance of the year only to be nosed out of the first place award.

With the meet in the palms of their hands, the Redmen refused to slacken their stroke. Jim O'Sullivan continued to mess up the record books with a 2:36.5 in the 200 butterfly. Mike Bjornholm was pursued right to the finish line by teammate Dick Daniels in winning the 100 freestyle in 53.4. Dick Koss followed with a first in the 200 backstroke.

Hearing the previous night that one of his top New England competitors had just turned in a 5:23 in the 500, Mike Rothschild won his 500 in 5:22.8, clipping nearly four seconds off his own UM record. Charlie Monnier then walked away from the field to win the breaststroke in 2:37. Nearly all the Redmen's times established records for the Vermont pool. Wilson, Cowern, Watt, and Daniels finished the meet with a victory in the 400 free-style relay.

The fourth UM record of the day was set by the bus driver, who hustled the squad home from Burlington in 2:58.34.2.

The Redmen will be after their fifth straight win Wednesday night at WPE vs. Worcester Polytech. The meet begins immediately after the Naiads' performance, which starts at 7:00.

ning's final total of 20 and Bernard had scored all but three of his 19 total. But the Redmen were far from through. With Bernard hitting Benjamin consistently and Dick getting a few taps, the team kept right on going. Not to be overlooked was the hot shooting of Jim Painten who had one of his best nights of the year.

WITH STILL ten minutes left on the clock the Redmen held a 91-62 lead. It took them all of three more minutes to pass the century mark as Charlie Kingston pushed the shot through the hoop to make the lead 101-68. Coach Orr had cleared his bench and it was only left to determine the final margin and how many records the team could break.

The final statistics show the Redmen hitting on 48 of 99 from the floor for a fine 48.5% from the floor matched with an excellent 24 of 31 from the line (77.4%) and a 67-45 margin in rebounds. This would have to rank as the best all around effort of the year.

BESIDES Twitchell and Bernard, the team got great support from Painten who hit for 19 points and O'Rourke with 16. Right in there was Benjamin with 14 points in his best effort of the year. O'Rourke also grabbed off 16 rebounds, Paul Gullicksen pulled down 14, Twitchell had 10 and Benjamin came in with 9 in his 15 minutes of action.

Vermont also managed to put five men in double figures, but it simply was not enough to block the Redmen surge. Dave Strassburg had 17 to lead the Catamounts. Milt Goggans one of the top twenty rebounders in the country was effectively blocked out so that he managed only 12. the Redmen performance was

One of the good points about that they committed only 12 fouls. This has been a problem to the team all year and perhaps this will be a good sign for the team. The record now stands at 13-6 for the year and 4-3 in the conference as they hold down third place. Next Tuesday the squad. The record now stands at on the University of Rhode Island in a big conference game for the second and third place teams.

The fine freshmen team also passed the hundred mark as they downed Chamberlayne Junior College, 104-66. The team was paced by Jim Babyak with 20 points.

Cagers Prevail Over Catamounts

Cage Records Fall In 120-84 Rout

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts went on another record breaking binge Saturday night as they rolled back the University of Vermont 120-84 in a feature of the Winter Carnival Weekend. The home crowd finally got a chance to see the club at the letter perfect offense they have displayed this year.

The records include most points in one game, most points in one half (64), and tied most field goals in one half (60). In addition the team set records for the Curry Hicks Cage of most points in one game, most field goals in one game (48), and most points by the two teams combined (204).

BESIDES ALL of these records there are two more things that the win helped. One was that the Redmen gained revenge for an early season loss and the other is that they kept their slim hopes for a share of the Conference crown alive.

Massachusetts started slowly as the Catamounts took an early lead, but the home team broke into a 10-6 lead on the strength of three hoops by Rodger Twitchell. Vermont however closed the gap and it was basket for basket until there were about five minutes left in the half. Then the team outscored Vermont 19 to 2 as they raced from a 37-36 lead to a 56-38 halftime margin. Twitchell scored nine points in the barrage and Pete Bernard added eight markers.

Twitchell hit on eight of nine jump shots in the half and hit for 18 points. Bernard came through with 12 points and steady Chuck O'Rourke added 11 with 8 rebounds. Jim Painten scored eight points and came through with four assists. Mass shot an even fifty percent in the half as they really looked sharp.

IN THE SECOND HALF the Redmen moved out and scored almost at will as they buried the visitors behind a growing barrage of shooters. The Redmen could do virtually nothing wrong. Mass sandwiched hoops by Twitchell and Bernard around one by Layne Higgs of the Catamounts to stretch the margin to twenty points. The visitors briefly closed the spread to 19 but the Redmen quickly suppressed the opponent.

When Chuck O'Rourke retired to the bench for one of the few times this season, Dick Benjamin came on the scene. At this time Twitchell had reached his eve-

REDMEN NETTED 120 POINTS and broke numerous UMass records in rout of Vermont. With 39 seconds left on the clock the hoopsters netted their last basket.

Gymnasts Down Ithaca In Winter Carnival Feature

by JOE PARNAR

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS GYMNASTICS TEAM helped to brighten a weather-dimmed winter carnival weekend by defeating the Ithaca State College gymnastics team, 125.90 to 104.73. The meet, first to be held in the auxiliary gym of the Boyden physical education building, was witnessed by a capacity crowd.

The first event of the meet, floor exercises, proved to be the only event in which the visitors out scored the Redmen. In this event, Edward Sliwinski of Ithaca scored a 7.60 to edge out Dave Lizzotte of UMass for first place honors by less than one-tenth of a point. At the end of this event, he Redmen were trailing by a score of 20.20 to 19.95.

THE VISITOR'S LEAD was short lived, however, for in the next event, the side horse, the superior depth of the Redmen squad began to show itself. In this event, the Redmen swept the three top places, compiling 20.30 points to 13.30 for the Ithaca gymnasts.

First place in the side horse event went to Captain Dave Williams, with second and third going to sophomores Dan St. John and Jim Duesenbury. It was this event that gave UMass a commanding 40.25 to 33.50 lead.

ON THE HORIZONTAL BAR, the Redmen further increased their lead by once again taking first, second, and third places. Stan Brallier won the event, with Dick Cardiff second and Dave Williams, competing in the all-around event, third. At this point the score was UMass 58.35, Ithaca 47.75.

THE NEXT EVENT, long horse vaulting, proved to be one of the high spots of the meet. Al Cohen, a sophomore, scored a 9.4 on the second of his vaulting to win the event. In long horse vaulting, each performer is allowed two vaults, the one with the lower score being disregarded. It is interesting to note that Cohen's first vault, netted him a 9.0, but was dropped because of his especially good second vault. Either one of these two fine vaults would have been sufficient for him to win the event. The team scores for this event were very close, however, with UMass on top 26.85 to 26.45.

ON THE PARALLEL BARS, the Redmen increased their lead even further, with Dave Williams winning the event and Dan St. John taking a third place. The team seemed to be slightly off in this event, however, with scores considerably lower than in previous meets. The winning score in the event was a 7.95. This event brought the running score of the meet to UMass 105.05, Ithaca College, 91.60.

THE LAST EVENT OF THE MEET was the still rings. Once again Dave Williams came

Amherst Defeats Fluoridation; "Issue Not Dead" — Proponents

by LOIS SCOLNICK

The citizens of Amherst have voted against adding fluoride to the town's water supply. As a result of Monday's overwhelming 2 to 1 vote against fluoridation, Amherst residents, including students at the University, will continue to drink the same, unfluoridated water they have been consuming.

The proposal to fluoridate the town water supply has been the subject of loud and heated debate for many weeks. Supporters of the plan for fluoridation claimed that such a water supply can lead to 60% to 70% reduction in tooth decay among children. They would have advocated adding one part fluoride per million parts of water.

Opponents claimed that the full range of potential effects of fluoridation have not been sufficiently tested and proved.

Among those who led the fight in favor of fluoridation was Dr. Gage, Director of University Health Service. In answer to the argument that floridation was harmful, Dr. Gage wrote in the Amherst Journal-Record of Jan. 23 that "there is no evidence . . . that low fluoride concentration affects normal human cells."

Other members of the University Health Service were among 30 doctors who ran an advertisement in the Journal-Record favoring fluoridation.

Fred P. Jeffrey, Associate Dean of the School of Agriculture, was a leader of the fight for fluoridation as head of the Amherst Citizen's Committee for Dental Health.

One of the chief documents on which the "anti-fluoridationists" based their decision was a series of articles appearing in the Saturday Review. John Lear, the magazine's editor, came out firmly in opposition to fluoridation. The bulk of medical opinion questioned Lear's contentions.

Still many believe that fluoridating the water would be an infringement on private rights. This segment of opponents insisted that fluoridation should be a private decision. Those who want fluoridated water might themselves use fluoride pills in their water, they suggested.

In spite of the results of the vote, fluoridation is not a "dead issue," said Simon V. Keochakian, active member of the Amherst Citizen's Committee for Dental Health. Mr. Keochakian stated Tuesday that the committee will continue its fight but is as yet undecided about definite future action.

Federal Agents Nab Two; Narcotics Sale Charged

Federal agents, state and local police teamed up in the arrest of two local men on charges of violating the Federal narcotics statute.

Bob Weber, a UMass junior, was arrested at his South Pleasant Street apartment at 12:35 Monday morning by Sgt. Joseph Jagadowski of the state police narcotics bureau, Officer Clarence Babb of the Amherst police and two unidentified federal narcotics agents.

The same officers also apprehended David Jacobs, an unemployed town resident, late Monday afternoon.

Jacobs was charged with the sale of approximately 165 grams (⅓ lb.) of marijuana, while Weber was charged with aiding and abetting in the sale.

The two were arrested after allegedly selling the narcotic to an undercover federal agent for $150.

Narcotics Bureau agent Gerald Carey said that on February 9 Weber introduced him to Jacobs, saying, "This is my man. You can do business direct with him.' Following the introduction, the trio went to Jacobs' apartment. Here Jacobs produced a paper bag containing the drug, which the agent examined. He then paid Jacobs $150 for the 165 grams.

District Supervisor John A. Trainor of the bureau told the Collegian that the two were arrested in compliance wtih a federal statute dealing with the sale of narcotics. He said that the two had been under suspicion for several weeks.

Weber and Jacobs were brought before U. S. Commissioner James H. Moriarty of Springfield yesterday morning. The two had the hearing continued until Thursday.

Conviction could result in a maximum penalty of up to ten years in prison. Minimum penalty is usually two years, but this may be reduced if there are extenuating circumstances, such as age.

Trainor cited a "youthful offenders' act" which provides for lesser penalties for those in their early twenties.

Asked about the possible extent of the narcotic use on campus, Trainor said that while the problem was a serious one, it was not widespread. "There is," he said, "no reason to suspect that it has progressed to any alarming degree."

Town Negroes Face Housing Inequality

"Racial discrimination exists in Amherst." This statement, published in a two part article which appeared in the Feb. 6 and 13 issues of the Amherst Journal Record, formed the conclusion of a survey completed last year on the subject of racial prejudice in Amherst.

In 1961 interested Amherst citizens formed the Amherst Fair Housing Committee and chose Rev. David King as a chairman. Renamed in the summer of 1963 as the Amherst Human Relations Council, this interfaith, interracial organization is headed by Rev. Richard Harding, at whose home the survey group often met.

Town Attitude

The Council had often heard remarks such as "Where's the problem? All the Negroes I know about have some place to live and have jobs," and "Why stir up a lot of trouble? Amherst isn't perfect, but it is certainly better than lots of towns and cities in which I've lived." To discover the extent of discrimination against minority groups in Amherst, the Council sent out 500 questionnaires to town residents chosen at random.

Of the 126 people who responded with sufficient information, the majority were white, well-educated Protestants. While 82% said they would be willing to sell their house to a Jewish family if the occasion arose, only 58% would sell to an American Negro family and 56% to an African Negro family. And 81% would sell to an American family of foreign extraction, while only 68% indicated willingness to sell their home to an Asian family with darker skin.

Neighbors Accepted

If a Negro family did move in, however, the Amherst residents

Nine Student Senators were elected for eight separate constituencies in yesterday's special elections. Over 1100 ballots were cast in the day long procedures.

Elections Committee members said that the election was perhaps the largest in recent Senate history, with nine vacant seats up for grabs.

Vice Chairman Dave Mathieson ('64 At-Large) said "that the turnout was the largest of any special election. For example, more people voted in Gorman House in this special election, than voted in that dorm's fall elections."

He went on to say that three seats were decided by five or less votes.

Those elected:

Plymouth: Phil Johnson
Commuter: Jim Allen Hills North: John Greenquist
Fraternities: Allen Sarno
At-Large '65: Don Haynes
Hills South: Dave Murphy
Gorman: Tony Manfredi
Van Meter North: Sharon English, Martha Graves

Senate Acts

Trimester Poll Conducted

In order to gather as much student opinion as possible on the subjects of trisemester and reading period, the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee will distribute the following questionnaire to the general campus this week.

The questions to be polled include:

1. Are you in favor of year-round operation?
2. If given the opportunity, would you attend college on a year-round basis?
3. If three semesters were offered and you chose to attend two semesters, which two would you choose?
4. If more money were available in the form of loans and scholarships, would this affect your plans concerning year-round attendance?
5. Are you in favor of a reading or study period before final examinations?
6. How many days should the reading period be?

The term "year-round operation" means three semesters equal in all respects which would begin approximately on September 1, January 2, and May 15.

Hatching A Moral Obligation

There are some very worried faces in the Hatch lately; and some more or less smug campus citizens who are open to a sound warning (if nothing else); people, who for one reason or another—for kicks or for the "friends" they've made—are all tied up in the dirty business of narcotics.

Why, in the name of any deity, do a bunch of intelligent people feel compelled to "get kicks" in such a precarious way? We might tolerate the excuse, "I wanted to see what it was like"; but irregardless of whether trying dope is right or wrong, the injury seems compounded when the experiment is here at college, with so much more at stake.

The number of people involved in sales and smoking of marijuana is evidently small. However, the real problem—the real thrombosised heart—of the situation concerns that larger group of on-lookers, and "casual" participants.

The students, and perhaps, the administration, who have been aware of both the presence of marijuana and the few people who have been making it available, failed to realize the imminent harm that dope-use presented.

It would not have been "un-cool," or "playing God" to have rejected those who would bring dope to campus; nor does it seem enough that the administration was aware of the situation, when preventive measures by the administration, or more basically, within the group, could have saved so many "trial" and tribulations.

The lesson to be gained from our "Campus Dope Ring Smashed," is readily perceived, and like most morals to the story, hard to make workable—but not impossible. That justifies a long editorial that puts it all in black and white.

There will always be the bad influence on campus, and you can be sure the federal agents are going to be here watching it for a while. However, when things calm down, those intelligent campus citzens who sat closely by this time, could do better to steer clear of trouble. The administration, with sufficient provocation, could make advisory comments to "keep it clean"—all before the proof is made by arrest.

Well, take that pill and get high on it. DBA

"A Den Of Iniquity"

It remains to be seen how much fun some of the Massachusetts papers will have with the recent misfortune at this University regarding narcotics. But it is quite possible that it will get a large "play" in some of the metropolitan papers, and even more possible, judging from similar events which occurred at Brandeis, a large hullaballoo will be raised.

A large hue and cry of public outrage, skillfully led by a few "friends" of this University will demand every sort of investigation and find every possible reason for the presence of dope on this campus. (We can think of one Boston editoriallst who will probably place the whole blame for the mess on fiscal autonomy.)

In advance of what we believe is to come we offer no apologies for the actions of a handful of misguided students and non-students on this campus. True, there are many to blame including those people who must share in the problem through there abandonment of their moral obligation (see above editorial), but let it be known that these are just a very small minority.

UMass is a big town, and like every other big town we have a strange allottment of people. We have our town drinks, our town eccentrics, our town communists, and as it appears now, our town junkies. But in all cases these people are not the rule, but rather the exception.

Therefore, in the next few days and weeks when UMass will probably be labelled a Den of Iniquity do not take it to heart. We have our faults, sometimes we are individually and collectively quite stupid in our actions, but for the most part UMass is a good town with good people. JSD

Fluoridation: Scientific Or Political?

by G. MASSELAM

Have the citizens of Amherst allowed themselves to be duped into voting immaturely? A medical and dental issue supported by thirty doctors in an advertisement in the Journal Record was killed in a referendum by a vote of 2 to 1. The issue is fluoridation, which is scientific. Opposition, however, was not so much scientific as political. Many were afraid of their private rights being ignored. There were thoughts of socialism overriding the individual, and infringement on democratic rights. It is a shame these individuals allow themselves to be frightened by illusions of loss of freedom concerning a scientific issue which can do the community only ultimate good.

The Varsity Athlete

by MICHAEL BASILE

Perhaps nothing is more painful to a varsity coach, nor more disappointing to the student body than is the loss of an athlete via the route of academic inelligibility. This year is no exception.. Massachusetts has more than once witnessed the loss of an athlete during his freshman or sophomore year; for the difficulty of adjusting to new surroundings and the pressures of studies, coupled with the time and energy demanded by a sport, have all too often proved academically fatal for the aspiring athlete.

But opinion has it otherwise. There are some, both students and faculty members, who have said that since the athlete has taken on the responsibility of a sport, he should be made to suffer the consequences of low grades like anyone else. "After all," they say, "What is he here for, to go out for a sport, or to get an education?" Such a question, however, is not only unfair; it is also unrealistic. Unfair because it asks too much, and unrealistic because it ignores the facts; for fact it is that the athlete on scholarship is here as much for playing a sport as he is for getting an education. If he finds himself in academic trouble and is forced to leave the team in order to avoid dropping out, he loses his scholarship. His scholarship, more over, may have been and often is the reason for entering Massachusetts in the first place.

Still some could remark that most varsity athletes are physical education majors, "a gut-major," they say. But it must be remembered that the physical education major is as much a member of the college of arts and sciences as anyone else, which simply means that the athlete's freshman and sophomore schedule is the same as anyone else's, and these are the years which witness most of the drop-outs. Thus, when we "ask too much of the athlete," we must remember that not only must he study after two or three hours of practice everyday, but he must spend the time and energy in playing and traveling to his games. While most of us were studying the week before finals, here is what the basketball team was doing besides practice:

Tues., Jan. 7—Providence, home
Fri., Jan. 10—Vermont, away
Sat., Jan. 11—St. Michael's, away.

In short, what is not being requested or implied is an "upgrade" or a "padded" schedule for the varsity athlete, since that is unfair, but rather let the members of this institution think twice before their justice is blind in their "unequivocal fairness" to all regardless of any circumstances. To ask the athlete to take on the burden of worrying whether he will be allowed to make-up an exam missed because of travel for a game, or to take a more difficult make-up, as they usually are, is to ask of him something not required from the rest of us; for not only do we have the time and effort the athlete uses for a sport, but rarely do we provide the student body with the enjoyment of an undefeated football season, or the thrill of a record breaking win over Vermont.

Letters

The Deputy

To the Editor:

A fact is realized: six million human beings are killed by their fellow men.

A trial takes place: a small percentage of the guilty are sentenced at Nuremburg:

A play is written: The Deputy—the play questions the motives and the actions of Pope Pius XII in regard to the German-Jewish policy.

A speech is made: upon leaving Israel this past month Pope Paul VI defends the actions, honor, and character of Pope Pius XII.

A discusion to be held: this evening the Student Zionist Organization has invited as their guest Father Quigley of the Newman Club to discuss "Pope Pius XII and the Jews."

The fact and the trial are symbolic of a world which existed and exists no more. They are the acts of the past generation and the deeds, perhaps, that many of us would like to forget. However, the play and the speech bring them upon us. The act, the trial, as well as the play and the speech have become moral questions which our generation "may" answer. The word answer, here, is ambiguous, for how does one answer the questions concerning the act. Why? Who is responsible? Who is guilty?

Guilty, innocent, again are terms and no one can accuse the Pope or the Church and no one can say that they are guilty. Yet, in the play The Deputy by Rolf Hochhuth the action or failure of action of the Pope or the Church is questioned. The meeting this evening is an attempt to discuss the happenings—what actually occurred rather than what may have been falsely assumed in a play, or what is commonly accepted. As one comes tonight, one should come as a human being, for the "act" was committed to man by his fellow man.

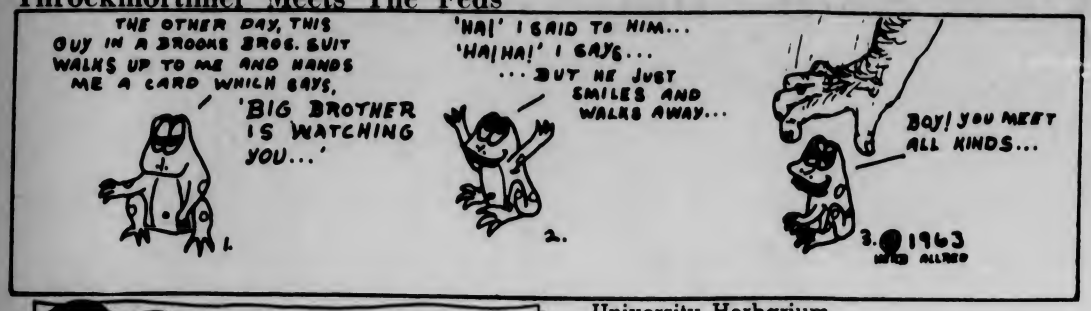
Throckmortimer Meets The Feds



On Campus with Max Shulman

ARF!

Benjamin Franklin (or The Louisville Slugger, as he is better known as) said, "A penny saved is a penny earned," and we, the college population of America, have taken to heart this sage advice. We spend prudently; we budget diligently. Yet, despite our wise precautions, we are always running short. Why? Because there is one item of expense that we consistently underestimate—the cost of travelling home for weekends.

Let us take the typical case of Basil Metabolism, a sophomore at UCLA majoring in avocados. Basil, a resident of Bangor, Maine, loved to go home each weekend to play with his faithful dog, Spot. What joy, what wreathed smiles, when Basil and Spot were re-united! Basil would leap into his dogcart, and Spot, a genuine Alaskan husky, would pull Basil all over Bangor, Maine—Basil calling cheery halloos to the townfolk, Spot wagging his curly tail.

The results were not all Basil had hoped

But the cost, alas, of travelling from UCLA to Bangor, Maine, ran to $400 a week, and Basil's father, alas, earned only a meagre salary as a meter-reader for the Bangor water department. So, alas, after six months Basil's father told Basil he could raise no more money; he had already sold everything he owned, including the flashlight he used to read meters.

Basil returned to California to ponder his dilemma. One solution occured to him—to ship Spot to UCLA and keep him in his room—but Basil had to abandon the notion because of his roommate, G. Fred Sigafoos, who was, alas, allergic to dog hair.

Then another idea came to Basil—a stroke of genius, you might call it. He would buy a Mexican hairless chihuahua! Thus he would have a dog to pull him around, and G. Fred's allergy would be undisturbed.

The results, alas, were not all Basil had hoped. The chihuahua, alas, was unable to pull Basil in the dogcart, no matter how energetically he beat the animal.

Defeated again, Basil sat down with G. Fred, his roommate, to smoke a Marlboro Cigarette and seek a new answer to the problem. Together they smoked and thought and—Eureka!—an answer quickly appeared. (I do not suggest, mark you, that Marlboro Cigarettes are an aid to cerebration. All I say about Marlboros is that they taste good and are made of fine tobaccos and pure white filters and come in soft pack or Flip Top box.)

Well, sir, Basil and G. Fred got a great idea. Actually, the idea was G. Fred's, who happened to be majoring in genetics. Why not, said G. Fred, cross-breed the chihuahua with a Great Dane and thus produce an animal sturdy enough to pull a dogcart?

It was, alas, another plan doomed to failure. The cross-breeding was done, but the result (this is very difficult to explain) was a raccoon.

But there is, I am pleased to report, a happy ending to this heart-rending tale. It seems that Basil's mother (this is also very difficult to explain) is a glamorous blond aged 19 years. One day she was spotted by a talent scout in Bangor, Maine, and was signed to a fabulous movie contract, and the entire family moved to California and bought Bel Air, and today one of the most endearing sights to be seen on the entire Pacific Coast is Spot pulling Basil down Sunset Boulevard—Basil cheering and Spot wagging. Basil's mother is also happy, making glamorous movies all day long, and Basil's father is likewise content, sitting at home and reading the water meter. © 1964 Max Shulman

University Herbarium

28,000 Types Of Fungus

by LINDA VALONEN

On stepping into the University herbarium, a faint odor of old corsage, creeps out of the ninety tall green herbarium cases. Upon opening the doors to these cases, one is confronted with pile after pile of red folders and white folders with pressed and dried specimens.

Dried fruits of many varieties can be found in sets of drawers while other fruits, all too big for the herbarium sheets, have been preserved in formlin solutions in large bottles lined on shelves.

The Massachusetts herbarium was founded by William S. Clark, Professor of botany and president of the college from 1867-1878. In 1869, William Knowlton, a member of the State Board of Agriculture, gave $2000 to the school for herbarium specimens and chses. In addition, when the university was first founded, the herbarium in the State House in Boston was sent here. Since this time, many collections have been added.

The fungus and lichen collections of the University herbarium number approximately 28,000 and are now under the care of Drs. Howard E. and Margaret E. Bigelow. All groups of fungi are represented. Under the auspices of the National Science Foundation the Drs. Bigelow are adding many specimens each year, particularly representatives of the higher fungi.

The entire herbarium numbers about 140,000 specimens including ferns, mosses, algae, fungi, and liverworts, as well as the higher plants. Concentration is of course on the New England plant life, but representatives can be found from all over the world. The extensive collections have recently served as the basis for the new "Guide to the Flora of Western New England" by Dr. Livingston.

Like the zoological and entomological collections, the herbarium is used primarily for research projects of both graduate students and staff members. Dr. Rudolf Schuster, currently studying in the large herbaria of Europe, is the Director of the Herbarium.

The herbarium has come into use on occasion also when people want a plant identified because of possible danger to children playing in an area where an unidentified plant produces enticing "fruits" such as polk berry. Mari-

THE TECHNIQUE, Georgia Institute of Technology: The problem? How to eliminate profanity at movies and sporting events. The solution? Schedule a "gross hour" to enable Georgia Tech students to get the grossness out of their system. THE TECHNIQUE, tongue in cheek, suggests that several rooms in dorms and fraternity houses be set aside for the "gross hour" programs, between 6 and 7 p.m. Fridays. "The hourly session would start with a 15-minute warmup period of screaming assorted four-letter words, with prizes awarded on originality of combinations of such words. The next period would be devoted to bottle throwing. Then comes a session of reading gross implications into normal, everyday situations." The idea seems to be that, fortified by this therapy, students can emerge to face the civilized world, pure of mind and spirit.

STATE NEWS, Michigan State Univ.: On the UMass campus, the excitement of College Bowl competition has been a one-shot event. At Michigan State, students have incorporated a University College Bowl into their schedule of extracurricular activities. Two leagues have been set up for dormitories and Greeks, and winners from the bowl playoffs within the two leagues play each other for the All-University championship. Everyone gets into the act, huh?

TRINITY TRIPOD, Trinity Coll., Hartford: You think you've got parking problems? The TRIPOD reports that "parking facilities are virtually non-existent at many colleges in metropolitan areas." Rutgers has to operate 26 buses to shuttle students from parking area to school areas, and the Univ. of Minnesota has set up a "self-supporting" parking lot in which everyone on campus pays to park. The TRIPOD's information comes from a report of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. which states that 44% of the nation's 4.5 million college undergraduates are maintaining an automobile on campus this year! May we suggest a "Back To Bicycles" campaign?

Pig Population Of Hatch Increases

by Harold A. Gushue Jr. '65

"Somebody must have ordered pork chops rare", was a comment overheard by this roving reporter during my nightly Hatch break, Tuesday 17, at 8:30 p.m. Upon investigation I discovered the reason for this comment. There was a pig in the Hatch!

It was shoved in through a side door by person or persons unknown. An interview with a student produced the information that giggling was heard when the subject entered. This produced a crowd which was observing the pig. Either due to the crowd or the unusual surroundings, the subject left her calling card.

The subject soon tired of the chocolate chip cookies it was being fed by a co-ed, and an interview with the subject did not even procure a non-commital "Oink".

To Spill Your Cookies Over WMUA Provides Hit List

by SHELLY SPEAR

QUIZ QUEEN SUE TRACY and her College Bowl team court will stand the challenge of St. John's University in the NBC arena this Sunday at 5:30. WMUA will be broadcasting the team's try for its fourth straight victory.

How much time do you actually spend in your dorm? Is it a home or just a place to check into and sleep in? Dean Field and Senate President Jon Fife will be discussing this issue, the controversial student leader incentive bill and the Student Government on "Interaction" Sunday at 7 p.m. And don't forget to sign out of your dorm if you come down to the studio. Our comfy observation room in the Engineering Building (directly behind Goessman) is where you can watch the program and talk wtih WMUA personnel if you're interested in joining this semester. We still have a few openings on the news staff and in the record libe.

SPEAR HEARS: "Rodeo" is not near the riding stable but a work of one of America's greatest living composers — Aaron Copland. Following "Rodeo," hostess Bobbie Nathan will be playing Dvorak's "New World Symphony." (Mon/8P.M.)

By now the basketball team must think they've three extra bench warmers but they're really WMUA men on the spot. Jim Slattery, Bob Healy and Jeff Baker call all the plays on the Redmen courts. This Thursday, from the Cage, the Redmen will pounce on Northeastern U and Saturday, the Univ. of New Hampshire. You may not be able to say "hi" to the boys at away games but come on over at half time during home games.

Along with the ashtray adorning Hatch tables, WMUA will be adding something new for you to spill cokes over—a list of the top 30 hit tunes. Oldies but Goodies in the Hatch for request, each week a spotlight on another phase of work at WMUA. That's beginning a week from this Friday in the Hatch where "Crazy Rhythms" is broadcast live. (8P.M.)

Laugh this Saturday afternoon. No, not because there're no classes but because Pete Johnson is going to be spotlighting Jose Jimenez, Stan Freeberg and a cutting new album, "Commercials to Cringe By" on "Potpourre." (Sat/1P.M.). He'll also be reactivating a few albums of the New Christy Minstrels for those of you who went to the concert and want to hear more or those of you who missed them.

APO-GSS BOOK SALE SETS RECORD

Sales at the APO-GSS Used Book Exchange set a record high as they reached the $1900 mark. Operated daily during the first week of the semester, the Exchange offered those selling used books the opportunity to set their own prices and those buying books a selection of highly competitively priced used books at prices markedly below those generally available in the local bookstores.

The Exchange, a joint service of Alpha Phi Omega and Gamma Sigma Sigma, achieved this outstanding record by operating, as usual, on a non-profit basis. Its overhead, which is held to a minimum by the service-minded members of the service fraternity and sorority, is met by nominal service fee collected on each book sold.

Co-chairmen Don Haynes and Fay Crossley have announced that payments for books sold will continue through Friday, February 21st. Hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Barnstable Room of the Student Union. Students who have not reclaimed unsold books should plan to pick them up during these hours also.

The New York Brass Quintet To Appear In Bowker Concert

The New York Brass Quintet, called "an admirable team of first-rate instrumentalists" by the "Washington Post," will give a concert on Tuesday, Feb. 25, at the University of Massachusetts.

The quintet will appear in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. under sponsorship of the UMass Concert Association.

Robert Nagel, Ted Weis, Raymond Alonge, John Swallow, and Harvey Phillips make up the quintet. The group derives its sound from two trumpets in the hands of Nagel and Weis, Alonge's French horn, John Swallow's trombone, and the tuba of Harvey Phillips.

The five musicians, all graduates of the Juilliard School of Music, formed their quintet seven years ago after gaining experience with orchestras headed by Stokowski, Reiner, Stravinsky, Casals, and Bernstein.

A typical program presented by the quintet includes works ranging from pre-Bach to modern music composed for brasses.

In addition to giving concerts and making records, the quintet conducts workshops for schools, colleges and universities. These are so popular that, during a 1960 tour, a group of young people made a 600-mile round-trip by bus within a twenty-four hour period to attend an afternoon clinic and an evening concert.

Bridge Team Beats Harvard

The University's Bridge team returned from a successful weekend at Harvard with a substantial lead in the intercollegiate tournament sponsored by the Eastern Collegiate Contract Bridge Association.

The "A" team of Captain Bob Schwartz and Steve Bowman, Jim Crawford and Jim Fitzgerald, beat Harvard's "A" team by 13 International Match Points, and Brandeis by 47 IMP's, while the B team of four with the partnerships Ron Burt and Pat McDevitt, Ron Harvey and Ron Kraft, beat MIT's "B" team by 37 IMP's.

In the next few weeks these two teams will compete in a number of matches which will determine the intercollegiate bridge championship of Massachusetts.

With the fine scores already registered, there is every reason to believe the University will walk away with the honors.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: FRANK FRASIER

Frank Frasier (B.A., 1960) helps see to it that the phones of 60,000 customers stay in top working order. Frank is Foreman-Service for New England Telephone in Somerville, Massachusetts.

What's a liberal-arts graduate doing in such a technical-sounding position? "Exercising his supervisory ability," is the answer in Frank's case. Frank's is a management job—his 9 craftsmen handle the technical aspects for him.

Frank earned his latest promotion after proving himself on a staff job in Arlington, Massachusetts. And with the spark he's showing on his new job, Frank's future with New England Telephone Company is bright.

Frank Frasier, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

In a large bottle of alcohol stands a cone of a relative of the pine tree. It is one and one half feet long. It is hard to believe that this "toothed monster" comes from a tree that grows only five feet tall. In a nearby bottle lies what looks like red lady-bugs but are truly poisonous relatives of the peas, the crab's eye vine. From Formosa comes a unique specimen—a stalk of a tree fern which any little child would love to have as a gift because it looks just like a "wooly little lamb".

Boyden Building Open For Student Faculty Use

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

Dr. Dave Bischoff, associate professor of Physical Education, has announced that the Boyden Building will soon offer its complete facilities to all members of the faculty and the student body.

The facilities now available include the main gym with its six complete basketball courts, and a fully equipped weight training room. The swimming pool in the Curry Hicks has also been placed at student and faculty disposal.

As of the present, the courts will be open for public use on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 4:30 to 6:30, and from 3:45 to 6:30 on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The weight training room from 7-10:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Curry Hicks pool is available for use from 4:15 to 6:00 Monday through Friday. Both use of the pool and the weight room will be supervised at all times by skilled instructors. Strict regulations are to be complied with in order to prevent damage to equipment or possible injury to participants. Everyone is required to use equipment issued by the University and none other. All baskets must be properly restored to their respective racks.

In addition to this weekly curricula, the basketball court and weight training room will be open from 12-4:30 on Saturdays and the courts exclusively from 1:30-4:30 on Sundays. During weekends only the Northeast entrance will be opened and I.D.'s will be checked at the door to prevent intrusion by "uninvited" guests.

Now in the process of being completed are the combination squash-handball courts and a modern ten pin bowling alley with eight lanes. Bowling will be offered in physical education classes without charge and for recreational use at thirty cents per string.

It is hoped that the physical fitness programs, so thoroughly promulgated by the present administration, be adhered to by the youth of America and their "young at heart" professors.

All members of the faculty interested in this program should contact Prof. Garber in the Physical Education Department.

Foul Shooting Contest

DORM & IFC

This year something new has been added in the way of intramurals, a team foul shooting contest. A team shall consist of 5 men from a dorm or fraternity. Each player will be given 20 throws at the basket and the total of the five men will be the teams score. This will be a ONE NIGHT event. Tues., Feb. 25, at 6:30 Dorms will shoot; at 7:15 Fraternities will shoot; at 8:00 shoot to between fraternity winner and dorm winner to determine the campus champion.

Only one team may be entered from each organization.

INDIVIDUAL

The individual championship will take place the following night Wed. the 26th. Any student or faculty member may compete. Time 6:30 to 8:30. Please note—if you have shot for a team, your score of the night before will be counted toward this championship. You will not be given another opportunity to shoot.

Awards will be given at a later date.

and Craig Erickson will give these boys solid backing. Wrynn will also compete in the 1000 with sophomores Bob Larson and Bob Molvar will carry the Redmen's hopes in the 1 mile and Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey will be running in the 2-mile.

Although Coach Footrick feels the team should win, he is concerned about how the boys perform because UMass will be competing against Northeastern on Saturday, which has won 9 straight dual meets. If the Redmen hope to upset them, they must do very well against Tufts.

TKE made it 4 in a row by dominating ZN 55-35 as Ron Merrill scored 28 for the TKE's. Sig Ep continued its undefeated string by downing PSK by only 4 points in a close contest, final score 27-23. Winding up the night's action was LCA trouncing TC 48-28 and ASP over AEP 23-16.

IN DORM ACTION, it was Baker over Wheeler 34-25 in the first game, followed by Hills North over Gorman 39-27; Chadbourne in a squeaker over Mills 34-31; Butterfield belting Hampshire 45-31, and Hills South at the buzzer with the final score 26-25.

Amherst Giant Slalom Won By University Freshman

Collin Garstang, UMass freshman, was first in the Amherst College Giant Slalom Ski Race held Saturday at Thunder Mountain in Charlemont, Mass.

IN A FIELD OF OVER 70 COLLEGE RACERS from 10 New England Colleges, the 17-year-old engineering major from Pittsfield, skiing number 75 through a deeply rutted course, finished in one minute, 16.9 seconds to post the best time in the race. Ineligible to race for the UMass varsity team, he skied at the end, as an extra, for the experience.

In an Eastern Amateur Ski Association Slalom race at Pico Peak in Vermont on the following day, Garstang again finished fourth among the eleven colleges racing. New England College was first, Amherst second, and Keene State College third. Skiing behind the University were Boston University, Boston College, Tufts, Northeastern, Bowdoin, Brown, and American International College.

IN THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS DOWNHILL RACE held in a whirling snowstorm at Thunder Mountain on Sunday, New England College again finished first claiming first, second, fourth and fifth places. Amherst was second, Keene State College third, Northeastern fourth, Boston University fifth, and UMass sixth place. Behind UMass were Tufts, Brown, Boston College, Bowdoin, and American International College.

In the middle of the mile downhill run Captain Tom Clark fell and lost a ski. He finished in a time of one minute and 46.2 seconds to come in fourth for the UMass team. Dick Woods, Walter Swiatek, Pete Plasteridge, and Tom Clark, all scored both days for UMass. Norm Carpenter and Don Burgers also skied well for the University.

The next ski race for the UMass team will be at Mt. Whittier in New Hampshire on February 29.

Women's Ski Team Takes Third In WISC

On Saturday, Feb. 15, the Women's Ski team took third place in a WISC giant slalom race sponsored jointly for the ten team conference by UMass with 91.1%. Individual scores were Jean Craigen, captain, 4th, Kath Pressey 11th, Salley Gerry 15th, Jeanne Brown 21st. Judy Webb raced B-team. The next race is a slalom to be held at Intervale on Saturday, Feb. 29, followed on Sunday by a Giant Slalom at Pleasant Mountain.

College Newspaper Suspended In Chicago

CHICAGO (CPS) — It took only one day and a great deal of publicity to put the campus newspaper at Chicago Teachers College back in business after it was halted last week.

The paper, Interim, was suspended after printing a cartoon on what is, at the moment, a very touchy subject here.

Benjamin C. Willis, superintendent of schools resigned, then, at the request of the Board of Education, rescinded his resignation and returned to the job last week. CTC is a part of the city's school system and under the supervision of the superintendent of schools.

What happened when the Interim chose the height of the crisis to print a cartoon attacking Willis?

The paper was suspended by the school's dean; copies were confiscated; a meeting was held; and a committee was formed.

Dean Jerome Sachs who stopped publication explained that he objected because the cartoon was not accompanied by a "reasoned article" presenting both sides of the story.

The drawing showed Willis clutching a collection of baseball gear and proclaiming: "Alright you guys—if you don't play the game my way I'm going to take my stuff and go home."

Dean Sachs held a meeting with the student senate and a policy making board was established for Interim.

Was this censorship? Dean Sachs said no, that it is only to insure that the paper will "respect the image of the college in the community."

The whole event would probably have passed without notice had not Willis been front page news in the city's press. As it was, the papers leaped with glee on the story, printing the cartoon themselves along with sympathetic stories.

Interim resumed operations the next day and Dean Sachs promised that no disciplinary action would be taken against the students involved.

Acacia May Lose Recognition

MADISON, Wis. (CPS)—Acacia fraternity is in danger of losing recognition at the University of Wisconsin because of a refusal to answer questions concerning its membership selection policies.

A faculty committee is investigating possible violations of the school's non-discrimination policy. It sent out a questionnaire which Acacia refused to return.

University officials here have told the Daily Cardinal, the student newspaper, that the chapter may be expelled if it refuses to answer the questionnaire.

The Cardinal pointed out editorially that the issue will be fought on "legal, but human rights grounds." Acacia has no known record of discrimination.

Guts At Harvard?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (CPS)—Registrars at Harvard University expressed "real surprise" this week at the enrollment in History 134a, the Intellectual History of Europe in the 18th and 19th centuries.

The course was forced to move to a larger hall when 417 Harvard students signed up for it. According to Sargent Kennedy, Harvard registrar, the course is now the fifth largest in the University.

Last spring, Kennedy said, History 134a did not even make the list of the "top ten" in popularity among Harvard men.

In an article last May, Time magazine listed History 134a at Harvard in a story about the most notable "snap," "cinch" and "gut" courses at American universities.

Rhody Edges Fouling Redmen, 81-74

Loss Ruins UMass Chances For Yan-Con Championship

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts bowed to the University of Rhode Island, 81-74, despite a comeback that nearly pulled out the big victory for visitors. With the loss the Redmen were completely eliminated from any further contention for the Yankee Conference Crown. Rhode Island is the only team in the league that can catch the University of Connecticut.

Massachusetts fell behind about midway in the first half and never could quite catch up.

The game opened with a quick score by Paul Gullicksen and Dennis McGovern followed with a hoop for the Rams. With about 17:00 showing in the clock, Steve Chubin hit on a drive to give the Rams a 9-8 lead which the Redmen never could quite overcome.

The score was still close at 6:00 mark with Mass trailing 30-32. Then U.R.I. went on a binge to outscore the visitors 16-4 for the rest of the period. All of the Rams got into the act as Mass suddenly had trouble finding the range.

Mass was bothered with foul trouble throughout the game, but especially in the early in the contest Rodger Twitchell already had 3 before the Rams had even one called on them. There was 7:48 remaining in the half when URI's Rothstein fouled Pete Bernard in the first Ram foul.

By the half Mass had committed 13 fouls to just 3 for Rhody. Paul Gullicksen had 4 to put the visitors on the spot.

McGovern hit for 14 points to lead the scorers in the half. Frank Nightingale had 12 as he hurt the Redmen from inside all night. Charlie O'Rourke and Pete Bernard led the visitors with 8 each. Both teams hit about the same from the floor, but the difference in the 48-34 spread was in the foul line where U.R.I. hit 14 of 17 and Mass scored only 4 of 4.

The second half opened with Twitchell scoring the first 7 points as Mass closed the gap to 10 points 54-44. Then Rhody ran the lead to 60-45 as Nightingale had 3 hoops. The lead remained this large until there was just under 10 minutes to play. With the Rams on top 72-59 Kingston hit on a three point play, then Pete Bernard hit on a short jump, followed by an O'Rourke hoop. Edwards hit on 2 foul shots and it was a 72-68 ball game with 7:00 left.

Nightingale hit on a hook for the Rams and O'Rourke hit again on a jumper from the right corner. Then came probably the key play in the ball game. Chubin missed on a jump shot and Mass cleared the boards. Pete Bernard brought the ball down court but lost it at midcourt. Several players kicked the ball but Steve Chubin grabbed it and hit on a breakaway layup making the score 76-70.

After Mass missed Rhody went into a stall with Rothstein at the controls. They chewed better than a minute and a half off the clock before Nightingale got free for the layup. Bernard hit for Mass and Rothstein followed with a foul shot to make the score 79-72. Bernard was fouled and hit an boths end of a 1 & 1 shot to close the gap to five with 2 minutes left.

Rhody continued to stall until Tim Edwards collided with Rothstein in an effort to get the ball. A foul was called against UMass and the Rhody floor general converted.

Mass. lost the ball on the inbounds pass and Rhody froze the clock out until Mike Fitzgerald was fouled with :05 left. He hit one to make the final score 81-74.

The Rams were led by Nightingale with 24 points and 13 rebounds, both game highs. McGovern finished with 20 and Chubin added 19. The Rams had 30 of 65 from the floor and 21 of 28 from the line.

UMass was paced by Bernard with 18 points, followed by O'Rourke with 16, Edwards with 12 and Twitchell with 11. Mass. hit on 31 of 72 to outscore the Rams from the floor, but hit on 12 of their 14 free throws as the Rams had their total margin right there. U.R.I. out-rebounded Mass. 43-42 in the battle of the boards.

The big game for the Rams is now the Feb. 29 battle with U-

PETE BERNARD and TIM EDWARDS were the number one and three scorers, respectively, for UMass in last night's loss.

Track Team v. Tufts In First Dual Meet

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity indoor track team will have its first dual meet of the season when the Redmen travel to Medford to take on Tufts University. Last year UMass competed in a meet with both Brown and Tufts, and although Brown won, UMass defeated Tufts easily. This year the team should win again, but it probably will not be done as easily for the Redmen are weak in several departments.

THE FIELD EVENTS look like they will be the Achille's heel of UMass. In the 16 lb. shot, freshmen record holders Milt Morin and Junior Doug Renwick will carry the team's hopes. Both boys have been throwing well in practice and should hold their own against any competition. The 35 lb. weight throw has Dick Karagosian throwing, but being new to the event it will take him time to deevlop. The high jump has sophomores John Mederios and Bob Ellis. Both boys are capable of going above 6 ft., and should score regularly for the Redmen. They will also represent UMass in the broad jump. The pole vault could turn out to be the Redmen's weakest event. This is not due to lack of material, as co-captain Dave Sadowsky holds the varsity record (13') with Phil Read and Bob Murray right behind. Rather the boys are hurting for lack of facilities and are now seeking further cooperation with the Athletic Dept.

THE RUNNING EVENTS are well balanced. John Mederios will head the UMass contingent in both the dashes and the low hurdles. Doug Sloane and Bill Forand will give Mederios good backing in the dash. John Harrington and Art Resendes willl compete in both the low and high hurdles. The 600 finds Coach Footrick with an overabundance of material. Jim Wrynn and Bob Ramsey will be the best Redmen in this event, while Doug Sloane

Athletic Dept. Blasted For Lack Of Band Support

Debate over the University Bands' budget prompted sharp criticism of the refusal of the Athletic Department to support the Redmen Marching Band.

This was the second week that the department has been the victim of criticism within the Student Senate.

Sen. Elwin McNamara ('64 Commuter) rose during debate on the Bands' budget to strongly score what he termed "a monumental ingratitude" on the part of the Department toward the bands. He stated that the Athletic Department has refused to donate one penny toward support of the bands.

WAVING A COPY of the state auditor's report on the University, McNamara cited figures stating that the Department takes in over $200,000 in student fees every year. Not one cent, he repeated, has been given to the University Marching Band.

Noting that the Band had requested an appropriation of $12 for water, he asked if the Athletic Department might have a water boy bring the water to band members, making at least that small contribution. Continuing, he sighed and stated that this seemed, by past practice of the department, too much to ask.

"I am disgusted that the Athletic Department cannot find somewhere in its huge budget, a lousy 12 bucks for water."

In other action, the Senate approved with no opposition, the budget for the Freshman Directory. In response to questions from the floor, Budgets Committee Chairman Frank Laski ('64 Baker) replied that he would investigate the possibility of eliminating the special tax levied on frosh for the book.

THE ROLE of the Senate's Public Relations committee was strengthened by an amendment to the Student Government Association By-Laws, making it responsible for the orientation of newly elected Senators.

Public Relations Committee Chairman Don Boyd ('65 Greenough) had some sharp words for the Collegian coverage of his committee's releases. Boyd expressed hope that communications "might be improved" between the two bodies.

Nine new Senators, elected in Tuesday's special election were sworn in at the beginning of the meeting.

Unique New York Brass Ensemble Performs Tuesday In Bowker

Take two trumpets, a French horn, a trombone, and a tuba, add five virtuosic players for each of these instruments, and you have the New York Brass Quintet, one of the most unusual chamber music combinations that exist.

The group will be heard in Bowker Auditorium, Tuesday February 25 at 8:00 p.m., and is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Concert Association.

THE GROUP, consisting of Robert Nagel, Ted Weis, Paul Ingraham, John Swallow, and Harvey Phillips, was formed for the purpose of recreating both the older Renaissance and baroque music for brasses and to establish a new chamber music for themselves.

As the only permanent brass ensemble in the world, the New York Brass Quintet has done practically the impossible in creating a full repertoire for its instruments where in fact scarcely any repertoire previously existed.

As graduates of the Juilliard School of Music, they have acquired a great deal of experience as individual performers in orchestras directed by such notables as Stokowski, Reiner, Stravinsky, Casals, and Bernstein. Wherever they have played, the Quintet has aroused the greatest admiration.

The New York Brass Quintet, the world's only permanent brass ensemble, will appear Tuesday evening in Bowker auditorium.

INCLUDED in the program to be played next Tuesday night are selections ranging in time from the eleventh to the twentieth century, with composers such as Giovanni Gabrieli, Vagn Holmboe, Johann Sebastian Bach, Paul Hindemith, Gunther Schuller, and Eugene Bozza.

Admission is free of charge to students merely with presentation of a University ID card. Otherwise, admission is by Series Ticket, or single tickets which may be purchased at the door for $1.50.

Winter Carni Refund

The refund period for the Winter Carnival Concert Tickets will terminate Monday, February 24, 1964 at twelve noon. All those desiring refunds for their tickets must register at the R.S.O. Office by that time.

College Bowl Bus

There will be a bus going to the College Bowl on Sunday, February 23rd. The fee is $4.00 and tickets may be purchased in the S.U. Program Office. This week the Alumni Association is helping to subsidize the bus.

Metawampee Committee Seeks Nominations

Jim Medeiros, President of the Class of '64 and Chairman of the Metawampee Award Committee, has announced that student nominations for the award will be accepted in order to choose this year's recipient.

The Metawampee Award is given to a member of the faculty by the student body as a token of appreciation. Students are asked to nominate the faculty member who is, in their opinion, the most outstanding.

In explaining their decisions, students may use any or all of the following criteria: the promotion of academic excellence; devotion to the student body and student affairs; the establishment of worthwhile personal relationships; or any other criteria which the student feels warrants the nomination. The recipient will be chosen according to the student's opinions as stated in their nominations.

Nomination blanks will be available Monday, Feb. 24, thru Friday, Feb. 28, in the Student Union Lobby. There will be a ballot box provided for completed forms. All undergraduates are eligible to nominate.

Openings Now Available For Non-Senators

In recent months there has been an increasing interest in activities of the Student Senate. Each of the 54 members of the Senate is a member of at least one of the nine standing committees: Finance, Budgets, Academic Affairs, Activities, Services, Public Relations, Election, Men's Affairs and Women's Affairs, and participate in the regular Wednesday night meetings.

Several interested non-senators serve on each of these nine standing committees. Working with the senators on bills, motions, budgets, constitutions and specific problems of the student body and the student organizations.

At present there are openings on the Services Committee, Men's Affairs, Academic Affairs and Finance Committee for non-Senate members. If you are interested in serving on any of these committees, speak to

POLICE PERUSE PAPERS

Collegian Visited By Investigators

Federal, state and local agents swept down on the offices of the Massachusetts Collegian in what proved to be a daring Thursday afternoon raid.

The three officers entered the Student Union offices of the campus newspaper at approximately 3:38 EST (2:38 CST), flashed their badges and were escorted to the Collegian storage area by a still unbelieving secretary, Eve Marcus.

After being shown to the room where the Collegian keeps back issues of the paper, the three men, State Trooper Joseph Jagadowski, Amherst Police Officer Clarence Babb and an unidentified federal agent, began perusing past issues of the Collegian.

Upon being questioned by Collegian News Editor Elwin McNamara, the officers refused to give much information.

Asked whether he expected there would be more arrests in the current roundup of suspected narcotics pushers, Mr. Babb's attempt to answer was interrupted with a curt "no comment" by the soft-spoken federal narcotics agent. The agent, with noticeable southern accent, was a charming fellow who appeared to be about 6 feet 2 inches tall and about 230 pounds.

Other members of the Collegian staff were seen hurling potted plants and medication bottles out of the window while the officers were busy reading old papers. Trooper Jagadowski seemed exceptionally interested in all past Collegians which contained pictures of beauty contest winners.

After the officers had left, passing a hysterical Collegian secretary, Dean William Field entered the Collegian office. Field admitted that he had waited until the officers had left before he entered, but did not satisfactorily comment further on the reasons why he nad avoided a direct confrontation with them.

The Collegian awaits their next visit with great relish.

Put On Your Jackboots & Bedsheets

by JOHN B. CHILDS

Recently we noticed on a number of fraternity smoker posters some hand-written words scrawled in. These words stated quite succinctly, "Don't go, too many Jews and Niggers."

Now maybe this is a joke. If it is a joke then it is indicative of a warped sense of propriety, which in turn is indicative of a disregard for certain other citizens of this country.

If this is not a joke then the writing is indicative of a bigoted mind or minds which are a discredit to our University as an institution of a democratic nation.

Either way, we deplore the writing and hope those involved will either recognize the error of their ways or stop traveling incognito and put on the jackboots, armbands, bedsheets, and whatever other outer paraphernalia generally is used to clothe the narrow-mind's nakedness.

Academic Excellence

To the Editor:

The athlete attending the University on scholarship is an employee of the University just as much as the student who works at the library or at the dining commons. He is being paid for his services as an athlete. He is in essence a professional being paid for these services.

Mr. Basile justifies the athletes difficulties with his studies but fails to acknowledge that the majority of our athletes on scholarship place more emphasis upon athletics than they do on studies. We realize that there are many exceptions, and do not mean to imply that all athletes are here for sports alone. But many are here merely because they are being paid to play a sport, and consider their education as a secondary goal. Are we failing to realize that athletics are merely an extra-curricular activity? Are we neglecting the fact that these students are being compensated for an extra-curricular activity?

Many of these students could not have met the scholastic entrance requirements of the University, and would not be in attendance now, if it were not for their athletic capabilities. Is not the primary goal of the University that of education? Is it just that we should allow an athlete to occupy a seat in place of a good student?

If the athlete doesn't have to meet the academic standards of the University, what standards does he have to meet? Why should he be given preferential treatment over a student who is engaged in employment other than athletics? If a student is not capable of meeting the academic standards of the University, he should not be allowed to remain, regardless of how he is employed, whether as an athlete or otherwise. All students who hold down jobs are obligated to work during finals—none should get preferential treatment.

Granted, sports are an important facet of university life, and we too enjoy watching the University athletic teams play successfully. However, we would much rather have the money spent elsewhere, and, if necessary, settle for a second rate athletic team, played by students who participate for the pleasure derived rather than for the monetary compensation they are awarded.

Mr. Basile's point of view really distorts the importance of sports on the campus. The primary goal of the University is academic excellence. We should not have to compromise.

Water And The Marching Band

We have discovered that big things sometimes come in small packages. A $12 appropriation in the recently passed University Bands budget starkly points out what one Student Senator has termed "a monumental ingratitude" on the part of the Athletic Department toward the Marching Band.

We have been at this University for four years. In that four years we have seen the Department consistently refuse to contribute one single cent to the Marching Band budget. It is this same Athletic Department that finished off last year with a $120,000 balance.

However, back to that $12. The appropriation was for water, to be distributed to band members during football games.

While it was too much to expect the Athletic Department to contribute part of their huge balance—or could we call it profit—to the Marching Band, we had hoped that they could se their way clear to donating some water. Perhaps they could have donated the paper cups too. Again, however, this was too much to hope for.

Why does the Department which is gaining much prestige from the appearance of the Marching Band at games refuse to support this band?

The Athletic Department money is student money.

The students want an answer.

Letters

Narcotics And The University

To D.B.A. and J.S.D.:

I was very much disturbed by two editorials in Wednesday's Collegian. I was not surprised at the attitudes which they expressed, although I did not expect to hear them from presumably intelligent, informed people. Aside from the sarcastic, self-righteous tone of your article, Mr. A., I would say that it is more immoral to walk away from trouble and to willingly shut your eyes to reality than to stick by your friends and suffer through the problems of a moral predicament. To state the problem in "black and white," those of us who were "casual participants" in this case were presented with the problem of sticking by people we considered friends and trying in whatever way possible to help them, or risk ruining their lives by reporting them to the "proper authorities."

It is an age-old problem which each individual must solve for himself, but one which is never solved for anyone by running away!

It is about time that we all realized that we are no longer children and we can no longer solve our problems by running home to mother or by burying our heads in the sand. Within four years, every student here will have attained voting age, many will be married and have children, and many will have responsible positions in business and the professions. In other words, we will be expected to assume the responsibilities of adults. Maybe we had better start now to assume some responsibility for our own actions and those of others.

I am not saying that all those involved in this particular incident were completely blameless—on the contrary, we all share a part of the responsibility (or guilt, if you choose). We must accept the fact that being involved with narcotics is not like stealing cookies from the cookie jar. It is serious business both legally and morally—and should have been treated as such. This is something those involved must face with each other and themselves.

But for those who would point the finger at us and sit back in complacence and self-righteousness, it might be well to consider the possibility that cheating on exams, cribbing papers, taking "guts", and generally trying to get the financial advantages and social prestige of a college degree without having earned it (or even tried) is as dishonest and immoral as smoking marijuana or being "eccentric."

If any of us would choose the freedom of adulthood, we must also accept the responsibilities.

Biology and The Law

To the Editor:

I have a few comments to make in regards to the "marijuana incident" and to the articles appearing in Wednesday's Collegian on the subject.

I wonder how many people are aware of the fact that marijuana isn't habit forming? Heroin is. Pall Malls are. Cocaine is. Newports are. Marijuana isn't.

Marijuana produces a state of euphoria similar to that one would experience after a "short while" at the Drake. Yet, do the Feds raid the Drake? It is said that use of marijuana will lead to addiction from more powerful drugs, but it can also be said that a person can graduate from the "fews beers" level to full alcoholism. There is simply no biological evidence that points to marijuana as having a casual effect on drug addiction. If the Drake's products are legal, why not marijuana?

Recently we learned that something in our dear Camels, Luckies, and Kents, has a tendency to give us cancer. Cigarettes are a social hazard. Yet they are not outlawed. Maybe if we put more Cannabis sativa in our butts, we would get less cancer. And then we wouldn't have to go to the Drake for kicks. One butt—instant Drake!

What we are left with is a ridiculous situation. "Pot" produces the same effect as alcohol, yet alcohol isn't banned. No one can prove that "pot" is any more habit forming than alcohol, yet Union Lobby Counter sells materials which have a casual relation with cancer, yet this doesn't interest the Feds. Biologically speaking, marijuana isn't adictive, legally it is.

What a ridiculous world we live in!

Big Brother

Winter Carni

To the Editor:

Much has been said about Winter Carnival. Some of the comments were good; some of the comments were not so good. But one thing still remains to be said . . . and this doesn't concern the weather, doesn't concern the cancellations; more important this concerns the tremendous work the Winter Carnival Committee has done. These kids, along with the officers of the Class of '65, put a lot of time and effort toward making the weekend a success.

To all who planned WINTER CARNIVAL, 1964, I THANK YOU.

Junior Class Thanks

To the Editor:

The Junior class officers would like to express a special note of thanks to those of the administration, of the class executive councils, and of the Junior class at large, for giving as much time to this year's Winter Carnival.

We feel we owe a special "thank you" to those who in the best Shakespearean tradition found their plans laid aside by the superior forces of nature—several warm dogs and a subsequent snowstorm. We do appreciate the many hours that were spent in planning Carnival projects that the weather made impossible to carry through.

Finally, those in the R.S.O. office, Mr. Watts, Mr. Buck, Maureen Flavin, Mary Alden, others have continuously been invaluable to us, and helped us to handle the Sunday emergency smoothly and efficiently. To them we also say, "thank you very much."

Although most people don't associate George Washington with horse racing, the Father of Our Country was actually a big better on lame nags. Washington was noted for his several visits to the Annapolis races, where, as he stated in his diary, he was a "consistent and persistent loser."

With horse racing still in mind, here's your chance to enter a contest with the grand prize of a colt, two finish line box seats at the 1964 Kentucky Derby, and $1,000 in cash. To enter, just buy one of Kentucky Club's nine brands of pipe tobacco, tear off the cellophane zipper top, and send in a name for the prized colt. The colt is the son of Sword Dancer and Elite. Send all entries to Derby Day Contest, P.B. Box 3K, Mount Vernon 10, New York, before April 6, 1964.

Beercans In Ole Swimming Hole? Conservation Students Duty

by SHERRY SPEAR

When you go home on vacation and get ready to dive into the ole fishin' hole, do you do a doubletake when you see a beercan or dead fish floating around? What's happened since you went away to dear old UMass?

This was the topic of the Geology Luncheon Club on Thursday. Guest speaker, Stanley Milelk, member of the Board of the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game, the Wilderness Society and President of the Quabbin Chapter, Isaak Walton League of America, addressed the group on "Conservation".

When Mr. Milelk was asked why we should be interested in resources, he replied that "300 years of white man's benevolence has left Africa almost impoverished, while 2000 years ago Ancient Persia supported 40 million people and today 2 million manage to subsist quite miserably." He further declared that "Latin America's problems are due to resources—IF they had food for their bellies, IF the land was fertile enough for export of crops . . ."

Conservation is a problem that faces us all whether we hail from smog polluted cities or eroded farmland. Some of the most basic problems are pollution of water which kills plants and game and the improper forestry management which leads to soil erosion. Conservation is essentially the Holy Trinity of water, soil and forest for ideal game and fish habitats.

A breath taking view from a mountain-top brings man closer to nature and God, but not if there are stark gorges of erosion and picnickers' trash lying around.

Mr. Milelk appeals to the students of UMass, especially students of forestry and wildlife and outing club members to form a student chapter of the Isaak Walton League on the UMass campus. He pledged that the Quabbin chapter would subsidize any such organization. Conservation affects everyone from the cradle to the coffin.

Every time you turn on a faucet the water you drink, fluoridated or not, full of undissolved contaminants is the direct result of irresponsible water management. Many industries have been forbidden to dump their wastes into rivers while many towns still empty their sewage into water that eventually comes back to them through the kitchen faucet.

Dave Sommers, who heads the weekly luncheon meetings, which are open to the public, is strongly in favor of an Isaak Walton League whose motto is " . . . dedicated to the restoration and wise use of America's soil, woods, water and wildlife."

Mr. Milelk mentioned that the National Wildlife Week in March spotlights conservation. But, a week is only seven days while the theme of conservation "so the next generation shall not be disinherited" is one that should merit year round attention.

Arnold Air Society Host To Conference

The UMass squadron of Arnold Air Society will host about 20 cadets Saturday for the annual Commander's Call for Area A-1 (New England and New York State) of the national organization. The purpose of this meeting is twofold. The most significant however is the selection of the "Little Colonel' from contestants sent by Angel Flights in this area. The contest is nationwide and all 'Little Colonels" selected by each area will be sent to the Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight joint National Conclave to be held April 8-11 in Denver, Colorado where the "Little General" will be selected.

Representing the University will be Sue Lydon '65, a member of the recently formed Angel Flight on campus. Miss Lydon, an elementary education major, will be one of five coeds to be judged by staff officers of the area. Other schools to be represented will be Lowell Tech, Boston University, Univ. of Conn., and MIT. The final selection is to take place in the Colonial Lounge at 2:30.

The rest of the day's activities will be spent in discussions as the commanders of 11 squadrons and the Area staff from Holy Cross makes plans for the Spring Area Conclave to be held at Westover AFB early in April. Representing the John P. Granville Squadron on campus will be Peter M. Gillon '64.

Amherst College Prof. Publishes Student Study

Roy Heath, visiting professor of psychology at Amherst, College and director of the University of Pittsburgh Counseling Center, is author of a new study of the development of college students. His book, "The Reasonable Adventurer," has been published by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

Dr. Heath's book is based on work with 36 undergraduates at Princeton University conducted while he was a teacher and freshman advisor there. During the course on his work he divided his advisees into three psychological types:

1. Students who appeared to be non-committed, trying to avoid involvements and to remain neutral in difficult situations; these he labelled Xs.

2. Students with a great need for achievement — "hustlers" who are impatient with the status quo. Where Xs postpone action and decisions to confirm their belief that if they really tried they could achieve what they wished, the "hustlers" or Ys, as Dr. Heath calls them, are impatient of lost time.

3. Students who, at times follow momentary impulses, who show great varieties of mood and who seem to be "at the utter mercy" of feelings. (Zs.)

The students within each category matured during their a level of development and college years, several achieving personal maturity in which they were more compassionate and less self-centered; tolerant of ambiguity and able to enter firm friendships and to engage in satisfying intellectual pursuits. This group Dr. Heath calls Reasonable Adventurers.

Dr. Heath believes that the prime function of academic institutions is to encourage the development of Reasonable Adventurers and that this "outcome is too precious to be left to chance." He thus feels that four years of college is a minimum for "any education worthy of the name liberal... If we succeed in producing a Reasonable Adventurer, we have a precious outcome—a generalist who can evaluate ends as well as produce means."

Dr. Heath suggests several means by which such development can be encouraged; he cites one institution which houses mature students in clusters in dormitories; in this way they not only sustain themselves but ultimately infect others. He also believes that a study of the humanities is crucial in beginning the development of large groups of students, and that the senior thesis requires the kind of sustained effort and personal work that generates "honest self-respect." He says that "our students, once cocked and set in motion, may never acquire form and identity unless they are challenged to set down their ideas in a meaningful framework. In this regard, the senior thesis becomes a proper keystone to a college career.

Tutors Wanted For Spfld.

A tutorial project in the Springfield North End is again being conducted this semester. The project is jointly sponsored by local colleges and the Northern Educational Service. College students tutor one or two junior high students in usually either mathematics, sciences, English or a foreign language, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. one afternoon a week.

This project has three prime objectives: 1, to improve secondary students' educational motivation through exposure to a college student; 2, to help the individual student in an academic subject in which he has had serious difficulty or in which he is especially interested and wants to do advanced work; 3, to increase the student's awareness of the world in which they live and the opportunities available to them.

Anyone interested in participating in the tutorial project can leave their name on the door of the Protestant chaplain's office or contact Helen Symons at 102 Mary Lyon House.

The students who have participated previously have found this to be a very challenging and worthwhile experience.

NYU Offers New Course In Mexico

A group of college students will spend a month in Mexico this summer as part of a new course offered by New York University's School of Education. "The Peoples of Mexico in Their Changing World" is open to teachers and to qualified students from accredited colleges and universities.

The course will be conducted from June 30 through August 7. Six days will be devoted to classes at NYU, with the remainder of class sessions to be held in Mexico. The itinerary includes one week each in Mexico City, Patzcuaro and San Cristobal de las Casas and several day sin Cuernavaca and Oaxaca.

The goal of the course is to increase international understanding through stury of Mexican culture and processes of social change in Mexico today. Students will visit the United Nations Fundamental Education Center, the Mexican National Indian Institute, and other agencies involved in community development.

For the Spring semester the SCUBA Club has dives planned which include spearfishing, quarry and river diving.

Admissions Policy War At N.U. Led By Campus Newspaper

CHICAGO (CPS) — A long-simmering conflict over alleged discriminatory admissions policies at Northwestern University has erupted into a full-scale war. Combatants are the Daily Northwestern, the NU student Human Relations Committee (HRC), and Northwestern director of admissions, C. William Reiley.

The Northwestern Student Senate last Thursday, by a vote of 19-4, passed a resolution which censured Reiley's actions towards students involved in the controversy. The Senate resolution stated that Reiley's actions were "totally unbecoming an admissions officer of a great university . . . a man committing such alleged behavior has no place in such a position."

Charges of religious discrimination in Northwestern admissions policies were made public in the Jan. 30 issue of the Daily Northwestern. In the story, members of the HRC said figures indicate that percentages of students of several religious groups attending the school have not changed for seven years.

Reiley denied the HRC accusations. He stated that Northwestern has not asked questions about religion on its applications since 1956. He told the Daily Northwestern that the university has no records of an applicant's religion. Said Reily, "You can come over to the office and check our records."

On Tuesday, Feb. 12, Daily News Editor Al From phoned the admissions office for permission to see the records. Reiley threatened From with the withdrawal of scholarship aid.

"I'm going to have your scholarship investigated to see why a student at this university is able to bite the hand that feeds you," Reiley said. He also blasted the Daily Northwestern, statting, "All you people do is tear down the university. I wonder if you have the right to stay here."

Members of the HRC took action Feb. 12. They filed a complaint with Vice-President and Dean of Faculties Payson S. Wild based on the treatment they received in Reily's office. Wednesday, Feb. 13, Wild said he was "extremely sorry" and was investigating the incident.

A faculty committee has urged the appointment of an all-university faculty committee to help determine admissions policies. Meanwhile, university sources report that Reiley may be admissions director no more before the battle ends.

JFK Memorial Planned

A student committee comprised of representatives of student organizations has been established to discuss plans for a John F. Kennedy memorial.

Jim Medeiros, chairman of the committee, explained that "we are starting with few funds, little man power, little time—but plenty of enthusiasm and interest."

The committee is asking the student body to contribute suggestions for a suitable memorial; a suggestion box will be placed in the Student Union lobby from Monday, Feb. 24, until Friday, Feb. 28, for suggestions.

Medeiros explained that funds will most likely be obtained through fund-raising programs, and contributions from the stu-

we will attempt to reason out a

"The most important factor," he added, "is student support. We shall not propagate any high-sounding patriotic cliches, but program which is properly respectful and commemorative.

"I hope the committee will find assistance from the student body to accomplish our program successfully."

Racial Tension In Malaysia; Student Union Is Blocked

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (CPS) — Racial tensions in the newly-born federation of Malaysia have blocked attempts to form an all-Malaysian student union.

The new nation, formed in September, 1963, includes the federation of Malaya, Singapore (a self-governing entity), and the ex-British colonies of Sabah and Sarawak. The federation includes Malays and Chinese, with an English educational and political system.

The Chinese in Singapore particularly (where they form a numerical majority) have strong ties to their homeland. While of a cultural, rather than political nature, these ties reflect their support of the Chinese government in power.

In today's world, this means that pro-Communist sentiment in Singapore is strong — so strong, in fact, that in 1961 the self-governing territory almost voted a Communist government into power.

The Chinese are fiercely determined to preserve their cultural identity; consequently, many Chinese students attend schools patterned after the Chinese system, in contrast to the government supported British-system schools.

One Singapore college, Nanyang University—is the point at which all these factors have joined to form the dilemma facing student leadership.

Nanyang is a political hotspot. Its students were among the most vocal supporters of the pro-Peking "Bharisan Socialiste" (Socialist Front), and the school has been branded a "hotbed of leftism" by most Singapore and Malaysian government officials including Tengh Abduhl Rahman, the federations prime minister.

When the federation was formed, the central government in Kuala Lumpur cracked down on Singapore's Nanyang. Most of the student council leaders were jailed; and the school has not received official accreditation, since the Malaysian government demands an ethnically integrated program, while Nanyang stands by the Chinese pattern of education.

Nanyang's student council is part of a Singapore union of students. The Malayan union, which wants to federate with the Singapore union, cannot do so because to federate would include Nanyang as part of the all-Malaysian union; and the government of Malaysia will not permit such a union.

In sum, the Malaysian govefnment's policy against narrow ethnic education has stymied the efforts at student merger because just such an ethnic school is part of Singapore's student union.

The Nanyang case is not the only example of friction between students and the central government. The University of Singapore, a British-style school, has recently taken issue with the government's "short-listing" policy, under which students are screened for political reliability. After the vice-chancellor resigned in protest over the government's stand last November, the students staged a one-day boycott of classes.

Such dissent is not found at the University of Malaya in Kuala Lumpur (the federation capital); as the government seat, there is far less freedom to stray from the path of ortho-doxy. Politics are not in great evidence in Kuala Lampur student life.

For the present, the major problem in student politics is the inability to bring about an all-Malaysian student union. Until Nanyang settles its difference with the central government, such a merger is highly unlikely.

Enrollment Regulations

The regulations pertaining to enrollment and withdrawal from courses and from the university have been revised, and approved by President Lederle. These regulations afford somewhat more leniency at the beginning of the semester and are more stringent during the last half of the semester. Since they would not have any adverse retroactive effect, they go into effect immediately.

Check future Collegians for complete listing of new regulations.

Student Senate Women's Affairs Committee Series

This article is the first of a series of articles through which women's opinions, campus objectives and activities will be expressed. It is written in conjunction with and under the auspices of the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate. An introduction to the functions, goals, and achievements of this committee follows.

The role of the Women's Affairs Committee on campus is to serve as the central co-ordinating body of all women's organizations and activities. Under the chairmanship of Senator Marilyn Singer '65 the committee works diligently in dealing with all aspects of life of the dormitory students, sorority women and commuters. The committee is made up of 8 women senators and 3 non-senate members. Presently weekly meetings have been devoted to the planning of a Women's Workshop, the procedures of the Women's Judiciary Elections and preparations for revisions of the Women's Handbook Rules. The annual Career Day Program is also a product of this committee.

The workings of this committee and the controversial subjects with which it deals will appear in this article each week. Boxes are to be installed whereby University women may ask questions and comments in connections with this article. Further information on the location of these boxes will be offered next week.

Newman Club Speaker Sites Need For Moderation

"Alcohol and education make a very poor highball."

This advice yas given by Rev. James J. O'Brien last Tuesday night at the Newman Center in a talk enditled "Sex and Alcohol."

In the first Newman Club general meeting of the semester, Father O'Brien, former Catholic chaplain at UConn, warned of the consequences of overindulgence in sex and alcohol.

In a "highball" of alcohol and education, he explained, "education goes to the bottom of the glass, the glass breaks and education is lost." Drinking in college may result in flunking, he said.

Both sex and alcohol are good in themselves because they were created by God, stated Father O'Brien.

He stressed the importance of moderation in drinking. "Moderation comes with maturity. Young people tend to be extremists in everything they do."

Father O'Brien offered prayer and common sense as safeguards against sex and alcohol, "the two most important moral problems college students have to face."

The second Newman Club general meeting of the semester will be held Tuesday, March 10, at the Newman Center. The speaker will be Rev. Paul Mc-

Political Speakers Wallace And Goldwater Cancelled

CHICAGO (CPS—Two Chicago-area universities recently cancelled the scheduled speaking engagements of nationally controversial political speakers.

Loyola University of Chicago banned Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace from appearing at its "Speak-Easy" student forum last Friday afternoon. Northwestern University announced that Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater would not appear at an April 10 rally sponsored by Youth for Goldwater.

The Loyola-Wallace incident brought charges of a lack of administrative faith in faculty members from Stan Dale, lecturer in the Loyola speech department. Dale, also a newsman for WLS, Chicago's ABC radio outlet, had extended the invitation to Wallace.

"The question," Dale said, "is do they have faith in their faculty members or don't they?" Dale felt that as a faculty member his decisions in inviting speakers should not have to be cleared with Dean of Students, Walter Barry, prior to their invitation." In the Wallace case, claimed Barry, such permission was never requested until after the invitation had been extended.

"Dale thought he had the authority to invite speakers," stated Barry. "'In reality he did not." Conflicting statements came from Instructor Dale. He charged that the prior clearance rule had never before been enforced.

"I only submit requests for clearance after I've invited an individual," said Dale. If the prior clearance rule were to be enforced, "we'd never get these individuals here," he added.

Loyola dean of students Harry L. McCloskey, said that the school "has been favorable to and has conducted programs for the students at which both popular and unpopular points of view were expressed by nationally known speakers on controversial issues."

Stated Barry, "We take the liberty of deciding which issues shall be discussed at what time. In this situation, we are acting as citizens of Chicago. We feel it would not be of benefit to the Chicago community for Wallace to speak at Loyola."

Northwestern University officials said they cancelled the Goldwater speech due to the demands of its sponsors to erect 10,000 temporary seats in McGaw Memorial Hall for the event.

Permanent seating of 4,000 exists in the fieldhouse. Northwestern claimed that the use of extra seating would conflict with the school's spring athletic program. NU Youth for Goldwater chairman James Kolbe was in agreement with the official comment on the incident.

However, Youth for Goldwater national steering committee member Robert F. Croll claimed that the group's initial request had included the request for additional seating.

He charged that the initial request was turned down and that a request to see NU President J. Roscoe Miller about the speech was denied.

Students Allowed Special Dispensation By Bishop

UMass Catholic students over the age of 21 have been allowed special dispensation from the Lenten Fast, Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of the Springfield diocese has announced. Those who desire to follow the Lenten rules are urged to do so, he added.

He also announced Lenten rules for Fasting and Abstinence.

The rules are as follows:

ABSTINENCE — Everyone over seven years of age is bound to observe the law of abstinence.

Complete abstinence is to be observed on Fridays, Ash Wednesday, the Vigils of the Assumption and Christmas, and on Holy Saturday until midnight. On days of complete abstinence meat, and soup or gravy made from meat, may not be used at all.

Partial abstinence is to be observed on Ember Wednesdays and Saturday and on the Vigils of Pentecost and All Saints. On days of partial abstinence meat and soup or gravy made from meat, may be taken only once a day at the principal meal.

FAST — Everyone over 21 and under 59 years of age is also bound to observe the law of fast on the week-days of Lent, Holy Saturday, Ember Days, Vigils of Pentecost, Assumption, All Saints and Christmas.

On days of fast only one full meal is allowed. Two other meatless meals, sufficient to maintain strength, may be taken according to each one's needs; but together they should not equal another full meal.

Meat may be taken at the principal meal on a day of fast except on Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Holy Saturday and the Vigils of the Assumption and Christmas.

Eating between meals is not permitted; but liquids, including milk and fruit juices, are allowed.

When health or ability to work would be seriously affected, the law does not oblige. In doubt concerning fast or abstinence, a parish priest or confessor should be consulted.

Three Undefeated Teams

Action Fast In Ind. Basketball

As the Independent schedule draws to a close with only one round of games left to play, there are still three undefeated teams, one in each section of the league. These three teams easily won their games last Tuesday as the Phys. Ed. Grads with Stu Bailin, former Cortland State ace, pacing them with 26 points topped the Chem Club 47-26. The only Club with any chance of catching them is the Land Arch team who must beat the Grad House next Thursday, Feb. 27 while hoping the Buggars can defeat the leaders.

In section B the PE Majors have clinched their part of the championship in that no one can catch them. In section C the Baker Independents have only to beat Greenough C the lowest team in the league to remain undefeated and take their share of the title into the playoff.

All three of the above have potentially strong teams but the final playoff should be between the Phys Ed Grads and Baker Independents since they not only have a well balanced starting team but a fine bench as well.

Retention Of Natural Color In Processed Foods To Be Studied

A research grant of $50,570 for a three year study on the retention of natural color in processed foods has been awarded by the U.S. Public Health Service to Dr. F. J. Francis of the department of food science and technology.

The grant was made for studies on the high-temperature short-time (HT-ST) methods of food processing. In this technique, food is heated to 250-300°F practically instantaneously, held for 1-10 seconds and cooled immediately. This process results in food with better nutrient, flavor and color retention as compared with conventional processing.

Dr. Francis' aim is to apply the HT-ST methods to foods containing chlorophyll in such a way that the processed food will retain the attractive green color of the raw product. This involves a study of the manner in which chlorophyll and its derivatives are broken down by heat, and isolation of the degradation products. Hopefully, this will lead to a method of stabilizing the green pigments during heat processing and subsequent storage.

One promising lead has already been explored in this direction, that of reducing the natural acidity of the product. Addition of magnesium phosphate to make the product alkaline already has led to experimental packs of spinach puree which have been heat processed yet have attractive color and flavor and are, in fact, indistiguishable in color from the fresh product. It is hoped that eventually green foods will be processed and marketed in a manner which maintains a large proportion of the natural chlorophyll pigment.

Research under this grant will be carried out in the new laboratories, which are now under construction for the department of food science and technology in the College of Agriculture.

Bernard finished with 21 points and 11 rebounds in the game as he hit on 7 of 12 shots in the second stanza. Charlie O'Rourke added 18 points and 12 rebounds in a fine performance. Twitchell finished with 15 points and 11 rebounds. These three combined for 54 of the points and 34 of the 45 rebounds. As a team Mass hit on 29 of 75 from the floor and 11 of 19 from the line.

Northeastern was led by Fran Ryan with 20 points and Tom Martin with 14. Ryan's twin brother Fred led the rebounders with 15 while Martin hauled in 12. Northeastern hit for 24 of 58 shots and 15 of 20 from the line. The team also outrebounded Mass 48-45 to sweep the Redmen in just about every category but the final score and hustle.

Colorado Students In Protest Rally

BOULDER, Colo (CPS) — An estimated 2000 students boycotted classes two weeks ago (Feb. 5) at the University of Colorado to attend a rally protesting a proposed tuition hike at state-supported universities.

The primary reason for the rally and class boycott according to Student Body President Carlton Stoiber was to show the legislature that "the feeling is strong enough that it would require an event like this to demonstrate the concern."

The event which caused so much distress at Colorado was a proposal by Governor John Love to raise tuition at the University of Colorado by 40 per cent for in-state students from $104 a semester to $142 and to raise the out of state tuition by $100 per semester.

Stoiber termed the rally portion of the demonstration a "considerable success," but rated the class boycott only a "fair success."

The following day, Stoiber and his two counterparts from Colorado State University and Colorado State College, presented petitions from the three state supported schools with more than 12,000 signatures protesting the proposed tuition hike to Governor Love.

The three student body presidents also requested that Love participate in a televised panel discussion to debate his proposal. The Governor told the students he would think the offer over for a few days and then tell them his decision.

The Colorado Daily, student newspaper at the university, said in an editorial urging full support of the boycott, ". . . an increase in tuition of the magnatude proposed by Love is economically, socially, philosophically and politically dangerous. But simply to identify the danger is not enough. It must forcedly be brought to the attention of the citizens of Colorado and of the State Legislature."

Gymnasts Against Cortland Saturday

The University of Massachusetts varsity gymnastics team will travel to Cortland, New York this Saturday for a meet with the Cortland College gymnastics team. The UMass gymnasts will be attempting to even their season's record at 3 wins and 3 losses. The Redmen have now posted wins against Southern Connecticut College, and Ithaca College, while losing to Army, Penn State, and Temple.

One of the main reasons for the improvement of this year's Redmen squad is versatility. This year's squad had four men, Dave Lizotte, Stan Brallier, Dan St. John, and Jim Duesenbury, all of whom compete in three events, the maximum number a performer may enter. One team member, however, is allowed to enter all six of the events and compete in what is known as the all-around event. The all-around performer of the Redmen for this semester is Captain Dave Williams. The result of working in more than one event is that it develops a more complete and versatile gymnast.

The versatility of these five men, plus other fine gymnasts, should give UMass a very good chance to score another victory and even up its record for the season.

Amherst College Presents Concert

Modern Paintings Will Be In SU

"Contemporary American Drawings," an exhibition of 50 works by new American artists, will open on Sunday, Feb. 23, in the Commonwealth room of the S.U.

This collection, brought to campus under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution's traveling exhibition, is the latest in the UMass department of art's exhibition program.

Drawings in the collection were selected by Bartlett Hayes, director of the Addison Gallery of American Art in Andover, Mass.

Mr. Hayes chose the 50 works from more than 1200 entered in the 20th American Drawing Annual, first shown at the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences, Norfolk, Va.

According to Mr. Hayes, he loked for "imagination combined with skill" in making his selections.

The drawings in the exhibition are predominantly figurative, but there is a wide range of independent styles represented in the collection.

Techniques used in the various drawings include pencil, ink, drybrush, conte crayon, wash, charcoal, and combinations of several media.

Redmen Over Huskies, 69-63

N.U. Team Slows Down Pace Of Game Without Success

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts downed Northeastern last night by a score of 69-63 at the Cage. The game was featured by the efforts of the UMass team to break open the slow down offense and tight zone defense of the visiting Huskies. Mass played well in this game, but the action did get sloppy in the last few minutes as Northeastern used a full court press.

The game opened on a slow note and stayed that way for the rest of the half. After three minutes had gone by the score was only 2-2 as the visitors were just in no hurry at all to take a shot. The strategy appeared to be working as they opened several leads, but neither team let the other get far away. With ten minutes left, the score was 12-9 favor of he Huskies. They then added a hoop by Tom Martin to open their biggest lead of the game.

Then Massachusetts suddenly warmed up to the task at hand and paced by Rodger Twitchell, the home team tied up the game and went ahead with about 6:30 left. The lead then seesawed back and forth until Northeastern opened a three point lead at 23-20 with just under four minutes left. That was all the scoring that the visitors would do in the half as the Redmen really took over. Twitchell scored as did Pete Bernard to put the home team on top to stay. Before the half, Twitchell scored on a three point play and Chuck O'Rourke hit on a hook to put UMass on top by six 29-23 at the intermission. O'Rourke and Bernard both pulled down six rebounds as the Redmen surged into the lead. Twitchell hit for ten in the first half to lead all scorers and Chuck O'Rourke added nine. Mass scored on 13 of 34 from the floor and added 3 of 6 from the line. NU was paced by Fran Ryan and Tom Martin with nine points each. The well-disciplined Huskies took only 23 shots and hit on 9 of them while adding 5 of 7 from the line.

Northeastern ran off 5 points to close to within one of the Redmen, but a foul shot by Charlie Kingston and a hoop by O'Rourke opened a lead as the Redmen remained in command. With just under ten minutes to go the Redmen opened up a ten point spread 51-41 as Bernard hit for eight quick points.

At the five minute mark, the score had reached 57-49, and the visitors had to come out of their zone and get the ball. Here was where the play got a little wild. There were many errant passes and violations as the teams raced up and down the court. With two minutes left, the Redmen were still safely on top 62-55. Then Jerry Philips and Bernard traded hoops. Fran Ryan followed with a jumpshot and Bernard added two foul shots. Northeastern answered with two quick hoops to make the score 66-63 with less than a minute left.

After Northeastern knocked the ball out of bounds, Pete Bernard broke through for a lay-

Track Opener Against Powerful N.U. Squad

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity indoor track team will travel to Boston Saturday to take on Northeastern in a dual meet. The storm Wednesday forced a cancellation of the meet with Tufts, so the Huskies will be the first team the Redmen will meet this year. Coach Footrick had hoped to get at least one meet under the team's belt before they took on Northeastern. The Huskies are really loaded, and UMass will be a definite underdog.

The Redmen's real trouble is that NE has a team that has depth and balance. It is not really weak in any one event, and is loaded in several of the Redmen's weakest events. In both the shotput and the 35-lb. weight, Northeastern will be represented by Bob Whalen, who throws the shotput 59' and the weight 55'. The hurdles and the 600 are probably the Redmen's weakest other events. Northeastern is loaded in these events also, and some top performances must be turned in if UMass is going to stand a chance. Even in the Redmen's strongest events (1,000, mile, and two-mile) Northeastern threatens to dominate.

During the last few years the two schools have built up quite a rivalry: Northeastern has a dual meet record of 10-0 stretching over a two-year period, and would like nothing more than to make UMass its eleventh straight victim. The Redmen are still nursing a desire ao revenge their loss to N.E. in cross-country, as well as last year's loss indoors. Despite the lack of facilities that make it practically impossible for some of the field events' men to work out, the Redmen will be out to upset the Huskies if it is at all possible.

TKE Sets Record

TEP Noses Out AEPi In IFC

Wednesday night at the Cage the brothers of AEPi and those of TEP renewed once again their great rivalry. The end of the game found the TEPers on top by a score of 31-24.. The Pi's jumped off to an early lead, but the TEPers came back strong, capitalizing on the mistakes of the Pi's and the refs. High scorer for TEP was Ron Pilnen with 12 points and Pete Wish had 9. For the guys from the strip — Hal Goodman had 8 and Steve Whalensky had 7. Honorable mention goes to Mike Tesler, Dick Resnich, Johnny Parnell, Bart Brass, Jack Benjamin and Mike Rose, for a great team effort and a game well played.

In another exciting I.F.C. game, TKE shattered all records by scoring 101 points against PSD. High scorers were Paul Cairne with an unbelievable 27 points and Ron Merrill with 26.

In other action SPE kept up their winning ways by defeating ASP 48-28. LCA smothered ZN 64-18, BKP 39-QTV 25, KS squeaked by PMD 42-36, and TC 29-TTG 18.

In the T.K.E. game which set the record, the winners put on a terrific second half as they crammed seventy-one points through the hoop. The final basket which put the victors over the one-hundred point mark was a fantastic half court shot which ripped the nets with three seconds left in the ball game.

Socialist Norman Thomas Addresses Campus Wed.

NORMAN THOMAS, one of the nations most respected dissenters and six time presidental candidate of the Socialist Party, will speak on the topic "Government, People, and Peace" Wednesday, Feb. 26, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The address, sponsored by the Political Science Association, is free and the public is cordially invited to attend.

NORMAN THOMAS

Thomas was originally scheduled to speak on the "New Frontiers and the Kennedy Administration" on Nov. 25, 1963, but due to the death of President Kennedy the talk was postponed.

Norman Thomas first came into national prominence during World War I, when he was active in the American Union Against Militarism. He founded and edited "The World Tomorrow" and helped organize the Civil Liberties Bureau, which has since become the American Civil Liberties Union.

In the post-World War I period, Thomas worked actively with the Socialist Party in struggles for free speech and the right of workers to organize.

In the depression years he took a leading part in organizing the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union. The Union acted against the Ku Klux Klan and the Hague political machine in Jersey City, N.J.

IN ADDITION to seeking the presidency as a Socialist Party candidate, Thomas has been a candidate for offices of mayor of New York City and governor of the state of New York.

Chairman of the Post War Council and the Labor Research Institute, Thomas is also a member of the League for Industrial Democracy, the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy, and the Inter-American Association for Democracy and Freedom.

Thomas is the author of The Conscientious Objector In America and A Socialist's Faith, The Test Of Freedom, Prerequisite, For Peace, and Great Dissenters as well as other books and articles.

HE WRITES a column in "New America", a bi-weekly democratic socialist newspaper. He also writes in numerous other newspapers and magazines and is a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

UMass Wins Again

College Bowl Team Downs St. John's In Thriller

COLLEGE BOWL team captain BILL LANDIS confers with SUE TRACY as the UMass team squeaked by St. John's University 245-150. Picture was taken from a TV screen in the Ballroom by Collegian photographer Bob Surrette.

THE UMASS College Bowl team narrowly averted disaster as the members put on a last minute spurt to overcome St. John's University 245-150 in a tension packed match.

From the first whistle, it looked as though the game would be a close one. UMass started slowly, as the New York team got off to an early lead. However, the defenders, trying for their fourth straight win fought back gamely.

MIKE BERRINI whistled his way to 20 points as the team fought to catch up to St. John's. The feat was accomplished, and at the half, UMass led 105-50.

The second half whistle saw the challengers off to a strong start that almost sent them home $1500 richer, as the University team slowed to a crawl. At the three minute mark they were trailing St. John's 135-120.

THEN BEGAN the final spurt that was to bring the victory back to Amherst. Sue Tracy's answer to a toss-up on Pepys provided the turning point. From that answer to the final whistle, the team allowed St. John's but a single toss-up.

The game ended with a weary UMass taking the field 245-150.

BOTH TEAMS showed great nervousness during the game, as many questions were missed that the members actually knew.

The Ballroom of the Union took on all the aspects of the Cage during a close game as cheers greeted each capture of a toss-up, and groans or sighs met each setback.

NEXT WEEK the UMass team will attempt their fifth victory as they battle the University of Arizona. Teams winning five games receive, in addition to the $7500 accumulated winnings, an

Undergrads Urged To Make Metawampee Nominations

Nominations for this year's Metawampee Award are now available in the Lobby of the S. U. All undergraduates are eligible to nominate those members of the faculty who have, in the students' estimation, made outstanding contributions to the University community.

The forms require a brief explanation of the student's reasons for selecting the faculty member. The stimulation of academic excellence and inquiry by means of vitality and interest as a professor; the promotion of progress and efficiency in student activities through advisorial and active membership roles; the establishment of student-faculty relationships which give academic and social advancement to the student; and diligence in the advancement of the University community, are just a few of the criteria which students may wish to use in making their decisions.

The recipient will be chosen for excellence in any or all of the above areas, or other areas stated in the nomination.

Nomination forms will be available through Friday, Feb. 28. It is hoped that all students will take this opportunity to distinguish the most worthy members of the UMass faculty.

Class of '66 Survey

Low Cost Main Advantage Of UMass Say Parents

Who are the people that send their sons and daughters to the University of Massachusetts?

A new study, "Parents' Attitudes toward Higher Education at the University of Massachusetts," reveals a number of interesting facts about parents of University students now in the sophomore class. A mail survey was made of 1,859 parents of freshmen who entered the University in the fall of 1962. An exceptionally high percentage of the parents, 83.1 percent or, 1,545 parents, completed the questionnaire.

Average gross income for these families was $7,619, including income of both parents. This income figure is higher than that of the average family in Massachusetts. But one amazing fact is that 1.2 percent of the parents are sending their youngsters to the University although their total family income is less than $2000 a year.

According to the data, the University of Massachusetts rated high in the minds of parents. More than five out of six parents said that UMass was the family's first choice among colleges and universities. Another 11.4 percent named the University as second choice.

The relatively low cost of attending UMass was the main advantage cited by parents. Nearly as many chose the University because of its faculty, facilities and reputation. More than 1100 said they could see no disadvantages to the University. Of those who did see drawbacks, most mentioned the University's size and large classes.

All parents saiid they expected their sons and daughters to graduate from the University. Most parents expected the education of their sons and daughters to end with attainment of a bachelor's degree, but 32.1 percent said they expected them to go on for a master's degree and another 6.6 per cent expected their children to go on for a doctor's degree.

It was also found that while more mothers complete high school and go on to some non-academic specialized education than fathers, more fathers who complete high school go on to college and then to graduate school to earn advanced degrees.

The parents were asked what they thought were the critical factors influencing their sons, and daughters' choice of careers. Among families where the father is regarded as a professional or semi-professional worker, the "opportunity to help others" was listed by 36.5 percent of the parents. This same group rated "job security" relatively low on the scale of factors.

Managerial and sales people considered the "opportunity to help others" a major influence and 31.6 percent listed this objective, but they also rated "job security" ahead of opportunities for advancement.

Families in the craftsman-foreman, service-protective, and operative occupations rate both "job security" and "opportunity to help others" very high.

There appears to be a definite relationship between parents' education and their opinions as to why their children are going to college. Those with a minimum of education placed a greater emphasis on "a college degree as necessary" for career development and "to prepare for good jobs." As the educational background of the parents went up, so did the number who selected "opportunity to gain a broad background" and 60.8 percent of the families where fathers had attended college rated this highest.

The booklet was prepared by Bernard G. Berenson, Simon V. Keochakian and J. Alfred Southworth of the Counseling and Guidance Service.

In Gratitude

Occasionally the students of this University have the opportunity to express their gratitude to members of the faculty who have proven themselves excellent and devoted teachers.

One such occasion was the presentation of the first Metawampe Award to Albert P. Madeira at last year's Student Leaders' Night. Mr. Madeira was the first University professor to have received the award presented by the students who based their choice of the recipient upon the following criteria: the promotion of academic excellence, devotion to the student body and student affairs, and the establishment of worthwhile personal relationships with the students.

It was only fitting that Mr. Madeira be the first faculty member so honored. Perhaps more than any other member of the University faculty, he took an active interest and vital concern in the activities, both curricular and extracurricular, of his students.

Now, it has just been announced that the Metawampee Award Committee is presently engaged in soliciting student opinion as to who this year's winner should be.

We feel that this award now has greater meaning for that the one person who received it has passed away. We humbly and sincerely submit that the name of the Metawampe Award be altered and henceforth be known as the Albert P. Madeira-Metawampee Award.

In this way the increased significance of the award will be directly noted, and upon each presentation we will have the opportunity to think anew of the man who did so much for the students of this University.

Enough expressed student opinion will impress upon the present Metawampee Award Committee the desirability of this change.

Students may express themselves on this subject by writing to the Letters to the Editor Column of the Collegian or by placing their opinions in the Committee's suggestion box in the Student Union Lobby.

Cyprus

American Hypocracy Blasted

by DON ALIFERIS

The recent negotiations over the Cyprus crisis reveal the genuine hypocrisy of American foreign policy. Long have we ranted about our belief in the self-determination of nations, and long have we acted in an imperialist, nationalistic manner. American newspapers (the N.Y. Times included) blandly distort the position of President Markarios and the Greek Cypriotes (who are only demanding that the democratic principle of majority rule be allowed to take root on the island). This new crisis began when the Greek Cypriotes, who are the overwhelming majority, proposed some constitutional changes. These changes would eliminate the power of the Turkish minority to elect the Vice-president who has a veto over the actions of the President. This may sound like poor editorializing, but how would you like it if one particular ethnic group in the United States, were to have the powers of the Turks, in the government of our country? Furthermore, American desire to maintain the status quo on the island is the same thing as siding with the Turks on a question which is strictly internal.

The American and British suggestion that an international force with "undefined power" be put on the island, has a purpose hidden behind a veil of deceit and duplicity. The President of Cyprus is correct in demanding the guarantee of his nation's territorial integrity. He IS in favor of an international peace force BUT ONLY if its purpose is to help keep law and order on the troubled island, and to protect it from possible attack by Turkey.

The British argue that Britain (also Greece and Turkey) have a "right" to interfere in the internal affairs of Cyprus. They cite the provisions of the treaty made before Cyprus was given independence which grant the signing nations the authority to send troops to the island if the status quo is being threatened. This treaty has as much validity as the Russian Constitution! It was politically "shoved down" the throats of the Greek Cypriotes who had just fought the war of independence. The British contention that a nation has no right to terminate its position in a treaty, doesn't have a grain of common sense or of historical precedent. Can you imagine the world situation today if this was an accepted rule. England and Russia would be allies!

College Girl Sentenced To Georgia Labor Camp

by OLEH PAWLUK

Last Thursday, Feb. 20, Mordon Walker, a 18 year old white co-ed was sentenced by Atlanta Judge Durwood Pye to 6 months in jail and 12 months in a public works camp for violating Georgia's anti-trespess law during a restaurant sit-in demonstration. In addition, the judge fined Miss Walters $1,000 and set her appeal bond at $15,000.

Moreover, the judge demonstrated his "lenient" disposition even further. He went on to sentence a history professor at Spelman College, where Miss Walker was studying as an exchange student from Connecticut, to 20 days in jail for making remarks about Southern courts. The professor made the remarks as a character witness for the young co-ed.

The decision handed down by Judge Pye would be considered severe even in such a totalitarian state as the Soviet Union where the people are accustomed to tyranny. Yet, this incident took place in the United States, in a court of justice where individual human liberties are supposed to be upheld. The sad thing about the case is that it is not a rarity. Similar abuses of judicial power occur often, especially in the South.

How long will citizens allow such mockery of law to continue? How can the average person be expected to regard The Bill of Rights seriously when a judge sentences a young girl to 6 months in jail and 12 months in a public works camp for merely participating in an integration movement?

We realize that the federal government is limited in its ability to interfere in a state's internal affairs. However, definite action is necessary to prevent future infractions of human rights. Perhaps misuse of judicial power could be greatly discouraged if the public, especially college students, would voice their disapproval by informing such an "outstanding protector of human rights" as our judge in Atlanta what they think of his "unbiased" sense of justice.

Mississippi Gov Claims Liberal Views

by JOHN B. CHILDS

You and I are part of this world whether we like it or not; What happens in it, through no fault of our own, affects us.
—Mississippi Gov. Paul B. Johnson

Talk is cheap.
—Common American Saying

"Hate or prejudice or ignorance will not lead Mississippi while I sit in the governor's chair." So saying, Paul B. Johnson took over the reigns of Mississippi state government on January 21.

His was a soft-toned speech; a speech sounding of liberal milk and honey. He described former governor Ross Barnett as an "unreconstructed segregationist", and declared to the citizens of Mississippi, "We are Americans as well as Mississippians."

So now we are hearing liberal views from a deep south governor. What does this proclamation of liberal views really mean to the South. Quite probably it means nothing, for we doubt that action will be taken to back up that liberality.

On the other hand, the statements declaring Mississippi a part of the American nation indicate a glimpse into reality which seems to have been lacking heretofor. If anything, the integration movement has jutted Mississippi into the eyes of the world where it cannot act with total impunity in infringing upon the rights of American citizens.

This is far from saying that the state won't act to disregard those rights. Here we have the crux of the problem behind the governor's "liberal" speech: Talk is cheap. While his speech does indicate a realization that Mississippi is part of the world, the question is, will he try to make the state act like it is part of the world?

We have our doubts, for his Lt. Governor stated the

To Big Brother

Ed. Note: This letter is in reply to a previous letter by "Big Brother" which considered the marijuana law as senseless because that drug is non-habit forming.

You certainly lived up to your pseudonym. Apparently, you do not appreciate our government "of the people, by the people and for the people." The voters of this country have seen fit to institute legislation outlawing the sale of narcotics, a measure they considered in the public interest. Once enacted, laws must be enforced, yet you scoff at the "Feds" who try to do just that. In doing so, you make a mockery of our system of justice.

You seem to think that because marijuana is non-addictive, the recent narcotics incident on campus is a joke. Under the law, marijuana is considered a drug and, as you yourself pointed out, marijuana users often graduate to the "big stuff." Besides, this thing is not over yet. Who knows what will be uncovered next? Do you?

Never having been on "pot", I cannot comment on your statement that the feeling can be likened to getting "high" on liquor. Alcoholism is not to be condoned but, in general, it affects only the alcoholic and a small group of family and friends.

Drug addiction has a more wide spread effect and it is this effect that the "Feds" are trying to wipe out. Narcotics cost money—lots of it! For this reason, the addict may turn "pusher." When this happens, it ceases to be an individual problem even if you had no sense of humanity to begin with. Each one of us would then become a potential client. Although we don't like to admit it, we are impressionable. After a little sounding out and persuasive propaganda from your "doublethink", we might try it just for kicks. After all, you've told us that it is not habit forming. If we find, as you said, instant Drake (at a much greater price than an evening's drunk), we can add our names to the list of potential addicts and pushers, our contact has earned the price of his next fix. How cozy! If we are able to resist the temptation, how else can the addict finance his habit? He can turn to robbery, forgery, solicitation or a host of other crimes, which, even in your State are illegal. Better watch your step, Big Brother!

Our country's choice of legislation is not to your liking. You ask why alcohol and tobacco are not also illegal. It is true that these harmful products are on the market today. One of the draw-backs of our type of government is that new legislation comes slowly. Why? The tobacco industry is a big business. Our democratic government must be assured of an alternate means of support for those who would be displaced by such measures. As for alcohol, I guess you just haven't opened a history book lately. In 1917, an amendment was made to the Constitution prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages. Prohibition didn't work because the number engaged in blackmarket buying and selling was too great for the law-enforcement agencies to control.

This is the reason why the round-up of known drug addicts and potential addicts is no joke. Addiction must be stamped out

Openings For Project In Peru Still Available

Applications are still being accepted from students who are interested in the project to aid in the construction of a student center-cafeteria at the University of Huamanga in Ayacucho, Peru.

The project, sponsored by World University Service, will include 20-25 New England college students and 40-50 Peruvian students. The project will take from July 1 to August 15. Total cost to U.S. participants will be paid in full by Campus Chest. The fee covers orientation, air transportation from N.Y.C. to Lima and return, seminars and accommodations in Peru, and some training beforehand. Some knowledge of Spanish is necessary.

This experience of mutual understanding will help to stimulate self-help activities among university students in Peru and throughout Latin America.

Those students who have already applied will be notified shortly about interviews; those who are interested should submit their names to Campus Chest, Box 301, R.S.O. office, Student Union. Applications will be accepted until Thursday, February 27. The student will be chosen by a committee made up of members of the faculty and administration.

Knowing you, I'd guess it to be something modest—like Secretary of State or President of GE.

2. I hadn't thought of those specifically. What I had in mind was a job where they give you a lot of assistants. I think that would be nice.

Very nice. Maybe they could start you off at a hundred grand a year.

3. Well, I did run an extremely successful Nickel-a-Pickle sale.

Don't forget to demand plenty of stock options.

Look—why don't you see if you can qualify for one of Equitable's executive training programs. The work is interesting, the pay is good. And if you prove you have the ability, you may very well end up with a title and a couple of assistants.

UMass Coeds Exchange Schools

Under an exchange program initiated in 1961, the University is playing host to 20 School of Education students from the Universities of New Mexico, South Florida, and Florida State during the current spring semester.

In exchange, six UMass coeds are now attending the University of New Mexico.

The exchange program was founded as "an initial attack on the problem of provincialism in elementary education" by UMass and Florida State. The two schools swapped seven students that first year.

New Mexico and South Florida next joined in the program, and the number of students involved has steadily increased. The University of Maine will be included in the exchanges next semester, and it is hoped that the program will eventually extend across the country.

Dr. Robert L. Byrne, Jr., present coordinator, says the program's main value lies in the broadening of educational horizons for the program's participants.

Exchange students, according to Dr. Byrne, come into contact with teaching problems they might never encounter at their home institutions.

During the last semester 14 UMass students attended the three other participating schools, and seven students from the University of New Mexico studied at UMass.

Exchange students pay only the usual tuition rates of their own universities while they attend the out-of-state schools.

Mcfarland Delivers Lecture

Professor Ross A. McFarland, Guggenheim professor of Aerospace Health and Safety at the Harvard School of Public Health, will speak tonight at UMass.

Dr. McFarland's lecture is entitled "In Search of a Theory of Aging." He will speak in Morrill auditorium at 8 p.m.

The UMass chapter of Sigma Xi is sponsoring Dr. McFarland's talk. The lecture is open to all interested persons.

During his teaching and research career, Dr. McFarland has received numerous awards and honors for his work in aviation medicine, the aging process and the field of human engineering — fitting equipment designs to characteristics of human operators.

In the past several years Dr. McFarland and his Harvard colleagues have trained more than 100 physicians in aerospace medicine. Many are leaders in the "man-in-space program."

Dr. McFarland is a member of the Flight Safety Foundation's board of governors and a director of the Health Research Foundation and the National Safety Council.

The Harvard professor is also a consultant to the Federal Aviation Agency, the National Areonautics and Space Administration, the Department of the Army, Department of Defense and the U. S. Public Health Service.

Taj Mahal Of The Electras

TAJ OF THE ELECTRAS is shown at a recent dance at Fitchburg State College. The Electras will appear in a Battle of the Bands on March 6.

Taj Mahal and the Electras will return for the second annual Battle of the Bands with Steve and the Esquires. This event will be sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity on Friday the sixth of March from 8-11:30, in the Student Union ballroom.

To show the impact that Taj and the Electras have had on other collegiate audiences, the following article was extracted from the Fitchburg State College magazine KAMPUS VUE:

> Now, a month later, the ripples of a recent on-campus tidal wave are still lapping the first semester memories of both faculty and student body. Taj Mahal and the Electras of the University of Massachusetts would probably be amused at the comparison. However, from 8 to 12 midnight, Friday, October 4, an uninterrupted breaker of "modern" music engulfed some 400 dancers and watchers in the partitioned gym.

Classic Drama Othello Plans Three Day Stand

March 5, 6 and 7 are the dates set for the presentation of Shakespeare's Othello in Bowker Auditorium. This will be the third University Theatre production of the year.

Well-known to the campus but new to University Theatre is Don Johnson in the title role of Othello. Familiar to us as a professional singer with the rock and roll band, The Easy Riders, Don now takes the stage as the tragic hero of one of Shakespeare's most powerful plays. Despite his time-consuming extra-curricular activities, Don, a sophomore, is an honor student majoring in Philosophy.

Equally active on campus is another newcomer to University Theatre, Peggy Jones, a senior Spanish major. She will portray Desdamona, beautiful, devoted wife to Othello. Many of us remember Peggy as Marion the Librarian in The Music Man earlier this year. In addition to her participation in campus dramatics Peggy is doing honors work in her major and is also employed at the University News Office.

Both Peggy and Don are very excited about the upcoming production. When asked how he felt about the play, Don quickly replied: "I think it's just great." Peggy was quoted as saying: "Being in Othello has been a wonderful experience. It's work and it's fun. I love it."

The production is being directed by Professor Cosmo A. Catalano of the Speech Department. With this combination of fine directing and a talented cast, the campus can look forward to an artful and intriguing evening of drama.

Coed Chosen Little Colonel At Annual Arnold Frolic

Sue E. Lydon, '65, captured the title of "Little Colonel" this past Saturday at the annual Commander's Call held on campus for Area A-1 (New England and New York State) Arnold Air Society Squadrons.

By winning over the other three finalists in Area A-1, Miss Lydon receives an all-expense-paid trip to the Arnold Air society and Angel Flight joint National Conclave in Denver, Colorado, to be held April 8-11. There she will vie with sixteen other "Little Colonels" chosen from Angel Flights throughout the nation for the distinction of being named "Little Colonel."

The selection of Miss Lydon was made by staff officers from Area headquarters of Arnold Air Society at Holy Cross. Criteria of the contest was membership in Angel Flight, academic standing, personality, appearance and poise. In addition, each girl was asked six or seven questions on 'patriotism.'

Miss Lydon is a UMass junior from Waltham, Mass., majoring in elementary education and a member of Chi Omega sorority. She was in the Homecoming Queen Court and Mili-Ball Queen in 1961. She appeared as the Index Princess in its 1962 edition. This year she served as chairman for Winter Carnival Ball and has been an active committee member in the newly formed Angel Flight.

Other contestants were Marjorie McCann, Wayland, Mass., a sophomore at UConn majoring in English-Journalism. (She is a 2nd Lt. in her school's Angel Flight); Cheryl J. Gerson, a History major at Boston University originally from Columbus, Georgia. (She is information officer for her Angel Flight), and Eleanor M. Gieron, Hartford, Conn., a sophomore math major at M.I.T., who is the commander of her School's Angel Flight.

The final announcement was made in the Colonial Lounge at 2:30.

Junior Joins Officer Corps

SUE LYDON, former Mili Ball Queen, captured the title of "Little Colonel" at the Commander's Call held Saturday by the Arnold Air Society. Sue will vie with others from across the nation for the title of "Little General."

Sailing Club

Newly Established Sailing Club Elects Seasoned Commodore

The UMass. Sailing Club, the newest organization on campus, recently elected its officers for this year. Mel Fisher, the son of a Long Island sail-maker, was chosen as commodore; Frank Lewenberg, U. S. Junior Turnabout Champion, is vice-commodore; Sally Peters, a freshman with many years of sailing experience behind her is the yoeman; Dick Foote continues with the difficult job of treasurer; and Sharon English remains the N.E.I.S.A. (New England Intercollegiate Sailing Association) correspondent.

Of other interest is the annual N.E.I.S.A. convention Advisor Dean Burkhardt and Doug Persall attended at the Algonquin Club in Boston. The results of this meeting were confirmation of the spring racing schedule and the establishment of racing rules concerning woman entrants. Jack Wood, who recently addressed the UMass Sailing Club, was honored at this meeting.

Due to the M.D.C.'s refusal to allow any sail boats on the Quabbin Reservoir, the Sailing Club has been contacting the Sportsmen's Club in Hadley and several mariners in South Hadley. Either Brunell's in So. Hadley or the Sportsman's Club in Hadley would provide a good home port for the Sailing Club because both have enough water area to allow for an interesting and challenging course.

Brunell's mariner has very promising prospects because it would have an approximately two mile windward lag that would be sailed against the current—a challenge for even the most competent of skippers.

The Sailing Club will meet again on Wednesday, February 26, 1964 at Mem Hall. The commodore will begin instructions on points of sailing at 7:30, and the regular meeting will start at 8:00 p.m. Anyone who is interested in racing should attend because the racing team formation will officially start Wednesday nite.

Openings Still Available For Role In Kennedy Play

Final tryouts for two new plays by Raymond Kennedy will be held Thursday(Feb. 27, at 7:30 p.m. in Bartlett 125. There are still openings for several men and one woman.

Raymond Kennedy is a native of Holyoke and a recent U. of Mass. graduate. He has just completed his second novel, a scene from which is reflected in one of the plays, I Do Not Think I'll Fall In Love Today. His first novel, My Father's Orchard, appeared last year and was very favorably reviewed in the fall issue of the Mass. Review.

On campus Mr. Kennedy was a frequent contributor to the student literary magazine. He studied playwriting with Denis Johnston, Irish playwright, who is now at Smith College. He has had poems and short stories in the Mass. Review. Two of his plays were produced in 1960 by our Speech Dept.

Doris Abramson, assistant professor of speech and director of the Kennedy plays, finds him a very promising young playwright. She received scripts from all over the country and chose these two plays—The Boat and I Do Not Think I'll Fall In Love Today—as the most theatrically lively plays submitted to the University Reading Theatre. They will be presented March 24 and 25 in Bowker auditorium.

Noted Lecturer To Speak

Dr. Lorenzo Lisonbee of Arizona State University, chairman of the biology achievement test committee of the College Entrance Examination Board, will address the UMass chapter of the National Education Assocation on Wednesday, Feb. 26.

Dr. Lisonbee will speak in the School of Education auditorium at 4 p.m. and again at 7 p.m.

His afternoon lecture will deal with teaching science to slow-learning children. In the evening he will speak on "Indentifying the Slow Learner." Interested teachers are invited to attend.

President-elect of the Arizona Academy of Science, Dr. Lisonbee is also science consultant to the Phoenix Union high school system.

During the academic year 1962-63 he served as consultant to the Biological Sciences Curriculum Study group.

The Arizona educator is the co-author of a high school biology text and has contributed a number of articles to scientific and professional publications.

Dr. Lisonbee is listed in "Who's Who in American Education," "Men of Science" and "Who's Who in the West."

Illinois Professor Accuses

Calls Kennedy Communist

A University of Illinois professor last Tuesday attacked the late President Kennedy and said he was assassinated because he was falling behind in the Communist timetable for the takeover of the United States.

The late President, according to the article in the current issue of the monthly publication American Opinion, a John Birch Society magazine, did much for the Communist conspiracy but was rapidly becoming a political liability." The article said the Communists had set 1963 as the date for the "effective capture of the United States" and Kennedy had fallen behind.

The article, written by Prof. Revilo P. Oliver, of the classics department at the University of Illinois, charged that the assassination was arranged "by the Communist conspiracy" to prepare for "a domestic takeover" which was frustrated by the capture of Lee Harvey Oswald, the alleged assassin.

Oliver advanced two alternative "explanations" of the assassination: That Kennedy was executed by the Communist "because he was planning to turn American;" and that the assassination was arranged by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro as the result of a rift within "the Communist conspiracy."

ROTC Course To Be Ended At Illonois

No student at the University of Illinois will be required to take Reserve Officers Training (ROTC) beginning Sept. 1, 1964. The announcement was made by Illinois Board of Trustees President Howard W. Clement last month.

The board acted on the recommendation of Champaign-Urbana that the university replace compulsory military training for male freshmen and sophomores with voluntary basic programs in Air Force and Army ROTC. The Navy program is already on such a basis.

21 Year-Olds Now Caught In Draft

In an announcement made recently Selective Service officials stated that the Army would begin drafting 21-year-olds by the end of this year. This would necessarily herald a re-examination of future plans for many undergraduates, especially those in their senior year.

For financial or personal reasons, many students choose to wait a year before entering graduate school. However, the national Selective Service headquarters said that the Army would not defer such a student, even if he has already been accepted by a graduate school.

Officials emphasized that the only students drafted out of college would be those few who neglected to keep in touch with their draft board. They also recommended that all college students apply for 2-S deferments.

The decision of the Selective Service Board was largely a result of President Kennedy's order exempting married men from the draft. Previous to the order, few men under the age of 23 were drafted, and draft quotas averaged about 9,000 men per month. A decrease in the manpower pool, and a drop in the rate of reenlistment forced the figure up to 17,000, nearly double the quota before the order.

No prospect of an increase in the age of draftees is expected, although the quota is expected to level off at 12,000 to 14,000 men this spring.

Men are also entering the army more quickly than before. A year ago, a man might have four or five months after his physical before active service. The period has been reduced now to one or two months.

The option of entering the National Guard or the Reserve, both of which entail a wait of several months before enlistment, is now no longer available to those men called for a pre-induction physical.

Two Profs Speak On Disarmament

Prof. Gerard Braunthal of the Department of Government and Prof. Edward Soltysik of the Department of Physics will be the speakers on the general topic of "Disarmament and Arms Control" at the next meeting of the "Interdisciplinary Seminar in Peace Studies" Thursday, Feb. 27, from 5:30 p.m. in the Lounge of Bartlett hall.

The political aspects of disarmament will be Prof. Braunthal's subject. Prof. Soltysik will speak on nuclear physics and the weapons revolution.

COLLEGIAN NEWS EDITOR Elwin McNamara stutters, hems, haws and nearly faints as he speaks with State Trooper Joseph Jagadowski and Amherst Police Officer Clarence Babb.

Return Visit By Police

agent entered the second floor complex.

The three seated themselves in the outer office, picked up copies of the Friday issue, and began to read, seemingly concentrating on page one.

Collegian reporter Terry Stock asked the officers whether they had come to arrest the remainder of the staff. Jagadowski replied laconically: "Only the girls."

The officers' interest was almost immediately aroused at an attempted shooting in the office. Ad manager Ted Weinberg dashed from the Business Office, gun in hand, blasting away until all the water in his weapon was expended.

Weinberg then attempted to sway the interest of reporter Stock by asking her if she would like to see the newly arrived ads in the remotely-located business office.

News Editor Al McNamara, speaking on the phone at the officers' entrance, broke his finger pressing the panic button. Grabbing a piece of paper, McNamara sent a hasty SOS to RSO Business Manager Edward Buck, in order to head off what McNamara felt was going to be an arrest for "suspicion" — of what he didn't elaborate.

One of the officers strolled over to McNamara, who by this time was bordering on a state of shock, and asked if the News Editor believed in a free press. Somehow, he was able to summon a feeble, "yes." The officer then asked for a couple of "free" papers. McNamara sighed and gladly complied.

The three then left for a quiet place to read the papers.

University And Chaplain Clash Over Fraternities

The Church, State and fraternity life have collided head on at the University of Maryland. The Church ran last.

The latest in the feud came this week in the form of a denial from university President Wilson H. Elkins rejecting accusations that the university has denied its chaplains freedom of speech and action.

Behind the charges and denials was the main victim—the Rev. Jesse Meyers, who said he was resigning after 13 years as Presbyterian chaplain at the University of Maryland.

TRACING THE problem to the beginning leads to last August as the new crop of freshmen prepared to begin college life near the nation's capital. The parents of Presbyterian students got an unexpected letter in the mails.

It was from the Rev. Meyers, warning of loosing their sons to the evils of fraternity life. Meyers noted the low moral standards prevailing along frat row and speculated the depravity was a possible cause of low academic standing.

While the letter was an apparent attempt to safeguard the morals of students, President Elkins, when he got wind of it, thought Meyers had overstepped his duties.

ALSO ANGERED was the Maryland Board of Regents, a state-appointed group headed by spice man Charles McCormick which overseas the operation of the land-grant university.

McCormick, a strong supporter of fraternity life, and other board members went along with Elkins in censuring Meyers. They also approved this policy governing the campus chaplains:

"Duties on campus should be limited to serving the religious needs of the members of their denominations.

"Each of the chaplains should obtain the approval of the executive dean of student life before beginning services on the campus and that the continuance of such service should be at the discretion of the appropriate university authorities."

According to one student leader, the policy boiled down to "don't bruise the invitation, Reverend, if you want to hang around."

To Stinchcombe, who visited the Maryland campus last week, the policy gives the university 'the power to decide what is religion."

The ACLU representative told a cheering student group that it "clearly violates the separation of church and state spelled out in the Constitution. It was retarding the campus intellectual growth and damaging its academic stature by denying academic freedom."

But Elkins didn't see it that way. "The university has every right to expect ethical and responsible conduct from the campus chaplains," he said.

"LACKING this, the university asserts its right to appeal to the chaplain's church governing body with whatever statement or complaint may seem appropriate."

While Presbyterian officials haven't rushed to Meyer's aid in the controversy, the chaplain did indicate his hierarchy would back him. Nevertheless he was still leaving the campus.

The Meyers case revived another dispute that university officials thought dead Aug. 28.

In recent days, the campus clergy has registered another protest that, in effect, the Board of Regents used pressure to make Elkins prevent the chaplains from taking part in the civil rights March on Washington.

Specifically, they charged Elkins with preventing the Rev. Martin Luther King from speaking on the College Park campus.

ELKINS, they said, also complained when a Methodist student organization heard speakers, who participated in local sit-ins and picketed the White House to protest treatment of missionaries in Portugese African colonies.

The University again denied the charges.

Tom Huck sought scientific excitement

He's finding it at Western Electric

Ohio University conferred a B.S.E.E. degree on C. T. Huck in 1956. Tom knew of Western Electric's history of manufacturing development. He realized, too, that our personnel development program was expanding to meet tomorrow's demands.

After graduation, Tom immediately began to work on the development of electronic switching systems. Then, in 1958, Tom went to the Bell Telephone Laboratories on a temporary assignment to help in the advancement of our national military capabilities. At their Whippany, New Jersey, labs, Tom worked with the Western Electric development team on computer circuitry for the Nike Zeus guidance system. Tom then moved on to a new assignment at WE's Columbus, Ohio, Works. There, Tom is working on the development of testing circuitry for the memory phase of electronic switching systems.

This constant challenge of the totally new, combined with advanced training and education opportunities, make a Western Electric career enjoyable, stimulating and fruitful. Thousands of young men will realize this in the next few years. How about you?

If responsibility and the challenge of the future appeal to you, and you have the qualifications we seek, talk with us. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Three Game "World Series" Proposed For Pro Football

New York, Feb. 25—A package plan calling for a two-out-of-three playoff series in 1964 for the National Football League championship title has been proposed by the editors of SPORT magazine.

According to the details of the plan, the first two games would be played in the home cities of the Eastern and Western Conference winners (alternating East and West each year as at present) while the rubber game, if necessary, would be played in a neutral warm-weather city. The editors of SPORT suggest Miami as the logical first choice because of its mild climate and large stadium.

To accommodate the series, the plan recommends that: 1) the regular season begin one week earlier than it does now; 2) the Playoff Bowl, "an entertaining but meaningless affair between also-rans," should be eliminated. Thus, the first plaoff game would be played the third Sunday in December, the second game the fourth Sunday, and the third game the first week in January.

Presented in the form of an editorial in the magazine's current issue, SPORT's playoff proposal answers the criticism of many sportswriters that the title game played last December 29 in eight-degree weather was not a true test of the competing teams' abilities. The editors also maintain that with the buildup of interest during the three weeks of championship games, "the pro football World Series would then, we think, be as big an attraction as the World Series in baseball. Which is to say, it would be just about the biggest attraction in American sports."

Huskies vs. Rams To Decide Yankee Conference Champs

The University of Connecticut Huskies will attempt to wrap up their second straight and their 14th overall Yankee Conference championship as the regular season action comes to an end this Saturday.

The UConns, currently sporting a record of seven victories in eight starts in conference play, have two rugged road blocks in their path toward the crown. They meet the hot-and-cold University of New Hampshire Wildcats at Durham tomorrow (Tuesday) night and their chief challengers from the University of Rhode Island at Kingston on Saturday.

IN FOUR PREVIOUS CONFERENCE HOME GAMES, the Wildcats split even. They defeated Massachusetts, 98-73, and Vermont, 103-81, while losing two one-point decisions to Rhode Island and Maine. They were edged by the Rams, 91-90, and by Maine, 77-76.

RHODE ISLAND, meanwhile, has a game with Vermont at Kingston on Wednesday before what could be the climatic game with the UConns at Kingston. Earlier in the season, the UConns, playing a deliberate game, edged the Rams, 43-31, on Toby Kimball's field goal in the closing seconds.

In other conference action on Saturday, Massachusetts is at Maine and New Hampshire is at Vermont.

THE CONFERENCE WINNER automatically qualifies for the NCAA regional playoffs at the Palestra in Philadelphia against Temple on March 9. In the event of a tie, plans for a playoff are being made.

REDMEN Bob Edmonston, of Boston, John Lasher, of Longmeadow, and Bob Lee, of Chestnut Hill, look forward to home encounter with M.I.T. tonight at 7 p.m.

The result of this event brought the running score of the meet to UMass 89.15, Cortland 76.50.

In the next event, Parallel bars, once again it was Dave Williams taking top honors. Williams' first place tends to overshadow, to some extent, the fine performance of Dan St. John. St. John, a sophomore with a great deal of potential, scored an 8.05 with a fine routine to place second to Williams. This event increased the UMass lead by two points to 111.80 to 97.00

IN THE LAST EVENT of the meet, stil rings, the Redmen were outscored by Cortland by one-half of a point, to bring the final score of the meet to UMass 133.75, Cortland 119.45. Williams placed second in the event with St. John fourth for Massachusetts.

HIGH SCORER OF THE MEET for UMass was Dave Williams with 41.50 points. These points, along with a fine team effort, enabled the UMass gymnasts to defeat Cortland, a team to which the Redmen have never lost, and even their seasons record at 3 wins and 3 losses.

NEXT TUESDAY, FEB. 25, THE REDMEN WILL TRAVEL TO SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE to meet a team that UMass has never been able to defeat. Springfield has been doing very well in the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League this year.

Incidentlly, this is the same league that the University of Massachusetts gymnastics team will formally enter next year. This will not only increase the number of meets for the Redmen, but will put UMass in a higher caliber of competition. Despite being heavy underdogs in Tuesdays' meet, the Redmen will, nevertheless, do their best to win and make a good showing for the University of Massachusetts.

Stockbridge Shooters Topped By Trinity

Trinity College of Hartford served the Stockbridge Rifle Team its first plate of defeat in shoulder-to-shoulder competition this season in topping the local team by 16 points at the Dickinson Hall range on Saturday. Jim Rocha led the Stockbridgemen with 271 for the three positions, but the 277 fired by DeNoie in the closing stages of the meet was top gun for the day and virtually put the match away for Trinity.

U.R.I. Editor Threatened With Loss Of Job Over Story

KINGSTON, R.I. (CPS) — Margo Matarese, editor of the University of Rhode Island Beacon, student newspaper at the university, was threatened with the loss of her job if she printed the story of an alleged showing of a pornography movie at the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity house on the URI campus.

The story begins on January 6 when Dean of Students Edward C. McGuire was tipped off that a pornographic film was about to be shown at the AEPi fraternity house. McGuire went to the frat house and discovered the showing in progress. He asked the president of the fraternity to bring the film to his office the following morning. The president brought a film which he said was the one shown the previous evening, but it later turned out not to be the one shown. The alleged pornographic film was later recovered and given to the dean.

On January 9, Miss Matarese received information about the event and called the dean to get him to comment. The Dean declined to make any comment.

That evening the Dean called Miss Matarese and requested that she see him the next morning in his office which she did. It was at this time, on January 10, that Miss Matarese was allegedly threatened.

She said that Dean McGuire told her that one of his superiors had suggested to him that if the story appeared in The Beacon her job as editor would be in jeopardy.

After a meeting with the editorial board the following Sunday, it was decided that the story of the incident would be printed. Miss Matarese then sent two staff members to get the story from Dean McGuire.

The staff members were allegedly told by the Dean that if the story appeared in the paper there was a good possibility that the newspaper would be put under a publications board, meaning that the paper would lose its editorial autonomy.

The editorial board then decided not to print the story in view of the final threat.

The story finally appeared in print in the Providence Evening Standard together with Miss Matarese's contentions concerning the alleged threats and a statement by Dean McGuire to the effect that he had no power over the paper and was opposed to censorship of any type.

Four URI students then prepared a statement which questioned the integrity of the administration and charged that creativity and originality in the student paper were stifled.

Editorial pressure was placed on the university by the Providence Journal and the Evening Statard. The outcome—the story was published in this past Wednesday's issue of The Beacon.

UMass Rolls Over Wildcats

Hope Victory Indicative Of St. John Encounter

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts rolled over the University of New Hampshire by a score of 98-78 Saturday at the Cage. By winning, the University avenged an early season loss at Durham. It was a big night for Chuck O'Rourke as he scored 24 points and pulled down 22 rebounds to lead in both categories.

The game was close only for the first few minutes as both teams started slowly. Despite the fact that it was close, UNH never lead in he game and the only tie came at 2-2. Then a foul shot by O'Rourke and a hoop by Rodger Twitchell put the home club on top to stay.

After the visitors closed the margin to 14-12, Mass put together a ten point chain to shove out to a 24-12 lead. Everyone got into the act during the spurt as the Wildcats made numerous floor mistakes. After the visitors hit a hoop, Mass added six more to go 16 up in the game.

The action got a little sloppy for a while and the Wildcats managed to cut the lead to 11, but that was as close as they were to get. Bernard hit on a jump shot and O'Rourke scored at the buzzer to open up a 46-33 margin at the intermission.

Mass hit on 18 of 43 shots and 10 of 12 from the line, with Bernard hitting 6 for 6 from the charity strip. O'Rourke had 13 points and 9 rebounds at this point of the contest. Paul Gullicksen, playin one of his finer games had 11 points and Bernard had 10 more.

UNH hit for 15 of 38 and 3 for 5 as Mass didn't foul much. Nick Mandravelis with 14 points led the visitors and hungry Jim Rich came in with 10. He hit on 4 of 13 not too becoming for a two year All-Conference choice.

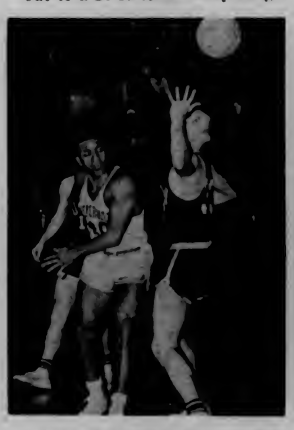
During the entire second half Mass played the game in a loose fashion and seemed to score at will. They sandwiched six and eight point chains around a solo UNH hoop to open a 59-39 lead. The lead held around twenty points for the next few minutes' action until Mass broke out in front 80-50 with about eight minutes left in the game. Then the visitors strung together eight points while Mass was shut out to close the gap to 22.

It remained the same until Mass came through with five in a row to open a lead of 89-63 and coast to the victory. About all that remained to excite the fans was the race against the clock to see if the Redmen could reach the hundred point mark. They lost out by the scantest of margins as they reached the mark with a hoop a few seconds after the buzzer.

The game saw the Redmen hitting on 39 of 86 shots and a percentage slightly above that which they have for the season. On the foulline they hit on 20 of 27 in one of their better efforts of the year. Besides the excellent performance of Mr. O'Rourke, Pete Bernard came through with 23 points in a good game. Gullicksen finished with 15 points and 9 rebounds, while Jim Painten a real hustler of late, came in with 12. Also to be noted in his performance were three fine assists in the first half when the game was still tight. Helping off the boards were Tim Edwards with 9 and Twitchell with 10.

UNH managed a 31 of 85 performance in their "throw-'em-up" offense. They added 16 of 26 from the line. Nick Mandravelis, the no. 3 scorer in the conference, hit for 24 points to tie O'Rourke for game honors. Rich finished with 20 despite the fact that he managed only 8 of 22 from the floor.

Mass won the battle of the boards by a wide margin of 67-51. UMass now sports a 5-4 conference record and a 15-7 season showing going into the home finale against St. John's.



PETE BERNARD, Redmen Co-Captain continued to hit with accuracy as he accounted for 23 points.

TIM EDWARDS grabs rebound and begins fast break. The Redmen dominated the boards by picking off 67 rebounds against New Hampshire.

Academics v. Activities

(CPS)—There is no relation between academic achievement and achievement in extra-curricular activities among highly able students, according to the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. Performance in extra-curricular science, art, music, dramatic, and "leadership" activities for Merit Finalists studied since 1956 varied independent of performance academically.

There was also a low correlation between academic ability measured before college and academic performance in college. The Corporations annual report said that measures of students' interests, perseverance, and drive were better predictors of achievement.

Studying the effects of different types of colleges revealed that attendance at a "relatively selective college" reduces a student's chance of high achievement. Students entering technological institutions far outranked other entering students in intellectualism and pragmatism, whereas students entering private nonsectarian liberal arts colleges ranked highest in estheticism, status and leadership.

Gymnasts Over Cortland; Prepare For Springfield

by JOE PARNAR

The University of Massachusetts varsity gymnastics team defeated the Cortland College gymnasts at Cortland Saturday, by a score of 133.75 to 119.45. The victory was highlighted by a fine performances by team captain Dave Williams. Williams took three first places and two seconds while competing in the all-around event for the Redmen. The victory also reflected a good team effort in that the 133.75 points scored by UMass is their best effort of the season.

The meet began in almost the same manner as did last weeks meet against Ithaca College. Once again the Redmens' opponents took the lead after the first event, the floor exercise, by a score of 20.20 to 19.45. This score was almost identical, at this point, to that of the UMass-Ithaca meet. Also, in a similar manner to that of the previous week, the Redmen gymnasts took command in the second event, side horse, which netted UMass 21.75 points to 12.75 for Cortland. In this event Dave Williams placed first with a score of 8.90, and sophomore Dan St. John took second with a score of 6.85. The meet score at that point was UMass 41.20, Cortland 33.95.

ON THE HORIZONTAL BAR, the Redmen added four points to their lead with a first, second, and third place sweep. The event was won by Dave Williams, who edged out teammate Stan Brallier by one tenth of a point. This result came as a surprise since Williams has been working on the horizontal bar for only a few months.

THE LONG HORSE VAULTING EVENT was won by sophomore Al Cohen with a score of 9.3. Despite a little trouble on his first vault, Cohen came through with a fine second vault to win the event. Second place honors went to Dave Williams and third to Felix Mosakewicz.

Expected Turnout Moves Thomas To S.U. Ballroom

American Socialist Party leader, Norman Thomas, will speak on "Government, People and Peace" Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

The talk, sponsored by the Political Science Association, was originally scheduled to be held in Bartlett Auditorium. Because of an expected large turnout, the Association, has moved the talk to the Ballroom.

Thomas, six time presidential candidate of the Socialist Party, first came into national prominence during World War 1 while active in the American Union Against Militarism. He founded and edited "The World Tomorrow" and helped organize the Civil Liberties Bureau, which has since become the American Civil Liberties Union.

He has long been active with the Socialist Party in struggles for free speech and the right of workers to organize.

In addition, he is the author of numerous books and writes a column in "New America", a biweekly democratic socialist newspaper.

Thomas is very active in the U.S. civil rights movement and took part in the now famous Washington Freedom March.

NORMAN THOMAS

Thomas is a native of Marion, Ohio and attended Bucknell University and graduated from Princeton in 1905, valedictorian of his class. After attending Union Theological Seminary, he was ordained and given the American Parish in East Harlem, N.J., where he remained for seven years.

"Off Hours" Theft Proves More Than Hardship

FROM 1-2:15 John has an English class in Bartlett Hall, necessitating the use of the recorder. Following the English class he has the standard compulsory physical education class, consequently, he could not return the recorder to the safety of his Student Union locker. So, for the past two weeks, John has left the recorder and his books on top of the mailbox on the first floor of Bartlett.

Yesterday was no exception. However, when John returned from the Cage, he discovered his recorder missing. John notified a secretary of the theft. She called the police station and was told to have John "come in tomorrow."

STILL SEEKING aid, John came to the Collegian office, hoping that the paper might print a notice asking for the return of the recorder.

A Collegian reporter called Chief of Security John C. Marchant.

HEARING THE plight of the freshman, Col. Marchant immediately offered personal assistance. The Colonel then came from his South College office to the Police Station and aided John in reporting the theft.

The Colonel explained that due to a lack of manpower, he was unable to have a man on duty at the station at all times.

POLICE ARE investigating the theft.

College Bowl Bus Tickets Still Available

Tickets for the busses going to the College Bowl are still available in the Program Office. All students are asked to support the team in this, their final effort.

Who's Who Committee To Report

The long awaited report of the committee formed to study the selection procedure for those named to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" will be brought onto the floor of the Student Senate tonight.

Committee chairman Bill Mahoney ('65 Butterfield) has formed a motion that would empower the Dean of Students to "pick four students in conjunction with the president of the Student Senate". These four will then choose another three, the total forming the selection committee.

The committee was formed in the wake of what was termed "many questions about the selection procedure" used by the committees.

In other business, the Senate will consider five Finance Committee motions, including one which will appropriate money to subsidize a bus to New York for the final round in the College Bowl series.

Ten Organizations Combine For Month-Long Fine Arts Festival

A COOPERATIVE effort of ten campus organizations, under the coordination of the Fine Arts Council, has resulted in the forthcoming Fine Arts Festival to be held from Wednesday, March 4 through Wednesday, March 25.

The Festival appropriately opens in observance of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Shakespeare with a lecture by G. B. Harrison, professor emeritus at the University of Michigan. His address will be in connection with the University production of Othello which opens the following evening in Bowker Auditorium. Mr. Harrison's lecture will be held Wednesday evening, March 4, in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Distinguished Visitors Program.

PROFESSOR HARRISON was born in Sussex, England, and educated at Cambridge University. He has taught English at King's College of London University, at Queen's University in Canada, and at the University of Michigan. His scholarly books include The Elizabethan and Jacobean Journals, Shakespeare's Tragedies and Introducing Shakespeare. He is editor of the "Bodley Head Quartos", the general editor of the "Shakespeare Association Facsimiles", and the co-editors, with Harley Granville-Backer, of A Companion to Shakespeare Studies. His edition of William Shakespeare's Complete Works is widely used in college and university courses. His most recent book, Profession of English, describes the several functions of a member of an English faculty.

The extensiveness and duration of this year's Fine Arts Festival is a University first. Although in previous years weekend long Festivals were held on campus, it was not until last spring that the relatively new Fine Arts Council undertook to organize and co-ordinate a Fine Arts Festival for this year with the aim of presenting a comprehensive program to the University community in March, 1964.

G. B. HARRISON

THE UNIVERSITY Theatre's contribution of Othello with Don Johnson and Peggy Jones will be performed for three evenings as well as a Saturday afternoon matinee.

Arthur Miller's Pulitzer Prize winning play Death of a Salesman, along with two foreign films, "Hand in Hand" and "La Strada" are being offered to the Festival by the Student Union Movie Committee.

THE FIRST musical program is a concert of "Electronic Music" featuring John Cage on March 5, which will be presented by the Art Club.

March 8, Berj Zamkochian, an organist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra will appear on the second music program under the Newman Club's sponsorship.

A UNIQUE musical workshop consisting of works of composers from colleges and universities in the New England area is the product of a Fine Arts Council effort under the direction of Dr. Elliott Schwartz.

Concert Band is presenting a concert on March 21, under the direction of Mr. John Jenkins.

A FORTY-FIVE voice choir from Union College in Barbourville, Kentucky is touring the Northeast, and will appear under the sponsorship of the Wesley Foundation.

DVP'S SECOND contribution is the Poetry Workshop. Stephen Spender, Robert Fitzgerald, and Robert Bly will visit campus during the three-day workshop.

A repertoire of classical and contemporary interpretations by the Robert Joffery Ballet Company will be presented on March 12, by Concert Association.

NOTED FOR mysterious black light creations and a varied program, the Beinhorn Marionettes will appear under the auspices of the Campus Religious Council.

Milton Mayer, author of They Thought They Were Free, will lecture on March 18. The combined efforts of the Departments of English, History, and Government have secured this program.

FOUR ART exhibitions will be an integral and enduring component of the Festival.

Program Council is submitting two musical performances to the Festival. The first is to be held March 15, and will feature Ron Soedalter, flamenco guitarist. The appearance of Evelyne and Bob Beers in a concert using ancient instruments, such as the psaltery, is the final program of the Festival.

The 1964 Fine Arts Festival is dedicated to John Fitzgerald Kennedy. The University is contributing an All-Campus Arts Tribute to this theme. The program which will consist of testimonials in art form from various departments on campus will be held at 11:15 a.m., March 17 in the Ballroom.

Miss Campus Chest Contest Begins Soon

On March 9th, Revelers will kick off Campus Chest with the annual Miss Campus Chest contest. Every Fraternity, Sorority, and Dorm is being asked to nominate a male undergraduate who will be their representative to the Miss Campus Chest contest.

In the past there has been less than 100% participation. This year with the increased goal of Campus Chest, it is imperative that everyone cooperate.

It is the duty of the nominating organization to see to it that their candidate is dressed appropriately to have their picture taken on February 29th. Each organization will be notified if there are any changes in plans.

28 Day Withdrawal Limit Rescinded

New and more lenient regulations for course enrollments and withdrawals have recently been issued by the registrar's office.

Gone now is the twenty-eight day limit for dropping a course without credit. The deadline has now been pushed up almost a full month, until six days after the closing of midsemester marks, to give students more time to decide whether or not the course will be a worthwhile one.

The following is the complete list of regulations as printed in this weeks University bulletin.

Withdrawal from Courses

Period 1—(Up to and including ten academic days from the beginning of a semester): Within this period a student may add, drop or substitute a course without penalty and without notation on his record. No courses may be added after period 1.

Period 2—Closes six academic days beyond closing date for mid-semester grades (established in the University calendar): Subject to the general regulations above, a student may drop courses without penalty. A W will be used on his record to indicate these withdrawals.

Period 3—(Period between the end of Period 2 and the end of the semester). Subject to the general regulations, a student may not drop a course without penalty. WF is entered on his record if he withdraws from a course regardless of his grade at the time of withdrawal. This grade will be figured in the cumulative average.

PERSPECTIVE

The American

by G. MASSELAM

Nothing is more depressing than the triumph of fear and prejudice. There is a stench pervading the American South. A stench of uncompromising bigotry. Is it limited to the South? According to the poll taken by the Amherst Fair Housing Committee which was published in the Amherst Journal Record and the Collegian, Amherst and its "enlightened citizenry" suffers from the same sickness. Of the 126 people who responded to the poll only 58% said they would sell their houses, if the occasion arose, to an American Negro family, only 82% to a Jewish family, only 56% to an African Negro family, and only 68% to an Asian family. The tragedy of these responses is that the majority were well educated people.

An interesting fact is that 69% said they would encourage their children to play with any Negro children if a Negro family moved into the neighborhood. Then 85% said that they would not hesitate to become friendly to a family. These figures show an inconsistency. People wouldn't be willing to sell their houses to a Negro family, but they would accept a Negro family into the neighborhood. Thus in one figure they are able to accept the Negro in a non-segregated way; but in another figure they propose segregation.

Perhaps some are not sure how they feel. If this is the problem which the figures seem to indicate, then Amherst citizens carry the same whip that White Citizen's Councils in the South carry. And that is depressing. In this issue, if a person isn't for it he is against it.

The sadness is that the educated are controlled by prejudice and inconsistency. If they aren't the perpetrators of human values, then to whom will the task fall.

The Social Agitator

Because Americans live in a stable society, largely free from internal political subversion, they tend to abhor and attack those theories which might disrupt their security. A shuddering chill runs down the spine of the majority of Americans when they hear someone speak of Fascism, Communism, and Socialism. The American people have been indoctrinated into comparing these political theories with subversion, insecurity, and totalitarianism. This assumption need not always be the case.

Tonight at eight o'clock Norman Thomas, a socialist, will discuss the topic of "Government, People, and Peace." You might ask why Mr. Thomas, A SOCIALIST, would discuss such a democratic topic.

Mr. Thomas is one of the most respected and worthy Americans in this nation. He will not advocate the overthrow of the "ruling class." He also will not talk of "the unlimited power of the centralized state." Norman Thomas will discuss the problems facing the United States, which we as citizens—not Democrats, Republicans, or Socialists must solve. Those that fear a "socialist agitator" as violating the private rights of individuals should make every effort to hear this great American.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Four consecutive victories by the University's College Bowl team have added to the coffers of the University scholarship fund the sum of $6,000. The splendid performance of these four students has done a great deal to enhance the reputation of the school and to increase its applications for enrollment.

Yet, for some unknown reason only the student body seems to be appreciative of their efforts. Various faculty members have had nothing but criticism for their missing a few "easy" questions. After all, these students aren't human and aren't supposed to make mistakes.

The Administration has shown its appreciation by sponsoring a banquet honoring the team members prior to the first game. They have also displayed it by not offering one cent to the sending of students to the games while the Student Senate has to-date appropriated $650.

One can see the degree of interest by the fact that since the first game the team has not received one telegram either wishing them luck or congratulating them upon their victories from the Administration. Such a small matter as a telegram may seem insignificant to we television viewers but I am sure it would do a great deal for the morale of a group of students who are appearing before an entire nation of viewers. It might also help these students if they could feel that the Administration cared enough to help send a few buses to the game.

Tonight the Student Senate will debate a financial motion to spend another $400 for buses to the final game. I will vote for this motion, not only because I strongly support the team, but also because by passing this motion, not only because I strongly support to assist the team to victory while the Administration will have spent NOTHING.

To the Editor:

I would like to make clear some misconceptions that have arisen concerning my letter of the 21st, "Biology and the Law," and the reply of the 24th by "Winston."

My object was to show the similarities between three socially dangerous substances, liquor, cigarettes, the marijuana; and to point out that the legal system condemns only one of them (Mississippi booze excluded). Sheer hypocrisy, eh Winston!

I do not use marijuana, nor have I ever used it. Instead of implying that I am "on it," I suggest, Winston, that you take an Anthropology course and mull over the facts I presented as they were presented to me—before you shoot off your mouth again.

I can only laugh at the excuse you present for the absence of restriction on tobacco. After all, you said that 'the tobacco industry is a big business." True, Winston. But that doesn't make tobacco right. Other means of governmental taxation can be found (no person can disagree with this) and MDTA programs can aid the structurally unemployed. Why, even the big tobacco companies have seen the economic light and are diversifying their interests.

Strange as it may seem to you, Winston, I don't favor forced restriction of cigarettes and liquor. You will kindly notice that I never said I did in the letter. Every man to his own poison, I say. See you at the Drake, Winston!

As to your comment about government "of the people, by the people and for the people"—that's fine. I sincerely hope that we will have it someday.

Signed
Julia

Ryan Sends Greetings

To the Editor:

The following is part of a letter I recently received from Dr. John Ryan, former Secretary of the University, who is now Vice-President-Academic Affairs at Arizona State University in Tempe, Arizona. He conveyed to me an expression of feeling that I think should be shared by the entire university community. Dr. Ryan has always expressed a great deal of pride in this university, and the compliments he pays us collectively should be a source of satisfaction.

Manuel Smith

"You must know that I was very proud each time I heard the UMass football score announced over the loud speaker at the ASU football games. That feeling was as nothing compared to my feling of pride as I watched the UMass team on television. Perhaps I should write directly to one of the members of the team. They certainly deserve much recognition. I am old enough, however, to be allowed to be a little bit corny, so I am writing you and asking you to convey to as many students as you can my feeling that the College Bowl team I saw on television performed the way I would have expected any given group of UMass students as I have come to know them in the whole variety of occasions that make up the spectrum of our social activity. In other words, I expect you to excel and I am highly gratified to see this tangible evidence that my expectation will be fulfilled. In short, it was a great job and I appreciate it."

COLLEGE BOWL

To the Editor:

All four of our varsity scholars certainly deserve congratulations after Sunday's exciting game against St. John's. But it appears that your reporter couldn't stand the tension of the last three minutes of the game, and hustled off to write his article, missing David Mathieson's magnificent performance, which brought our final score to 245. This, once I recovered from my astonishment, was the only reason that I could find for the fact that Mathieson's name wasn't mentioned once in your article.

It should be mentioned that Sue Tracy, Bill Landis, and Mike Berrini certainly did their share, but Mathieson came through at the crucial moment.

Opening Night Of Shakespeare's Othello Is Near

Rehearsals are in full swing as opening night of Shakespeare's Othello draws near. On March 5, 6, and 7 in Bowker Auditorium the curtain will rise on a classic drama of love, passion, hatred, violence, intrigue and death. In their roles of Othello and Desdemona, Don Johnson '66 and Peggy Jones '64 will portray the couple whose devotion to each other leads to their ultimate tragic destruction.

Supporting roles are played by Jim Wrynn as Iago and Jane Abbiati as Emilia. Both Jim and Jane have been active in campus theatre for a long time. Jim, a senior majoring in Speech, was seen in such University Theatre productions as Tartuffe, Murder in the Cathedral, The Twin Me-

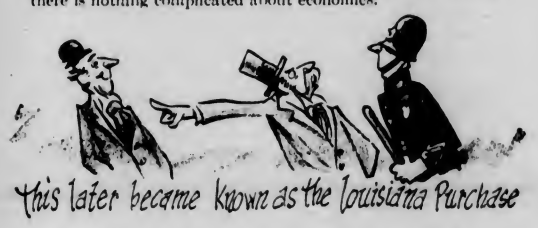
ECONOMICS CAN BE CHUCKLES

Many of you have been avoiding economics because it is so widely known as "the dismal science." Oh, good friends, stop cheating yourselves of many a laugh and cheer, because economics is a positive riot! True, it is called the dismal science, but that is only because it was invented in 1681 by Walter C. Dismal.

It is easy to understand why Mr. Dismal's discovery of economics is today almost forgotten, for the fact is that he himself only stayed with the subject for two or three days. After that he took up embonpoint, which means fatness. It is said that at his apogee, Mr. Dismal reached 1200 pounds. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

It was not until 1776 when Adam Smith published his Wealth of Nations (or Ozymandias, as it is usually known as) that the world came to realize what a rosy, twinkly, fun subject economics is. As Mr. Smith showed in his jocular little treatise, there is nothing complicated about economics.



When there is a great demand for a product, a great supply is placed on the market. When there is a small demand, there is a small supply. Take, for example, castanets. You walk into any average American town today and I'll wager you won't see more than eighty or ninety castanet shops. That is because the demand is small.

For Marlboro Cigarettes, on the other hand, the demand is great. Thus, you will find Marlboros—with all their yummy rich tobacco flavor and pure white Selectrate filter and pliable soft pack and unpliable Flip-Top box—at any counter where cigarettes are sold in every one of our fifty great States and Duluth.

To Adam Smith, I say, belongs the distinction of popularizing economics. Mr. Smith was followed by David Ricardo. In fact, everywhere he went he was followed by David Ricardo. Mr. Smith finally got so annoyed that he summoned a bobby, as British policemen are called, and had Mr. Ricardo arrested. This later became known as the Louisiana Purchase.

Upon his release from gaol, as a British jail is called, Mr. Ricardo reported to his parole officer, Thomas Robert Malthus. They soon became fast friends, and one night over a game of whist they invented the stock exchange, or chutney, as it is called in England.

Well sir, with the British having, you might say, a corner on economics, the French decided that they wanted some economics too. Being, however, a proud nation, they refused simply to borrow British economics, but insisted on inventing their own. At first they tried using the truffle hound as a medium of exchange. When this proved less than satisfactory, they switched to pomade. Discouraged by this second disappointment, they finally shrugged and said, "Oh, who cares about economics anyhow?" and returned to the guillotine and Maurice Chevalier.

America, I am pleased to report, had much better success with economics. Our early merchants quickly broke down economics into its two major categories—coins and folding money—and today, as a result of their wisdom, we can all enjoy the automatic toll station.

Well sir, I could go on and on about this fascinating subject, but I know you're all in a tearing hurry to rush out and sign up for Econ I. So I will leave you now with two kindly words of farewell: Gresham's Law.

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, are tobacconists, not economists. But this much we know about supply and demand: you demand full flavor in a filter cigarette; we supply it—Marlboro!

Arnold Air Society Squadron Awarded Area Headquaters

The John P. Granville Squadron of Arnold Air Society on campus was awarded the Area A-1 Headquarters of the national organization at the annual Commander's Call held here last Saturday. An area headquarters is one of 17 established throughout the nation to direct the 175 squadrons throughout the country, and represents one of the highest awards that can be given to a squadron.

THE AREA A-1 of the national organization comprises all of New England and parts of New York State in which there are currently 11 squadrons operating at the following schools: Harvard Univ., Brown Univ., Tufts Univ., UConn., St. Michaels, Colby, Col., Trinity Col., Lowell Tech., MIT, UMass and Holy Cross which for the past two years has had the area headquarters.

The local squadron received the recognition due to its excellent performance in its young two year history and also the adequate facilities in Dickinson Hall which many schools in the area lack. It will be the responsibility of the area staff, to be selected from current membership in the Granville squadron, to coordinate with all area squadrons and carry out the necessary directives from the national headquarters in Washington, D. C. Inspection and rating of all the squadrons in the area will be done by this staff.

In accepting the Area Headquarters, Peter M. Gillon, the squadron commander, thanked the other commanders for their confidence in the unit and promised an effective headquarters for the coming two years. Final plans for the transfer will be made at the area conclave early in April.

Angel Flight Hears WAF Officer

There are 2,000 women officers in the armed services holding responsible and challenging jobs. Four of these officers were the subject of a film "Women in the Services" narrated by Chet Huntley and viewed by forty members and non members of Angel Flight last Thursday at 7:30 p.m. It was shown that there was very little difference between the junior officer and a civilian in a junior executive position. Huntley pointed out that jobs are just about the same in each service, many open to men or women.

After the film, 2nd Lt. Nancy Buzard, Commander, WAF Squadron, from Westover AFB, answered questions on all phases of an officer's life. Her most interesting comments were on her three months spent in Officer Training School, which eight hundred people attended, fourteen WAFs and the rest, men.

Student Senate Committee Is "Filter"

As one of the nine permanent standing committees of the Student Senate, the Finance Committee is the "checkbook" of the Senate. Under the Chairmanship of Senate Treasurer Ross P. Jones, this committee is responsible for all short term grants to any R.S.O. organizations and to any other student sponsored events which might need such immediate funds. A good example of this are several of the Finance Committee motions appearing on the floor at tonight's Senate meeting. Debate will center around appropriations for the Pre-Law Association, High School Honors Day, busses for the final College Bowl game and financial underwriting of the new Critique publication.

IN ADDITION to planning a detailed study and trial of a new converter system whereby WMUA programs will be more easily channeled into the campus residence halls, the Committee is also actively engaged in compiling a financial policy booklet. The purpose of this booklet will be to establish criteria for the long-range Budgeting of individual RSO organizations and "emergency" loans or grants.

In sum, the Finance Committee is a veritable "filter" for the whole realm of fiances as related to the University of Massachusetts student.

B. U. Women Establish Own Curfews

by PAT LONG

B.U. NEWS, Boston University: Are Coed Curfews getting you down, girls? Authorities at B.U. have set up a system that offers intelligent, responsible students a way out of this horrible tyranny. Thirty Junior and Senior women there who have maintained high averages, and have been recommended to the Dean of Women, live in a University Honors Dorm. They dictate their own curfews and have no direct supervision by a housemother. A graduate counsellor is in residence but, says the NEWS, "her position is defined so the students may have the maximum liberty and resposibility for self-government."

M.S.U. NEWS, Michigan State Univ.: Another project concerning dormitories is in the wind at the Michigan State campus. Called the "college within a college" dormitory program, it will group students according to class and major subject in certain dorm complexes on campus. About 1200 students will be assigned to rooms in dormitories devoted to Natural Science, Arts and Letters, and Social Science. "We hope the new plan will establish a closer working relationship between students and faculty," said the Dean of Students. "Students will be able to get to know their instructors both formally and informally because classes will be held in the dormitories." An interesting experiment, but will familiarity breed contempt?

CAMPUS CHAT, North Texas Univ.: "Within a few years there will be no panty raids at North Texas, no pages torn from library books and no cheating on examination." These were some of the predictions made by NTU President J. C. Matthews in a recent Winter Commencement address. Matthews finds manners and morals among college students on the upswing and stated that should a former student return to the campus in as short a time as five years from now, "he would discover students who are better prepared, more interested and more able than they are now." At first we admired President Matthews' optimism, but on further reflection decided that perhaps he had been sniffing glue!!

Roommates Major College Influence

East Lansing, Mich. (I.P.)—A study by Donald Adams, director of residence hall student services at Michigan State University, provides new supporting evidence for the theory that roommates influence a student's academic performance in college.

In a pilot survey of 51 men who roomed in Rather Hall as first-term freshmen in 1960, Adams found that all of them considered roomates a vital influence in setting the academic atmosphere of the room. The study dealt with students in the top and bottom 20 per cent of potential scholastic ability according to tests taken when they entered MSU.

Admas found that about 75 per cent of the students had made room changes since they entered college. He also found that an average of 75 per cent of studying by all groups was done in dormitory rooms. A definite trend was noted in the study for a man leaving a three-person room to have a radically different grade-point average from that of his other two roommates.

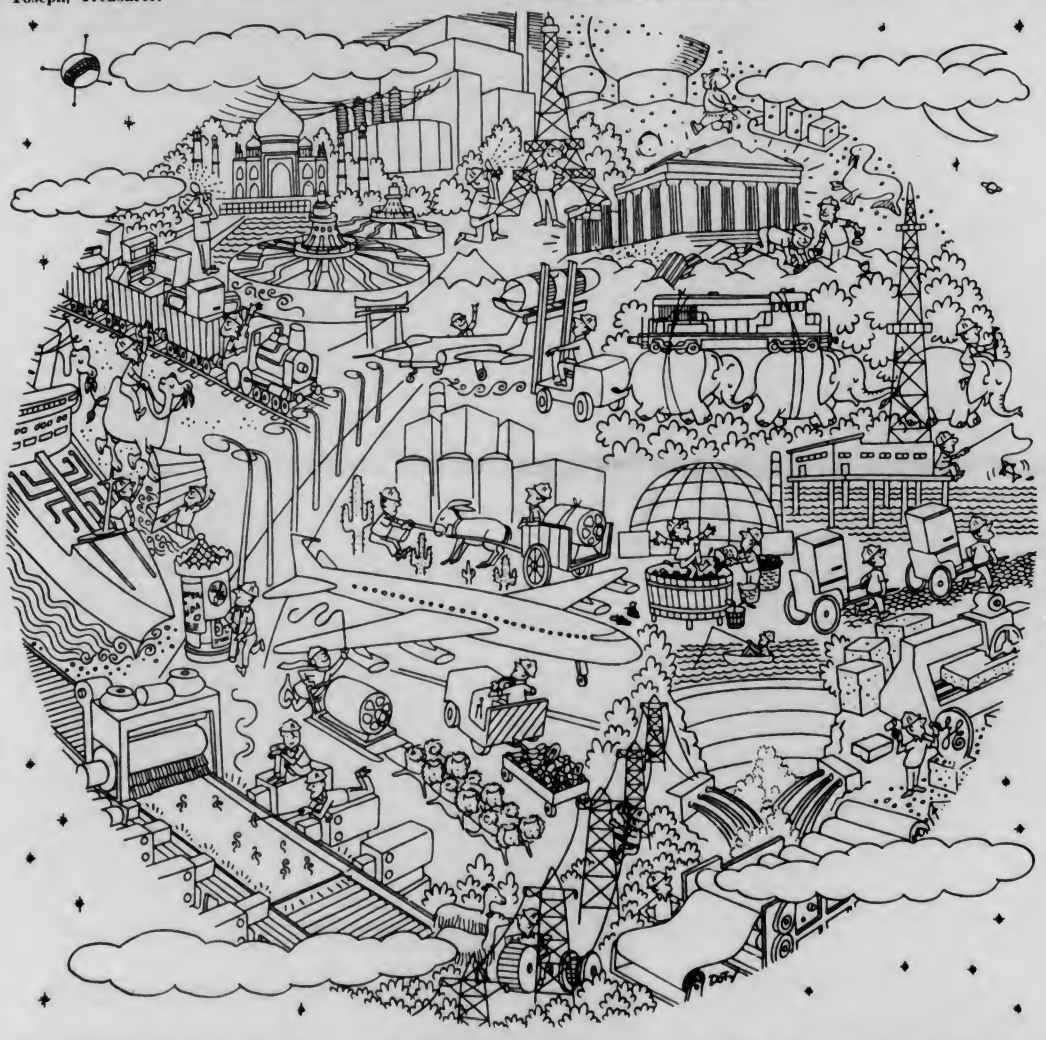
Study and social habits were almost exclusively the reasons for students leaving the rooms. Common card partners, students with similar athletic, social, or religious interests, fraternity pledges, and students with poor study habits in common tended to want to room together.

"Low ability students in particular seemed to be tremendously influenced by their roommates," Adams said. "Those with high achievement almost invariably picked a roommate who would be a positive influence on their academic performance. Those with low achievement generally had a roommate like themselves."

According to tests taken when they entered MSU, students in the top 20 per cent with at least a 2.5 all—University average were considered "high ability, high achievers," Those below a 2.5 were termed "high ability, low achievers," Students in the bottom 20 per cent of potential ability were considered "low ability, high achievers" if they had over a 2 point average. Those with less than a 2 point were classified as "low ability, low achievers."

The study cited numerous cases of students with high grade point averages who asked a third roommate with a low grade average to move out of the room, and of students who disliked studying tending to room together.

Nearly 50 per cent of the students agreed that residence hall living helps students learn how to study.



Ever see the "Progress Corps" in action?

Its members are at work all over the free world, helping millions of people to progress toward better lives.

In India, West Germany, Italy, and in the United States, they're building nuclear power plants, launching the age of low-cost atomic power.

In Samoa, they're developing an educational TV network to battle illiteracy . . . while in Pittsburgh, they're working with teachers to help high school students learn more about computers.

In Wales, they're putting the final touches on Europe's first computer-controlled steel mill. Near Los Angeles they've scored a world first by putting a computer in charge of cement mill operations.

In Brazil, Pakistan and Ghana, they're providing extra-high-voltage equipment for huge dams to harness these nations' hydroelectric power. For Malaysia, they're supplying high-power diesel locomotives . . . for Norway, a marine engine room to power one of the world's largest supertankers.

The members of the "Progress Corps" are the men and women of General Electric, working to provide the key to progress—low-cost electric power and better ways of putting it to work. Many are engineers. Many others are international lawyers, physicists, financial specialists, marketing experts.

General Electric is growing both at home and abroad. If you'd like to grow with us, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified people begin their General Electric careers.

Four Illinois College Papers Faculty Censored

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (CPS)—The student newspapers at the four Illinois state teachers' universities will have all copy censored by a faculty appointee in the future.

The announcement of the policy was made by the Illinois Teachers' college board which regulates policy for Illinois State University at Normal, Eastern Illinois University, Western Illinois University and Northern Illinois University.

The action apparently resulted from the dismissal several weeks ago of John Woods, student editor of the Eastern State News. He tried to print an article which allegedly would have been libelous.

Connie Schneider, who has been named to succeed Woods, said the new policy could curtail the student editors of the paper.

"The faculty adviser is, in effect, the editor if he desires." she said.

The statement emphasized that the policy only "reaffirms and formally states" the regulation.

Quincy Doudna, president of Eastern Illinois University, said after the meeting Monday that the policy "does not in any way change existing policy at Eastern Illinois University.

Woods said that Eastern has always had the power to suppress news in the paper, but that it has never exercised its authority before.

The board's resolution stated.

"All campus publications (of the four universities) are a part of the university functions and are responsible to the university authority, which in turn is responsible for them to the Teachers College Board and the State of Illinois.

"The university administration is accountable ... for the management and content of all university publication...

"Since the university is responsible for its publications, supervision must rest with the university's chief administrator or his faculty appointee.

"Student staff members of university publications, including student editors and student boards, should function under faculty supervision in the same manner as in academic courses.

"The Teachers College Board endorses the principle of freedom of responsible expression. It also recognizes the obligation, legal and ethical, resting upon all communication mass media. It emphasizes the importance to all students and faculty sponsors of unswerving adherence to the rules of ethical conduct, objective presentation of facts, and judicious expression of opinion in all university publications.

"The final decision in all matter presented for publication, from whatever source, should rest with the administrator of the university and the faculty representative appointed by him."

Congress Bans Civil Rights Investigation Of Fraternities

Washington (CPS) — The House recently voted a ban against any inquiries by the federal Civil Rights Commission into membership practices or internal operations of COLLEGE FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES, fraternal organizations, private clubs, or religious organizations.

It accepted by voice vote an amendment to the recently House-passed federal civil rights bill that would keep the commission and its advisory committees out of those areas.

"Everyone agreed when the commission was formed it had no right" to such investigatory powers, Rep. George Meader (R.-Mich.) said recently. He was one of the so-sponsors of the motion as it appeared in final form.

Rep. Edwin E. Willis (D.-La.) had proposed the original motion which was later amended by Meader.

Meader said there was universal agreement on the intent of the motion but that there were some objections to the wording.

careers. They both have one game remaining in which to improve on their already brilliant showings. The honors for the home team last night, however, were carried by Chuck O'Rourke who came in with 25 points. These three men accounted for all but 14 of the points the team scored.

Yet the visitors came in with a great deal of balance to cop the game. Wirell finished with 25 points including 8 of 9 from the floor and 9 of 9 from the line. He also pulled down 18 rebounds. To go along with Wirell were Ken MacIntyre with 23 points, his brother Bob with 13 and Duerr with 14.

THE MAIN trouble with UMass was the fact that they could not hit over the last 12 minutes of the game. For the half, they came in with 12 of 35 from the floor and only 5 of 13 from the foul line. Except for O'Rourke, who hit on 12 of 19, no Redmen was hitting well. Bernard hit on 5 of 20 and Jim Painten on 0 of 7. Mass finished with 28 of 74 from the floor and 11 of 21 from the line. The visitors scored on 33 of 69 and 15 of 23 to take the game and percentage honors. Mass won the battle of boards by a 51-49 margin, but were not able to pull down the big rebounds in those last minutes.

The UMass frosh completed their season with an 8-5 record as they downed Leicester Junior College 91-71 behind Jim Babyak's 28 points. Previous to last night the visitors held an 18-2 record bowing only to Providence College Frosh and the Springfield College Frosh. This was the best effort of the year by the Little Redmen and a fine way to close out the year.

Governor Peabody Presents Ski Trophies; Garstang In Tournament

Last weekend Governor Endicott Peabody presented trophies to the ski team and individual winners, saying that it was this type of competition that provided a stepping stone to Olympic competition. This seems particularly appropriate since Collin Garstang spent the weekend practicing for the U.S. Eastern Amateur Ski Association Junior Alpine Championships to be held at Sugarloaf Mt. in Maine next weekend. Garstang was one of the few juniors from Massachusetts who were invited to attend and he hopes to do well enough to be one of the fifteen juniors sent to the Junior National Championships being held in California.

The rest of the team was not idle either, as it spent both Saturday and Sunday sharpening its talents for the two races to be held next weekend, a slalom at Whittier and a giant slalom at Mt. Pleasant. The team spent four hours each day running short slalom courses, so that in climbing back up the hill continuously, they keep in good physical condition. The rest of the time was spent in playing follow the leader, where one member skis a difficult path down a trail on the mountain and the other members ski along the same path. This is to prepare the team for the giant slalom which is a longer, faster type of race.

scored his 2nd goal of the season with assists to Bob Edmonston and Dick Phillips. A minute later the Redmen had another on an unassisted goal by Jack Clayton, also his 2nd goal of the season. Then Paul Donovan scored two goals, his 2nd and 3rd of the season. The first was set up by Dick Phillips and Jim Mahoney and the second set up by Mahoney.

In the third period Bobby Lee got his 8th goal of the year with an assist to Tony Donovan. A minute later Dick Callahan got his 2nd goal of the season also assisted by Tony Donovan. With three minutes left Ken Palm scored with an assist to Peter Celi. It was Palm's 10th goal of the season. The game ended with the score UMass 7, M.I.T. 0. Joe Kirk had 39 saves for M.I.T.

The Redmen, 6-8-1 for the season play their last two games this weekend in Vermont. Friday night UMass is at Middlebury College and Saturday afternoon at the University of Vermont.

Redmen Lose Home Finale, 81-67

UMass' Cold Second Half Gives St. John's Game

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts was defeated by St. John's University 81-67 in the home finale for the Redmen. The UMass team stayed with the visitors for the first 28 mintues of the game, but could come up with only 17 points in the last 12 minutes.

The first half was paced by a close margin throughout as both teams hit well. Chuck O'Rourke was nothing short of brilliant as he hit for 18 points, all on his long jumpers. These points combined with the 13 by Pete Bernard accounted for all but seven of those that the team scored in the first half.

THE VISITORS were paced by the phenomenal performance of 6'5" Ken Wirell as he hit on all five of his shots from the floor and all five of his foul shots to account for 15 points.

THE TEAMS exchanged hoops for the first five minutes, then O'Rourke and Bernard came up with hoops to give the Redmen a 15-10 margin. After a hoop by Ken MacIntyre, Mass had O'Rourke hitting again and a pair of foul shots by Paul Gullicksen opened a seven point margin, the widest they held in the game.

St. John's quickly closed the gap and with 6:30 left in the half had the game all evened up. The teams once again began to exchange hoops and a basket by Wirell gave the visitors their 39-38 margin at intermission.

Neither team allowed the other to use the 1 and 1 chance from the free throw line as the game was exceptionally clean. The teams seemed to concentrate on good shooting and smooth floor work. Both teams hit at over the 40% mark from the floor and the 70% mark from the foul line.

IN THE SECOND half the game was close for the first eight minutes, until with the score at 53-51 Bob Duerr hit for a hoop and Bob MacInyre followed with foul shot to open a five point margin. Then his brother Ken came through with a hoop and Mass was in trouble. A hoop by Tim Edwards narrowed the gap. Then Bob hit again, then Ken hit and Wirell aded two more foul shots to open an 11 point spread. Then Mass hit but the visitors ran off six points to move out by 15 points at 70-55. UMass called a time out and went into the zone press and for a few moments it appeared that the home club would come back.

St. John's however recouped their forces to come up with some smooth ball handling to effectively break the press. The visitors were very adept at getting the ball to Ken MacIntyre who hit from both inside and outside.

BOTH OF THE STAR seniors for the home team fouled out in the late going, but the game was pretty much decided by that time. Bernard and Twitchell both had 14 points for the night as they bowed out their home

Pucksters Hit Win Column Again, 7-0

The University of Massachusetts hockey team lost their fifth game in a row Saturday afternoon 2-1 to the University of New Hampshire at Durham but came back Monday afternoon to defeat M.I.T. 7-0 at Amherst.

The Wildcats with four Canadians on their squad were hard pressed by the Redmen. U.N.H. scored first at 7:54 of the first period but the Redmen came back with three seconds left in the period to tie the score. Paul Donovan scored the goal, his first of the season, on a beautiful play set up by Bob Edmonston and Jim Mahoney. Coach Kosakowski shifted this trio from third to first line because of their hustle in the last game and in practice.

Later in the game New Hampshire got the winning goal on a deflected shot on which Redmen goalie Skip Bowen never had a chance. The game ended with the Wildcats ahead 2-1. Canadian goalie Doug Dunning had 27 saves for U.N.H., while Skip Bowen had 26 for the Redmen. This was the third time the Wildcats beat the Redmen this season, the last two defeats by only one goal.

It was a different story against M.I.T. with the Redmen bouncing back in the victory column. Regular Redmen goalie Skip Bowen was in the infirmary so Coach Kosakowski used senior Eric Swenson in the nets. Swenson played a fine game shutting out the Engineers and making 15 saves.

UMass did not score in the first period as M.I.T. goalie Joe Kirk made 21 saves. But in the second period the Redmen came up with four goals. At 1:11 Jim Mahoney

College Bowl Team Carries Series

M.C. ROBERT EARLE presents a silver bowl acknowledging UMass' undefeated record on the G.E. College Bowl to the team's first alternate, Jim Crawford. The team had asked that Crawford be the one to accept the award on behalf of the school.

Final Victory 360-35; 13th Team To Go Five

by ELWIN McNAMARA
News Editor

New York, March 1—The University of Massachusetts College Bowl team smashed the University of Arizona 360-35 to cinch their fifth victory and retire undefeated. This final triumph brings the total winnings to $10,500 in scholarship grants.

The UMass 4 grabbed 15 of the 20 toss-up questions. Their opponents copped but 2. Mike Berrini shone as he answered over a quarter of the UMass toss-ups, while Sue Tracy and Dave Mathieson rode anchor men on bonuses.

Bill Landis' ability as a team captain was at its peak as he both controlled the team and contributed to bonuses. Landis also bagged a toss-up on economics, somewhat out of his major—physics.

THERE WAS NEVER A DOUBT about who the winners would be. UMass took all the practice sessions and the dress rehearsal, all by lopsided scores.

Following the game, the team was hosted at a reception given by the Alumni Association of New York. Norman Blake, class of '49 and Vice President of Pan-American Airways, was in charge of the affair.

The University team, by its winning five consecutive games, has joined a very exclusive club: only 12 other schools have "gone the limit". Of these, UMass is the only Massachusetts school to reach the pinnacle. Also, it is but the second land grant institution to achieve the honor.

The success of the team was predicted by the late Albert P. Madeira. The team's late coach said that 13 had always been his lucky number, and that the UMass team would be the 13th to go 5 games. So it was.

PRESIDENT JOHN W. LEDERLE said that the feat was a demonstration of the fact that the University is attracting top students from Massachusetts.

Dan Melley, University News Editor, who stepped in as coach after the death of Mr. Madeira,

Annual Report

Lederle Envisions UMass As Total Educational Resource

The University of Massachusetts as a "total educational resource" encompassing rapidly growing undergraduate and graduate programs plus adult education facilities is the way Pres. John W. Lederle envisions the institution in its second century.

In his annual report, Dr. Lederle says that the state university "should serve not only the youth of the Commonwealth, although that is paramount, but adults as well. The University must become a resource of total service to the entire citizenry of the state."

Lederle lists programs in adult education now under study at the University.

—an evening division of the University
—a center for continuing education
—special services and events designed to enhance the social and cultural welfare of the Commonwealth
—regular visitors by University faculty members to cities and towns for workshop and forums on matters of major civic interest

NEW AWARENESS

The report commends Massachusetts citizens for "understanding that high-quality education cannot be picked up at sale prices at the corner supermarket."

PRAISES LEGISLATURE

Credit is given to the Massachusetts legislature for promoting high quality at the University by granting greater self-management powers to the University's trustees.

After a full year's operation under these broader powers, substantial progress is evident.

Campus Chest Funds Fight Discrimination

The annual Campus Chest Drive for scholarship funds will solicit donations from students and faculty again this year. The drive will begin Monday, March 9 and continue through Friday, March 23.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO? As in years past, the largest percentage of the funds—this year 60%—will be awarded in the form of $200 scholarships to deserving students on the UMass campus.

As part of the World University Service project, the Campus Chest Committee annually sponsors a project to benefit students in underprivileged nations, and is supported, in part, by colleges and universities all over the world. This year they have decided to help educate Negro students in South Africa who cannot attain higher education because of discrimination in their native government.

The committee has also pledged a $600 scholarship to send a UMass student to Peru to help build a student center-cafeteria at the University of Huamanga in Ayacucho. A com-

Bowl Team Reception

A reception for the College Bowl Team members will be held toady at 1:30 in the Student Union Ballroom. All students are urged to attend. Dean Field, Dean of Students, will serve as toastmaster. Major-General John Maginnis, President of the Associated Alumni, Jon Fife, Senate President, and a representative of the Governor will express congratulations to the team from the alumni, student body, and the state. The team will be feted at dinner tonight at which time Evan Johnston, Executive Director of the Associated Alumni, will present the team with a gift.

N. C. Governor

Terry Sanford To Speak

North Carolina Governor Terry Sanford, known as a liberal Democrat and a progressive governor, will speak at the University of Massachusetts next today, March 2, on "The Role of the Southern Governor in Civil Rights."

GOVERNOR SANFORD is scheduled to speak at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the UMass Student Union. The government department at the University is sponsoring his talk.

The talk is open to the public, and Governor Sanford will entertain questions from the audience following his address.

A former president of the Young Democratic Clubs of North Carolina, Sanford is a veteran of World War II and a former North Carolina state senator. He has been governor since 1960 and is chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board.

PART I

Off - Campus Housing

This past semester saw the highest number of off-campus students—more than 900. With the new dormitories still far from completion and an announced class of 2,600 incoming freshmen, the Collegian has begun a study of problems of communications, tenant—landlord relations, and the rules applying to off-campus living.

By mid-semester last fall it was apparent that the Housing Department, in its push to find available space for students, was slacking in its responsibility to the students' welfare. While a sufficient number of off-campus residences were being located, no provisions were being made to supervise tenant-landlord relations. The unsophisticated tenants were finding the going rough, playing rent-contracts, provisions for utilities and furnishings, etc., by ear. Landlords were finding that students, either intentionally or unintentionally, were not always dependable about moving notices and care of property.

The exact extent of this disharmony between property owners and student-rentees may never be known, but the fact remains that students found no guidance—just a list of possible residences.

In two cases students turned to the Collegian, asking for any help at all in mediating difficulties. The Collegian contacted Mr. VanVliet of the Housing Department, and was told of a booklet that would serve as a guide for interested tennants and landlords; the material to be available by the second semester.

We feel it is now both timely and necessary to see that such a booklet is completed, with student paricipation, and before a housing pinch arises (in the event that the anticipaed new dorm space is not completed).

Thus, this series of editorials will discuss the various attitudes encountered by students and landlords, as well as propsed Housing Department plans and rules for students living in off-campus facilities. The legality and necessity of residence inspections, advisability of women' off-campus residences, and the general problems of communication with commuters are also within the scope of this series.

Student response is of great importance. Those who have met with difficulty while living off-campus are encouraged to jot down their problems or suggestions for the Collegian's aid.

The Melting Season

by KENNETH FEINBERG

With the temperature soaring to fifty-eight degrees last Sunday, it has become obvious that the dreaded "melting season" will soon make its annual appearance here at the University. Although loss of life is kept at a minimum due to the maximum precautions taken by University officials, damage to University facilities, not to mention student equipment, is extremely high.

Just what is the melting season? Although geologists and meterologists cannot fully explain this scientific phenomenon they do know it is the period when a combination of high temperatures and increased campus activity leads to disrupting of the rich soil in crucial areas of the campus, resulting in devastating bogs of mud and large oceans of water. The climax to this horrible affair comes in late April when the great mud-glacier oozes its way down Van Meter hill destroying everything in its path. (Baker dorm was moved eight feet off its foundation during last year's glacier—two students have not been found and have been presumed lost).

Although the University actually has no defense against this "killer", a few precautionary steps can be taken. Wearing of sneakers should be minimal. They absorb mud and one can quickly become entrenched in a bog. Always walk with a partner. This holds a double advantage. One can increase personal romance, while at the same time having a rescuer in time of peril. If both become engulfed in the bog, the former advantage is paramount.

In conclusion, if one sees the mud glacier oozing toward him do NOT attempt to outride it; it has deceptive speed. Run to the nearest dormitory; they are intergrated in times of strife.

College Bowl Triumph

by OLEH PAWLUK

Yesterday the UMass College Bowl Team won its fifth and final game. In material terms this final triumph has raised the total winnings to $10,500 in scholarship funds.

However, the material gain is slight in comparison to the moral contribution to the campus. The success of the team reflects not only on the capabilities of the contestants, but also on the over-all potentiality of the University.

A land grant institution supported by the state has fostered a College Bowl team which has gained national fame. Such a happening cannot be merely brushed aside as coincidence. On the contrary, the triumph of the team provides concrete evidence that the University is conducive to higher education of the best quality.

Perhaps the greatest contribution of the team has emerged in the form of campus spirit. One needed only to observe the tightly packed S.U. Ballroom on Sunday nights and read the letters-to-the-editor in the Collegian to see that the campus was behind the team all the way. Such fervor is heartening to observe and makes one feel proud to be a UMass student.

To the College Bowl Team congratulations for a job well done.

Snow - Paths

To the Editor:

During the last storm, snow removal from the side walks on campus was quite a tricky proposition. The drivers of the plows naturally had to rely on past experience and guess work to stay on or near the sidewalks. They did a remarkably good job, but there were many places, in front of Hills House as an example, where they missed the line almost entirely. This is to be expected; however, I believe that once the job was completed, a check should have been made to find and correct the miscues that had resulted. This was not done, and what are we left with now? Students find themselves compelled to walk over large patches of muddy or frozen earth, depending on the time of day.

It is well known that the administration abhors the prospect of students trampling and ruining the grass of mid-spring, but how can they expect people not to do this in the spring when they are being forced to ruin the turf, as well as their shoes, in the dead of winter? As the song goes, when will they ever learn?

Math Dept. Gets It Again

To the Editor:

We would like to add another straw to the Camel's back. Having read the heartrending saga of a poor college freshman's confrontatation with the math department's make-up policy (verily, we hope this isn't representative), my roommate and I sympathized. We too have misgivings about certain math department policies. In particular, we refer to the policy of giving unstandardized tests. Yes, unstandardized! For example, the examinations given by different profs in a certain math course range from comparatively easy to exasperatingly impossible. It is possible for a student with a minimal amount of knowledge to pass, whereas a student with a moderate amount may fail. Well, they told us that we would need a firm understanding of inequalities. And they were right. However, we believe that our math department ought to take chemistry for a semester. Some of the methods and procedures of the examinations might just rub off.

A Professor Comments On Autonomy and The "Merit System"

To the Editor:

Shortly after the letter to the Governor by the "Ethical Practices Committee" received public atention, I was asked by some of my students if I had written it. Since they well knew that I am not one to hide under anonymity and since the questioning was projected in a facetious vein, I took it lightly. However, when a member of the Collegian staff asked me the same question, I began to wonder how far my ideas on "administration" and "merit" may have spread and how distorted they may have become. Thus, I would like to make some clarifying statements at this time.

First of all, I am NOT the "Ethical Practices Committee" or a member thereof. However, if this committee will come out of hiding where it might be able to accomplish some good, I would be pleased to receive a membership application blank. As everyone knows, it is possible to do many objectionable and even unethical things which are not actually illegal but which are at the edges of the law. In such instances an ethical practices committee could serve an extremely useful purpose by honestly bringing public attention to "shady" situations.

There are two rather unfortunate things about the Ethical Practices Committee letter. It has lost some of its effectiveness by being anonymous. And secondly, it made the Governor and Legislators feel that their efforts in behalf of the University staff wer not appreciated, by accusing them of naivete in granting autonomy and merit-raise power to University officials.

I have talked to some of the legislators, including the chairman of the Educational Policies Committee in the House of Representatives, and found them to be entirely sincere in their efforts to do what they think is best for the University. Thus, it is easy to understand why they might be disturbed at hearing rumblings from the University, especially under a cloak of anonymity. After all, the entire administrative and professional staff are getting at least $12 on the hundred more than previously, in their weekly pay checks, largely through the efforts of legislators!

Then what is the problem? Why would anyone write a bitter anonymous letter to the governor about the salary situation? Well certainly, no one on campus to whom I have talked is bitter against the legislators for their efforts in our behalf. The bitterness is toward our own administration, and the anonymous letter was undoubtedly a desperate cry for outside help by someone who realizes that the little man has virtually no chance of helping the University from within. The schism between faculty and administration is too great and the power balance, especially now that we have autonomy, is too overwhelming. The present trouble, then, lies specifically in the administrative manipulation of the "merit" part (8%) of the 2-step 20% raise recently received.

How would you feel if you knew in your mind, and your associates and students confirmed, that you were doing an excellent job of teaching and research and yet you received none of that 8%? Wouldn't you feel even still worse if you discovered that some obvious apple polisher wound up with 16%—that is, not only his 8% but yours too?

Now let's assume that the deans and department heads decide among themselves that they are more deserving than the teachers. Since the deans are paid an annual salary close to $20,000, which is approximately twice that of a teacher, a little simple arithmetic shows that a 16% raise for a dean is, in dollars and cents, equivalent to four 8% raises for teachers. Therefore, they will have to find (or invent) several more rather "unworthy" teachers in order to balance the budget.

Another point. What was the original intent of the legislature when it granted an autonomous 8% to the University? I seem to recall hearing that it was to help hold our good teachers and research men at the University and to attract more of the same. I dont' recall any reference to preferential treatment for administrators.

The merit system in the wrong hands is potential dynamite. It explodes morale. Where once there may have been good teamwork, now favoritism, apple polishing, jealousies, and even foot dragging are promoted. The apple polishers go it alone; those who still trust each other develop grumble groups; those who are too proud or too honest to apple polish but are also too scared to speak out, cringe in their offices (and occasionally write anonymous letters); and a few nuts like myself, whose wonderful and understanding wives will let them run the risk of not getting any more "merit" raises, write editorials such as this one.

Under the "merit" system, when poor administration prevails, the most appropriate course of action for a staff member seems to be to publish lots of short and hastily prepared papers and be a yes-man. In fact, the more the situation deteriorates, the fewer will be the voluble dissenters, following the you-can't-fight-city-hall philosophy. Having ben burned in the first round of "merit" raises, one is likely to learn rather quickly and quietly paly the game by the new rules.

Fortunately, it is against human nature to be completely submissive under inefficient or unfair working conditions. Homo sapiens wouldn't have evolved into the dominant species in the world if we weren't incited against leadership that is clearly not in the interest of the group as a whole. However, because of two other instinctive drives—individual survival and protection of the family—individual action is not very likely to occur. Thus, it is not surprising that only a very few complaints have come to the surface, even anonymously. Therefore, acceleration in group activity must be considered highly significant: this has been occurring in both professional and nonprofessional circles on campus. The administration is still being buffetted by the storm of the nonprofessionals threatening to bring in a union. The American Federation of Teachers is organizing and becoming more and more involved in campus affairs. The AAUP (American Association of University Professors) have been discussing autonomy in their meetings here for several years and have recently been meeting with top administrators over staff grievances. They have also recently organized an active Fair Play Committee to draw up rules and regulations which would assure more fair play IF administration would pay attention to them. These, they hope, will be adopted by the Faculty Senate. The AAUP is meeting this very evening, all faculty invited, to discuss further the present state of autonomy and "merit" on campus.

I hope that no reader will infer that I am condemning all administrators or all staff mmebers who received raises of over 20%: I am not. The problem is not necessarily a

EVOL SPELLED BACKWARDS IS LOVE

They met. His heart leapt. "I love you!" he cried.

"Me too, hey!" she cried.

"Tell me," he cried, "are you a girl of expensive tastes?"

"No, hey," she cried. "I am a girl of simple tastes."

"Good," he cried, "for my cruel father sends me an allowance barely large enough to support life."

"Money does not matter to me," she cried. "My tastes are simple; my wants are few. Just take me riding in a long, new, yellow convertible and I am content."

"Goodbye," he cried, and ran away as fast as his little stumpy legs would carry him, for he had no yellow convertible, nor the money to buy one, nor the means to get the money—short of picking up his stingy father by the ankles and shaking him till his wallet fell out.

He knew he must forget this girl, but lying on his pallet at the dormitory, whimpering and moaning, he knew he could not.

At last an idea came to him: though he did not have the money to buy a convertible, perhaps he had enough to rent one!

Hope reborn, he rushed on his little stumpy legs (curious to tell, he was six feet tall, but all his life he suffered from little stumpy legs) he rushed, I say, to an automobile rental company and rented a yellow convertible for $10 down plus ten cents a mile. Then, with many a laugh and cheer, he drove away to pick up the girl.

"Oh, bully!" she cried when she saw the car. "This suits my simple tastes to a 'T.' Come, let us speed over rolling highroads and through bosky dells."

Away they drove. All that day and night they drove and finally, tired but happy, they parked high on a wind-swept hill.

"Marlboro?" he said.

"Yum, yum," she said.

They lit their Marlboros. They puffed with deep contentment. "You know," he said, "you are like a Marlboro—clean and fresh and relaxing."

"Yes, I am clean and fresh and relaxing," she admitted. "But, all the same, there is a big difference between Marlboros and me, because I do not have an efficacious white Selectrate filter."

They laughed. They kissed. He screamed.

"What is it, hey?" she asked, her attention aroused.

"Look at the speedometer," he said. "We have driven 200 miles, and this car costs ten cents a mile, and I have only $20 left."

"But that is exactly enough," she said.

"Yes," he said, "but we still have to drive home."

"Oh," she said. They fell into a profound gloom. He started the motor and backed out of the parking place.

"Hey, look!" she cried. "The speedometer doesn't move when you are backing up."

He looked. It was true. "Eureka!" he cried. "That solves my problem. I will drive home in reverse. Then no more miles will register on the speedometer and I will have enough money to pay!"

"I think that is a smashing idea," she said, and she was right. Because today our hero is in the county jail where food, clothing, and lodging are provided free of charge, and his allowance is piling up so fast that in two or three years he will have enough money to take his girl riding again. ©1964 Max Shulman

Sophomore Class Banquet To Be Held Wednesday In Roman Style

The class of '66, serving word on Mr. Cassius Marcellus Clay that they, not he, are The Greatest, will show cause why they are deserving of this title come Wednesday night.

While not a title fight, it is a fight for the title, and all rules have been suspended for this encounter. Instead of eight-ounce gloves, party favors eight inches tall will be used. Neutral corners and the three-knock-down rule have also been given th heave-ho.

Not satisfied with merely being The Greatest, the '66ers will also attempt to wrest from the clutches of "The Gaseous Oneder" the right to proclaim oneself King of the World, and in compliance with the old adage that kings must live like kings, they have secured the services of the top court jesters in these parts to keep the fight nice and friendly-like.

Everett E. Everett, comedian M.C., will keep the royalty in good humor, and will present to them Russ Burgess displaying in extarordinary mind-reading talent Bob Storm, pianist-vocalist, and lovely Terry Hill, a top song stylist, recording star (and very good to look at).

Dressing rooms will be available for the Banquet, and a prize will be awarded for the best toga. Dinner will be served by candlelight (Who's he?) in a gaily decorated S.U. ballroom; all sophomores and guests are invited to attend. Admission is by royal decree and $1.50 per person.

PRETTY TERRY HILL, a well-known songstress and recording star, will be appearing at the Sophomore Class Banquet on Wednesday night, March 4.

Drive For Old Magazines

Got a closet full of magazines? No place to keep your clothes? Now's your chance to clean house, and donate your magazines, no matter how old or what kind, to a worthy cause: the Northampton State Mental Hospital. The Northampton State Hospital Volunteers, a group of University students who make weekly visits to the hospital, tell us that most of the patients there are capable of reading, understanding, and appreciating the news and articles in magazines, yet they have none to read. In an effort to remedy this situation, the Brothers of Alpha Phi Omega will be conducting a magazine drive on Saturday and Sunday, March 21 and 22. Central collection points, as well as a phone number for commuters and townspeople to call, will be designated in the near future. In the meantime, SAVE THOSE MAGAZINES.

New Fellowship Awarded For Summer Research

The University of Massachusetts has awarded ten $1,000 fellowships to young faculty members for research work this summer, University President John W. Lederle announced today.

The new program is being administered by the University Research Council and is designed to help faculty members working in areas not normally supported by outside research grants. Most of the recipients are in the areas of the liberal arts and social sciences.

The 10 professors who will receive the grants are: Dr. John Brentlinger, instructor in philosophy; Dr. Mario S. DePillis, assistant professor of history; Dr. Elaine Haddad, assistant professor of Romance Languages; Dr. Patricia Joanne Jaeger, assistant professor of Romance Languages; Dr. Ronald A. McHaffey, assistant professor of mathematics; Dr. Edwin Moser, instructor in English; Dr. Peter Park, assistant professor of sociology; Dr. Lili Rabel, assistant professor of English; Dr. Franklin Bacon Wickwire, assistant professor of history, and Dr. Melvin H. Wolf, instructor in English.

Preference was given to teachers pursuing projects which will enrich their teaching and knowledge.

The Committee on Faculty Growth Grants also considered evaluations of teaching ability in making recommendations to the President.

The basic requirement for consideration by the committee was that faculty members devote the summer to promising research of their own choosing. For the purpose of participation in this program, reesarch was defined as the study and development of previously unexplored segments of knowledge.

All recipients have a period of eight weeks during the summer free from teaching commitments that they can devote to their research.

The UMass Precisionettes have been invited to march in Holyoke's St. Patrick's Day parade on Sunday, March 15. The procession, which will include bands and marching units from all over Massachusetts, will begin spring festivites for the Precisionettes.

The Holyoke St. Patrick's Day parade has long been one of the biggest and most festive parades in the state, and this year it will be featured on Channel 22.

Because the Precisionettes are currently holding spring tryouts, it is expected that some of the new girls may be marching in the parade. Those girls interested in Precisionettes who have not yet signed up are reminded that Monday, March 2 is the deadline for registration. Practices and tryouts are being held Monday through Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the archery room of the Women's Physical Education Building.

Conference On Cultural Exchange At U of Freiburg

A possible academic curriculum and program of educational and transatlanctic cultural exchange is the subject of a conference this week between University of Massachusetts staff members and German officials in the city of Freiburg, West Germany.

Representing the University of Massachusetts are Dr. I. Moyer Hunsberger, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Dr. Frederick C. Ellert, head of the department of German-Russian, and Dr. William G. O'Donnell, professor of English.

The conference, being held at the University of Freiburg, is sponsored by the University, the city of Freiburg and the University of Massachusetts. Co-operating in the meetings are George McGhee, U. S. ambassador to West Germany, and Gilbert Anderson of the Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs.

The meetings could result in a program whereby University students with a knowledge of German may spend a year of study at the University of Freiburg under the direction of professors from the University of Massachusetts. The year's study would be credited toward their degree at the University of Massachuseetts.

A main objective of the program is to keep student expense within the current total cost for tuition, fees, books and living expenses on campus. Since state funds could not be used for any additional expenses, some other method of financing through private funds would have to be found if preliminary plans receive approval.

The trip of the three UMass educators to West Germany this week was financed by private funds, including a $1,500 grant from the UMass Alumni association.

Interview For Ed. Block

Students who have a 2.0 cumulative average and are interested in the elementary or secondary education block should make appointments at once for interviews. Sign up sheets are available at the office, School of Education. Arrangements for the interview appointment must be made in person; application information cards will be filled out at that time.

No one will be interviewed who lacks the required average or who neglects to make an appointment before March 20, which is the deadline.

Current Legislation Favors Extension Of NDEA

One of the major pieces of education legislation left to come before Congress this year, the extension of the highly popular National Defense Education Act (NDEA), is expected to sail through the legislature with few obstructions.

The NDEA program, now in its sixth year, has proven successful on two counts: (1) giving direct college students by grants and loans and (2) providing an incentive for students to enter the teaching profession. The current amendment attempts to extend both aspects of the program.

Francis Keppel, U.S. Commissioner of Education, testifying for the proposed amendment before the House Eduation Subcommittee earlier this month reported that results of a recent survey indicate that "youths from low income families, regardless of academic ability, have a much poorer chance of going into college than their classmates from upper income families."

Keppel termed it "shameful" that income is permitted to determine "who shall be educated and who shall not, and, hence, who shall rise to positions of leadership and personal fulfillment and who shall not."

The student loan provisions of the NDEA hav allowed low-income students to complete their education, through university-administered loan funds. The proposed amndment would raise authorization for the loan funds to $135 million, and Keppel urged that the ceilings for the next year be raised to $150 million. During the past year, almost 600,000 students borrowed money under the loan provisions ,and the rate of repayment well exceeded that required by law, according to Keppel.

A new element in the area of federal aid to education is the proposed work-study program. Keppel urged the work-study idea to augment the loan program permitting low-income students to graduate without exceeding, in their opinion, a manageable level of indebtedness. If the proposed funds are authorized, Keppel estimated that 90,000 college students would benefit during the first year of operation.

Keppel told the House subcommittee that the key to the critical shortage of teachers in this country lies in a decreasing quality among college faculties. "The threat to this quality can be seen in the fact that the percentage of new college teachers holding doctoral degrees has declined from 31 per cent in 1953-54 to 25 per cent in 1962-63."

In addition to proposed teacher institutes, the NDEA offers graduate fellowships for the preparation of potential college teachers. A total of 7,000 fellowships have already been granted over a period of five years. The program currently, however, is limited by an enforced ceiling of 1500 fellowships a year. Four out of five applications for NDEA fellowships are refused, Keppel reported, and the ceiling is "much too low to meet the need." He urged a "substantial increase" in the number of fellowships and an additional 2,000 summer school fellowships for college teachers and graduates who wish to accelerate acquisition of the doctorate.

Without such an expansion of graduate education, coupled with a determined drive to recruit and retain able professors, we will neither be able to meet the educational needs of the mounting wave of undergraduate college enrollments nor the demands of our growing market for trained manpower," Keppel warned.

During the course of the hearings before the House subcommittee, Chairman Edith Green raised the question whether NDEA fellowships should be granted only in return for a signed promise that the student will, in fact, teach for at least two years after earning a doctorate, or enter some other profession determined by the Commission of Education to be in the national interest. A recent resign the fellowship for 101 NDEA fellows who have already earned a Ph.D., 70 actually entered the teaching profession. About 25 per cent annually withddraw from their original course of study leading to a doctorate, and almost 45 per cent resign the fellowship for one reason or another.

Mrs. Green termed these figures "alarming" in view of the purposes of the legislation, and suggested the mandatory clause. Such clauses already exist in state programs. The New York State Regents Fellowship requires a signed promise to teach in colleeg for two years in order o be eligible for the grant.

Commissioner Keppel rejected the proposal, placing the traditional "freedom of choice in determining one's own career" above assuring the "national interest" of the country.

Sororities At American University Accused Of Discriminatory Practices

Two of the six sororities at American University in Washington, Delta Gamma and Kappa Delta, recently admitted discriminatory practices in a public report to a student senate committee investigating such practices.

The student senate asked American University trustees to withdraw recognition of sororities and fraternities that continue to practice discrimination in membership selection.

Mary Ellen Knake, president of the University of Michigan KD chapter, refused to comment on the American chapter statement. Recently she also refused to comment on the existence of a discriminatory ritual found in the Iowa State KD chapter.

She said then that she was not aware that any chapter had received a waiver from the national sorority to free them from such a discriminatory clause.

Commenting on DG's statement at American University, Sara Hoberman, president of the University of Michigan DG chapter, said, "To my knowledge, the national sorority does not have such a clause, so this does not apply to our chapter."

We have a local by-law that says no discrimination exists—it is almost the same as the Regent by-law on discrimination," she said. "I have no idea why American University DGs would say such a thing, unless it pertains only to their chapter," she added, "I can see no reason why the national would allow this discrimination."

University "Lost And Found" At Union Lobby Counter

Wondering about that ring you lost? Or maybe it was a notebook that seems to be "misplaced" permanently. Where should you bring the gloves you found? The answer in all three cases is the University Lost and Found.

The central headquarters for the University Lost and Found is located at the Student Union Lobby Counter and is operated as a service under the direction of Mrs. Daisy McHaffie. This campus "retrieving ground" handles articles found in all campus buildings and on campus grounds.

All articles turned in to the Lost and Found are tagged and dated for easy identification before being placed in a "receivable box." A card listing the finder's name and address, the place where the article was found, and a description of the found article is completed and kept on record in a special record file. If ownership can be determined, a postcard is sent to notify the owner that his property has been found. A person may claim his or her lost property upon accurate identification of the item. Items remaining unclaimed after two semesters are given to charity.

Students are urged to turn in any found articles promptly; such cooperation with the Lost and Found is greatly appreciated since it increases the efficiency and the value of this service. The center is open for claiming articles week days from 8:00 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Found articles may be turned in at the Lobby Counter at any time.

mittee of faculty and administration will screen students to decide who will go to Peru.

In addition, all money collected in excess of $4000 and up to $5000 will be donated to the Albert P. Madeira Memorial Fund. This fund was started with the winning of our successful College Bowl team.

AS ITS GOAL, the Campus Chest hopes to collect at least $1 from each student and faculty member on campus.

"Othello" Opens This Week

Othello (Don Johnson) and Desdemona (Peggy Jones) confront her father Brabantio (Tom Kerrigan) with the news of their elopement, in this scene from Shakespeare's OTHELLO. Tickets for the University Theatre production, to be presented March 5, 6, and 7 in Bowker Auditorium, will be on sale in the Student Union box office this week from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4 p.m. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. There will be a matinee performance Saturday afternoon at 2:15 p.m.

Living A Wild Fast Life?

The National Institute of Health (NIH) this week shattered the college student's alibi that a hard-drinking, hard-loving campus life is needed to escape the pressures of studies.

If you're worth your salt, you'll wallow happily in academic crises and burden yourself with as many challenging situations as are available.

"Competent college students seek out the stimulation of challenging and potentially stressful situations and, in coping with them, actively explore the resources in their environment," the report said.

"Findings refute the prevailing belief that students strive merely for relief of tension," the report added.

The report said, "most of the students developed new skills; they learned to size up a situation, budget their time wisely, and strive for attainable goals."

But the joy of the raccoon-coat life was not completely left behind, the report said. "Alternative means of gratification came through etxra-curricular activities."

The successful students were given a big help from "friendships and heterosexual relationships."

said, "This is perhaps the greatest day in University history. We have shown the nation what public higher education in Massachusetts can do. I am extremely proud of our team and grateful for all the help that the many people at the University have given to aid in our success. This dramatic victory is the finest tribute that could be paid to Albert P. Madeira for all his many efforts."

Team Captain Bill Landis said that the team had the potential to go all the way at the time of their selection, "and we did."

Joe Deschines, a bus driver for UMass who had driven the team from Amherst to Springfield, became so interested that he went to New York for this, the final game. He was one of the first to congratulate the team after its victory.

Shouts of joy filled the Student Union Ballroom as over a thousand spectators heard the final whistle declare a victorious UMass team.

Female Gymnasts Score High

The first North-East Invitational College Women's Gymnastic Meet was held Saturday, Feb. 29 in the Women's Gymnasium at the University. This was the first large scale college women's gymnastic meet in the East and it is hoped that it will be instituted as an annual event.

Due to the difference of skill levels, the meet was run in two sections:

OPEN—for girls who have had competitive experience before.

NOVICE—for the girls who have just started competing in gymnastics.

Each exercise is judged by four judges and given scores between 0 and 10.0, depending on the composition, execution and difficulty of the routine. From the four scores the high and the low are discarded and the two middle ones averaged. The average was the score for that particular exercise.

DUE TO THE FACT THAT MANY SCHOOLS ARE JUST STARTING women's gymnastics, no team score was kept. It was based strictly on individual competition. One girl could be entered in up to 3 events and each school was limited to only two girls in each novice and open event.

COLLEGES IN THE MEET were from Connecticut: Central Connecticut State College, and Bridgeport University Arnold College, from Massachusetts: Boston University, Sargent College, State College at Bridgewater, the University of Massachusetts and Wheaton College; from Pennsylvania: West Chester State College.

AGILITY AND BALANCE of women gymnasts, as demonstrated above, captivated the audience in the first Northeast Invitational College Women's Gymnastics Meet held at the WoPe Bldg. Saturday.

Little Redmen Victorious; Defeat Northeastern, Tufts

The University of Massachusetts Freshman track team showed fine talent and plenty of depth as they downed Northeastern University and Tufts University in successive meets in the last two weeks. Northeastern, perennially strong, and Tufts, perenially weak, both were swamped by a fine Redman squad.

AT NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY on the 22nd of February, UMass won by a score of 62 to 47, easily notching its first win in as many starts this season. Putting the Redmen out to a quick 9-0 lead was a sweep in the 45-yard dash (5.3) with Aba Johnson leading Art Larvey and Paul Khlorer across the line. The mile (4:44.3) increased the lead as Mike Sheeley and Steve St. Clair placed one-two. Dan O'Leary placed third in the hurdles and John Anderson took second in the 600. Terry Carpenter, Steve St. Clair and Mike Sheeley teamed up for the second sweep of the day in the Two Mile (10:18). In the Thousand it was Bill Thoms and Ed McCarty taking second and third respectively.

THE FIELD EVENTS also added to UMass's lead. Art Larvey took the Broad Jump (18'10"), John Fitzgerald the Pole Vault (11') and Kulpa placed third in the High Jump with 5'8". Monnette and Ed Solomon placed second and third in the 35 lb. weight throw, while Bob Davis and John Tokarczuc were 1-2 in the Shot (41'10½"). UMass iced the cake with five more points via a relay win.

AT TUFTS on the 25th, UMass again triumphed, 69-29. This time Mass again jumped out to a quick lead with Art Larvey leading Aba Johnson for first and second in the 50-yard dash (5.7). In the Mile (4:45) Mike Sheeley and Steve St. Clair again placed 1-2.

ANDY MANN won the High Hurdles (6.7) and the Low Hurdles (6.0) and Dan O'Leary was second. In the 600 (1:20.5), John Anderson was first and Damien Gaffney third. Terry Carpenter repeated his Two-Mile victory (10:28) of the previous meet and Charlie Mitchell was third. Steve St. Clair and Mike Sheely placed second and third in the 1000.

The UMass' score was bolstered further in the field events. Art Larvey won the Broad Jump (20' 2") and Deane Christopolis took third. Kulpa took the High Jump (5'8") and he was followed by John Hall and Dave Peoples for a sweep in that event. Monnette and Ed Solomon took second and third in the 35 lb. weight throw and John Davis won the Shot Put (40'8½") with Solomon third. The Relay topped off the scoring with an additional five points for the victors.

THE FROSH PROVED THEMSELVES a powerful team and will be put to the test again at UConn on March 10th. That is their third and last dual meet and they could wind up undefeated, providing that the boys repeat their fine performances of the past two meets.

the visitors came up with 26 points in the first eight minutes. Edwards had eight points during the stretch and along with O'Rourke swept the boards.

But the Black Bears were far from finished. The two teams traded hoops until the score reached 71-62. Then Dave Svendsen, Garland Strang, and MacKinnon hit to close the gap to three. The teams traded hoops until the margin reached 77-74. Then John Gillette hit to close it to one. Tim Edwards missed two free throws, but Svendsen hit his two and the Bears were on top for the first time since early in the half. Strang came up with a hoop and with 1:45 left the Redmen found themselves down 3.

Pete Bernard hit a foul shot and Strang hit again, but two hoops by Bernard had the game all tied up with almost a minute left. Strang missed on a drive and Bernard came back to kill the clock for the last shot. He was fouled however, and as the fans howled, Bernard could not convert and the game went into overtime at 82 all.

The Redmen should have settled for the tie, but the overtime was required to finish off the effort. Gillette hit for two hoops as UMass could not hit until after almost 2:30 had elapsed in the period. Edwards hit and Gillette hit again. Then with a little more than 1:30 showing Svenden came up with 2 foul shots and Mass was down six. Kingston and Bernard hit for the team as they closed it up to 90-88. But Strang got free for a hoop and Twitchell hit just before the buzzer to close out the scoring and his career.

Both of the senior stars finished with 21 points, however, they both had to take a back seat to Kingston who played his finest game as he scored 22. Chuck O'Rourke hit for 12 points and was mammoth off the boards with 22 rebounds,. The Black Bears were led by MacKinnon with 17 points, Strang with 16, Gillette with 17, Svendsen with 13 and Woodbury with 10.

Mass closes out the season with a 15-9 record and 5-5 in the league. Maine wound up with a 12-11 record and only 3-7 in the league.

Just as a side note, Rhode Island dumped UConn by 54-43 to force a playoff for the right to go to the NCAA tournament. No matter who wins, the two will be crowned as co-champions of the league.

The 3 students who carried out the 3 benches from the "Tastee Tower" last weekend, Feb. 23rd, were seen and are known. If they will return them within 48 hours after this notice there will be no charges pressed.

UMass Downed In Overtime; Falter In Finale, 92-90

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachu setts bowed in a frantic season's finale against the Black Bears of Maine 92-90 in overtime. The game was wide open with many floor mistakes and real race horse basketball. By losing this game the Redmen kept in tact their season's record of not having won a Yankee Conference game on the road.

Chuck O'Rourke hit the first hoop of the game and the visitors raced to a 6-2 lead. Then the Black Bears came up with 11 straight points to break into a 13-6 lead. This was to set the pattern for the rest of the game. First one team then the other would begin to hit. After the Bears had opened their lead, Mass retaliated with an 11 point run of their own. Charlie Kingston had six points during this big drive.

Maine then outscored the Redmen 14-3 to open up a seven point lead at 27-20. There were few really outstanding players in the contest at this point as both teams were using well-balanced performances.

With 6:30 showing on the clock, the teams began to trade runs of six points. Mass hit first to close the gap to 27-26, then Maine behind Bruce MacKinnon opened up a 33-26 lead. Then with Twitchell, Kingston, and O'Rourke hitting Mass fought back to run off eight straight and take the lead 34-33. But this was just a temporary arrangement and the home team sandwiched eight points around a foul shot for Pete Bernard to open a 41-35 margin at the intermission.

Both teams were provided with well balanced attacks. The leaders were lead by Bruce MacKinnon and Bob Woodbury with eight points each. Mass had Kingston leading with 10 points while Twitchell and O'Rourke came in with eight points each.

In the second half, Mass came out with Tim Edwards in the line-up and he led a surge that put the Redmen on top 61-51, as

Riflemen Victory Clinches Top Place

by M. NATAUPSKY

For the second year in a row the UMass Varsity Rifle Team is undefeated in YanCon competition.

The team made it two championships in as many years as UMaine fell victim to the Redmen in the final match on Saturday afternoon in the Dickinson Hall Rifle Range.

BOTH TEAMS FIRED BELOW THEIR AVERAGES under the heavy pressure of the match, but the final total showed that UMass had 1397 points and UMaine had 1385 points. Although many shooters suffered under pressure, it was a well fired match between the two teams, either of which could have emerged as the winner of both the match and the YanCon championship. It was not until the last shots were fired that the victors were determined.

TEAM CAPTAIN HALL BUTTERWORTH spearheaded the attack for the Redmen, and was also high man for the match with a three position total of 287. Hal has maintained the top average on the team throughout the season, and he also has one of the leading averages in the New England College Rifle League.

H. DAVIS fired in the number two spot for UMass with a total of 282. Davis was the only one of the Redmen to fire a perfect 100—a "possible"—in the prone position. Mr. Greene followed close behind with a score of 279.

COMPLETING THE TOP FIVE for UMass were J. Carswell and M. Nataupsky with totals of 275 and 274 respectively.

It took a team effort to defeat UMaine; for the past two seasons under the coaching of Capt. R. B. Fowler, Army ROTC, the Redmen have been characterized by excellent team depth and team shooting.

The team will face its toughest test of the season this coming Sat. as it fires at the Coast Guard Academy for National Competition. Last year the team was beaten only by West Point at the Sectionals, and placed nineteenth in the nation in a field of over 400 teams.

Tufts Overpowers Frosh Swimmers

The Freshman Swim Team finished its 1-5 season Tuesday night with a 61-33 loss against powerful Tufts.

The team wished to express to Coach Joe Rogers its appreciation for his work by throwing him into the drink, but Joe, in his own tactful manner, insisted on keeping dry.

THE MEET COMMENCED with an exciting race which looked good for UMass. The Medley Relay Team of Cooke, Orsak, Brown and Hamblet held top spot until the final length. They lost in one of the closest races of the night.

Dick Lennon copped two first places in the meet. In the .200 Ind. Medley, Dick left the field in his wake and established for himself another school record, his fifth for the season, by breaking his own mark of 2:18.0 by 2.5 sec., for an impressive 2:15.5. Further in the meet, he easily won the 100 yd. Breatstoke.

Tom Schwartz contentedly swam to victory in the 400 yd. freestyle, and captured a third in the 200 yd. freestyle.

Ted Hoague was in top form as he took honors in the diving, and his teammate Bruce Colby, a local farmer, took third.

Walt Orsak and Fred Cooke finished two-three in the 100 yd. backstroke.

Russ Brynes placed fourth in the 50 yd. freestyle.

Dick Brown settled for third place against powerful Merry of Tufts, the pre-meet favorite.

Steve Levy took second in both the 50 yd. and the 100 yd. freestyle.

But, it juast wasn't Norm Lovitch's night. He placed fourth in the 200 yd. freestyle and the 100 yd. breastroke.

The Freestyle Relay Team, swum by Levy, Schwartz, Lovitch and Lennon looked good, but not good enough to overcome their strong rivals.

Petty Politics Blasted As Fife Slams Opponents

by TERRY STOCK

SENATE PRESIDENT Jon Fife yesterday blasted a small faction of senators for what he called "the grossest example of personal petty politics that I have seen in working with the Senate for the past three years."

In an informal interview with two Collegian reporters, President Fife discussed the Student Senate meeting of February 26.

AT THAT TIME, Fife had turned the chair over to Senate Vice President Joan Labuzoski ('64 Sororities), and stepped to the floor to propose that students "who had not yet benefited from the Student Activity Tax Fund supported buses to the College Bowl be given priority, until Thursday at 1 p.m., to purchase tickets at a reduced rate (the tax picking up the balance) over those who had already gone to New York at least once."

According to Fife, Senator Ross Jones ('65 Brett) and Senator David Mathieson ('64 at Large) were the chief opponents of the motion.

"DOING EVERYTHING in their power to stop debate and gathering support from other Senators who were new to Student Government and, therefore unaware of the true issues, they pushed through the Senate, with complete disregard for others, what they personally wanted."

Fife explained that among those who fought to prevent any debate over the issue, five had gone to New York before on an SATF bus and were signed up to go again on Sunday, March 1.

"IT IS NOT what these Senators did," stressed Fife, "so much as the manner in which they did it. Their actions showed their complete disrespect for the philosophy of democratic student government and a complete disregard for the best interests of the people they are supposed to represent."

In stopping debate before any debate had begun, pointed out Fife, these Senators violated four of the principles for which the Senate stands.

"FIRST, THEY used Robert's Rules of Order to prevent the Senate from running in a smooth, dignified and expedient manner. More than that, they used their power of overruling the chair to railroad their bill through.

"Secondly, they conducted themselves in a manner grossly unacceptable.

"THIRD, they did everything in their power to stop and destroy free debate.

"And finally, they voted, not as their constituencies wanted, but for their own personal desires."

FIFE NOTED that such actions in the Student Government would have to stop before the student body will change its image of the Senate as a group of self-seeking individuals.

"Such actions as these cannot and will not be tolerated in our Student Government," said Fife. "As President of the Student Body and the Senate, I intend to use all the power at my disposal to see that such petty politics do not occur again.

"THIS IS NOT a threat, nor is it a promise," he concluded. "It is my job and my responsibility to the students."

Students Reject Tri-Semester; Reading Period Endorsed

MOST UMASS undergrads would be unwilling to attend classes on a year-round basis according to the recent poll conducted by the Student Senate Academic Affairs committee. Believed to be one of the largest samplings ever taken on the UMass Campus, some 1600 students returned the questionnaires.

According to Thomas McMullin, chairman of the committee, 1143 students said they would be unwilling to attend classes year-round with 334 stating they would attend.

WHEN ASKED if they favored the principle of year-round operations the student body was much more closely divided. 943 students said they opposed year-round operation in principle, while 743 thought the proposed academic schedule was acceptable.

ON THE QUESTION of a reading period before finals, the student body was overwhelmingly in favor of the idea. 1520 students voiced strong approval of the need for the study period. Eighty-one undergraduates felt that there was no need for the break between classes and finals.

Of the three choices given the student body, a two day, three to four day, or four to five day reading period, the vast majority of students favored a three to four day period. As proposed by the Academic Affairs committee, the reading period would be a review period and not one in which additional assigned work would be given.

THE COMMITTEE was greatly impressed by the response given to the poll.

"Many students realized that the proposals in this poll would not affect them directly," stated the chairman "Yet they not only went to the bother of answering the poll, but wrote detailed comments on the questionnaire concerning academic affairs. There can be no doubt that for many students at UMass, the academic future of the University is of prime importance."

Art Festival Kickoff To Feature DVP Lecture

Tonight marks the beginning of what is hoped to be the finest Art Festival to be held at the University. The Festival appropirately opens in observance of the four-hundreth anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare with a lecture by G. B. Harrison, professor emeritus at the University of Michigan. His address will be in connection with the University production of Othello which opens the following evening in Bowker Auditorium. Mr. Harrison's lecture will be held Wednesday evening, March 4, in Bartlett Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. under the auspices of the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Professor Harrison was born in Sussex, England, and educated at Cambridge University. He has taught English at King's College of London University, at Queen's University in Canada, and at the University of Michigan. His scholarly books include The Elizabethan and Jacobean Journals, Shakespeare's Tragedies, and Introducing Shakespeare. He is editor of "Bodley Head Quartes", the general editor of the "Shakespeare Association Facsimiles", and the co-editor, with Harley Granville-Backer, of A Companion to Shakespeare Studies. His edition of William Shakespeare's Complete Works is widely used in college and university courses. His most recent book, A Profession of English, describes the several functions of a member of an English faculty.

The extensiveness and duration of the year's Fine Arts Festival is a University first. Although in previous years weekend long Festivals were held on campus, it was not until last spring that the relatively new Fine Arts Council undertook to organize and co-ordinate a Fine Arts Festival for this year with the aim of presenting a comprehensive program to the University community in March, 1964.

Workday To Aid Campus Chest

To aid Campus Chest in their drive for scholarship funds, Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity, will sponsor Work Days in Amherst from March 9 through March 27.

Men and women students are being urged to leave their names in the Work Days boxes in the R.S.O. or Collegian Offices or to contact Bill Wilkinson in 308 Greenough if they are interested in participating in this fund-raising project. Amherst citizens will then contact Wilkinson and arrange for students to do odd jobs, such as window washing and cellar cleaning.

The Amherst employers will pay student workers what they consider a fair donation to Campus Chest. There will be no fixed rate for the work.

The Work Days will also include a paper drive to be held Friday, March 20. Old magazines and newspapers will be picked up at Amherst homes and sold by student volunteer workers—proceeds will be used for educating South African students, for University scholarships, for sending a UMass student to Peru and for adding a sum to the Albert P. Madeira Scholarship Fund.

2,000 Students, Staff Welcome College Bowl Victors

by ELWIN McNAMARA

THE VICTORIOUS UMass College Bowl team was greeted Monday by over 2000 shouting and cheering students, staff and faculty, as the team came back as one of only 13 schools to win five consecutive games in the six-year history of the program.

The four team members, Mike Berrini, Dave Mathieson, Sue Tracy, and team captain Bill Landis arrived in Springfield at about noon. Here they were met by a State Police escort, which brought them back to Amherst.

AS THE TEAM drew up in front of the Student Union, the bells of Old Chapel began to chime, as they had after Sunday's victory over the University of Arizona. The team was mobbed by their fellow students as they emerged from the bus.

Off - Campus Housing

What has been done, to date, to facilitate off-campus rentals? An interview with Mr. VanVliet and Mr. Wells of the Housing Department has answered many questions concerning the administrative/technical end of the situation.

When it became apparent that the new dormitory complex would not be ready for this academic year, a massive emergency campaign was launched to find sufficient new off-campus facilities to accommodate an increase in University residents. The quality standards, and rent regulation, of the listings compiled had to be sacrificed to quantity. The success of the Housing Department in placing all rentees was finally proven by a surplus of listings.

The Department then began the laborious process of establishing a more efficient system of listing and assisting in off-campus rentals. All the efforts to date have dealt primarily with the task of placing people, and have been successful.

Only now are the comforts and convenience of the student, being realistically considered. The concept of University approved rentals are still only a vague outline on the drawing board.

What does approved housing mean to the student off-campus? It is not, as a letter on this page implies, that we envision the University as mother to every student on and off campus; rather, we feel it the responsibility of the University to inspect each facility before it is listed. We do not feel students off-campus should live in constant fear of "a knock on the door" by some Administrator (nor do the administrators); rather, we feel that a person should be employed through the Housing Department to inspect and coerce change in living conditions at the students' or landlords' requests. The original check would constitute "approving" while the possibility of future inspection would assure quality.

The Housing Department and the administration are all too aware of the sufferings that may be incurred by individuals over the next few years—during our greatest growth spurt. However, with all their foresight and big plans, there is still hesitance in hiring "another body" to see that the student is not troubled by small plumbing problems or helpless in the face of faulty rent contracts. It is not enough that some are bargainers when renting. There should and could be another agent working for the students—when he needs him; a person who could take the burden of doing all jobs off the curent staff.

These are our suggestions in view of an informative interview. The next topics to be discussed are in the area of rules of conduct (and enforcement of such rules) off-campus.

DBA

Letter

Housing Praised

Dear DBA:

As a commuter living most contentedly off-campus where I am free from petty rules, regulations, dorm meetings, housemothers and counselors, I winced when I read your piece on off-campus housing.

The Housing Department is doing a wonderful job, and is not "slacking in its responsibility to the students' welfare." How much hand-holding does the poor, "unsophisticated tenant" need? If he is too fragile to fend for himself in dealings with the hard, cruel world, then what is he doing so far from his mother (or his housemother) in the first place?

If a person wants a room or apartment he can get one; if he shops around a little bit, finds out what things are worth, and compares prices, he should be able to rent without being "taken."

Urge the University to print pamphlets and give advice to those who would like it, if you must; abuse the Housing Department if you feel it your duty, but please don't scare happily independent commuters with talk of supervising tenant-landlord relations or speculation about the "legality and necessity of residence inspection"! JUST LEAVE US ALONE!

Gov Sanford

To the Editor:

This past Monday night we were privileged to have Terry Sanford, Governor of North Carolina, deliver a lecture, "The Role of the Southern Governor on Civil Rights." Governor Sanford has manifested a daringly "liberal" program for the three years that he has held his present office. He has led his state in bucking the powerfully organized and militant "Segs."

He explained his position to us. Rather than propose worthless civil rights legislation (because it would not be passed), he has set up social agencies, and has tried to help Negroes help themselves this way.

He appears to be sincerely trying to solve the racial problem in North Carolina. However, he pointed out that the problem is deep and complex, and is not yet anywhere near being solved. The important thing is that he is trying! His record proves this.

After his lecture, Governor Sanford opened the floor for questions. Many students asked baited questions in an indignant manner. They came to the lecture prejudged. They, who implicitly accused Governor Sanford of many hypocrasies, proved themselves the hypocrites. They did not want to learn, or even listen, but merely to ridicule. Their attitude was we are right, you are wrong; Northerners are "the good guys," Southerners are "the bad guys."

Yet, in the same breath, these "good guys" made sure that everyone knew they were for civil rights. Nothing is "black," and nothing is "white"; most often an issue is "grey"—or a shade above or below it. How can there be any progress when the "good guys" are so antagonistic.

I think that these "good guys" can be renamed "the hecklers." They insisted that Governor Sanford examine his policies. Perhaps these uncouth and immature dieties should re-examine their means of assertion.

Sincerely yours,

Arthur Geller

The Metawampee Award

To the Editor:

I wholeheartedly agree with the proposal advocated in the editorial of the February 24th issue of the Collegian concerning a change of name for the Metawampe Award. It is only fitting that this be done in memory of the man who in every way exemplified the meaning of the first award —Albert P. Madeira.

As chairman of last year's Metawampe Committee, I cannot forget that after the nominations had been narrowed down to five names, a closed ballot vote was called for. After the votes were counted, I realized that the committee had made the only possible choice. The eleven votes were unanimously cast for Mr. Albert P. Madeira. There was not one member of the committee (ten seniors and one junior) who had not received help or advice from this remarkable man in either the academic or extracurricular spheres.

The students of the University of Massachusetts benefited greatly from the efforts of this man during his twelve years as a member of the faculty. The award will take on increased significance as the "Albert P. Madeira—Metawampe Award." He will be sorely missed on Student Leaders' Night when for the first time in ten years someone else reads the Who's Who list.

Keys Not Fraternity Clique

"I get sick of Keys being called a fraternity." "We want the individual—not the fraternity." "Independents are as welcome as those from any fraternity." These random quotations were heard at the last Maroon Key meeting.

In a general discussion at this meeting about Maroon Key selections for next year, a concern was shown for the individual, as has been done in the past. While the overall student body is laboring under the misconception that Keys are a select fraternity group, those that know of the selection process know this isn't true.

Are the independents disinterested or apathetic? Or are the Keys disinterstęd or apathetic towards the individual? Certainly not. We feel that both groups are not as described above. It is possible that independents are afraid to go out for Maroon Keys because they feel that they will be discriminated against. This year's Keys are going to make a conscious attempt to rectify this situation.

We are going to try this in three different ways. The first is that there will be no discrimination between independents and fraternity members on the application form. The second is that there will be no wearing of fraternity insignias during any of the selection meetings. And third is that there will be no mention of fraternities during the selection process.

Again we would like to stress the fact that we are looking for the individual. We desire to select a group of Keys that are clean-cut, well-rounded, and have a co-operative and workable personality. We will be looking for leadership ability, a sense of responsibility to the University and to the Keys, and a desire to work on projects whose existence is not generally known. If you feel that you have these qualities and capabilities, we invite you, independent or fraternity member, to try and become a Maroon Key.

Censorship vs. Freedom Of Expression

by DICK DOHERTY and DAVE GITELSON

Many people have commented on the limited number of "purists" folk entertainers that have appeared on the nationally broadcast Saturday evening Hootenanny show, and have often asked, "When will they have Pete Seeger, Joan Baez, or Bobby Dylan?" It appears now that the answer is never.

As long as the sponsors of this program demand the exclusive right to select and censure all material to be aired, Mr. Seeger and friends wil continue to participate in a mutual boycott. It is a question of whether folk stylists should be expected to relinquish the most vital aspect of their art: self expression.

It appears that Mr. Seeger's repertoire of songs protesting against such delicate subjects as world devastation, racial inequalities, and conformity are too "hot" to be handled by network television. In addition, there is the ever present blacklist, which excludes any performer even remotely conneted with a group that falls under the general heading of radical. On this list, Mr. Seeger's name appears close to the top. It is a shame that such biting satire as is currently being presented on such programs as "That Was The Week That Was" receive the approval of the same authority that time and time again has rejected the material of many of this nation's outstanding folk artists? Why should there exist freedom of speech but not of song?

It is our hope that in the near future Pete Seeger and group will be allowed to replace such "ethnics" as Trini Lopez, the U. S. Marine's Marching Band, and Woody Allen. Possibly a few well worded letters to the producers of this show would help affect this end.

For those of you who are interested in folk music along an international vein, Theodore

Rehabilitating The Select

In this age of automation, gifted craftsmen are continually becoming unemployed. Programs of job retraining have been affected, and it now seems there is a dire need for such action to aid a small segment of the University's student body.

I speak of our four college bowl scholars. Since October, they have been undergoing rigrous training for their television performance. Now, victorious and retired, they have found that they are honored outsiders to campus routine. All seem to be suffering from a sort of shell shock. Sue Tracy has been known to go into paralysis at the sound of an ice cream vendor's bell, Mike Berrini salivates whenever silver crashes to the floor of the Match. After answering a classroom problem, Dave Mathieson leans to the student on his right in preparation for a bonus. Say hello to Bill Landis, and he prefaces his response, "Well, Mr. Earle..."

Bronzeplating seems a bit too ext eme; any suggestions would be appreciated.

Add to the list of "free and fun": The Yahoo's coffee hour Wednesday, March 11, 7:30, in the Colonial Lounge. An excellent staff of brainpickers and plagarists will be on hand to buttonhole any new or ancient talents for a forthcoming third-issue parody. Cookies and coffee will flow like red tape from South College. Whether the meeting will be a brainstorm or a mere tempest in a teapot depends upon your participation. Come and see the people you have heard so much about in abnormal psych class!

Welcome Bowl . . .

It took them over 10 minutes to work their way free of the crowd and into the ballroom of the Union.

"This is one of the happiest gatherings in the history of the University," said Dean of Students William Field as he addressed the throng which squeezed itself into the ballroom.

FIELD THEN introduced Rep. James Nolan who, acting as the personal representative of Gov. Peabody, said that "now, we know that Massachusetts is not only the home of great private universities but also is a center for a great public university, equal to any in the 50 states."

Nolan then revealed that the entire team will be feted at a reception held by Gov. Peabody.

THE AMHERST BOARD of Selectmen was represented by its chairman, Norman McLeod, who congratulated the team on behalf of the town.

President of the Associate Alumni, Gen. John Maginnis told the gathering that the College Bowl victories were among the brightest spots in the history of the University. He said that the alumni wished to send "most hearty and warm congratulations" to the team.

STUDENT SENATE President Jon Fife presented engraved mementoes to each of the team members. Fife also presented one to Mrs. Albert Madeira, widow of the man who had coached and directed the team to their eventual victories.

Establishment of an Albert P. Madeira Scholarship Fund was announced. The fund will be composed of the $10,500 won on College, contributions from Campus Chest, and further contributions from alumni and friends.

PRESENT AT the reception were the parents of all team members. Previously, the parents had been entertained at a luncheon in the Union.

Dean Warren McGuirk announced that bowls would be given to team members as a gesture of appreciation from the athletic council.

"We Must Understand Each Other," Tarheel Governor Outlines Steps

"This country has too many busybodies. What we need is more human understanding: understanding from the heart."

We must learn to understand each other, and to Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina, "the pious attitude of self-righteous people from one region looking down upon the people of another," does not fit into this framework.

Speaking at the University of Massachusetts Monday evening the handsome Governor of the Tarheel State outlined the progress of his administration in solving some of the problems of human relations which plague the entire nation.

He outlined a series of steps taken by his office to educate and re-educate the citizens of his state of both races.

However, it was in the question and answer period following his talk that the Governor outshone himself as he dodged and ducked one question after another.

WHEN QUESTIONED CLOSELY about the situation in Williamstown, North Carolina, a southern city with which the residents of Amherst are quite familiar through the participation of Reverend David King in its Negro Freedom Movement, Governor Sanford stated that he felt the situation was well in hand.

He commented that he was satisfied that the town's mayor has a good attitude with regard to the entire racial problem.

Sanford told the more than hundred people assembled that the town of Williamstown had an open school policy. In other words any student in Williamstown may register in any of the town's schools. He added that it was unfortunate that until this time no students had taken advantage of the policy.

Sanford said he had wondered why they were getting a lot of Northern preachers coming South, and stated that perhaps he could help them solve their own problems up here.

Known as one of the South's most liberal politicians, Sanford is a former President of the North Carolina Young Independents, and an ex-paratrooper who saw much action in Italy during World War II.

THE TARHEEL GOVERNOR was invited to speak at the University by another prominent Southernor, ex-Governor Bert Coombs of Kentucky, who is presently teaching the Ford Foundation sponsored course in Practical Politics at U. of Mass.

Huskies To Battle Rams For Important NCAA Bid

The University of Connecticut basketball team makes its second effort to win a trip to the NCAA tournament at Rhode Island, tonight at 8, when the Huskies and Rams clash in a playoff for the Yankee Conference berth in the NCAA.

BOTH HAVE BEEN CROWNED CO-CHAMPIONS after Rhode Island came from behind to catch up with the Huskies in the league standings and cause an unprecedented Yankee Conference co-championship. Both had 8-2 league records. Overall, Connecticut is 13-9 while Rhody is 19-7.

"We enter Wednesday night's game with great confidence," declared UConn Coach Fred Shabel. "My remarks are made in part as a result of the comeback we made at Kingston, Saturday." Shabel added that he feels "real good" about his team's chances in the big "rubber" match between these keen rivals.

CONNECTICUT FELL BEHIND by as many as 12 points (27-15) in the first half of the Kingston clash; but the Huskies closed the gap to five points, staging a great comeback and walked off with a 32-25 intermission deficit.

Connecticut went ahead in the final ten minutes, leading by 44-43, 50-47 and 53-50, the last lead posted with four minutes, 42 seconds to play.

Connecticut toppled Rhode Island by 43-41 on a last second shot by Toby Kimball at Storrs in the first meeting between these teams. Rhode Island won the rematch at Kingston, 54-53, the winning basket (by Mike Fitzgerald) and final score of the game coming with 3:33 showing on the clock.

THE UCONNS WILL OPEN WITH THEIR CUSTOMARY LINEUP: 6-8 junior Toby Kimball, (20.0), Co-Capt. 6-11 Eddie Slomcenski (8.2) and 6-4 junior Bill Della Sala (9.7) up front; with 6-1 Co-Capt. Dom Perno (10.9) and 6-3 senior Al Ritter (10.3) in the back court.

Rhode Island will open with 6-3 Steve Chubin (21.6), 6-7 center Frank Nightingale 13.5, 6-3 Dennis McGovern (21.3), 5-11 guard Jim Cymbala (10.7) and 6-2 guard Mike Fitzgerald (5.1).

was set in soft snow that quickly wore away, exposing rocks and ice which caused trouble for the racers at the end.

SUNDAY'S RACE was a giant slalom held at Pleasant Mt. in Maine, in which the University defeated six teams: Tufts, Boston Univ., Northeastern, Brown, Boston College, and AIC. The course was a good one, with many pitfalls for the unwary as the University's first racer, Walt Swiatek had trouble for which he was disqualified. The next University racer, Pete Plastridge, took his first fall in competition, but made a quick recovery to finish in 27th place. However, the University's standing was saved as Tom Clark and Don Burgess had flawless runs and placed seventh and tenth respectively.

Noted Chinese Artist To Deliver Lecture

A leading Chinese artist who is also one of the world's great experts in an ancient form of calisthenics and self-defense will make his first public appearance in the United States at Springfield College on Wednesday, March 11.

He is 63 year old Cheng Manching of Taipei, Taiwan, an almost legendary figure who is master of T'ai-Chi Ch'uan, a slow-motion form of rhythmical calisthentics known as "Grand Ultimate Boxing."

The slim, ascetic Cheng has developed mastery of this exercise since he started using it in 1925 when he was suffering from tuberculosis and close to death.

A GREAT MASTER OF T'AI-CHI introduced Cheng to the form of exercise and he made a swift recovery from TB, completely defeating the disease in approximately one year.

Mr. Cheng is also one of Taiwan's leading artists (one of his pupils is Madame Chiang Kai-shek), a poet, noted calligrapher and a doctor of traditional Chinese medicine.

The lecture-demonstration at Springfield College will be given by Mr. Cheng on the evening of March 11, with the site to be determined. Co-sponsors for the event will be the Department of Physical Education, the PE Majors Club, the Student Activities Board and the Cultural Affairs Committee.

THE ARTIST-BOXER speaks no English. He will be accompanied by his interpreter, Mr. T. S. Liang, who has studied with Mr. Cheng for the past 25 years.

Although Mr. Cheng has been in the United States for approximately a month, he has not yet delivered any public lectures on art and the T'ai chi style of boxing. He has made two brief television appearances in the Washington, D.C. area, where he is now staying.

THE LECTURE - DEMONSTRATION WILL BE KEYED to Mr. Cheng's long work as a leading artist in the Republic of China. He will also demonstrate his incredible skill at T'ai-chi Ch'uan. The exercise which he has developed to near perfection allows him to control even the strongest and most skillful of opponents, in this combative art. His intent will be to show the relationship between these two different forms of art.

Even at the age of 63, the slightly built artist can avoid an intended attack and neutralize opponents into submissiveness. Within the past 18 months, in a friendly match he easily defeated a 200 pound judo expert who holds a third degree black belt.

Secret of his power is complete relaxation, an acute sensitivity of touch which allows him literally to know what his opponent will do, and the added aspect of "Ch'i", in which the mind directs energy throughout the body according to need. Mr. Cheng Man-ching has such absolute control of his relaxing powers that he can withstand the combined push of four men without himself being moved.

Arrangements for the unusual lecture - demonstration were started through the efforts of Arthur J. Wohl, a member of the sophomore class who is majoring in physical education. Wohl, from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, studied a similar form of calisthenics prior to enrolling at the college.

Successful Redmen Season Rewrites The Record Books

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts, in compiling their 15-9 record, managed to be one of the most record breaking teams ever. During the course of the year, the team set many records for single games, but now is the time to see how they did on the year.

WITH THE CHANGE IN STYLE the team broke many of the records for offense this year. The most prominent of these is the fact that they averaged 83.8 points a game, which puts them in the top 20 in the country. This mark broke the old record of 76.6 set in 1954-55. This was also about 14 points per game better than last year's figure. The team also scored more points, 2012, as compared to the previous record of 1880. They sank 833 field goals to obliterate the old mark of 710.

The most enjoyable figure to pick out though is the fact that the team hit at a .427 clip to top the old mark of .422. The change of style is often noticed by a large dip in the percentage as compared to the previous year, but that just was not true this time.

ONE OF THE INDIVIDUAL RECORDS set concerns the number of rebounds in a single season. Chuck O'Rourke pulled down 308 to pass the old standard set by Rodger Twitchell at 292. The tall junior reached the mark with the 22 he controlled against Maine in the season finale.

THE LEADING SCORER FOR THE YEAR was Peter Bernard with a 19.5 average. He scored 469 points to fall just 22 short of the 1000 point mark for his career. Pete finishes number four on the list of top scorers in the school history.

Rodger Twitchell finished with 13.8 points a game, a good year but not as fine as his first two. He hit for 1151 in his career to rank with the best ever as he was number two, 106 points behind all time leader, Doug Grutchfield.

In addition to his fine rebounding, Chuck O'Rourke managed to end the year with a 14.9 average for the number two spot. There is a good chance that the Hadley junior will break the school record for rebounds next year, and with a little luck could also reach the 1000 point mark.

The fourth Redman finishing in double figure for the year was Tim Edwards at 10.8. In addition, Edwards was one of the top shooters from the percentage angle all year. He helped out well on the boards. Edwards still has two years left for varsity ball and should be great by his senior year.

Some of the other steady players for the Redmen finished with averages as follows: Jim Painten 8.4, Charlie Kingston 5.9, and Paul Gullicksen 4.5. These last two would have had higher marks except for the fact that they did not see much action until the second semester.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES: The cards are on the table for the playoff tonight at Kingston. . . . UConn and URI must rank about even, but the home court could be decisive for the Rams . . .

Chances appear kind of slim for any NE team to make the Ski Team Nipped By Amherst, N.E.C.

On Saturday the University Ski Team defeated 8 teams, Keene State College, Bowdoin, Northampton, Northeastern, Tufts, Brown, Boston University, AIC, and Boston College while losing to New England College and just being nipped by Amherst College by half a second, 387.0 to 387.5 seconds.

THE UNIVERSITY hopes of defeating Amherst rose when one of Amherst's best racers fell and Dick Woods, who had been bedridden the preceeding three days, had an excellent run for the University. This was followed by good runs by Pete Plastridge, Walt Swiatek and Tom Clark. At the end of the first run of the two run slalom the University led Amherst by 10.5 seconds, but the Amherst racers delivered flawless second runs that just erased the deficit. At the end of the race Dick Woods was in 6th place, Tom Clark tied for 11th, Pete Plastridge in 13th and Walt Swiatck in 29th. The race course

UMass Sextet Completes Injury Plagued Season

by MORRIS SHUBOW

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSCHUSETTS HOCKEY TEAM closed out the season this past weekend with a loss to Middlebury College 5-1 and a tie with the University of Vermont 4-4. Both games were played in the Green Mountain state.

Friday night the Redmen could not catch Middlebury. The Panthers scored first at the 40 second mark and got another at 7:10 to take a 2-0 lead. The Redmen's Dick Callahan scored his 3rd goal of the year at 16:40 of the first period but two Middlebury goals in the second period put the game out of reach. The Panthers added another goal in the third period to make the final score 5-1. UMass had a good third period but was unable to score again. Skip Bowen had a busy night in the net with 36 saves for the Redmen.

IN THE SEASON'S FINALE Saturday afternoon UMass dominated play but just managed to tie Vermont 4-4. Bobby Edmonston stole the puck from a Vermont wing and scored his 5th goal of the season at 5:29 of the first period. But the Catamounts came up with two goals, one with 9 seconds left in the period to take a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period.

In the second period high-scorer Ken Palm scored his 11th goal of the season, assisted by Dick Feldhoff to tie the game at 2-2. Then Tony Donovan put the Redmen ahead 3-2 with his first goal of the season assisted by Bobby Lee.

Vermont came back with two goals in the third period and held a 4-3 lead going in the last minute of play. But Pete Hurd saved the day for the Redmen when he scored his 7th goal of the season with an assist to Dick Feldhoff. The goal made the final score 4-4. UMass outshot the Catamounts 31-21 in the game.

THE REDMEN FINISHED THE SEASON with a 6-9-2 record. The team was plagued all year by injuries and scholastic difficulties. The injury to Capt. Charlie Glew was particularly harmful. With a good number of lettermen returning next year and a fine Freshmen team this year the Redmen's hockey fortunes are rising.

Pistol Team Prepares For Approaching Tournament

The Redmen Pistol Team carrying a six and four record heads for Kings Point and the National Rifle Association Intercollegiate Sectional Tournament on Saturday. The Sectional Tournament, the NCAA tournament of shooting, determines national standing. Last year the UMass squad placed 19th in the country.

With almost a month lay off since their last match the team has been undergoing intensive practice sessions to keep in shape for the coming match. All the team members have been concentrating on improving weak points and the squad appears to be in the best condition of the season.

The starting line up is still not determined but the starters will most likely be Capt. Jack Kelly (263 ave.), Dave Naylor (268 ave), Dan Sullivan (273 ave.), and either Eric Mussen (253 ave.), or George Wietecha (253 ave). It was recently announced that both Naylor and Sullivan are All-American nominees. Their performance on Saturday will be a determining factor in final selection.

THE REDMEN SHOULD BE STRONG CONTENDERS for tournament honors. Their four losses in the regular season were to Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Vilianova (last years number one, two, three and sixth place teams) while they posted wins over Brown, Kings Point, Coast Guard, and MIT.

BUXOM BEAUTIES

Campus Chest Battle On

Stomach in, chest out—way out. This is the cry of the Miss Campus Chest Contest which begins March 9th under the supervision of the Revelers. Every fraternity, sorority, and dorm has been asked to nominate their favorite buxom brute. Each of these winsome male beauties will then vie for the title of Miss Campus Chest of 1964.

Candidate pictures, taken last week, found the nominees wearing their most beguiling outfits. (Those divine, little sweaters they borrowed from their girls are simply adorable). All pictures will be on display in the lobby of the Student Union. Under each picture will be a milk bottle into which the monetary votes may be cast. Every penny counts as a single vote, a nickel counts as 5 votes, a dime at 10, etc. The charmer who receives the most votes will be crowned "Miss Campus Chest."

Full support is needed to make this year's Campus Chest a complete success. Be sure to vote for the "Best Chest". After all, if Cassius Clay is "The Greatest" at a mere 42-34-36, just think that an imaginative, good-humored hunk of UMass brawn can be!

Howard Resigns In Disgust; Senate Underwrites Odetta

by WILLIAM MAHONEY

A motion coming under special business stating that the Student Senate "underwrite the appearance of the folksinger Odetta at the University as an integral part of Civil Rights week of April 19-26 to the amount of 1,500 dollars" brought a completely unprepared body into heated debate.

The Senate then made itself a Finance Committee of the whole with Senator Ross Jones ('65 Brett) presiding. Questions were fired at the sponsors, Phil Johnston ('65 Plymouth) and Bill Donovan ('65 Commuter), as to why the appropriation was being brought up in such a manner and not through the regular Finance Committee. Johnston replied that the commitment had to be made by eleven o'clock that evening or Odetta would be unavailable.

The debate involved as many if not more Senators than any previous issue. "Veterans" as well as new Senators had no prior information. The committee then voted 20-16 to "rise and report favorably" on the motion.

The Senate had been under special business at this point for 40 minutes so President Jon Fife ('64 At Large) called for a recess in order that phone calls could be made and some of the questions concerning the contract answered.

For twenty minutes Senators milled about the floor discussing the motion and waiting for some authoritative answers. When the meeting was called back to order the question was called and a roll call vote taken—21 in favor and 17 against.

SENATOR GEORGE MICHAELS (Brett), Chairman of the Senate Services Committee, showed the newly-developed egg container that will prevent noxious odors in campus vending machines at Wednesday's Senate meeting.

Another unexpected action was the resignation of Senator Phil Howard ('64 Mills). Rising immeidately after Committee reports, Howard read his resignation from the Chairmanship of the Activities Committee. As he added that he was also giving up his Senate seat, the body became hushed. Stated Senator Howard "We have been mixed in the mire of bickering and quarrelsomeness. Is it because of desire for power or personal glory? I don't know . . . I am tired of all the infighting."

Rising to voice his admiration for Howard, George Michael ('65 Brett) called him "a vivid example of sincere dedication . . .at times unappreciated." Objection to the resignation was made, but Howard reiterated his wish that it be accepted and President Fife hesitatingly concurred.

The evening's actual agenda of 14 bills was handled in twenty five minutes, coming after one hour of Committee reports and before the hour-long debate began on Odetta.

Among the less controversial bills passed were S87, which incorporates the Dean of Students into the selection, procedure of "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities", and S89, which instructed the Academic Affairs Committee to prepare a report on the desirability of a change in the size and/or style of the present diplomas. Tabled for a week were five constitutions and a motion which would provide the Freshman Class with Senators at Large in the fall.

Last on the agenda was S100 by which the University will share with the other colleges in the Four College area in the under-writing of the play "The Blacks" to be presented in April.

Coming under committee reports was a request from Senator Dave Clancy ('64 Fraternities) that those Senators who had been so interested in compensation attend his Incentive Committee meeting since at the first meeting only one non-member was present.

Also overshadowed by Senator Howard's resignation and the Odetta discussion was an announcement from Services Committee that the refrigerated eggs in the vending machines at Brooks would no longer give off offending odors. The Chairman held up the new laminated and ventilated box which would be used to cure the problem and that settled that.

Scholarships

Scholarship applications should be completed and submitted to the Placement and Financial Aid Office by March 17th. If you have a 2.5 cumulative average or better or anticipate same at the end of the semester. More scholarships are expected to be granted next year than in any previous year.

The Federal Service Entrance Examinations will be given April 18 and May 16. These will be the last opportunities. Applications, available in the Placement Office, must be filed by March 19 and April 14 respectively.

Sophomore Banquet Huge Success

IT WAS ALL HAM at the spaghetti dinner Sophomore banquet. More than 700 people, many clad in Roman togas, attended another successful event of the Class of '66.

Administration Handling Of Pay Hike Questioned

The recently raised controversy concerning the administrative handling of the faculty pay increase has brought to the fore a number of hirtherto undiscussed problems.

It is difficult to assess the extent of the faculty discontent on this matter. However, we shall hazard a guess, an assumption, which we feel is a valid one.

It seems to us that the vast majority of discontent is centered in those departments and colleges which do not regularly consult their faculties on matters of recognized importance, such as the pay increase.

On the other hand, those departments, most notably in the College of Arts and Sciences, which have functioning personnel committees established for the purpose of tendering advice to the department heads are relatively free of discontent.

Enough pressure has already been applied that in one college (Physical Education) a special staff meeting has been called to discuss the situation. Other colleges (perhaps Agriculture and Education) will probably have to reevaluate their current administration-faculty relationships. And in general, we can look forward to both internal (faculty) and external (American Association of University Professors and/or AFL-CIO) pressures being applied which will force upon the administration the realization of the need for greater consultation with their faculties.

College teachers are a strange lot. But they are remarkably similar to the rest of humanity. A hurt pride bothers them a lot more than an empty wallet. One feels that many are unhappy not for the little they received, but for the little they had to say about it.

Fairy Tale

To the Editor:

Regarding Mr. Jon Fife's "Fairy Tale" in Wednesday's Collegian, I can only say that I feel sorry for Mr. Fife. I believe that those Senators who were at the meeting of February 26 know the real facts of the case and will expose this MYTH for what it is.

Commons Polled

To the Editor:

With the recent Senate poll being so successful and with the food at the Dining Commons being, in my opinion, so poor lately, I was wondering if it would be in the best interest of all students for the Senate to conduct another poll. This poll could give the students the chance to air their views on the food served at the Commons and could offer suggestions for food preferences and other related topics.

I am sure that a large number of students, given the chance, could suggest constructive means of improving conditions at the Commons.

A Growng Rift

To the Editor:

I am proud to be a student at this dynamically growing University. My pride swells when I read about the victories of our teams, about our Medical School and other planned projects, and when I see all the new buildings and facilities going up on this campus. But recently I have become worried and confused about a rift that seems to be forming between our faculty and administration. The problem appears to have developed over the recent merit pay raises. The "Ethical Practices Committee" and Dr. Hanson seem to imply in their letters that the administration has been using this merit pay raise as a kind of "payola" for their friends. The administration has not published a statement on this. Is this silence supposed to indicate the truth of these "payola" implications? Is the administration going to publish a statement on this? I don't want to see this rift continue to develop and mar the University's Image. I hope that the truth about this matter can be brought to light and that this rift can be sealed.

SENATORIUM

by MARK CHEREN

After the secretary mun bled through the minutes c last Wednesday's meetin and committee chairme mumbled through their r ports (many of which migh have been good judging fro the little that could b heard) the boys and girl of the Student Senate once again played the game o 'hide pride and spout rhetoric". The show was duller than usual. The tedium was broken by the unfortunate resignation of a good senator, Activities Committee Chairman Phil Howard. Phil said, in effect, that he was tired of playing the game.

Only two subjects during the meeting proper are worth mentioning. First, the Who's Who Investigation Committee turned the selection of the Who's Who Selection Committee from one student, the Student Senate President, over to one administrator, the Dean of Students, and the students he picks. These students will of course pick themselves, as usual, and the lucky additional few on whom they bestow their grace. It is nothing short of ridiculous that the selection committee for such an important honor should be composed of people who could potentially have to pick themselves. The selection committee should be staffed by members of the faculty and administration designated by positions that they hold which make them qualified to make such selections, for example the R.S.O. advisor, Mr. Buck.

Second, Senator Kiernan proposed a soundly based bill improving the structure of Senators-at-Large positions in the Senate. In the course of discussion, however, it was dropped as an aside that the positions should probably be phased out since they no longer represent a reachable constituency. Why wasn't legislation introduced to this effect if the positions are obsolete?

Well, when they had finished all the nonsense and trivia, Senators Donavan and Johnston moved, under special business, to underwrite a concert sponsored by Students For Civil Rights with Odetta and James Baldwin for the purpose of raising money for The Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committe, a nationwide civil rights organization in desperate need of financial aid. The concert itself is financially risky, but if the "ifs" come through, it, together with the rest of the events of the planned Civil Rights Week, could be a great success.

After some intelligent questioning by many senators, which drew out all relevant facts, Senators Maureen Flannagan, Don Boyd, and Tom McMullin asked their fellow senators to consider the cause and take a stand on something more important than the Student Senate or the loss of fifteen hundred dollars.

The motion passed by a slim majority. Those who voted against the motion can hardly be blamed, given the risk of the concert; but those who voted for it must be praised for looking beyond the borders of Amherst to a goal of lasting importance. It is a tribute to the students of this campus that they are providing leadership in an area where the faculty and administration have been so dismally backward. There is ground for hope.

Desdemona (Peggy Jones) relates her husband's jealousy to Emilia (Jane Abbiati).

REVIEW

Action Packed Acting

by DAVE AXELROD

Last night the University Theatre brought Shakespeare and Othello to campus.

Although in an academic community we feel closer to the Shakespearean theatre, there is always the risk of presenting a play in which both actors and audience are unable to suspend disbelief.

The University Theatre's production succeeded in engaging the audience, and the actors largly overcame an awe of the lines to communicate the meaning.

Othello, in our present time of racial strife, became more than a tragedy through the flaw of jealousy; in the placement of actors, a strong black vs. white theme was emphasized.

Donald Johnson (Othello), new to the stage, was nervous at first and didn't quite have the punch. Tom Kerrigan, as Desdimona's father, was, with his powerful voice and placement at center stage, far more dominant than lead Othello. Donald, however, grew more confident as the action quickened, and was at his best by the middle of the play.

Jim Wrynn, who looks quite Elizabethan anyway, with a well projected and well inflected voice, was throughout, a good Iago (good enough to make an adjective of praise a painful thing to place before his name).

Well executed blocking was responsible for the success of many scenes. Othello was quite effectively placed on a high step, to stand dramatically alone in the opening scene. The peak of the performance was achieved when Iago instilled a jealous rage in Othello who kneeled on that same high step to swear revenge.

Though it seemed, on several occasions, that the search for actors to fill the smaller roles was a bit unsuccessful, the revelers actually did revel and messages were generally well dedivered.

The sword fights had a zing the practice in these scenes b; Peter Steltzer, Ken Glenn, an Roland Laramee was well wort the effort. The parts of Cassic Montano / Third Senator, an Roderigo were well discharge Rodgerigo's fascial expressio made him quite the "wet puppy"

Lighting was well handled giv ing a variety of moods to a fixe set, but darkness blotted out good duel and much importan action in the third act.

Shakespeare wrote and aug mented his plays with music— thus, a kettle drum and horns were a successful and appropriate transition between scenes and acts. It was a delight to find that sweet Desdemona, compltently portrayed by Miss Peggy Jones, could sing well, too. The roles of Emilia and Bianca, Jane Abbiati and Susan Philips respectively (the only other women in the play) were nicely done; Emilia died nobly.

The overall presentation was a success and enjoyable. Donald Johnson should do better in the coming performances, having proved himself before an audience. The few bugs in lighting will most likely be corrected. The company, and Director, Cosmo A. Catalano, should be complimented on their interpretation of Othello.

SORORITY NEWS

Elections are Main Activity

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

A few days ago, a party was held at which the pledges presented their big sisters with the paddles they had been making for such a long time. A poem was read containing a short humorous statement about each sister. Mrs. Vera Shepard, our wonderful housemother, was also presented with a paddle from the entire pledge class.

March 1 is a meaningful day at Alpha Chi. It is Hera Day, and every year, sisters and pledges devote this day to an altruistic project. This year, small gifts were prepared for patients at the Belchertown State Hospital.

Delta Mu was very sorry when Mrs. Howard Davis, our Province President, had to end her visit. Mrs. Davis organized a workshop, and was a great help in advising us on many aspects of sorority life. She brought up many good ideas from which we all benefited.

Thanks go to the brothers of Sig Ep for the recent exchange dinner. Everyone had a great time, including many of the pledges who attended.

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

Iota Gam wants to thank all the sisters who represented us in the Sorority Sing. We are proud of their well done performance under the direction of Carol Rose.

We also wish to thank Phi Mu Delta, Theta Chi, and Alpha Sigma Phi for the exchanges we have had with them, in the past few weeks.

Everyone is looking forward to our pledge formal weekend. We are having a dinner dance at Wiggins Tavern Saturday evening. There is a tailgate picnic planned for Saturday afternoon and a buffet dinner Sunday for the girls and their dates. It promises to be an exciting weekend for all.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Since our "remodeling" job by the pledges, Lambda Phi has continued its social whirl. Pledging activity has continued with the induction of Jeanne Gosselin, Dotty Gorenflo, and Doris Pimental. Joan Bracker was elected Junior Panhellenic Treasurer and treasurer of Judson Fellowship. Frani Bassil was elected president of the Orthodox Club.

We would like to thank Mr. and Mrs. Langland for accepting our invitation to dinner. It was a most enjoyable evening.

Elections were held Monday night. The newly elected officers are: President, Rene Potish; First Vice-President, Janet White; Second Vice-President, Lynn Weaver; Recording Secretary, Mary Stewart; Corresponding Secretary, Jeanne Brown Senior Treasurer, Frani Savage; Junior Treasurer, Nancy Stanton; Senior Panhellenic Representative, Joan Shusta; Junior Panhellenic Representative, Joan Bracker; Social Chairman, Bonnie Blittersdorf; Activties Chairman, Judy Stevens, Chaplain, Loretta Jennings, Steward, Rita Cerrutti; House Manager, Carop Ann Bollenbach.

SIGMA KAPPA

On Monday Sigma Kappa had election of officers. The following girls were elected for the next year; President, Lynette Arcardi; First Vice-President, Mary Pat Carrol: Second Vice-President, Mary Sullivan; Recording Secretary, Ellen French; Corresponding Secretary, Nancy Baron; Rush Chairman, Gail Moran and Mary Marti; Social Chairman, Marion Fuller; Register, Sally Howe; Treasurer, Charlotte Geletka; House Manager, Claire Bohlin; and Activities, Katy Walsh.

Congratulations to Kappa Alpha Theta, Chi Omega, and Tri Sigma for their excellent job in the sing.

On Wednesday Sigma Kappa had Miss Antunes of the Placement Office as guest. After the meal she held a captivated audience with tales of her travels.

Thanks go to the brothers of Kappa Sigma for the exchange supper.

Mortar Board Nominations

Mortar Board nomination sheets are available at the Commuter's box outside the Lodge in the Student Union. We would like a list of nominations from each girl plus her own activities and average on these sheets. They should be handed in at Mortar Board's box in the R.S.O. office by Tuesday if possible.

Esquires Put Polish On Performance

In the beginning (fall '62), there were only two Esquires, Rick Lodico (drummer) and Steve Walker (singer), both freshmen from Wakefield, Mass. During their freshman year, they got together with two other buddies from Wakefield, Paul "Captain" Spidle (guitar) and Duncan Glover (sax), with the intention of forming a band. With the addition of Dave Vickery, an outstanding lead guitarist, and bass player Rick Turcott from Virginia, the band was complete.

However, the fall of '63 brought a few changes. Replacing Captain on rhythm guitar was Dick Williams, while Brew Harding replaced Rick as bassman. With this new personnel arrangement, the Esquires "broke back onto the scene" with numerous engagements at the Student Union and the fraternities.

The crew has come a long way since its first appearance, at Dwight House, to a ¾-ton van, fondly referred to as "The Truck," that hauls men and equipment to many other campuses.

A word about the present

On bass is Brew Harding, a junior from Topsfield, Mass. Because of his extensive knowledge of records ,artists and labels, he is the band's consultant authority on "r & r" and "r & b" music.

The rhythm guitar position is more than adequately filled by Dick "Hawk" Williams, a resident and part owner of the Rez in Northampton. Dick, a full-blooded Cherokee Lndian, is the band's "surf music" expert.

The positon of lead guitar is presently in an unsettled state, being filled at various times by Ron of the Venturas, Kenny Thrope of the Shepherd Kings and Bob Hughes, a UMass grad student.

Rick Lodico is the Esquires' multi-talented drummer. A dynamic stage personality, Rick not only plays drums, but also sings, dances, plays guitar and vibes and helps arrange much of the band's material.

Steve Walker, a sophomore physics majo, is the lead singer. Steve manages the band, handles its business affairs and does most of the schooling and arranging of material. He also writes the band's original material, some of which is hopefully headed for reelase on the record market.

Since the Esquires are all singers, they do a lot of group singing. As recent additions to their repertoire they have included some of the new "surf sounds," and a number of tunes from the famous Beatles.

At present the band's main objective is to record and release a hit record (and have it played on the Hatch juke box).

Haunted Houses

Are you searching for meaning in your life? Do you need to find a cause? Maybe this is just the cause you've been looking for. An Englishman has written a letter to London's Daily Mirror urging the formation of a National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Ghosts. Alan Davidge states in his letter that "Ghosts, like castles, are our heritage, and just as we protect old castles so ghosts should be protected."

While thumbing through a press release on motels and hotels, I spotted this little passage written by a colonial innkeeper:

"Four pence a night per bed. Sixpence with supper. No more than five to sleep in one bed. No boots to be worn in bed. Or-

Various Leaping Screamers

Amherst Student, Amherst College: In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of . . . motorcycles. Amherst College, however, has got itself a certain cycle problem. President Peter Rubinstein of the Amherst College Automobile Association, has commented that the prospect of acceptance by the faculty of its recent report on motorcycles and motor-scooters "looks dim". Students who now have motorcycles on campus, says the Student, "drive them in glaring contradiction to the College and ACAA regulation forbidding the use of cycles in the four-college area. Such actions have been a cause of alienating the faculty to consideration of bikes on campus."

B.U. News, Boston University: Faculty have taken over direct command of B.U.'s radio station WBUR recently in an effort, reports the News, "to give the station a more professional outlook as an educational station." On February 16th, two faculty members took active charge of all supervisory, engineering, and program positions. Some students would still be permitted to work at the station but, according to new Director of Broadcasting Edward Obrist, "their participation will be carefully observed and rehearsed." The professors stated that they felt that the students were not "professional" enough to

by SHERRY SPEAR

QUICK, get two radios and put them in your room. Stand in the apex of the triangle. Why? Lately new stacks of records have been arriving at WMUA and technicians have been putting in extra time. And, there's a good reason, WMUA is going to begin broadcasting this week in STEREO. That's right, f.m. and dorm lines will be receiving the new compatible stereo of WMUA.

SPEAR HEARS: Perhaps you've invaded the Hatch on a Friday night and you've noticed a stack of records with someone sitting behind them with a set of earphones. Then, you're very observant and have just seen the WMUA outpost of "Crazy Rhythms." Perhaps this is the night you've decided to try your wooden nickel on the jukebox and 'lo it functions not. That's because one night a week, WMUA is your free jukebox. You can pick the song you want to hear by finding the survey sheet (distributed around the Hatch) with the Top 30, Oldies but Goodies and a hint to the listeners in WMUAland on a special feature. At the bottom of this week's sheet, you'll find: WHY I'D LIKE TO BE A DISC JOCKEY FOR A NIGHT. After scrawling twenty-five or less words and submitting it to Jim O'Hearn, the dj, you are now an entrant in a contest with prizes from a record to . . . . maybe even a show. That's Friday night, 8 p.m., in the Hatch. Pick up your Survey and you'll be "Glad All Over" if you win.

Folk singers get out your guitars and strum along, the rest of you will just have to hum this Saturday night as it finds the weekly edition of "Standing Room Only" on the air. You certainly won't be disappointed with the folk music Pete Greenwood's got lined up for you but there's the bonus of "New Christy Minstrel Interview, Part II."

Next Thursday, and remember it's in stereo, Ron Engel's "Art of Jazz" will be airing "Focus" by Stan Getz. This is a jazzical-classical mixture with a background provided by the Beaux Arts strings as the string orchestra nucleus.

Knights, Damsels and station members, on bended knees the Exec. Board of WMUA implores the voting members to present themselves and vote. Vote when court convenes Wed., March 9th at 7:30 in the hall of the Round Table.

All interested students (coeds too) are invited to attend. Following the films and question period plans will be made for instructions and first jumps at the Sport Parachuting Center, Orange, Mass.

Outing Club Conquers Mount Washington's Peak

On January 23, during the mid-semester break, 15 members of the Outing Club and Dr. H. D. Stidham and Jerry Knapczyck, both of the Dept. of Chemistry, made the second annual winter mountaineering trip to Mount Washington, N.H.

EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD WEATHER on the mountain, which is notorious for its combination of low temperatures and high velocity winds, allowed 11 members of the party to reach the summit. The whole group snowshoed into the bowl of Tuckermans Ravine, approximately 4200 feet, while those who had the necessary climbing equipment went on to reach the summit in about 2½ hours by following a snow and ice gully on the formation known as the Lion's Head.

ON THE SECOND DAY, the party snowshoed into the bowl of Huntington's Ravine and spent several hours basking in the sun or climbing the huge talus fans below the gullies. Unusually warm weather precluded any serious climbing as a strong, warm sun caused quantities of ice to fall continuously from the headwall of the ravine.

tus), is an increasingly popular sport, and the UMass SCUBA Club is currently reorganizing itself in order to attract more students.

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF VICE-PRESIDENT JIM CARNIVALE, '66, a six week course in scuba diving is being required of all new members. Instruction is given on eight different sets of scuba gear that the club owns, so that members will know how to use any equipment that they buy. The course is finished by a "Panic Session" in which the members receive their final test and are certified as scuba divers.

After the new members are certified, they are taken out on progressively more adventurous dives with the club. The club has had dives in practically all local waters and travels to seacoast areas like Newport, R.I. and Grave's Island for ocean dives.

TRAINING SESSIONS are held in the Cage pool for the novices, and the more advanced members have events like relay races and underwater hockey games to sharpen their diving talents almost every week.

Northeastern News, Northeastern Univ.: Unattached females everywhere are leaping into Leap Year with both feet forward and a ring clutched in one grubby little hand, but at Northeastern they've added a new twist. Someone there has suggested that the whole process be institutionalized. Rules are:

1) At two-minute head start for the hunted males
2) Only one male to a customer
3) All men running "just a bit slower than their capabilities" to appear before a student committee for just punishment.

The course for the Leap Year race begins in the Northeastern quadrangle and continues out to the Fenway and beyond. UMass coeds seem to prefer a more informal, year-round contest. We don't know which one would be deadlier!

Fine Arts Council Sponsoring Concert

One of the highlights of the 1964 Fine Arts Festival, a concert of new music written by New England composers, will be held Wednesday, March 11, at 8:15 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

Elliott Schwartz of the music department will direct the program, sponsored by the campus fine arts council.

The public is cordially invited to the novel concert.

Pieces to be performed represent various styles of contemporary music, including 12-tone, serial, and controlled improvisation.

Composers from Brandeis University, Yale University, University of Rhode Island, University of Hartford, and New England Conservatory of Music will be represented.

Two pieces—one by George Burt of Smith College, performed by pianist George Walker of Smith, and one by John Crawford, formerly of Amherst College—will be of special interest, according to Schwartz.

A reception for the composers will follow the concert.

Mr. Kendall, who has taught at Yale, Stanford and Georgetown University, is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and holds a doctorate from the University of Illinois. He also studied at Northwestern University and at Oxford as a Rhodes scholar. He is currently teaching at the University of Dallas.

Professor Receives Foundation Grant

A University professor's project to use computers to evaluate the credit worth of business loan applications will be assisted by a $2000 Ford Foundation grant, it was announced today by Dean H. B. Kirshen of the School of Business Administration.

Dr. Frank A. Singer, professor of accounting, started the work last summer in a Ford Foundation Workshop at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

While in residelce at Carnegie Tech, Dr. Singer worked closely with credit analysts at the Mellon Bank.

With the assistance of Dr. Kalman P. Cohen of Carnegie Tech, he devised a detailed outline for a computer program to simulate the work of bank credit officers.

Dr. Singer's approach to the project gained the interest of members of the Graduate School of Industrial Administration at Carnegie Tech and officials of the Mellon Bank. Dun and Bradstreet and Robert Morris ssociates have also expressed their interest and cooperation.

According to Dr. Singer, the grant will facilitate computer programming of the detailed outline, the collection of data on loan applications, and empirical testing and modification which should result in automatic credit decisions.

Lithographic Display In Bartlett Hall

"26 Lithographs by Thom O'Connor," an exhibition of original prints, will go on display from March 9 to March 26 in Bartlett Hall.

The exhibit was organized by the University Art department. The Bartlett gallery will be open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, and until 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

Artist O'Connor, now in Los Angeles working under a Tamarind Printer Fellowship, works upon large slabs of Bavarian limestone. He prints his own work in a hand press.

Several of the lithographs in the collection are multi-colored and required a separate stone for each color printed.

Most of the prints to be exhibited were made last summer while O'Connor was studying wih the famed lithographer Antresian.

O'Connor teaches at the State University of New York in Albany. He has exhibited throughaut the country. His work has also been included in the collections of a number of museums, including the Detroit Institute, Tamarind Workshop and Schenectady Museum.

UConn Huskies Defeat Rams To Compete In NCAA Playoffs

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Connecticut will be the Yankee Conference representative in the NCAA playoffs at the Palestra in Philadelphia. The Huskies earned the trip through a 61-60 victory over the Rhode Island Rams in the special playoff held at Kingston.

THE HUSKIES were led by big Toby Kimball who tossed in 32 points and pulled down 19 rebounds. The big man was particularly effective off the offensive boards.

Rhode Island nearly pulled the game out after trailing by 10 points with about 5 mintues left on the clock. To make matters worse, the Rams had just lost Frank Nightingale via the foul route. It was Steve Chubin who was instrumental in the come back as he chipped in with 19 points.

The Rams played with star play maker Ron Rothstein at only half effectiveness, but he was important with his many steals and without him the Rams are not quite the same team.

THE RAMS WERE DOWN FIVE with 51 seconds on the clock. Two free throws by Mike Fitzgerald and a goal tending call on big Ed Slomcenski cut the gap to one. After Kimball missed a free throw, the Rams got the ball and set up Dennis MacGovern, but the smooth performer missed his corner set and the Huskies were tourney bound.

IN THE THREE MEETINGS of the two teams this year the scores were 43-41 UConn, 54-53 URI, and 61-60 UConn. Pretty even basketball.

Double Dribbles. UCONN WILL FACE TEMPLE next Mon. in the first round. . . . Ivy League champ Princeton will face Virginia Military Institution in another game, while the Friars of Providence will take on Villanova. . . . The Atlantic Coast Conference champ (probably Duke) will draw a first round bye . . .

There will be four teams that make it to the finals at Kansas City and they won't necessarily be the top four in the country . . . The East is wide open with 4th ranked Duke and 7th ranked Villanova rated best, but Providence could upset . . . VMI defeated Davidson 10th ranked to keep them from the title shot . . .

UCLA should get through the western regionals with their toughest opponent Oregon State . . . Texas A&M, Loyola of Chicago, Kentucky, Michigan or Ohio State, and Drake or Wichita will be among the contestants in the two mid-west area play downs . . . Out of a crop of contestants like these, it is pretty hard to pick any team . . .

TOP RANKED TEAMS in the country have failed in the last three years . . . Twice Ohio St. no. 1 was dropped in the finals by Cincinnati and then last year top ranked Cincinnati fell before Loyola . . . The big question is, will UCLA meet the same fate?

The time of the year is here when all-star teams come to the front . . . The AP All-American team consists of Gary Bradds, Ohio St., Bill Bradley, Princeton, Cotton Nash, Kentucky, Dave Stallworth, Wichita, and Walt Hazzard, UCLA . . . John Thompson was the only New England player mentioned in the balloting . . .

The New England small college all-star team was listed . . . UMass faced three of the players on the first team . . . Fran Ryan of Northeastern, Rich Tarrant of St. Michael's, and Ken Stone of Colby . . . Joining them on the first squad were Fred Berdice of Springfield and Duane Corriveau of Clark . . . Mass also faced three members of the second team, Jim Rich of UNH, John Gillette of Maine and Mike Branch of Fairfield . . . There will be even more all-star teams to come including the all-YanCon team and the All-New England team, as well as about 5 more all-American rundowns . . .

Olympic Prospects Compete In Eastern Championships

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA., MARCH 6—The East's top collegiate gymnasts — several of them potential Olympians—will display their talents here Friday and Saturday (March 6-7) when Penn State hosts the 37th annual Eastern gymnastics championships.

With the team champion already established by the results of dual meets—unbeaten Temple won it and Penn State placed second—the Eastern championships determine individual titlists only.

A highlight will be Friday's battle for the all-around title, won last year by Penn State's Tom Seward. The winner is determined by total score in free exercise, long horse vault, rings, high bar, parallel bars, and side horse—the six events which also determine qualifiers for Saturday's final in each event.

Temple's Mark Cohen is favored to win the all-around crown, with his closest competition coming from Penn State captain Mike Jacobson and Syracuse's Sid Ogelsby.

OTHER OUTSTANDING ALL-AROUND PERFORMERS are Ed Isabelle and Jim Culhane of Penn State; Steve Ross of Springfield; Bill Wright of Temple, Tad Ono of Army, and Carl Poplar of Syracuse.

"There are more good all-around men in the East than ever before," says Penn State coach Gene Wettstone, "and the competition will be exciting and close. The result will go a long way toward determining the top potential Olympic gymnast from the East."

In individual events, three performers will be on hand to defend their championships—Ogelsby of Syracuse on long horse vault; Cohen of Temple on parallel bars, and Tim Phillips of Temple on the high bar. The 1963 champion on side horse and rings, Ray Grimaldi of Syracuse, has been graduated, as have been Seward of Penn State and Corky Voss of Syracuse, who tied for first in free exercise.

Though not a member of the Eastern league, Yale University will enter two men, including Russ Mills, considered by most observers as probably the best side horse man in the nation, if not in the world. The other Yale entry is rings specialist Andrew Graham.

The Eastern league includes Penn State, Army, Navy, Syracuse, Pitt, Temple, Springfield, and MASSACHUSETTS and each is expected to enter a full team.

An added feature will be the first invitational championship meet for Pennsylvania high school boys and girls to be held Saturday afternoon. More than 500 entries have come in for this event.

Scuba Club Initiates Underwater Expedition

by RICHARD RYAN

Have you ever searched for solid gold spikes in the hull of a sunken frigate?

One of the most memorable dives that the UMass SCUBA Club has undertaken was the search for the U.S.S. New Hampshire, sister ship of the Constitution.

THE SUNKEN REMAINS OF THE OLD SAILING SHIP are buried in the Atlantic Ocean somewhere off Grave's Island. Although the ship has been found before, shifting currents periodically bury and uncover the hulk, so that large amounts of valuable relics can still be found on the wreck and on the reefs surrounding it. Most of the ship's fittings were made by Paul Revere, who is more famed as a patriot and silversmith than as a shipwright.

In addition to Revere's handiwork, three gold spikes are supposed to be in the hull, but as yet no one has found them.

Placement Director Discusses Compensation With Senate

by TERRY STOCK

The Senate ad hoc Committee on Compensation recently heard Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Aid Services discuss his views on compensation for extra-curricular activities.

Morrissey told members at the meeting about a sub-committee on Financial Aid in Scholarships newly formed at the University. "The purpose of this sub-committee," he explained, "will be to set up and consider grants in aids for students involved in extra-curricular activities.

"THE GRANTS will be awarded partially on the basis of need with no connection to academic achievement," said Morrissey.

The sub-committee will be similar to the Committee on Barber Awards, whose function it is to grant financial aid and scholarships to athletes.

"THESE GRANTS would probably be given more to juniors and seniors who had already proven themselves in some area. It would be 'pay for having done' rather than 'pay for doing,' " he said.

Morrissey explained that students would apply for these awards. Those with averages of .4 above the graduating average required for their class would be eligible. Students with cumulative averages of 2.5 and higher would be considered for regular scholarships as well.

"THE BIG PROBLEM," concluded Morrissey, "is that the machinery is set up, but there is no money at all in a fund for this purpose."

At a question and answer period that followed, Morrissey stated that although approximately 75% of the committee favored compensation for extra-curriculars, they felt, in general, that this money should not come out of student taxes.

"NOT ALL students are interested in extra-curriculars," said Morrissey. "It makes more sense to have the money that a group makes go back to students in that group."

Some of the money the theater organizations make on plays, part of the concert money earned by the band, and a portion of the Collegian advertising money might be used for this purpose, he explained.

"THIS COMMITTEE has not investigated non-monetary compensation," Morrissey stated.

The ad hoc committee is currently conducting investigations into non-monetary compensation, and the possibility of course credit is one alternative under consideration. Opinions and suggestions from students and faculty members are welcomed—the meetings, open to the public, are at 11:15 a.m. on Thursdays and 7 p.m. Mondays in the Student Union.

A three day Poetry Workshop will be held at UMass starting today, March 9. The Distinguished Visitors Program is sponsoring the visit of the three poets who will conduct the Poetry Workshop as part of the UMass Arts Festival.

The three poets, Stephen Spender, Robert Bly, and Robert Fitzgerald, will visit classrooms during the day, holding small group discussions with students. In the evening, the poets will deliver addresses and readings to the campus at large. The times of the addresses will be posted on bulletin boards on campus.

All three of the poets have had wide experience in teaching, writing, editing, and translating.

Robert Bly was educated at Harvard and the State University of Iowa. He has translated Scandanavian poetry, and he founded a magazine "The Sixties," for publication of European and South American poetry in translation. He has been published extensively in such magazines as "Hudson Review, Nation, Paris Review", and "Poetry". His first book of poems, "Silence in the Snowy Fields," Robert Fitzgerald is best known as a leading English translator of Greek tragedy and epic; he has done translations of Sophocles and Euripides. His translation of "The Odyssey" won the 1960 Bailiingen prize. Currentiy, he is the Florence Purington visiting lecturer in English and Classics at Mount Holyoke College. For the past several years he has resided in Italy, where he has devoted himself to was published in October of 1962. writing. His three volumes of poetry include: "Poems" (1935), "A Wreath for the Sea" (1944), and "In the Rose of Time—Collected Poems of 1956."

ROBERT FITZGERALD

Stephen Spender, besides his poetry, has written an autobiography, "World Within World," several books of criticism, and is also co-editor of the famous review "Encounter." He has taught at Sarah Lawrence College, University of Cincinnati, University of California, and Northwestern University. He is a native of Britain and in 1962 was made Commander of the British Empire. While a student at Oxford, he became friends with W. H. Auden and Cecil Day Lewis. All three of them took up a strongly anti-Fascist attitude during the 1930's, and Spender went to Spain on the side of the Spanish Republic during the Cvil War.

Organizations Active In Campus Chest

Campus Chest is underway! An interview with President Lederle found him most enthusiastic about the drive for Campus Chest this year. President Lederle had the following to say:

"This year's Campus Chest campaign, devoted as it is to providing support for especially meritorious activities, gives all members of our University community an excellent chance to exercise their consciences and reflect their concern for the welfare of man everywhere. I urge everyone on our campus to make a contribution to this 'cause of conscience and concern.' I hope that this kind of full participation will bring the campaign to the most successful conclusion it has ever had."

The scope of the drive is such that it encompasses all the organizations on campus, and has the support of everyone from the President's contribution to that of each individual student.

The Campus Chest Committee has apportioned the money to be collected in the following manner: 1) $600.00 scholarship to send a University student on a volunteer work project to the University of Huamanga in Peru. 2) Above this amount 40% will go to the aid of educating Negro students in South Africa. 3) 60% will go to campus scholarships. 4) and any money in excess of $4,000 and up to $5,000 will be donated to the newly established Albert P. Madeira fund.

The students on the Campus Chest Committee have become very enthusiastic and have come up with several new ideas to bring about a more successful Campus Chest.

Every organization is pitching in to make the drive a success, each handling a different area of the drive.

Maroon Keys will solicit from the merchants of Amherst—while the Scrolls will handle the poster publicity.

Alpha Phi Omega will administer a work day in town for which students are volunteering their time. Gamma Sigma Sigma has undertaken to solicit funds from all the faculty members.

Mortar Board will solicit from all RSO organizations who have pledged money from their respective treasuries. Adelphia is making an effort to get a movie in town from which a portion of the proceeds will be contributed.

The Revelers are handling the Miss Campus Chest Contest to be held in the lobby of the Student Union.

The Women's Interdorm Council and representatives from the men's dorms will be soliciting $1.00 from each student.

The sororities, through PanHel, have already pledged $1.00 per person, and a similar donation is expected from each fraternity.

The Student Senate Public Relations Committee has undertaken the Collegian publicity.

At a quick glance it can be seen how extensive a drive Campus Chest is and how important it is for everyone to support it. How about your contribution?

The Stockbridge Senate has enthusiastically undertaken the task of soliciting from Stockbridge students in various manners.

Underwriting Of Odetta Sets Senate Precedent

The underwriting of the Odetta concert by the Student Senate was a significant step for that body.

As has been previously mentioned, the underwriting constituted a tacit acknowledgement on the part of the Senate that there exists a world beyond the campus pond.

The revenues of the concert will be donated to a national civil rights group, and the Senate, by underwriting it with student funds, has, in an indirect manner, voiced its support for the civil rights movement.

A precedent has been set. Now in many ways the Senate is obligated to open the floor to debate on either direct or indirect endorsement of goals and tasks of extra-campus organizations.

The introduction of such topics of debate would serve many functions, not the least of which would be giving this almost totally politically and socially unaware campus something to think about.

If the Senate claims to represent the students of this University, then let is become the voice of these students.

Let it comment on national and world affairs. Let it express the feelings of the students, be they eight or twenty thousand, on more important topics then it now engages itself with.

This is not to say that the Senate should completely abandon the duties and functions it now serves. The welfare of the students of this campus must always be kept paramount in the Senate.

However, if other topics are introduced perhaps the Senate will not have as much time to waste on petty grievances, and the general level of activity will be raised to the point where the term "Senate" is no longer a misnomer.

Gov. Sanford's 'Busybody'- No Such Animal Exists

"Yankee Go Home!" resounds throughout the land. Is the scene Cypress? No, it's America, the land of the free. This command is reverberating throughout our country—the location of it's origination, the South. Governor Sanford conveyed this admonition to us personally when he expressed his sentiments concerning "busybody" Reverend David King. The question, that we must ask ourselves to determine whether or not Mr. King is merely a meddler, is, "Is the problem a regional one or a national one?" In view of the fact that the U.S. Congress is attempting at this very moment to pass civil rights legislation (the most important legislation with which it has been confronted in the past one hundred years) it is quite evident that the problem has been recognized as a national one. Our own common sense dictates the acceptance of this conclusion.

With the acceptance of the issue as a national one, we in the North cannot and do not fail to recognize the fact that we also have a problem. (One need only look at Boston) We do not believe that we are Northern saints ("good guys") who are righteously seeking to reform the Southern sinners ("bad guys"). Our problem is not as deeply rooted as that in the South, yet it will be just as difficult to solve, if not more so, for it manifests itself in a more subtle manner.

As a solution to the problem, Governor Sanford has advocated a need for "understanding from the heart." I agree with his sentiments, but we cannot fail to recognize that his desired solution is an ultimate. In order to achieve this ultimate, the first step in the right direction is definitely legislation. Sociologists have proven that a change in the institutional structures of a society results in a change of behavior and eventually in a change of attitude. Granted that the governor would have been faced with violent opposition from the "Segs", if he had attempted to introduce civil rights legislation, this expected opposition is not a sufficient reason to minimize the effect of law as opposed to a much slower natural change of attitude. After all, isn't a hundred years long enough for a people to have a change of heart?

The racial problem is now being attacked on all fronts in all parts of the nation in an attempt to smash the vicious circle which our ancestors have created and which we unfortunately have perpetuated. When American blood is being shed in our own United States, it is the duty of every American, whether from the North or the South, to try to right the wrongs which have created such a vile situation. This country needs more men like Mr. King, men who have the courage of their convictions, and attempt to solve this national problem by working in specific situations under the direction of the present leadership with complete understanding of the circumstances surrounding the situation. With the utilization of both legislation and constructive action some semblance of progress may be achieved.

The Pajama Party

To the Editor:

In regard to the pajama party held at one of the fraternities on campus a week ago, we would like to express our shock and disgust. Never have we witnessed such a display of vulgarity and indecency as put on by the brothers.

While we realize that boys may be somewhat crude and barbaric by themselves, do you think that it is asking too much for them to wear clothes in the presence of mixed company? We do not consider jockey straps [sic] sufficient clothing!

We are also sure that everyone was sufficiently aware of the fact that the theme of the party was that of a pajama party; however, was it necessary to repeatedly remind us of this fact by the presence of mattresses strewn on the dance floor?

This immoral exhibition has left us nauseated. While this story seems farfetched, we assure the staff of the Collegian that "seeing is believing—and we saw it!

A Group of
Disgusted Girls

Ed. Note: It has come to our attention that the majority of fraternities do not engage in pajama parties, and consequently this letter should not be seen as a general indictment. Furthermore it is our considered opinion that girls who go to pajama parties deserve what they get.

The Tearers

To the Editor:

This is a request, a plea to those unthoughtful students who tear out articles from the bound periodicals. Please have some consideration for others who might need the articles as much, if not more than you.

For the second year in a row I am confronted with torn out pages. To make it worse some of these articles have been specifically assigned by professors. Certainly you must have found them important also.

Have you not heard of the Xerox copier?! For almost nothing you can now get a hard-to-tear copy of articles which are possibly very much in demand. The copier is for your benefit as well as mine. Why not use it?

I would appeal to your conscience, but I fear I would embarrass you by finding no guilt or shame.

As in the past I am sure there will be selfish students. I only ask that you think of how many articles would be left if everyone took from the "stacks" what he needed.

Sanford's Empty Speech

To the Editor:

In response to Governor Sanford's speech on "The Role of the Southern Governor on Civil Rights," and to Mr. Geller's letter, we feel that certain essential issues must be exposed, and that the Mr. Gellers must be educated to the moral obligation to protest injustices.

Governor Sanford spoke of policy and programs, but never of implementation; he spoke of the administrative opportunity for grievance, but never of the success of local plaintiffs. He spoke of expediency vis-a-vis the conservative state legislature, but he never spoke of an effort to come to grips with the forces of racial violence active in the state; he spoke of acting for education, but not against the Klan, not of trying to alter the moral standards of the people he simply calls "stubborn."

Are we then to applaud inept and misdirected efforts, to allow a governor to perpetuate platitudes of liberality on a record of chicanery, or are we to demand that he take a positive stand on the issues and act accordingly? Merely "trying" with words is not enough. We cannot in good conscience simply praise the efforts of the ineffective when, from a position of power, they do not dare confront—in action and in words—the issues and values at the root of the problem. We must demand of a supposedly enlightened public official some degree of intellectual honesty; at least the Faubuses and Wallaces are not hypocritical. It is nice of Mr. Geller to state that the Governor "appears to be sincerely trying to solve the racial problem in North Carolina." This is exactly what the Governor would have us believe.

Mr. Geller must also come to realize that the civil rights issues, whether in Williamstown or Monroe, are not simply regional issues, but the concern and obligation of every person who would call himself an American. He might also notice that it is generally those who are most vocal against southern segregation who are most active in the attempts to eliminate northern discrimination.

We have been called the "good guys"—it is for each person to evaluate the epithet and the criteria involved. If we are to be renamed "the hecklers," however, it must be with Mr. Geller's recognition that he is irritated by the voicing of assertions of human dignity and moral value as antagonistic to his acceptance of the now pejorative 'deliberate speed.' YES, we do ask Governor Sanford to reexamine his policies, as we ask all of us to critically reexamine our values and position towards the man we have been "privileged" to have with us—and we shall shout it from the rooftops if necessary. If our questions were phrased as accusations, they nevertheless demand recognition and response; if they were "antagonistic," they were so only to the Governor and not to responsible efforts for progress.

We might further add that the day is coming when those who wish to avail themselves of their constitutional rights can no longer be negated as "Communists," and when the world will come to realize the inherent fallacy and criminality of the Governor's "racial differences mean racial strife." "Nothing is 'black, and nothing is 'white'; most often an issue is 'grey,'" Mr. Geller tells us, and it is the Mr. Geller's who, satisfied with empty declamations, will keep it that way.

If we "came to the lecture prejudged" as Mr. Geller asserts, then I am afraid it was by Mr. Geller.

The Senate
Toleration, Power, And Prestige

To the Editor:

As to Mr. Fife's comments in Wednesday's Collegian; could it be that Senate President Fife seeks the title of "The Iron Duke of UMass?" His lack of toleration for opposition in any form is remarkably similar to that often attributed to "Big John" Thompson, speaker of the Mass. House of Representatives.

Charles A. Sweeney '67

Ed. note: Mr. Sweeney is a former Senator.

To the Editor:

Due to the actions of a few immature persons bickering and politicking over an issue which now is lost in its insignificance, the image of the Senate has been torn to shreds. Thus, the body itself suffers from the actions of a few persons so desirous of power and prestige that they cannot bear criticism nor fail to have the last word.

The campus has been shown a completely unfavorable picture of its Student Senate. The source of information has been the Collegian where a series of articles, written mostly by Senators, has exposed only the faults, with little or no mention of the beneficial motions discussed, perhaps because they weren't "newsworthy." Surely one cannot expect unbiased reporting from these members of the Collegian staff who actually participated in the debate during these Senate meetings! Rather, a separate reporter should at all times be assigned to cover the meetings to assure accurate, unbiased reporting.

Yet, I strongly feel that the Senate cannot be as bad as its image now seems. Obviously, the only way to learn the facts in an unbiased manner is to attend the meetings yourself. They are open to the public and we invite interested parties to observe. At least, in this way, you shall learn the full truth about the meetings and that the entire Senate is not at fault, but rather only a few of us are to blame.

College Bowl Team Says Thanks To Campus

To the Editor:

On behalf of the "College Bowl" team I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people who made major contributions to the team's success. Many people were involved in this program and should share in the credit that redounds to the team and the University.

Work on the "College Bowl" began several years ago when Bill Deminoff of the Communications Office contacted the "College Bowl" people and requested that the University be given an opportunity to make an appearance.

Our office was contacted late last spring and informed that we would appear in the fall. Our first problem was to select a coach who would be willing to dedicate his own time to the project and who had the complete respect of the students. There was only one man considered, and despite his many duties, Albert Madeira willingly accepted the job.

In a series of meetings held this past fall, the format for selecting the team was outlined. At the same time, the electrical engineering department, under Dr. Dale Scheckels, constructed the excellent buzzer system that was used throughout the practice sessions.

During the selection process, a number of people gave their time in asking questions and evaluating the performance of the student applicants. Among these were: Robert J. Doolan, associate dean of admissions; Bill Deminoff; Mrs. Albert P. Madeira; Wes Honey, alumni office; and Ray Castelpoggi, office of institutional studies.

After the team had been selected it became apparent that help was needed from faculty members in supplying questions within specific fields of study. Between October and February the following professors volunteered their time in preparing questions or in quizzing the team members: Carl Belz, art department; Mario Depillis, history department; Harold J. Gordon, Jr., history department; Leonard Ehrlich, philosophy department; David J. Russo, history department; Edward C. Moore, dean, graduate school; David T. Porter, English department; Elliott S. Schwartz, music department; H. Leland Varley, English department; Albert E. Goss, psychology department; Richard Powers, history department; Jack Thompson, history department; Winfred Bernhardt, history department; Thomas Dilkes, history department; Franklin B. Wickwire, history department; Howard Quint, history department; John Roberts, zoology department; and Philip Gamble, economics department.

Other people made major contributions to the team. Joseph Deschines of the maintenance department drove the team to Springfield each Saturday and picked them up late Sunday night.

Mrs. George Rodgers of the guidance department shared her office space with the "College Bowl" team during those months that they practiced. Mary Alden of the Student Union took over the entire project of arranging for student buses to go to New York to support the team each week.She and Mrs. Watts made the arrangements for the reception for the team when they arrived back on campus after their final victory. William Burkhardt, Jr., assistant dean of men, also traveled with the students to New York on several week ends. University photographer, Everett Kosarick, went out of his way to give photo and movie coverage to the team. Clerical arrangements for all "College Bowl" appearances were capably handled by Pearl Klimczyk, Sylvia Manica, and Carol Moore of the News Office.

Administration support, through the cooperation of President Lederle and Dean Field, was given in a number of different ways from October through February.

As everyone knows the Alumni Office and the Student Senate gave major support to the team.

I am sure there were many others who were giving assistance to Albert Madeira that I never knew about. If anyone has been left out, I am deeply sorry.

On behalf of the team and the University I would like to thank all those who gave their time and effort to the team. This was an all University project and will be of great benefit to all at the University.

Thank you,
Daniel M. Melley

THE SLOW RUSH

Illustrated below is the membership pin of a brand-new national fraternity called Signa Phi Nothing. To join Signa Phi Nothing and get this hideous membership pin absolutely free, simply take a pair of scissors, cut out the illustration, and paste it on your chest.

Let me hasten to state that I do not recommend your joining Signa Phi Nothing. The only thing I recommend in this column is Marlboro Cigarettes, as any honest man would who likes good tobacco and a good filter, whose heart is quickened by a choice of soft pack or Flip-Top Box, and who gets paid every week for writing this column.

I am frankly hard put to think of any reason why you should join Signa Phi Nothing. Some people, of course, are joiners by nature; if you are one such, I am bound to tell you there are any number of better organizations for you to join—the Cosa Nostra, for example, or the Society for the Placing of Water Troughs in Front of Equestrian Statues.

cut it out and Paste it on your chest

But if you insist on joining Signa Phi Nothing, let me give you several warnings. First off, it is the only fraternity which admits girls. Second, there is no pledge period; each new member immediately goes active. Perhaps "inactive" is a more accurate word: there are no meetings, no drives, no campaigns, no sports, no games, no dues, no grip, and no house.

The only thing Signa Phi Nothing has in common with other fraternities is a fraternity hymn. In fact, two hymns were submitted to a recent meeting of the national board of directors (none of whom attended). The first hymn goes:

Signa Phi Nothing,
Shining star,
How we wonder
If you are.

The second hymn, rather more poetic in content, is to be sung to the tune of Also Sprach Zarathustra:

A Guernsey's a cow,
A road is a lane,
When you're eating chow,
Remember the mein.

Pending the next meeting of the national board of directors (which will never be held) members are authorized to sing either hymn. Or, for that matter, Frenesi.

Perhaps you are wondering why there should be such a fraternity as Signa Phi Nothing. I can give you an answer—an answer with which you cannot possibly disagree: Signa Phi Nothing fills a well-needed gap.

Are you suffering from mental health? Is logic distorting your thinking? Is ambition encroaching on your native sloth? Is your long-cherished misinformation retreating before a sea of facts? In short, has education caught up with you?

If so, congratulations. But spring is upon us and the sap is rising, and the mind looks back with poignant longing to the days when it was a puddle of unreason.

If—just for a moment—you want to recapture those careless vaporings, that warm, squishy confusion, then join Signa Phi Nothing and renew your acquaintance with fecklessness. We promise nothing, and, by George, we deliver it!

Joffrey Ballet To Perform

The Robert Joffrey Ballet company, a critical success in North America, Europe and Asia, will appear at the University on Thursday, March 12.

The 32-member company will present its program at 8 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage. Sponsoring the performances as a part of the current Fine Arts Festival, is the Concert Association.

The Joffrey group will present both classical and contemporary works from its extensive repertoire.

DURING ITS RELATIVELY YOUNG life, the company has prospered popularly and critically under the artistic direction and choreography of 32-year old Robert Joffrey.

The company has had seven sold-out transcontinental tours. Last season the group went through Europe, the Near East, and Asia on a State Department-sponsored cultural tour.

The Daily Star of Beirut, Lebanon said, "No audience ever thrilled to a ballet troupe as at the opening of the Robert Joffrey Ballet."

In this country, too, Joffrey's dancers have been cheered by the critics. The Los Angeles Times said the group represented "American ballet at its best," Walter Terry of the New York Herald Tribune called the contingent "splendid, handsome company expertly trained."

500 Leaders

Yale To Host Conference, Symposium On Socialism

The weekend of March 13-15 will mark a significant upsurge in radical student opinion on the American campus. Converging on the Yale University campus will be over 500 leaders of liberal, civil rights, and socialist groups from campuses in 12 states all over the Northeast. Students and other young people as yet uncommitted to a radical response to issues generated by the contemporary domestic and world crisis are coming as well, indicating a strong groundswell in concern and unrest among American youth.

AMONG THE MAJOR SPEAKERS who will address the symposium audience are: John Lewis, National Chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, who will speak on "The Negro Struggle in America"; Michael Harrington, author of The Other America, whose address is entitled "Waste and Poverty in America"; Paul Sweezy, editor of the Monthly Review, who will analyze "American Foreign Policy"; and Fritz Pappenheim, author of The Alienation of Modern Man, who will discuss "Alienation in America". After each of these major addresses, numerous discussion seminars will fragment the audience, to encourage the expression of individual responses to the issues and points of view presented by the major speaker. These seminars will be led by SNCC field workers, faculty and students of Yale University, and other volunteers.

Two other sections of the weekend symposium program are creating much interest: On Saturday afternoon leaders of socialist and radical organizations will participate in a panel discussion on "American Socialist Politics, 1964". The panel will represent major tendencies in American socialist approaches to radical political organization in the coming election and in the near future. Already committed for the panel are Clifton DeBerry, Presidential Candidate of the Socialist Workers Party; Nathan Karp, National Campaign Director for the Socialist Labor Party; Fred Jerome, editor of Progressive Labor. Also represented will be: Communist Party, Socialist Party, Young People's Socialist League, Young Socialist Alliance. Registration $2.00 at Yale Law School Aud./Hotel rooms $3.50. New Senators To Be Aided, Committee Role Changed

In order to reach and inform the vastly growing numbers of UMASS students, the Public Relations Committee of the Student Senate has assumed a different and expanding role. Following the election of new Senators, the Committee is responsible for an orientation program whereby the rudiments of parliamentary procedure, and the structure and function of the entire Student Government Association are related to these individuals.

SO ALL SENATORS MAY more effectively reach their constituents and resolve any inadequacies or conflicts regarding men's or women's rules, academic affairs, extracurricular activities, disciplinary matters and general student welfare, the Committee is preparing a series of charts which delineate all those Senate and Student Government officers and committees which deal with these matters.

In addition, the Committee is coordinating the appearance of committee chairmen on the WMUA program Interaction with members of the University Administration to discuss mutual problems.

By aiding the Campus Chest drive in handling publicity, writing feature articles on all standing committee activities and adequately covering the special ad hoc committees on compensation and honorary societies, the Public Relations Committee, under the Chairmanship of Senator Donald Boyd, has hopes for projecting its role into the entire student body as it has seldom done before.

Morality . . .

cites many examples of how the recruiting violations come about. Theer are far too many to list in detail but a few will provide a background.

The whole problem of recruiting comes about simply because once a school decides to go big-time there is no retreating. They have a commitment to do their best to field a top team. One example is that of Harvard, a school dear to us all. The writer quoted a high school principal in the midwest as having written two recommendations, one for an All-state guard and the other for a class valedictorian. The guard got in.

Another example concerns a basketball player at Seton Hall. He was a poor student in high school. He was accepted at Northwestern, took four courses (2 in P.E.) and failed two of these; withdrew from the third and did not have sufficient attendance to gain a mark in the fourth. Obviously he dropped out, but was immediately accepter at Seton Hall. Soon he played in Madison Square Garden, came in contact with gamblers and ultimately the fixing scandals.

Then there was the man who made a living of delivering recruits to the campus. He earned from 500 to 1000 dollars according to the number of athletics presented to a campus. He tells of the coach who gave one young fellow $700 for a weekend.

And the last example is that of the big time gambler who on his own scouted high school teams and found some of the better players who were in need. He offered to put them through school. He never asked them to fix gomes. All he did was keep in contact with the player and just through normal gossip learned of any troubles that individuals on the player's team might have. In this way he could make a better estimation of a point spread. His benefits far outdistanced the cost of putting the player through school. In addition he had the satisfaction of seeing some of the players reach all-American status and go on to become successful coaches.

N.A.A.C.P. Leader "Freedom March" Organizer Speaker

A lecture on the recent militancy in the Civil Rights Movement and its different branches will be given by Dr. John A. Morsell on Wednesday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the School of Education Auditorium.

DR. MORSELL, Assistant to the Executive Secretary, N.A.A.C.P., received his Ph.D. in Sociology from Columbia University. He has written "A Study of Negro Voting in New York City," and has participated actively in the studies of desegregation in the armed forces during the Korean War.

His most recent article, which was printed in the Harvard Educational Review, deals with the fact that educational opportunities for the Negro are less than those for the white. Dr. Morsell's name was mentioned as one of the key organizers of the march on Washington.

The lecture is sponsored by the Graduate Sociology Club. All interested students and faculty are invited. There is no admission charge.

Pluta and Ron Merrill both sunk 10 while Paul Garber rebounded—that was TKE's recipe for victory.

For QTV John Gavore scored 11 and John Hall had six in an extremely exciting game. With just 15 seconds left to play QTV had narrowed the gap from 6 to 1 point but missed the shot. TKE came back to add one more hoop to put the game on ice. The final score, TKE 31, QTV 28.

Mermen Play Host In Annual New England Swim Competition

by BUD PRATT

This year the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association (N.E.I.S.A.) is holding its annual championship competition here at the University. The arrival of the new diving board has made it possible to hold the event in the new Frank I. Boyden PE Building instead of the Women's PE Building, where it was originally scheduled.

THE UMASS VARSITY will be out to cop a high team standing as well as individual awards against fifteen other New England Colleges including Williams, Trinity, Holy Cross, Coast Guard Academy, Springfield, Vermont, UConn, Brown, Wesleyan, Amherst, M.I.T., Bowdoin, Tufts, W.P.I., and Southern Connecticut.

UM FINISHED SEVENTH in NE last year after a 5-4 season; This year's squad amassed an outstanding 6-3 record, and is entering a number of threatening performers. The same UM swimmers who emerged with fifths and sixths last year will be gunning for firsts this year.

The preliminary heats will begin this Thursday (March 12) in the evening, with no admission charge. The competition will continue Friday at 2:00 P.M. (adm. $1.00) and 7:30 P.M. ($1.00). The finals will take place on Saturday afternoon beginning at 2:00 P.M. (adm. $2.00). The 1963-64 season has been the best ever for the N.E.I.S.A., with records being shattered in nearly every event by a wide assortment of teams. The outcome of this year's championships is more unpredictable than ever.

is significant because these organisms have only recently been recognized as a source of tuberculosis and other diseases.

MEMBER OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION present at a recent meeting of the Hampshire County Public Health Association, Inc. discussed the waxy covering on the tubercle bacillus, one of the atypical organisms with which Walker is experimenting. They recognized, announced William E. Dwyer, president of the association, that Walker's project might possibly lead to the discovery of a method of penetrating this tough, waxy coat without injury to the tuberculous patient. It is not now possible to kill these disease organisms without simultaneously destroying the healthly human cells which surround them. The association awarded Dr. Walker $176.50 for equipment to supplement university apparatus.

An alumnus of the institute of agricultural and industrial microbiology, Walker was recently made a research instructor in the institute.

Lambda Chi Campus Champs; Defeat Phys. Ed. Majors, 43-31

by ALAN LEBOWITZ

Jack Schroeder, Phil DeRose, Terry Swanson and Roger Deminico are familiar names to any patriotic UMass football fan. But Thursday night at the Boyden building they took off cleats and donned sneakers unsuccessfully as their Independent League Champs lost the campus title to Lambda Chi Alpha, 43-31.

THE BIG FACTOR in Lambda Chi's victory was the fact that they controlled the boards as their 6'6" center Charlie Fohlin played hard and brought down many big rebounds. Althougth he fouled out, with one minute 35 seconds left to play, his seven points and at least 15 rebounds spelled victory for Lambda Chi. The high scorer for the Champs was Al Garsys with 14. Close behind was Dick Feriante who netted 12 and Don Rana with 8. Lambda Chi moved the ball well and reaped the benefits of practice and teamwork.

ON THE LOSING SIDE OF THE LEDGER, the Phys. Ed. Majors, handicapped by a lack of height, proved to be a formidable opponent for the powerful Lambda Chi team. Paced by Terry Swanson's 10 points and Don Smith with 7, they suddenly broke loose toward the end of the game, but ran out of time. Trailing by as many as 18 they came on strong but it was the old story of too little too late. Schroeder and Demnico both did good jobs in the rebounding department despite the fact that they were at a distinct disadvantage heightwise.

IN THE LAST GAME of the Intramural season, TKE just squeezed by QTV 31-28 to gain third place in the IFC. Frank

Wrestlers In N.E. Tournament; Springfield Dominates Events

This weekend, the spectators at Pratt Cage at Amherst witnessed another great New England Tournament. While everyone knew that Springfield would dominate, it was interesting to watch the other thirteen members of the N.E.I.W.A. resist. Just after the finals, one competitor from Coast Guard said "it looked like Springfield v. the All-Stars. Indeed, Springfield took first place in seven of eight varsity events. Only MacKenzie of Wesleyan could stop their heivyweight (Miller).

The results of the finals were: 123 pounds — Gilmore (Spfld). 130 pounds — G. Sadowsky (Spfld). 137 pounds — J. Sadowsky (Spfld). 147 pounds — Cerra (Spfld). 157 pounds — Winter (Spfld). 167 pounds — Holmes (Spfld). 177 pounds — Cerra (Spfld). Unl. — MacKenzie (Wes). The Springfield Freshman Team also produced four first-placers. The Team Championships went to Springfield, Wesleyan, Dartmouth, and Williams.

UMASS' 137 pound Jesse Brogan injured his hand beating Eberl of Dartmouth (3-0) and this practically ruined UMASS' chances in the Finals, although Darling and Cafarelli won their first matches.

Boris Chevone wrestled a tremendous match against Fierstine of Amherst in the 123 pound class, but lost 9-8 in overtime. Since Fierstine was later beaten by Curry of Hartford, Boris' chances of placing (as he did last year) were over.

Brouillet Takes Fourth

Redmen In IC4A's

by GENE COLBURN

Bob Brouillet traveled down to New York this past weekend a definite underdog in the 2 mile at the IC4A's. Digger had not been running up to par for quite a while, and Coach Footrick was not too sure of what Brouillet could do. Much to everyone's surprise, including Digger's, Bob took fourth with a time of 9:11.1. This set a new University record. The winning time was 8:59.

JUNIORS Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey turned in some really fine performances, although they didn't score any points. In the afternoon Panke ran 4:24 for the mile and Ramsey ran 4:25. This was the best time either had ever done in the mile. That night Ramsey came back and ran a 9:43.5 two mile. This is 20 seconds faster than he's ever run, and puts UMass in a good position of getting first and second in the mile and 2 mile upcoming Yan. Con. Championship.

SOPHOMORES John Mederios and Doug Sloan both competed in the 60 yard dash and ran a creditable 6.6. Mederios also broadjumped, and went 21'2". The next meet for the Redmen will be Tuesday night against UConn.

Research Board Investigates Morality In Collegiate Sports

by JOHN GOODRICH

In the last two issues of Sport magazine, the research staff has been conducting an investigation into the problem of morality in collegiate sports. While the articles appear to center on the Big Ten and the Pacific coast, they provide a number of lessons meant for all institutions.

One thing the writer admitted was the fact that sports provide a way to gain recognition for the school without giving any indication as to the academic level of the school. This can be seen even on our own campus. The success of our football team and college bowl team (which is in a sense a sport) have brought a certain amount of recognition here to UMass. Yet it must be kept in mind that neither is truly indicative of the academic level of the school as a whole. However, good progress in spirits can lead to a more active alumni that could contribute to various funds.

At present there are over 1400 colleges and universities in this country. Of these, only about 200 can actually be called "big-time" in football or basketball. This puts the level of corruption in sports at a minor level, however it cannot be overlooked that those players involved are supposed to be the future leaders of the nation. As one Senate investgator pointed out, "About 96% of the kids approached by gamblers accept right away."

The way the gamblers work can be to have the player shave points off of a lead or lose a game the team was to lose anyway. With a few blown layups or floor errors in basketball the lead can be just at the right margin for the gamblers to clean up and the teams are none the wiser.

One of the biggest questions about the cause of corruption in sports is just what provoked the players to even get involved wtih the gamblers? Only about half of those who were mixed up the mess were actually involved because of need. The rest were just there. The writer chooses to lay the blame on the basic moral atmosphere in the various parts of our society. He

Debaters Cop CCNY Tourney As Novices Reap Trophies

The University Forensic Society returned from the Ninth Annual City College of New York Debating Tournament this weekend, after taking two trophies and virtually walking off with the tournament. Steve Jenkins and Larry Rutstein, debating switch-side tied for second place out of thirty-eight teams in the varsity division. They had a 5-1 record, defeating Mount St. Vincent, Rutgers, Seton Hall, Niagara University, and St. Joseph's of Brooklyn, and losing to the University of Virginia, which was the only undefeated team in the varsity division.

A similar story occurred in the novice division, with Marshall Goldberg and Jack Peterson going undefeated on the negative side in their four rounds to compile the best novice negative score out of thirty schools. Goldberg was awarded a trophy for first place negative speaker, with Peterson placing fourth out of the sixty speakers. John Morton and Gerry Goldhaber compiled a 2-2 record on novice affirmative in their first tournament appearance this year. The overall novice record was six wins and two losses, fifth best out of the thirty schools.

In the extemporaneous speaking contest, Morton outpointed twenty-three other speakers and was awarded a trophy for first place in the event, a remarkable achievement since it was the first time he had ever entered such a contest.

The year's overall record now stands at 64 wins and 42 losses with three first place awards in individual events. The Society has now amassed five trophies and five certificates of excellence for this year's efforts.

Compensation Study

Collegian Stresses Salaries; WMUA Asks Scholarships

by TERRY STOCK

Jeffrey Davidow, Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian, and Jim O'Hearn, Station Manager of WMUA, expressed their views on compensation for extra-curricular activities to the Student Senate ad hoc Committee on Compensation at a meeting on Monday evening.

O'Hearn, who is seeking compensation in the form of scholarships, said, "You certainly can't pay everyone in the beginning, so you should start by paying those who need it for their education, taking them from among those who are giving the most to the organization. Later you could extend payment to those deserving members who don't absolutely need the money. The people who haven't been in the organization long enough to be officers should also be considered for scholarships."

Davidow, on the other hand, stated that he felt that once an organization became involved with scholarships, it would never be free from that form of compensation. Need, he commented, might also become the primary factor and ability would suffer.

"I think we should start with salaries," said Davidow. He emphasized that these be merely token salaries to be paid to editors and managers of the prime service organizations on campus —the Index, the Collegian, and WMUA — to eliminate anyone seeking one of these positions merely out of greed.

"On the Collegian," he continued, "we have difficulty getting people to run for responsible positions. Once we get them we often can't keep them. We've lost several editors already this year because they've lost interest. People don't run for the ed-

The Collegian And The Faculty Senate

There is a direct proportion between the increasing size of this campus and the necessity for closer bonds of communication among all members of the University community.

To this end, we have taken a number of steps this year, including the free distribution of Collegians, to insure that the channels of communication between students and faculty and administration remain wide and unobstructed.

Also, we have seen a growing awareness on the part of all segments of the campus community that no longer can each segment operate as a whole unto itself. Faculty and student actions are quite often interrelated in purpose and most often in effect.

The Collegian has attempted to provide the entire campus with pertinent faculty-administrative news that might have primary effect upon the student.

However, this has not always been an easy task, and quite often mistakes have been made. This is primarily due to the fact that the Collegian must rely upon other sources, apart from its own staff, to provide it with pertinent information. All too often we have fallen prey to the subjective opinion of interested parties.

Now, it appears that some members of the Faculty Senate have realized the importance of allowing the Collegian to get its information first hand, and have introduced a motion which, if passed, will allow a Collegian representative to attend all subsequent Faculty Senate meetings for this year.

The Collegian takes this opportunity to urge members of the Faculty Senate to vote for passage of this motion, and to insure all that the Collegian will cover the meetings in an objective, impartial manner.

Nothing will be reported out of the Faculty Senate meeting that will place any individual of that organization in a potentially undesirable position with any other member of the campus community.

If the Collegian is to continue printing the news, which it must do as a public service, then it is only practical to afford it the best possible opportunities for objective news coverage.

Letters
Peace Corpsmen Write

From Guatemala

Ed. Note: The two excerpts below are from two letters received by members of the editorial staff from friends now serving in the Peace Corps. They offer an interesting first - hand glimpse into conditions in two widely separate areas, Nyasaland in Africa and Guatemala in Latin America.

Bill Pierson
Guatemala City

Happy greetings from "The land of eternal Spring!" I'm taking you up on your suggestion to write something for the Collegian while I'm down here in Guatemala. Another PCV and I went into the city some time ago to see "The Ugly American." The film inspired me to write a very patriotic-type "letter to the editor" which has been revised two or three times into the document that I'm sending to you for your consideration as likely fare for the consumption and enlightenment of my colleagues at UMass. I am being very serious when I speak of the "miracle of America." It is really a miracle that the United States is as rich as it is. Or perhaps we should say rather that given the political philosophy of the U.S., the belief in opportunity for all, the belief in the worth of every human being, the belief in certain fundamental, inalienable rights . . . what we call "the miracle of America" was bound to come to pass.

Guatemala, on the other hand, is really something else! There have been numerous dictators, flirtations with communism . . . most of the land is owned by a very small minority of the people. Once you get outside of Guatemala City, except for a few of the larger towns, everyone is poor. And I mean really poor. They do live in thatched huts, they do go barefoot . . . I just read the article in Newsweek on Poverty U.S.A. . . . perhaps this was poverty by U.S. standards, but if most of the people in Guatemala could live as well as those cited as poverty-stricken in the article, they would consider themselves rich.

From Nyasaland

Bill Farrow
Nyasaland

I am teaching History and Math under the English system of education. This system has no place in Africa and I long for the good old American pragmatic education. The boys spend five years preparing for the Cambridge Exams and then only 50% will pass.

I have also become involved in the Zomba night school teaching History and Geology. With 2000 openings and 10,000 candidates you might see the slight discrepancy. I've never seen a place where such a real desire for education existed. Now I begin to see how lucky we are and how unappreciative.

The country is beautiful, the people open and friendly, and the work is rewarding—What else could I want?

Black Muslim Split

by JOHN B. CHILDS

The recent move by former Black Muslim leader Malcolm X to form his own organization outside the Black Muslims at first glance would seem a call for rejoicing from those who dislike the Black Muslims. Indeed the move is a split in what only last year seemed a tight-knit well oiled militant organization.

Indeed the move may indicate growing internal strains and tensions which may be working to end the power of this organization of American Negroes united under Islam.

But Malcolm X has pledged to form a national political organization. This will have no religious baseline. Herein lies its potential power, for Malcolm X has also voiced his support for the tenets of the Black Muslims. If indeed his political organization does get off the ground America may find itself faced with a movement having the militancy and smooth running machinery reminiscent of the Black Muslims which at the same time is attracting many more Negroes than the Black Muslims because of its non-sectarian nature.

The Black Muslim movement may be disintegrating. But a new movement using Black Muslim techniques and having a mass following may be in the formative stage. Any continued frustration, such as a successful filibuster of civil rights legislation may very well provide a fertile field of frustrated discontent which could cause this movement to grow to astounding and dangerous proportions.

Time now, more than ever, for some Democratic busywork.

Senate Goals

To the Editor:

As one of the proponents of the "Odetta bill," I would like to voice both assent to and dissent from Mr. Davidow's editorial in Monday's Collegian, imputing that the Student Senate . . . "is obligated to open the floor to debate on either direct or indirect endorsement of goals and tasks of extra-campus organizations". He seems to feel that "if the Senate claims to represent the students of this campus . . . let it comment on national and world affairs."

In voting for this bill, I affirmed one thing, and one thing only—that the Senate has an obligation to insure the viability of any RSO organization, whether we believe in the cause which it advances or not.

I do think, however that the editorial offers substantial food for thought by bringing the goals of the Senate into question. The bickering and "petty grievances" we have had to contend with this year have been more a result of the nonexistence of well-defined goals than a lack of leadership on the part of the Presidency. We have all failed the student body by not providing the Senate with these goals. It is far easier to criticize the few individuals in responsible positions than it is to be vocal in infusing new and unproved ideas into the veins of that body, which, by definition, should be a forum for innovation.

The Merit System

To the Editor:

"As is usual in academic salary ranges, as used by leading universities, there is no commitment that staff members will automatically go to the maximum of their rank. An individual progression up the salary range will be based upon merit, as evaluated under policies set by the Board of Trustees, and upon availability of funds." These ambiguous words were printed in the memo from the University News Office on March 6, 1964. They, however, do not concretely explain the evaluation and merit system of the University. They do not uniformly explain how salaries are arrived at for faculty members. I am aware of how the merit system does not work. It has no bearing upon the ability of the professor as a teacher. It has no bearing upon the popularity of a teacher with his students. It has no bearing upon the student's appraisal of a teacher's worth. It has no bearing upon the length of service a teacher has given to the University.

The merit of a teacher can best be valued by those who are the recipient of his achievements. I believe the student to be in the best position to judge the value of a professor. Yet many professors held in esteem by a vast majority of students have not been promoted, while those held in disfavor by this same majority on the basis of teaching ability have been promoted not only in salary but within individual departments. I question therefore, the policy of merit of the Board of Trustees and the Administration. If such a system exists that the University student is unaware of, I stand corrected. If, however, this merit system is a "payola" deal hidden behind vague ambiguities then it should be corrected. In either case let the truth be known and clearly stated. Let the administration explain to all concerned or interested exactly what this merit system is and how it works as regards the professors of this University.

"WMUA Is Getting Drafty"

by SHERRY SPEAR

Students have been seen furtively running through the dorms hunting down AM-FM converters. Some already have an FM radio already on tuned to 91.1 mc. The reason: WMUA, the student radio of the University has gone stereo. The right hand side is being transmitted over the am-converter (about 790kc) and the left hand over the fm. The station is using a new stereo cartridge and utilizing our stereo taperecorder and records to bring you this innovation. Temporarily, stereo may only be heard Thursday nights from 10-11 on Ron Engel's "Art of Jazz". A few commuters may be muttering, and dormites dreaming of "stereo commercials" but WMUA respectfully requests that students remember this is an experimental stage that will undergo improvements and expand with time.

Thursday night at 7 p.m. Mr. Dilkes of the History Department will be lecturing on 19th century English History. This will be followed by Ralph Lennon interviewing Monsignor Power on "WMUA Reports" at 7:30. At that time they will be discussing "Catholic view of the moral concepts of birth control."

If you have an itchy dialing finger this Saturday between 10-1 p.m. and dial WMUA to request a song on Pete Greenwood's "Standing Room Only" you might be disappointed to know the show's on tape. But if you want to request a song for future weeks, then dial away at 2425.

Station members of WMUA: "Shimmy, shimmy" down to the station tonight at 7:30 and "Talk to me" as you vote for station officers.

Thursday finds musicale featuring Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite" Strauss's "Tales from Vienna Woods" and others from your WMUA classic corner.

Women's Rules Revisions Needs Coeds Suggestions

Elections for one freshman and one junior representative to the Women's Judiciary Board are to be held in the very near future. Two governing boards are very hard at work preparing for this election. They are the present Women's Judiciary Board and the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate. Each plays a decisive role in governing University Women. To the Women's Affairs Committee falls the task of making new and revising old rules. The Committee works in close conjunction with Services Committee in seeking to improve campus conditions to the best interest of the coeds. To the Women's Judiciary Board falls the important task of interpreting the rules complied by the Women's Affairs Committee. They must pass judgment on the more serious cases that come before house councils. Each board works in conjunction with each other and with the student body.

What is your role as University Woman? To you falls an equally important and decisive role. Your duty is to obey the rules and to vote for capable people to enforce them. You are entitled to make suggestions to the Women's

Ballet Visits Campus Thursday

Most young people have at one time tried their hands at the arts of writing, painting and even composing music. But the one unique creative art which has remained a mystery to the general public is that of choreography.

This Thursday night we will have a chance to see a performance of the internationally successful Robert Joffrey Ballet Company at 8 p.m. in the cage. Yet, the extent of the great talent of choreographer Robert Joffrey will still be a mystery to the general public.

In an attempt to explain his particular art, young Robert Joffrey (only 33) has contributed the fillowing:

Dancing is a fluid, dynamic art. A performance cannot be separated from the creative aspects which exist in every movement. Something unique for that instant is occurring onstage, and it is the perfect fusion of the choreography and the performance which makes possible those onstage moments. If the performance of ballet is so much a combining of talents, it is obviously essential that the initial creation of the dances must also be a collaboration. The young choreographer needs to work with dancers and he also needs to work with all the various possibilities of lighting, costuming, staging and music. It is a complicated problem, and an expensive one.

Joffrey explains that he has "combined the classical heritage from other centuries with the most contemporary expressions of modern times, and from it has emerged what we consider our very own American ballet."

Twenty-four dancers and sixteen musicians are now making the Robert Joffrey Ballet's 10-week tour of the United States, bringing new works created for the company by American choreographers and composers.

Admission to Thursday night's performance will be by student ID's, series tickets at $1.50 or tickets purchased at the door.

Wesley Foundation Holds International Buffet

The annual International Buffet, sponsored by Wesley Foundation, will be held on Saturday, March 14, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the basement of the Wesley Methodist Church in Amherst. The International Buffet has traditionally been held in conjunction with the campus's International weekend, which has not been scheduled this year.

Dishes representative of various countries, such as England's beef and kidney pie and China's sweet and sour pork, will be served. An informal "Festival of Nations" entertainment to follow the buffet is being planned by members of Wesley Foundation and the International Club, which has given the buffet much support in past years.

If any proceeds are made from the buffet, they will be sent to to Student Christian Revolutionary Movement in Brazil. Tickets are $.99, and may be obtained from any member of Wesley Foundation, or by calling the church office.

Men's Interdorm Rebirth To Be Discussed

Any male student who has any interest in the now-defunct Men's Interdorm Council is invited to express his views on Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Hampden Room of the Student Union.

The Senate Men's Affairs Committee will be grateful for any and all opinions on this subject, both pro and con, for it is trying to assess the feasibility and desirability of reestablishing the Council.

Representatives from each dormitory have been solicited. Any one unable to attend and wishing more information should see Tom Kiernan in Hills South who is chairing the meeting.

justifiably dubious about overstepping the proper bounds of our responsibility. Nevertheless, the Senate has begun to arise from this year's cathartic experiences with true introspection. We realize that the Student Senate cannot creak along of its own accord. It needs at least a few individuals who can ask the question "What is the future of student government at the University of Massachusetts?" We do not have to wait idly by until this question is answered, if it ever is. We have set several precedents during the year, and although I fail to see Mr. Davidow's logic that the Senate has assumed a new "obligation," I have not the slightest doubt that our Student Senate is emerging from an unpleasant two semesters with a newfound sense of responsibility and perceptiveness. My only hope is that we do not stop here.

J.F.K. Memorial Committee To Sponsor Library Drive

The Student J.F.K. Memorial Committee is formulating plans for a subscription library. The Committee's adoption of the subscription library plan is in a similar vein to the White House subscription library which has a listing of 1780 books. This listing is without a doubt a standard against which other libraries about Americans created by Americans will be measured. The collection of books pulls together Americans of every era, style, and point of view, from George Washington to James Thurber. It contains thirty-two categories of subjects—history, literature, society, geography, science, sports, religion, folklore, music, law, art, politics, and journalism, to name a few.

The Student Committee will begin its drive in early April and will run for several weeks. This will be a full scale campus project, and support is to be solicited from faculty and administration as well as the student body. One person or group of persons may contribute the money needed to purchase one of the books and the name, class or position of the donor will be placed inside of the text. The goal of the Committee is to raise $5,000 worth of books.

Civil Liberties Union Begs Protection For Students

NEW YORK, N. Y. (CPS)—The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) called last month on colleges and universities to protect the constitutional rights of students participating in public demonstrations against racial segregation, the civil defense program or nuclear testing. The civil liberties organization declared that a student's rights to engage in such activities is a major part of civil liberties.

The ACLU urged that the colleges and universities provide help if a student has difficulty wtih the police in connection with his participation in these activities. The Union's views were recently approved by its board of directors and are now included in a revised edition of its pamphlet, "Academic Freedom and Civil Liberties of Students in Colleges and Universities." The pamphlet was prepared by the Academic Freedom Committee of ACLU, whose chairman is Dr. Louis Hacker of Columbia University.

The pamphlet states that "the college authorities should take every practical step to assure themselves that such students are protected in their full legal rights to wit: that they are given fair trial in a court of law where they are defended by counsel; that they are not abused by police and that charges are brought against the police if the latter act wrongfully; that bail should be sought and furnished; and that they may have speedy trials and that appeals be taken when necessary."

The new pamphlet underscores the rights of students as private citizens. "In their non-academic life, private or public students should be free from college control," the ACLU emphasized, adding that the college also should not bear responsibility for non-academic activities ascribed to its students.

The pamphlet goes on to state that "the student like the teacher is a member not only of an academic community, but of the community at large and of other specific communities. His college must regard him as both a student and a private individual. It must sometimes recognize that his being a student is sometimes irrelevant to his private status. In this private sta-

As a result of the tremendous student-faculty response to the Norman Thomas lecture, many students have voiced interest in the Political Science Association. Working closely with faculty advisors of the Government Department, the Political Science Association, open to the entire student body, brings to the University campus, figures of political importance on the national, state and local level. Activities of the Association will continue this semester and will increase in the fall semester due to the natural excitement produced by a Presidential election. Plans are now in the making for guest lecturers and debates which will include prominent professors from the New England area.

Texas Students Debate Editor Election Method

AUSTIN, Texas (CPS) — Students at the University of Texas will have an opportunity to voice their opinion on the method of selection of the editor of The Daily Texan, student newspaper at the university.

The Student Assembly unanimously decided to place a referendum on the ballot for March 18 which will read:

"Do you feel that the editor of The Daily Texan should be elected by a vote of the student body from a list of candidates certified as to professional qualifications by the Texas Student Publications Board of Directors?" Students will answer "Yes" or "No."

Attempts by the Texas Student Assembly to reinstate election of the Texan editor and/or bind student members of the Board to vote for the winner of a campus poll were deferred until after the referendum.

The referendum action resulted from attempt by several Assemblymen to return the editorship of the Texan to an elected position. Two years ago the change was made from elected editor to appointed editor.

No disciplinary action should be taken by a college against a student for engaging in such off campus activities as political campaigns, picketing or participating in public demonstrations, the pamphlet states, provided the student does not claim without authorization to speak or act in the name of the college or one of its student organizations.

The pamphlet reiterates the ACLU's categorical stand that "students should be accorded the right to assemble, to select speakers and to discuss issues of their choice." Students should also have the right to hear opposing viewpoints even when the speaker is controversial.

itorships because the positions involve a great deal of responsibility and work, but little reward."

He pointed out that token salaries would not only improve staff morale, but the editors would also have a definite responsibility to the students if they were getting paid. They would then have to work hard. In addition to salaries, Davidow suggested that bonuses be given to staff members who had done an outstanding job in some area to encourage these people to continue to work hard and others to work harder.

"The problem of authority would also be improved," said Davidow. "If an editor or manager told a subordinate to do something under the pay system, the staffer would have to do it or would risk losing his job. As it stands now, there isn't even somebody to replace a staff member who fails to do his job."

"Under the scholarship system," O'Hearn added, "a staff member who didn't do satisfactory work would risk losing the scholarship that he needed to go to school. More than that, students who now have to carry other jobs in order to earn money for school would be able to give more time to their extra-curicular activity."

Both O'Hearn and Davidow said they felt that part, if not all, the money for payment should come from SATF funds. Said O'Hearn, "Students should contribute a certain amount to services being performed for the students."

When asked who should distribute these salaries, both men favored student control of the funds to keep the involved organizations free from administrative control. Faculty members and administrators acting as advisors was one alternative offered.

Course credit, because of the danger that an organization might eventually be taken over by various departments on campus, was also opposed.

Concluded Davidow, "Students would have a voice in whether or not they want compensation for extra-curriculars through their Senators whom they have elected and who will decide this issue after careful consideration."

Every individual is an essential part of the University's Student Government and it is only when each individual is aware of this that we will have an efficient and respected government.

Research Board Investigates Morality In Collegiate Sports

by JOHN GOODRICH

The entire issue of morality or lack of it in college sports is not to be taken too lightly. As can be seen in the last issue of the paper some of the examples listed show how hard it would be to unseat or ferret out the source of corruption.

ONE WAY would be to de-emphasize sports, but this is not quite that simple. First of all few would want to do this, myself included. For as a large university president said, 'There is a wide range of personalities in a big university, but in sports they find a certain something they all have in common." There is no doubt that sports are a vital part of a large university.

A second possibility would be to leave any course of action strictly up to the individual school. This seldom works, as could be seen by studying the habits of the Pacific Coast conference schools. They simply find ways to get around the much too lenient NCAA rules. As Jim Aiken, former Oregon coach, said, "So we get fined $500. Where alse could we get a quarterback so cheap?" The problem is simply this, if a school wants to cheat, it will find a way to do it.

THE IDEA OF REMOVING SPORTS from a big time level has already been discussed. There is a certain commitment that is made when a team decides to go big time. If a school builds a new field house or stadium it is committed to field the best team possible because it will be necessary to fill the arena if the bond issue is to be paid back. Another way is that schedules are made out many years in advance. If a school decides to go big time and schedules the top teams, then it must continue to field good teams to keep the competition alive.

The writer of the article in Sport magazine does not feel that the NCAA has done enough to prevent the spread of corruption in college athletics. The large organization like this is fine for business problems, the writer points out, but only legislates enough to prevent the schools from cutting each others' throats.

THE VARIOUS CONFERENCES have been a little more effective in taking care of their problems. The best example would have to be the Big Ten. At one time only 6 of the 258 lettermen came to school without prior knowledge by their coaches. The average subsidy was $610 per athlete. The league took action in 1956. "Need" became the basis for aid. The number of football scholarships was cut ultimately to 70 per year (the Southeastern Conference stretches well up into the triple figure range). The league banned the practice of red-shirting, which allows a player who returns to school at mid-semester to take few courses to keep his class status and still be eligible for a full year of varsity competition next season.

SCOUTING WAS LIMITED to one game, but with unlimited exchange of films. The final measure was the institution of the letter of intent plan, whereby a high school athlete sign a letter of intent to attend a certain school, thereby allowing no other school to approach him.

These are all steps in the right direction, but still the hard core of corruption exists. The article stated that if the situation got bad enough, the federal government might step in.

Ultimately, however, the course of action must lie with the school and its administration. Here at UMass we are attempting to reach big-time status. So far the problems mentioned above have not occurred here. There is no reason why they should. There are many schools that have reached a high plain of excellence in sports and still maintained their fine ratings as academic institutions. There is no reason to assume that corruption goes hand in hand with big time sports. The trouble occurs only when an institution looks for ways to beat the existing system. Let's hope that it never happens at a school as fine as the University of Massachusetts.

Basketball ...

guarded the opposition's toughest big man, and at the same time managed to increase his own offensive records. O'Rourke was the second top scorer for UMass with 358 points, an average of 14.9. He set a new single-season rebounding record of 308, a 12.8 average, and ranked second in assists, field goals and free throw percentage. He scored in double figures in 21 games with highs of 25 against St. John's and 24 vs. New Hampshire and St. Michael's.

KINGSTON, 5'11", graduated from Springfield Cathedral High and also attended Monson Academy. The junior Physical Education major was a starting guard and sparkplug of the 13-1 UMass frosh team. Charlie has had to fight off pre-season injuries in both his soph and junior years. He managed to play in every game as a soph, winning his letter, and scoring 160 points. This winter, bothered by an ankle injury, he saw only spot action during the first 12 games. Following the semester vacation period he won a starting berth and scored in double figures in five of 12 games with a high of 22 in the season's finale at Maine. For the year Kingston scored 119 points and led the team in assists during his period as a starter.

BOB BROUILLET is probably the most outstanding example of Coach Footrick's ability. He competed only in cross-country while he was in high school. Bob is now in his senior year and holds all the UMass records from 1 mile on up, as well as 6 course records in cross-country. Bob has also placed in the IC4A's and the nations.

Yet three boys do not make a team. The caliber of the teams have already been indicated by their records. There is also the fact that boys who have run under Mr. Footrick have broken all previous UMass records. They hold all the Alumni field records except for the broad jump, high jump, low hurdles, and 1 mile. Indoors they hold all the Curry Hick's Cage records except for the 1 mile, 600, and low hurdles.

Records alone do not truly measure a coach's abiliity and value though. Aside from having amassed these outstanding records, Mr. Footrick has also received recognition on numerous occasions for his accomplishments. In 1961 and 1963 Mr. Footrick was elected coach of the year at UMass by the Collegian. In 1963 coach Footrick was recognized by the IC4A Coaches Association for more than 25 years of contributions to track and field athletics. Due to coach Footrick's ability and devotion to coaching UMass now has a track team that commands the respect of all.

Ski Team Places Fifth In Mountain Slalom

The University Ski Team, fighting for a third place berth for the season's standings, placed itself in trouble by finishing 5th in a long two-run slalom at Stratton Mountain last Sunday.

The course, set on a frozen granular surface, gave the University racers trouble as all but one man suffered falls before finishing. Out of a field of some 60 racers, the UM skiers finished in the following order: Walt Swiatek 14th, Tom Clark 16th, Don Burgess 20th, and Pete Plastridge 25th. Norm Carpenter and Dick Woods also competed for the University, but their times were not among the best four to count.

THE GREATEST SURPRISE of the day came when it was announced that New England College, which has captured first place in every other race this season, finished 6th out of the 11 college competing.

Race Summary

1. Keene
2. Amherst
3. Tufts
4. Northeastern
5. UMass

THE UNIVERSITY RACERS are preparing for their last race of the season to be held at Wildcat Mountain this Saturday. If the team does well, it will clinch a third place position in the continually tightening New England Ski Conference.

Redmen Set For N.E. Meet Desire To Smash Records

The swimming season draws to a close this weekend as the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association Championships conclude at the University of Massachusetts' Frank L. Boyden Physical Education Building.

Five of Joe Rogers' outstanding squad have been working out to the limit of their endurance since the season ended two weeks ago. Hair clipped right down to the scalp and legs shaven to soapbar smoothness (to prevent cumber-some "hair drag" caused by air bubbles trapped by hair), these men are are not to turn in the best races of their lives.

Co-captains Mike Bjornholm and Mike Rothschild are UM's main guns. Bjornholm is the best sprinter (short-distance freestyler) in UM history, while Rothschild holds the long distance records. The versatile Bjornholm may also be called upon to swim the individual medley and backstroke, events at which he is equally proficient.

Junior Charlie Monnier is out to better his breaststroke record of last year, while teammate Jim O'Sullivan is given a good chance to improve his latest butterfly record.

Sophomore Dick Daniels will be seeing action in the New Englands for the first time; As a soph, Dick has already outdone the marks set by Bjornholm and Rothschild when they were sophomores.

The long-distance swimming, featuring Mike Rothschild and Dick Daniels, will take place Thursday night (no adm.) while the preliminary heats for the majority of the meet will occur Friday at 2:30 and at 7:30 (adm. $1.00 ea.). The finals are scheduled for Saturday afternoon at 2:00.

Three Men Over 300 Points

Wildcats Set Scoring Marks

Durham, March 10—Final University of New Hampshire basketball statistics prove that seniors Jim Rich and Nick Mandravelis were the most potent 1-2 scoring punch in UNH's hoop history.

Rich, 6-3 forward from Rensselaer, N.Y., set a new three year scoring record for the Wildcats while Mandravelis, a 6-4 center from Nashua, established three single year scoring marks.

Averaging 19.8 points per game and finished his career with points this winter, topping the old mark of 438 points set by Frank McLaughlin a decade ago.

Remarkable foul shooting enabled Mandravelis to set his record. Hitting on 79% of his free throws, sank 147 foul shots, surpassing the old mark of 105 set by Billy Pappas.

Mandy sank 14 free throws in a game against Connecticut, just one month after Rich had set a record of 13 in a game with Massachusetts.

Rich averaged 18.5 points per game and fnished his career with a record 1180 for three years.

Rich is the first UNH hoopster to score over 400 points twice. He had 410 last winter to go with his 425 of this year.

He and Mandravelis were the first UNH performers to score over 400 points in the same year and sophomore Tom Horne of Stoneham, Mass., tossed in 325 giving the Wildcats three men over 300 points for the first time in the school's history.

A dean's List student in engineering, Rich also led the Wildcats in rebounding, averaging 10.2 per game. No other UNH performer reached double figures in that department.

Coach Footrick In Tenth Year At UMass

by GENE COLBURN

TRACK COACH WILLIAM FOOTRICK is celebrating his tenth year at UMass as head track coach. In his years here Mr. Footrick has amassed a truly formidable record. In all ten seasons combined the team's overall record has been 108-66. The spring track team is the only one that has had a losing record of 24-26. This record is not indicative of the situation. Coach Footrick's first winning season was not achieved until 1962. His record for both 1962 and 1963 has been 11-2. This shows more than anything else how coach Footrick has developed UMass as a track power. Never quitting or getting discouraged, he turned a team that was a perennial loser into a solid winner.

IN CROSS COUNTRY coach Footrick's teams have won the Yankee Conference championships 3 times, and taken second 3 times. They have never finished lower than sixth in the New England's. They won the meet in 1961, and were second in 1960 and 1962.

There are probably two really reliable ways of measuring a coach's ability—his development of athletes and the recognition from other coaches. Three outstanding examples of coach Footrick's ability are Dick Ward, Ken O'Brien, and Bob Brouillet. These boys all came to UMass with little or no experience in track. Under Mr. Footrick these boys developed into the best men in their own events ever seen at UMass.

O'BRIEN came here as an all around athlete. He had earned letters in football, basketball, baseball and track in high school. Under Mr. Footrick O'Brien developed into the best middle distance man ever seen at UMass. He holds all the Redmen records from 600 yards to 1,000. Dick Ward was an 880 man in high school. Under the coach, Dick became the best weightman ever seen at UMass. He holds the shot put, 35 ib. weight, 16 lb weight, and high jump records. Dick was also the first Redman ever to win an IC4A title and to earn a place in the nationals.

COACH JOHN ORR congratulates Charley Kingston and Charley O'Rourke, who were chosen by teammates to lead next year's Redmen.

O'Rourke And Kingston Chosen To Captain 64-65 Hoopsters

Frontcourtman Charlie O'Rourke (Hadley) and backcourtman Charlie Kingston (Springfield), key performers in the Redmen 15-9 record, have been elected co-captains of the University of Massachusettts 1964-65 varsity basketball team.

O'ROURKE, 6'7", is a junior Physical Education major. He is a graduate of Amherst Regional High School where he led his team to the Western Small Schools title as a senior. As a freshman at UMass he was the top rebounder and defensive man on the Little Redmen team that compiled a 13-1 record. He won a varsity starting berth as a sophomore and scored 199 points with 210 rebounds. This season Charlie became a standout two-way performer. In every game he

New England Swim Feature Brings Season To Climax

The new swimming pool in the University of Massachusetts Frank L. Boyden Men's Physical Education Building will be the site of the 1964 New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association Championships to be held March 12-14.

Coach Bob Muir's Williams' College swimmers, paced by co-captains Alex Kasten and John Wester, will attempt to successfully defend the team championship that they won last year and Brown, Springfield, and Bowdoin appear to be the main threats to Ephmen in this year's championship.

FIVE INDIVIDUAL CHAMPIONS from last year's meet will be back to defend their laurels; Bowdoin's Tim Robinson in the 100 yard freestyle; Bowdoin's Pete Seaver in the 500 and 1650 yard freestyle events; Brown's Robert Martin in the 200 yard ind. medley; Amherst's Duncan McDougall in the diving event, and Williams' Wester in the 200 yard breaststroke. Bowdoin's 400 yard medley relay team winner of last season, William Edwards, Shawn Leach, John Halford and Tim Robinson will also return to defend its laurels.

THE 1964 CHAMPIONSHIPS will begin on Thursday evening with the 1650 yard freestyle event. Friday at 10:00 a.m. the diving trials will be held with other trials and semi-final races slated for 2:00 and 7:30 p.m. on Friday. Finals in all events as well as trials and finals in the 400 yard freshman relay race will be held Saturday afternoon starting at 2:00 p.m.

Odetta Not To Perform; Senate Left Smarting

by DON JOHNSON

Wednesday night's Senate meeting, left smarting after the disclosure that Odetta would not appear in concert as planned, was slowed to a crawl by a "limiting" clause in an R.S.O. organization constitution, and stopped dead in its tracks by a bill which would outline for the senators the "essential ideas" of each motion.

THE DISCLOSURE THAT ODETTA would not appear came soon after the meeting opened. Senator Phil Johnston (Plymouth) revealed that Odetta is scheduled for an appearance at Smith College one week after she would have appeared here; he stated that after discussing the matter with the sponsors of the Smith concert and in the interests of four-college cooperation he had released Odetta from her contract obligations.

The Senate then moved to what is usually more or less a perfunctory duty; that is, accepting the constitutions of various R.S.O. organizations. During the constitution of the Precisionettes a clause was discovered which limits participants in that organization to unmarried females. Senator Johnston objected to this limiting clause and was supported by Senators Bill Donovan and Maureen Flanagan, who argued that membership in organizations such as this should not be denied our married students. The constitution however was passed despite these objections. In supporting this clause, Senator Kiernan pointed out that the nature of an organization such as the Precisionettes forbids the inclusion of married members; Senator Marilyn "Sam" Singer, also in support of this clause, argued that the absence of one member could prove the undoing of a precision routine, and in case of overnight trips the probability of absence is greater in case of a student who is married.

The Senate then moved to consider new business. A bill was brought on the floor which would attach to the agenda of all meetings a sheet, or sheets, bearing the "essential ideas of each motion which is judged by the bill proponent and the executive committee to warrant explanation." The controversy centered around the possible effect of such a measure which would, as expressed by Senator Donovan "remove the last trace of initiative remaining in some senators." After long debate and many points of parliamentary inquiry as to the advisability and legality of the bill, it was passed by a vote of 23-16.

THE COLLEGIAN STAFF MEETING HAS BEEN POSTPONED UNTIL WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Four UMass Students Awarded Woodrow Wilson Fellowships

Four University seniors have been appointed Woodrow Wilson Fellows for first-year graduate study next fall, according to an announcement made recently by Sir Hugh Taylor, president of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

The University's Wilson schoiars are: Robert B. Albro, Francis X. Allard, Neville J. G. Roherty and Pammela R. Leger.

UNIVERSITY SENIORS recently appointed Woodrow Wilson Fellows for first-year graduate study next fall are congratulated by UMass President John W. Lederle. The University's Woodrow Wilson scholars are (l. to r.): Robert B. Albro, Francis X. Allard, Neville J. G. Doherty, President Lederle, and Pammela R. Leger. Five other seniors were among 1216 students to receive honorable mention awards from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation this year.

Fellowship recipients are granted full tultion and fees at the graduate school of their choice, in addition to a stipend of $1800 and dependency allowances.

"THE WOODROW WILSON Naitonal Fellowship Foundation is the largest private source of support for advanced studies in the liberal arts in North America," the foundation president said in making the announcement of appointments."

This year's fellowship winners—1507 in all, from 357 colleges and universities in the U.S. and Canada—were chosen from more than 11,000 college seniors.

According to Dr. Hans Rosenhaupt, the foundation's national director, "Our hope is that students elected as Woodrow Wilson Fellows will become college teachers, although the terms of our awards do not bind them to such rigid commitments."

Since 1957, the Wilson fellowships have been underwritten with Ford Foundation grants totalling $52 million.

Concert Band Performs Memorial In Honor Of Late Pres. Kennedy

At the University Convocation on March 17 in honor of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the Concert Band will have the pleasure and honor of performing Memorial, an original composition written for organ and concert band by Elliott Schwartz, member of the Music Department faculty on campus. This piece combines the ceremonial feeling befitting a president with the ferocity and anger caused by the brutal assassination. Mr. Schwartz uses an antiphonal effect in which the organ, at one end of the hall, sustains a tone which gives the piece a stately air, while the band, at the opposite end, produces an effect of grotesqueness by using its percussive aspects. The total effect is both emoitonal and physical, in that the concert audience will feel centered between two opposing sounds.

Mr. Schwartz is a graduate of Columbia University where he earned his B.A., M.A. and Ed.D. in music theory. While at Columbia, he studied under Otto Luening and Paul Creston. He worked also with Roger Goeb and Henry Brant at the Bennington Composers Conference, during the summers of 1961-1963.

Schwartz is teaching theory and music literature of the ninteenth and twentieth centuries at the University. While at the University, he also has written works which have been played by the Oklahoma Symphony on the Mutual Network Broadcast, Music in our Times in New York City, the Chicago Chamber Orchestra, and the Gardner Museum in Boston. Mr. Schwartz is known also for his articles concerning music, one of which appeared in the Massachusetts Review last year. His book on the symphonies of Vaughan Williams will be published by the University Press next year.

Memorial, for combined Band and organ, will be performed again on Saturday, March 21, at 8:00 p.m. by the Concert Band in its concert in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival.

DR. ELLIOTT SCHWARTZ discusses the coming Kennedy Memorial Concert with Bands director John A. Jenkins. Schwartz is seated at the console of a recently purchased electronic organ which will play an important part in the concert.

Collegian Admitted To Faculty Senate

For the first time in the University's history a Collegian staff member will be allowed to observe the Faculty Senate meetings.

In a close vote at its Thursday meeting, the Faculty Senate supported a motion introduced by Dean Fred Jeffrey of the College of Agriculture which will permit the editor-in-chief of the Collegian to enter in and report on the remainder of this year's Faculty Senate meetings.

In other business, yesterday, the Faculty Senate accepted Dean Edward Moore's report on the Research Council. The report stated in part that "in common with most of the operations of the University, the most impressive fact about our research program is its growth. In 1961, the Research Council reported 121 research grants totaling $509,655. In 1964 we have to report 281 active research and training grants totaling $5,010,096."

At the close of the meeting some objection was voiced to the newly instituted policy of allowing students to drop courses without injury to their cume until six days after the close of midsemester marks. No formai motion was proposed, and the interested professors will confer further with William Venman of the Provost's Office.

Analysis Of Victory

by KENNETH FERNBERG

Although presidential primaries are often conclusive in determining presidential candidates, the recent victory of Henry Cabot Lodge in the New Hampshire primary has political analysts wondering as to its effect in determining a candidate to oppose President Johnson in November. Ambassador Lodge, a keen critic of foreign affairs, contributed little personal support to his campaign (his name was not even on the ballot) and his financial expenses were nil. Senator Goldwater and Governor Rockefeller, to the contrary, spent large sums in an effort to win the nation's first presidential primary held this year, yet both received blank checks for their efforts and suffered a serious setback in their fight for the nomination. Analyzing the situation, a few points are relatively clear.

The presidential hopes of Ambassador Lodge and former Vice-President Nixon have risen sharply due to the amount of write-in votes received, largely at the expense of Goldwater and Rockefeller. The Arizona conservative, the extreme element of the party, seems to be undesirable to the majority of Republicans who favor a more moderate tone. Governor Rockefeller, although campaigning vigorously, finished a poor third to Lodge, and unless both he and Goldwater do an abrupt about-face by June's California primary, their chances for victory are limited to a wish and a prayer.

The surprise, of course, was Ambassador Lodge. His victory, coupled with the strength shown by Nixon, shows the strength of the moderate wing of the party. His knowledge as a reliable foreign affairs expert is not argued, and he has made few domestic enemies, primarily because he has not had an opportunity to speak on domestic issues. Lodge's passive attitude is similar to that of President Eisenhower in the same primary of 1952, but Eisenhower's name was on the ballot.

The question remains as to the passive intentions of Lodge. If he announces his candidacy he will undoubtedly be strengthened, yet, up to now he has divulged no intentions of taking such a step. If Goldwater or Rockefeller are to regain their lost glory at the expense of the Ambassador and Nixon, they must improve their image in California, West Virginia, and Oregon respectively. Lodge is in the driver's seat.

ME, MADNESS, and HUMOR

Profiles Of Courage

by MIKE HENCH

As dissention runs its merry way through our two high legislative bodies, the Student and Faculty Senates, may I offer my one cent's worth. I have just finished reading John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage" and it seems that there might be a lesson there for each and every senator. As Jon Fife, Dave Matheison, Ross Jones, the Committee on Ethical Practices et al, rise to use their considerable talents in defense of what each considers to be right, and paths of glory cross with a singing clamor of bitter-edged swords, perhaps this legislative courage (which takes, according to Edmond Burke, calumny and abuse as its essential parts in triumph) can be re-examined in the light of those great profiles.

The idea of "constituency" is a much argued one. Should one answer entirely to his constituency, or should one exercise the judgment, patriotism, courage etc. necessary to the issue? All too often the two don't go hand in hand. How should a Senator react to his constituency? In the case of the Student Senate the question is much the same as the national question. If a commuter was elected by 150 votes, how is he to know that the (e.g.) 150 letters which he receives on a question are from those who voted for him? Surely he must listen to his constituents' arguments and opinions, but the final act of judgment and courage is in his own mind. He was elected as a thinking individual, not as a puppet. As an example of this, let's examine Jon Fife's constituency. As president of the Student Senate, Fife was elected by his fellow senators. But he cannot give allegiance to each Senator, nor can he bow to only those Senators who voted for him. He was elected to exercise his judgment and talent. On the other hand, Fife represents the Student Body as de facto president thereof. As Edmond Ross "looked into his open grave" as he saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment, so Fife looks into a shallower grave each time that he makes a ruling, whether favorable or unfavorable. I have watched Senate presidents dig similar graves over the years, and yet I have been thankful that none has either fallen into a grave or bowed in fear thereof.

Letters

Disgusted

To the Editor:

We are writing in regard to a letter which appeared in the Collegian (Mon., Mar. 9) concerning the pajama party recently held at one of the fraternities. We not only disagree wholeheartedly with the opinions expressed by "A Group of Disgusted Girls," but we also wonder where they got their information. "Seek and you will find . . ." We too saw what went on at the party, and there were NO such actions as were described.

To our knowledge there was no display of vulgarity in any way, shape, or form. The boys were all sufficiently attired, and they behaved in neither crude nor barbaric manners. As for the mattresses "strewn on the dance floor," the theme WAS a pajama party; the mattresses merely took the place of the tables and chairs usually set up. In addition, to avoid any problems which, naturally, COULD have erupted, the presence of the house mother was noticed during most of the party.

Finally, in regard to the editor's comment, "that girls who go to pajama parties deserve what they get," we feel you are making an absurdity of a simple theme party which we all enjoyed.

Sincerely,

Another Group of Disgusted Girls

Thank You Mr. Howard

To the Editor:

The behavior of the Student Senate, for the past few months, has been appalling. If "interest" is going to produce this much conflict, then I say bring back student apathy. Phill Howard's resignation indicates that a measure of integrity exists among the senators; it is indeed a shame that integrity has to resort to means like these to reveal itself. Perhaps our senators will be able to gain some insight from his move—perhaps they will be able to act unselfishly for a change.

I, for one, would like to thank Mr. Howard.

Hopefully,
Charles W. Roundy '64

Student Response

PAJAMA GAME

To the Editor:

We agree with only 50% of your answer to "A Group of Disgusted Girls." Any girl who has been here more than one semester and goes to a party in pajamas (regardless of the underpinning) must be naive not to know how the cards are stacked.

As to the frequency of these quiet receptions I cannot think of one group of Greeks which has not thrown a pajama party (of course we realize all these others were "nice" affairs [very "nice" from the boasting done by the brothers]) during the last complete year.

It seems rather paradoxical that the blame can be placed on the South College-Machmer complex. The University of Massachusetts administration and students go to great pains to gain favorable publicity for the school (a tremendous football team, college bowl, distinguished speakers, etc.) only to have this favorable publicity destroyed by their inability to deal intelligently with such problems as narcotics, pay raises, and the unruly fraternities. It is about time the administration stood up and realistically weighed the "added rooms" and greater enrollment (let us not forget the added social life) that the Greek system provides as compared to their real contributions to campus life and campus publicity. The whole campus can only rejoice that Amherst doesn't have a crusading newspaper like Boston has.

We vote that Colonel Marchant have his boys check beds before curfew rather than cars at curfew; it can be proven by past history that the IFC is unable to police their own members.

The Boston papers have carried many news items, but few favorable ones, about our school and if they got ahold of some of the stories that circulate on our campus and followed them down, we might gain the fame of a recent midwestern city.

We honestly doubt that the administration is blind to what happens at our campus but the choices are up to the administration; these choices are to follow the very rule book that you print and resist all pressures from alumni and others who may attempt to bring such to bear, continue to obtain the same poor publicity that the press so freely prints, give the independents in the dormitory the same privileges as certain "others" have, or follow the present policy which resembles the cute but irrational monkey who "saw no evil, heard no evil, and did no evil."

State Hospital Needs Students Who Care

by HARVEY KANTER

On a lonely hill in Northampton's residential district stands a series of antiquated buildings, known as the Northampton State Mental Hospital. In these dismal quarters are approximately 2200 human beings who are essentially rejected by society. We, the "normal people," have singled out those who do not conform to our expectations and put them, physically and mentally, as far away from us as possible.

Evidence of their rejection is seen in the poor treatment they receive. Psychiatric help is extremely limited; there are few psychologists; the hospital employs only the barest minimum number of attendants. Living quarters are demoralizing, being dimly-lit, bare-walled, and crowded. These conditions are especially evident on the "back," "locked" wards, where we dump the "refuse" of our society onto chairs, which line the long, dark corridors. These people, who just "don't count," are simply left to their own worlds, day after day, year after year.

Being responsible for this human injustice means that we, as functioning members of society, are also partly responsible for a solution to this problem. Action is already being initiated in higher circles. Recruitment of mental health workers is on the upswing, legislators are appropriating more money, plans for better facilities are being made, and preventitive measures are being more widely used. Yes, society is "coming to the rescue," but it will take many years before we fill the gap between the present conditions and the future ideals. Herein lies our specific responsibility as college students who are aware of today's conditions. We are in a position to ameliorate the present conditions, in a small but significant way.

For the past few years, a small group of students have met at the Student Union on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. From the Union, they go in student cars to the Memorial Wing of the Northampton State Mental Hospital. There they meet a hospital supervisor, students from Smith College, and an occasional student from other colleges in the area. These volunteers, armed with table games, records, musical instruments, arts-and-crafts projects, play-ground balls and just themselves, invade the "locked" wards. The everyday picture of people silently sitting in chairs against the walls is transformed into a lively mosaic of singing, talking, bean-bag tossing, checker-playing, and happy laughing. At nine o'clock, the students, depart, hearing phrases of: "I'll beat you next time at Rummy," "Remember to bring pictures of your family," "Thanks for the cigarettes," or, "I'll see you next week!" In short, the students are making life a little more bearable and happy for these forgotten patients. The student is not expected to conduct therapy—his purpose is to help the patient relate, in a meaningful way, to the people and the world around himself. The very fact of the student's presence conveys to the patient, the ideas that "somebody cares," and "maybe the outside world isn't so bad after all."

Our Service Fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega, has recognized our responsibility to Northampton State Mental Hospital, by their sponsorship of the magazine drive, which will take place on March 20, 21, and 22. Any magazines will be greatly appreciated by the patients. (As a point of information, there are hardly any magazines to go around for the patients.) These magazine drives have been successful in the past, and it is hoped that this drive will be no exception. If the students cannot come to the Hospital, the next best thing is to help the magazine drive be a success. In one way or another, we must let the patients know that "somebody Cares."

BETWEEN

THERE'S A WIDE RANGE OF OPPORTUNITY
IN THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES

To outer space and into the deep sea, we take the sum total of our scientific and managerial knowledge. A case in point is Telstar, which represents the first step toward a worldwide communications system. Another example, the new deep-sea amplifier that simultaneously transmits two-way messages. Both communications triumphs stem from Bell System planning, research and development.

Such trailblazing projects command the best of managerial and scientific talent. That's why you'll find, throughout the Bell System, men with college training as diverse as the responsibilities they shoulder. Their backgrounds run the gamut from liberal arts and business courses to science or specialized engineering majors.

Admittedly, the work is demanding. It requires that unusual caliber of man who finds a greater satisfaction in challenge than in ready solution . . . who is eager to see his education yield dividends . . . who wants an immediate opportunity for leadership.

Men with this kind of impatience will discover the stimulation, welcome and rewards they seek in the telephone business.

UMass AAUP Chapter Supports Fiscal Autonomy

The UMass chapter of the American Association of University Professors has re-affirmed its support both of fiscal autonomy for the University and of a merit system for its faculty, it was announced earlier this week by Dr. Leila Sussmann, president of the AAUP chapter.

Dr. Sussmann reported that in a meeting held earlier this week, the chapter had adopted a 2-page statement on the issues of fiscal autonomy and of discretionary merit salary increases.

The statement declared that "fiscal autonomy is indispensable to the further development of the University of Massachusetts and that the principle of reward for demonstrated professional merit is indispensable to the further development of an excellent faculty."

The statement listed a 7-step procedure in the interests of fair and objective personnel actions that has been in effect since 1960. It also said that "the best interests of the University and the Commonwealth will be served if the University is free to grant such salary increases as are available across-the-board or on individual merit as is deemed most advantageous for the development of its functions."

The AAUP chapter at the University has 150 members, including professors from every college of the University.

Tea To Honor Students From New Mexico & Fla.

Cold winters mean many things to native Massachusetts residents. Campus reactions to snow range from a Robert Frost vision of peaceful fields to buried Volkswagens. To the exchange students of ..ew Mexico and Florida, snow is only one in a series of new experiences. We, of the University community, hope these students do not depart with a belief in the legend of cold New Englanders.

At 4 p.m. on Sunday, March 15, there will be a tea in honor of the exchange students. This event, sponsorsd by the Special Events Committee, will be held in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. The public is cordially invited. This is an excellent opportunity to prove that our weather does not reflect our temperment.

The Vernacular

by INEZ BRAND

Does anybody know Charlie Brown? Charlie Brown and I often see eye-to-eye, mind-to-mind. As a result of this empathy, I am writing him a list of Happiness from the UMass campus:

Happiness is an "A."
Happiness is Spring vacation.
Happiness is ROTC exemption.
Happiness is a letter from home with money in it.
Happiness is the late, late show.
Happiness is being chosen Miss Campus Chest.
Happiness is our College Bowl Team.
Happiness is a Beatle album.
Happiness is a professor who is late to class.
Happiness is a scholarship.
Happiness is an inexpensive textbook.
On the other hand,
Misery is a letter from home with no money in it.
Misery is the life of a pledge.
Misery is a surprise quiz.
Misery is the Common's cuisine.
Misery is mud.
Misery is "use correct change only."
Misery is quiet hours.
Misery is required courses.
Misery is a field trip in the rain.
Misery is an 8:00 class.

UMass beard-growers! Here is a quick history of your kind. In the 4th Century B.C., Alexander the Great ordered his legions to shave—not for appearbershop music originated when ance, but because a beard gave the enemy an excellent "handhold" in man-to-man combat. The barbers of England incorporated in 1461 and were included in the company of surgeons. Just imagine the myriads of absent-minded professors who went in for an appendectomy and came out with a shave and a haircut. In 1610, Louis XIII of France, who was unable to grow a beard himself, ordered his subjects to shave daily. Barcustomers knew they were in for a long wait. The Beatles are still waiting maybe. In World War I, Johnny doughboy established the "clean-shaven American look" in our foreign policp. More recently the "ugly American" hid his face with a beard and thus synthesized the "beat generaiton." Other than that, beards have never made a big comeback. That's a good thing.

Bagels And Blarney

by DAVE GITELSON and DICK DOHERTY

With the current popularity of the Folk Music of other countries, we find Irish music holding its own. Outstanding in this line are Tom Makem and the Clancy Brothers, with the hearty and hellish traditions from the green shore.

The boys have been playing together for almost four years now and their albums and public appearances have been accepted enthusiastically.

All the boys are fine actors as well as singers and prove this in many theater productions.

LIAM CLANCY, the youngest, came to the U.S. in 1956. He was associated with the Poet's Theatre in Cambridge, Mass., and since moving to N. Y., appeared in "Guests of the Native" by Frank O'Connor, and was last seen in Brandon Behan's "The Quare Fellow."

Sean Clancy's acting career started in Ireland and England where he was associated with a Shakespearean repertory company. In this country he has been associated with the "Cleveland Players," the Provincetown Playhouse, and founded "Tro Productions" in New York. He has appeared in Orson Welles' production of "King Lear," in the Phoenix Theatre's presentation of Shaw's "St. Joan"; Eugene O'Neill's "The Touch of a Poet"; and the Musical Juno.

PATRICK CLANCY, the elder of the Three Clancys, has done some acting, but has been more interested in traveling and collecting folk music. He acts as arranger and director for the group.

TOMMY MAKEM, who comes from the north of Ireland, also appeared in "Guest's of the Nation" and later in "Playboy of the Western World." Tom is an accomplished musician and specializes in the tin whistle, the warpipes, piccolo, and banjo.

The boys as a group hit out with the traditional Irish drinking and fighting songs, with the strength of good Irish lullaby and ballard like an Irishman with none of the same.

Some of the better (but they're all good) albums are "The Clancy Brothers & Tommy Makem," "The Boy Won't Leave the Girls Alone," and "Hearty &Hellish."

"Are You A Gossip-Monger?" Listen To Midday Report

by SHERRY SPEAR

It was 9:31 p.m., 1 minute after the meeting was adjourned and the room was already deserted. Cigarette butts, crumpled ballots and disarrayed chairs were the only evidence besides five grinning Umies that the 1964-65 WMUA officers had been elected by the station body. The newly chosen executives of WMUA are:

Station Manager — Ron Engel
Program Director — Bill Bastable
Business Manager — Ginny Robare
Technology Director — George Drake
Publicity Director — Marie Cappadona

These are the people who will determine WMUA's future. If you have any questions or suggestions, make it a point to talk to them.

ARE YOU A GOSSIP-monger? Do you hunger to know the latest news so you can gallop down to the Hatch and overwhelm your friends? "The Midday Report" Sundays at 12 p.m. is WMUA's half-hour news report in depth. Bill Bastable and Jack Weld alternate to fill your little newsy heart to the brim.

If you join "Coffee on Campus" Saturday for a cup of coffee, you'll drown. "Coffee on Campus" is being experimentally expanded to make that meter register from 7 to 1 when "Potpourri" is on the air. Mike Duggan, your host, will be providing coke music from 12-1 with the latest instrumentals.

Travel once again to the land of the Lilliputians when Dr. Charles Olmstead presents Part II of the critical analysis of Swift's "Gulliver's Travels" Monday at 7 on the Ed Block.

Boys—wouldn't you like to hear a sultry female voice talk to you? Girls—wouldn't you like some feminine type news? Saturday from 4 - 6, "Women's World" pushes the men OUT from behind the controlboard and the girls take over. Genie Wisiolek, Pat Barnett and Luci Norris keep you up-to-date on campus and country chatter mixed in with music, news and time checks.

Avoid the spring rush, although the station is getting drafty, our doors are open to anyone interested in any phase of radio work.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Our pledges were the center of attraction this weekend. It was Alpha Chi's pledge formal which was held in the Coachlight Room of the Hotel Northampton. An excellent dinner preceded a festive evening of dancing to the music of Tony Ravosa. Invited guests included Mrs. Vera Shepard, Mr. James Cobb, Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell and Mr. and Mrs. Janet Middleton. Alums who attended Alpha Chi's annual dinner dance were Donna Lee Bonner, Dianne Tyrell and Lisa Nordberg. Toward the middle of the evening, everyone's attention turned to the presentation of our pledges: 1965 — Meredith Farrell and Margaret Gibson; 1966—Ellen Fiske, Carol Kalbko, Dianne LaFrance, Suzanne McDonald, Christine Poshkus and Marcia Soule; 1967—Eileen Blanchette, Ann Cygan, Karen Gavutis, Susan Keefe, Barbara Newman, Paula Ostermecki, Nancy Reid, Laurie Schmidt, Elaine Slavinsky, Phyllis Sobel, Elaine Stawasb, Linda EStetson, Ann Tierney and Anne Yakavonis. Many thanks to our Social Chairman, Barbara Gregory, who made the evening most successful.

Good luck to Jack Striano, Alpha Chi's nomination for Miss Campus Chest. You really look authentic, Jack, oops, ... I mean, Lady Bird.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Phi is beginning to settle down after the excitement of initiation and pledging. We are happy to welcome fifteen new sisters. They are: Pam Brady and Gail McLean, both juniors; Kathy McCarthy, a sphomore; and Ann Grafton, Barb Hannon, Pris Harteman, Ellen Hatch, Donna Leach, Kathy Merritt, Sue Neet, Cee-Jay Smith, Jane Stumpf, Donna Sullo, Carole Swift and Carol Wiggins, all class of '67. Congratulaitons are also in order for our five new pledges—Judy Proctor, Kathy Pressey, Jean Jeffords, Linda Martin and Jean Scafati.

We would like to thank the brothers of AEPi for making our exchange with them so interesting and enjoyable.

WAA News

The WAA Basketball Playday held last Saturday afternoon was a huge success, more so because UMass came out on top, defeating several fine teams. Among the teams which participated were: Springfield College, Colby Jr. College, Keene State Teachers College, Sargent College, Mt. Holyoke and UMass.

UMass won their first four games over Colby (32-12), Keene (41-10), Sargent (20-17), and Mt. Holyoke (17-14) in order to gain a playoff berth against Springfield College, who also reached the playoffs. In an exciting finale UMass edged the Springfield team, 24-23. The victory was especially sweet since Springfield had defeated UMass twice this year, prior to the playday.

The big guns for the UMass team were Carol Sullivan and Mary O'Toole; but special credit must be given to Marilyn Cairns, Jo-Anne Murphy, Nan Nichols, Sheron Stilman and Barb Dion for the tremendous team effort they showed. The team's record now stands at six wins and three games and loosing only one. losses.

UMass' second team also did a fine job Saturday winning three Both teams are coached by Miss Alice Strudzinsky.

Co-Ed's Compete For Milk

Saturday, March 14th, co-ed's from the University of Massachusetts' campus will compete in the annual Co-ed Milking Contest. This contest is a special feature of the Little International Livestock Show that is held yearly at Grinnell Arena on the University of Massachusetts campus. Girl's dorms and sororities enter participants who compete against one another. Each girl must run the length of Grinnell Arena, operate the proper spigot on one of the dairy cows that are "standing by" for the occasion, fill a test tube with milk, and run back the length of the Arena to the starting point. The contest winner is awarded an imported China Jug and Sugar Bowl donated by the American Guernsey Cattle Club. Ribbons are presented to the top four girls. Since space is limited in the Arena, the contestants are run in heats against time. The fact that the contest rules prohibit the participation of any co-ed who has ever milked a cow adds interest to the event. The cooperation or lack of cooperation of the cows and the manner in which their spigots are operated adds zest to the event.

Francis Named To Food Tech Chair

Dr. Frederick J. Francis, a UMass faculty member since 1954, has been named the University's first Nicolas Appert Professor of Food Science and Technology, President John W. Lederle announced yesterday.

The Appert professorship, the first endowed chair in the University's history, was established in January by the University and the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, Inc. (GCMI). GCMI provides major financial support for the chair.

The chair commemorates the achievement of Nicolas Appert, a French candy marker who invented the technique of preserving perishable foods in glass containers by heat processing in the early 1800's.

The department of food science and technology, in the College of Agriculture, is the oldest such department in the U.S. It was formally established in 1918.

DR. F. J. FRANCIS

Capt. Huggins To Viet Nam

Captain Charles B. Huggins of the University's Army ROTC detachment will leave the University March 16 to receive training in preparation for his assignment to a command in Viet Nam.

He has served at the University since June 1961, when he returned from a three year assignment in Germany.

Capt. Huggins played a key part in the voluntary ROTC reorganization.

Seek Help For Critique

The initial stages of the creation of the new magazine, Critique, have just been completed. The gathering of data and writing of sample critiques have made it possible for the staff to begin setting up the magazine itself.

Through the efforts of Editorial Editor, Rita Crosby, the various writings are being compiled into usuable form. Although many students have already contributed to the progress of Critique, there is a definite need for more writers of both critiques and feature articles. The Art Staff, which is in charge of drawing the caricatures of professors which will appear with each critique, has also put forth a call for help from any interested students.

State House Lauds C-Bowl

State Senate President John Powers interrupted a roll-call vote of the body yesterday to introduce the UMass College Bowl team. Introducing the team, Powers praised their accomplishments, pointing out that the University is now competitive with the best colleges in the nation.

Team captain Bill Landis, addressing the Senate, said that the team was proud to represent the University. He thanked them for their continuing interest and support of the University of Massachusetts.

Dave Mathieson added that the team was proud not only to represent the University, but was doubly proud that it was able to show the quality of education available in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

At the conclusion of the team members talk, Senate President Powers presented them the gavel that he was using.

The team members were introduced to various representatives, and were escorted on a tour of the State House by area representatives: James Nolan, Dave Bartley, Sen. Charles Bisbee and Governor Peabody's legislative assistant, Jack Sweeney.

Governor Endicott Peabody initiated team members into the Order of Paul Revere Patriots, which among other privileges afforded members gives "the right to dump tea in Boston Harbor."

Campus Chest Aids So. African Group

This year Campus Chest has pledged 40 per cent of the funds collected to the World University Service project to aid non-whites in South Africa.

SACHED is the South African Committee for Higher Education launched in 1959 by those opposed to the South African government's policy of discrimination. Since the 1948 accession to power of the Nationalist Party, the government, dominated by 3,000,000 whites, has ruled 13,000,000 non-whites on an arbitrary and totalitarian basis.

There is discrimination in every area of life: non-whites are subject to "pass laws" requiring them to carry passes at all times; the Bantu Education Act prepares non-whites for deliberately inferior labor status; the No Trial Legislation Act has effectively abolished the rule of law insofar as it existed.

Non-whites have no representation in Parliament and no way to seek redress of wrongs or grievances. All university efforts supporting the cause of freedom have been squelched. Most liberal white lecturers and professors have left the country and those remaining are either apartheid supporters or are firmly committed to not provoking the government.

SACHED was established to help remedy this situation in the area of education. They initiated a tutorial system, supported mainly by World University Service funds, prepared students for the General Certificate Examination and then provided courses of study leading to a degree from the University of London.

But SACHED has suffered from great difficulties. Many of the 103 students enrolled in the program had to drop out because of obstacles created by discriminatory laws, others were only part-time students, and others had to travel as far as 30 miles to a SACHED center.

Because of these difficulties the World University Service, in the summer of 1963, took a decisive step in setting up the WUS South Africa Study Freedom Fund with an initial target of $35,000 in 1964.

This fund will enable WUS to provide higher education outside of South Africa for the non-white students. Study places and scholarships are being sought in other African countries and perhaps in Asia.

The importance of this project is stressed in this quote from the WUS newsletter (February, 1964):

"No other country in the world is deliberately limiting the educational opportunities of the majority of its population as is the Republic of South Africa. Emergency counter measures are called for. We urge all students and faculty to support the cooperative effort of the South Africa Study Freedom Fund to insure that genuine higher education continues to be available for qualified non-white students from South Africa."

Artist Sees Art & Religion Relation

"Art and religion are very closely related. So much so that art in its purest form tends to be an expression of man's attempts to make statements concerning his religious experience."

In this manner Philadelphia artist Lynda McNeur began a recent article entitled "Dialogues." Next week the dialogue between art and religion will continue on campus. In the main lounge of Memorial Hall, March 15-22, there will be an exhibit of Mrs. McNeur's work. The public is cordially invited to attend free of charge. Also available will be copies of the artist's article, "Dialogues."

Thursday evening, March 19, at 8 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union Lynda McNeur will discuss the "encounter between religion and art." Once again the community is invited to participate in the dialogue.

"Girls, The Field's Wide Open" Women Needed In Wood Sci.

by LORNA SASS

"You'd be Amazed!" is the title of the Forestry Department's display in the lobby case of the Student Union. I certainly was! Realization that there's wood in my clothing and that a hot and wet wooden coffee spoon is really supposed to bend came as quite a shock. Not only that, in tracking down this story I was the lucky recipient of a grand tour of the department's new building, Holdsworth Hall.

GIRLS, THE FIELD'S wide open!! According to Dr. Harold Gatslick, head of wood science and technology, "We need women to help us approach the science of wood from the practical angle." For instance, how many of you know that it's much less tiring to walk on a wooden floor than a linoleum one? It is wood's resiliency that makes the big difference.

Dr. Gatslick certainly includes the guys as well when he enthusiastically states, "The demand for technically trained personnel far exceeds the supply, and the potential is great." To mention only a few, there are opportunities in Production and Industrial Engineering, Wood Finishing, Wood Preservation and Research and Development.

UMass offers several undergraduate and graduate programs in wood technology. This relatively new field grew out of the realm of forestry because of the great adaptability and use for wood as an engineering material. Dr. Bruce Hoadley, Dr. Gatslick's colleague, quickly added, "Most prejudice against using wood has come from the misuse of it. We have now developed methods of combining wood with fiber glass, aluminum and many other materials to make it an even more important aid to engineering projects today."

Programs offered here involve combinations of courses to develop skills in communication, marketing, management and engineering based on wood and its related technology. There is a two-year program offered through the Stockbridge School of Agriculture and a four-year program through the University.

WOOD PRODUCTS contribute one billion dollars yearly to the gross national product of the United States. Why don't you be the first on your block to get in on the deal? Take a walk down to Holdsworth Hall (in back of Stockbrdige Hall) and see for yourself what it has to offer. If you're lucky enough to find Mr. Gatslick or Mr. Hoadley around, you'll undoubtedly receive the finest of hospitality.

Indoor Track Team Whips Connecticut

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity indoor track team closed out its dual meet season Tuesday when the Redmen trampled UConn at Storrs by a score of 77-36. This gives UMass at 2-1 record. Many fine performances were turned in by the Redmen. John Harrington had one of his finest nights ever when he won both the high and low hurdles. John's time of :08.0 in the 60 yard highs set a new school record. The old record was :08.2. Jim Wrynn ran a fine 1:15.3 six hundred to set a meet record, the second fastest 600 ever run by a Redman. Ken O'Brien's record is 1:14.6. Jim stands an excellent chance of bettering this Saturday when the team competes in the Yan. Con. Championships at Orono, Maine.

JOHN MEDERIOS WON THE 60 YARD DASH (6.6) and the high jump (5'10"), while taking second in the broad jump and low hurdles Doug Renwick showed the results of long, hard practice as he took second in the shot-put with a heave of 43'7½". This is Doug's best ever, and he should go further.

BOB BROUILLET RAN A FINE DOUBLE as he won both the mile (4:24.1) and the 2-mile (9:41.9) with complete ease. Tom Panke took second in the mile and Bob Ramsey took a second in the two mile. Bob Molvar fought off Bob Larson to take the 1,000 in 2:22.3; Dave Sullivan was third. Co-captain Dave Sadowsky should be awarded medals instead of points. Despite being completely handicapped by having no place to work out, Dave continually jumps amazingly well. He took second with a leap of 12'. This is a truly fine leap when one realizes that Dave has no place to practice jumping. Bob Murray also did a fine job as he cleared 11'6" for third place. The mile relay team of Craig Erickson (3rd in the 600), Dave Sullivan, Gene Colburn and Jim Collins swept to an easy victory with a time of 3:41.2.

THIS SATURDAY THE TEAM WILL TRAVEL to Orono, Maine, to compete in the first annual Yankee Conference Indoor Track Championships. Maine will be definitely favored, on the basis of their performance this year as well as the fact that they won the Yan. Con. Spring Track Championships this past fall. The Redmen will be the dark horses. Coach Footrick's chargers have a chance to knock Maine off, but it will require top performances from everyone. UMass's strong events will be the one mile, two mile, 600, dash and high jump. If the Redmen do as well as is expected in these events, and picks up some points in several other places, Coach Footrick could come home with a Yan. Con. Championship.

ers in the tournament and received additional votes for All-American honors by the other coaches present.

Closing the season with a 9 and 6 record the team lost only to Army, Navy, Coast Guard, and Villanova — the major powerhouses in the country. In tournament competition the team broke two records by winning the Air Force Intercollegiate Open at Hanscom AFB earlier in the season and by taking first place honors in the National Rifle Association Sectional Tournament. It shattered another record by 1082, the highest score ever fired by a UMass team in NRA Tournament competition.

As the team ends its most successful season they will conduct a Pistol Shooting Clinic at Dickinson Hall Range for the rest of the month of March. The object of the clinic is to recruit new shooters to fill the ranks of the departing seniors. Of particular interest are second semester Freshmen and all upperclassmen who would be eligible (under NCAA and ECAC rules) for next season. Interested persons can report to the clinic on Tuesdays and Thursday from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., or contact Coach McGinnis at Dickinson Hall, extension 2321, or 2322.

Eastern NCAA Regional; Princeton vs. Connecticut

by JOHN GOODRICH

The battle for the NCAA basketball championship continues tonight at four different locations across the country. The original field of 25 has been cut to 16, and after the games tonight, the four teams that will proceed to Kansas City for the finals will be determined.

THE EASTERN REGIONALS will be played at Raleigh, N.C. The first game will match the Duke Blue Devils against the Villanova Wildcats. The winner of this game will be a heavy favorite to earn the trip to K.C. The second game will match Ivy League champion Princeton and Bill Bradley against Yankee Conference champ UConn, and their tight zone defense. The Huskies produced the only surprise of the first round with their victory over Temple 53-48. UConn got a fine performance out of Bill Della Salla and some crucial foul shots from Dan Hesford to win.

Villanova used a good defensive job on John Thompson as the key to their victory over Providence. The big boy was held to 18 points and only 3 rebounds as the Friars bowed 77-66. The Wildcats showed real balance in their triumph. The Tigers of Princeton used the performance of Bradley to carry them to an 84-60 win over VMI. The sensational All-American had 34 points, 12 rebounds, and 8 assists. UConn will have to shut off this one man gang if they want to reach the finals. The losers will play the first game on Saturday night to determine "third place" in the East.

IN THE MIDEAST REGIONALS at Minneapolis, the Kentucky Wildcats start their quest for the top spot when they meet Ohio University, upset victor over Louisville in the play-downs. The other game will match defending champion Loyola of Chicago against Big Ten Champion Michigan. Loyola downed Murray St. in the playdowns. After 14 minutes of the game, Murray was on top 21-8. Then the high scoring Ramblers broke loose and outscored Murray 31-5 to take a 39-26 lead on their way to final margin of 101-91.

IN THE MIDWEST REGIONALS at Wichita, Creighton will face Wichita after earning the right to face the Wheatshockers by downing Oklahoma City. The other game will match Texas Western, upset winner over Texas A&M, against Big Eight champ Kansas State.

THE FAR WEST REGIONAL at Eugene, Oregon wil be one of the real centers of attention. Utah State will meet San Francisco, since the former dumped Arizona State. The second game will feature Seattle, a team that down Oregon State who had beaten Seattle twice previously, against the top ranked team in the country, the Bruins of UCLA. This club should have little trouble advancing to Kansas City, but must be wary of any team. Every one will be shooting to upset the Uclans.

The best bets to reach K.C. along with UCLA would have to be Duke, Kentucky, and Wichita. Villanova, Michigan or Loyola could spring an upset and make that trip as well.

The other big post season event, the NIT, swung into action Thursday night. Depaul is the top ranked team for the event, but the club will have to be wary of Drake. Also, in the field is NYU, a team the experts picked for No. 2 in the country in the pre-season polls. The Violets are rich in talent despite the fact they hold only a 15-8 record and could be a real dark horse.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES: Loyola was the top team in that pre-season poll, and they finished in the No. 8 slot . . . Kentucky did about the best of the rest of the top clubs . . . They were picked for 3 or 4 and finished 2.

MASSACHUSETTS PICKED THEIR ALL-OPPONENT TEAM this week. It was made up of five juniors, with Toby Kimball of UConn the only unanimous choice . . . Others were Warren Isaacs of Iona, Ken McIntyre of St. John's, Rich Tarrant of St. Michael's, and Steve Chubin of Rhode Island . . .

The second team consisted of John Austin of Boston College, Ken Wirell of St. John's, John Thompson of Providence, John Kendelken of Holy Cross and Joe Kelly also of the Cross . . . Mass will be facing most of that first team again next eyar, not too enviable a thought . . .

team in field goal percentage with .489 to Twitchell's .481. He hit double figures 16 times with a 23-point, 21-rebound game at Rutgers being his best.

AS A TEAM THE REDMEN EMERGED as the top point producers in UMass history by scoring 2,012 points for an 83.8 average. This was good enough to keep the Redmen among the top 20 scoring teams in the nation most of the season. UMass broke the century mark three time with 120, 115, and 101. The Redmen also set records for field goals in a half, game and season; points in a half and game, and top field goal percentage.

Little Redmen End Successfully

Seven wins in the final eight games gave the University of Massachusetts freshmen basketball team its third straight winning season under Coach Jack Leaman. The Little Redmen finished with an 8-5 record giving Leaman a three-year record of 33 wins and 11 losses.

A WELL-BALANCED OFFENSE featured the Little Redmen efforts this winter. The UM frosh had four players averaging 12 points or better led by Jim Babyak (Easthampton) with a 16.9 average. The hustling Babyak connected on 53% of his field goal attempts and 74% of his free throws to total 220 points.

Frank Stewart (Lynnfield), 6'3" center, ranked second in scoring with a 15.5 average. Stewart led the team in field goal percentage with .602 and rebounds with an 11.3 average. His top performance was a 32-point, 22-rebound effort against Westover Air Force Base.

Third in the scoring race was backcourtman Mike Meola (Schenectady, N.Y.) who scored 192 points for a 14.8 mark. Mike connected at a .466 field goal pace and .652 from the foul line. It was his outside shooting that was a key in the frosh offense. Meola and Babyak team up to become highly adept at leading the frosh fast-break attack.

Another top frosh performer was 6'3" John Lisack (Allendale, N.J.) who averaged 12.2 points per game and was the second rebounder with a 7.2 average. Lisack had trouble with his shooting during the early part of the year but made 37 of his last 64 field goal tries to finish with a respectable .445 shooting mark.

The fifth starter was Bob Murphy (No. Andover) who averaged 8.8 points and played solid basketball the second half of the schedule. Murphy connected on 28 of his final 40 field goal attempts and finished with a .566 percentage to rank second on the team. The top reserves on the team were guard Larry Martin (New Bedford), forward Jim Hadfield (Worcester) and center Bob Foley (Winchester).

AS A TEAM THE LITTLE REDMEN shot at a 47% clip from the field and a 61% pace from the foul line while averaging 82.5 points per game. Three times they broke the century mark with totals of 105, 104 and 102.

Maroon Pistol Team Dominates Tournament

Living up to all expectation, the UMass Pistol Team completely overshadowed all other competitors in the Kings Point Open Invitational and National Rifle Association Sectional Tournament at Kings Point, New York Saturday. Entering two four man squads, one in the A Division and one in the B Division, the Redmen copped first place team honors in each division. Individually, the team members accounted for 18 trophies leaving only 6 to be distributed among the other seven squads representing Brown, MIT and the host school, the United States Marine Academy.

IN THE MORNING MATCHES all teams appeared to be pretty well matched. However, as time wore on the experience and ability of the Redmen began to show. By noontime UMass had placed winners in the individual events in the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 8th, and 9th positions. In the early afternoon events both the UMass Maroon and White squads exploded. From that point on it was a total runaway for UMass. The Maroon squad in the A Division scored a whopping 1082 out of a possible 1200 points, its nearest competitor was Kings Point with a 1023. Individual scoring in this event was led by All-American Nominee Dan Sullivan with 283, followed by last year's team captain Dave Naylor with 270, and Sophomore Eric Mussen, who had put on a terrific demonstration of pistal shooting all day and placed third with 265. Captain Jack Kelly was in fourth place with 264.

The White squad competing in the B Division was paced by Captain George Wietecha with 248, followed by Paul Goldberg with 243, Roger Yee with 241, and anchor man Pete Thomas with 228. The White squad's score of 960 was only five points behind the fourth place A Division squad from Brown.

THE INDIVIDUAL AWARDS RECEIVED are indicative of the intense spirit and drive which the UMass team displayed. All but two members of the 8 man team received individual recognition. Showing all the confidence that has been lacking in some of the regular season matches, the team lived up to its pre-season promise of being the best in the history of the University and one of the best teams on the East Coast. Although it is too early to tell accurately, its score of 1082 when compared to last season's standings should place the team within the top ten teams nation wide. According to Coach McGinnis the team put on one of the most fantastic shooting performances ever witnessed by the coaches and officials. Both All-American candidates, Dave Naylor and Dan Sullivan were unanimously acclaimed as the outstanding shoot-

Rothchild First In N. E. Freestyle

SPORTS FLASH last night, at the Boyden Building pool, MIKE ROTHSCHILD, a UMass senior, set the pace in winning the 1,650 yard freestyle event.

HIS TIME OF 18:39.8 WAS ONLY 9 OF A SECOND OFF THE NEW ENGLAND RECORD MARK. Second in the event was Ridder of Williams College. This prime performance situates the Redmen in a tie with Williams for first place, and excellent position for the crown.

Preliminary heats for various events are scheduled for this afternoon at 2 p.m. and tonight, beginning at 7:30. Final heats will be held Saturday.

Statistics Show Cagers Top Point Producers

Backcourt sparkplug Pete Bernard (Brockton) led the University of Massachusetts varsity basketball team in eight categories this winter. Bernard, 5'8" co-captain, scored 469 points in 24 games for a 19.5 average.

He also was tops in field goal attempts, 464, field goals, 194, free throws attempted, 107, free throws, 81, free throw percentage, .757 and assists, 94. Bernard hit double figures in every game, thirteen times scoring 20 or more. His high was a 32-point effort against Maine with 29-point games against St. Peter (N.J.) and Rhode Island. His 194 field goals rank second for one season in UMass records, and his 469 points has been topped only by Doug Grutchfield '61 with 506, and Bill Prevey '52 with 474.

Junior frontcourtman Charlie O'Rourke (Hadley) ranked second with 358 points and a 14.9 average. The 6'7" hustler grabbed a record amount of rebounds, 308, averaging 12.8 per game, and was second in field goal attempts, field goals and assists. O'Rourke scored in double figures in 21 games with highs of 25 against St. John's and 24 against St. Michael's and New Hampshire.

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN RODGER TWITCHELL (Westfield, N.J.), hampered by a broken nose in mid-season, scored only 304 points after outstanding soph and junior years of 408 and 439. Twitchell, 6'6" forward, still connected on .481 of his field goal attempts and 200 rebounds while averaging 13.8 points. Twitchell finished as the second top scorer in UM annals with 1,151 points. He ranks as the top field goal shooter with a 3-year mark of .483, making 444 of 920 attempts; and the second best rebounder with 766 missing Grutchfield's mark of 782. His top performances were 32 points against St. Peter's and 22 the next day against Fairfield leading UMass to the Richmond County Invitational Tourney title and earning him the Most Valuable Player Trophy. Rodger's top clutch shot of the year was a 15-foot jumper with three seconds left in the third overtime period to award the Redmen an exciting victory at St. Michael's.

Sophomore Tim Edwards (Duquesne, Pa.) was the other Redman in double figures, Tim, 6'4", scored 260 points for a 10.8 average and snared 231 rebounds for a 9.1 mark. Edwards topped the

Women's Ski Team Captures Fifth

At the annual WISC banquet for the women's ski teams on Saturday, March 7, the results for the season's races were announced. UMass placed 5th out of 10 loosing to Bradford Jr. 4th, Mt. Holyoke 3rd, Wellesley 2nd, and Boston University 1st. Individually team captain Jean Craigin placed in the top 10 and Kathy Pressey on the top 20. Sally Gerry also placed.

THE RACES INCLUDED IN THE TABULATIONS were two held on the weekend of Feb. 29. The first was a Slalom at Intervale on a short, but tricky course. UMass took 8th. Sunday, the 16th Annual Boston University Alpine Ski race was a giant slalom held at Pleasant Mountain, Maine, in conjunctiion with the men's teams in NEISC. Both conferences ran the same rugged course in overcast weather. Skiing on the upper part of the course was poor with ice and bare spots showing while the lower part was good. UMass women took 5th place with Jean Craigin 5th and Kathy Pressey 13th. Jeanne Brown and Carol Durna also raced well.

During spring vacation the team is planning a week long training camp to be held at Killington in preparation for next year.

South College Aid Asked In New Spring Day Bid

There will be a Spring Day on the University of Massachusetts campus this year. That is, if 12 upperclassmen can convince the University administration to agree to one.

In a letter, received today by President Lederle, Deans Field, Hopkins and Curtis, the twelve asked for the cooperation of the Administration in the planning and execution of a Spring Day.

The traditional Spring Day which the campus celebrated for many years was abolished late in the fifties when it was believed that the University had grown too large for such vernal enjoyment.

It was on Spring Day that in mid-morning the chapel bells would ring, a one day holiday from classes would be called by all, and the students would then gather around the campus pond for a day that easily won young men's fancy.

The exact date of the Spring Day was kept secret from everybody in the campus community except members of the Administration and the students planning the event.

The letter to the four administrators was signed by twelve students, all active in campus extracurricular pursuits. They are: Jim Medeiros, President of the class of 1964; Judith Clarke, Mortar Board; Stephen Gray, President of IFC; Bev Bothelo, President of Mortarboard; Manny Smith, Member of Adelphia; Dave Clancy, President of Adelphia; Margaret Walter, Women's Judiciary; Ray Kodzis, Vice-president of the class of 1964; Jim O'Hearn, former WMUA Station Manager, Jeff Davidow, Editor of the Collegian; Joan Labuzoski, Vice President of the Senate; and Bruce Albro, Men's Judiciary.

Late President Kennedy Honored In Tomorrow's "Tribute Of Arts"

The late President John F. Kennedy will be honored at tomorrow's "Tribute of the Arts," a special program to be given at the University as one of the major events of this year's Fine Arts Festival.

The program, to be presented in the Student Union Ballroom tomorrow at 11:15 a.m., will have students and faculty members as featured participants. Members of the campus community and the general public are cordially invited to attend.

The memorial program will begin with introductory remarks by Frederick C. Ellert, Head of the Department of German and Russian.

Following Professor Ellert's remarks, the University Woodwind Quintet will perform the Sarabande in D minor from J. S. Bach's First French Suite. The Quintet, under faculty director Joseph Contino, includes Katherine Yobst '64, flute; Elaine Howe '66, oboe; Allen Blustine '64, clarinet; Kenneth Sherk '66, bassoon; and Charles Rosoff '65, French horn.

Edward O'Connor, a member of the class of 1964, will read one of President Kennedy's favorite poems, "The Gift Outright." The poem, by Robert Frost, was read by the poet himself at Mr. Kennedy's inaugural in 1961.

Three original poems will be presented by members of the English Department: "A Memorial for President Kennedy," by Robert G. Tucker; "In Arlington Cemetery," by G. Stanley Koehler; and "Sacrifice of My Neighbors," by Joseph Langland.

Georgia Reid, choreographer and dancer, a member of the Department of Physical Education for Women, will perform a tribute in dance to the music of Bach. Appearing with Miss Reid, who choreographed the dance presentation, will be two students, Elaine Baxter '64 and Catherine Noel '65.

The powerful "St. Crispin" speech from Shakespeare's Henry V will be given by Seymour Rudin, a member of the English Department faculty who has been a featured actor in many dramatic productions. Doris Abramson, director and actress, and a member of the faculty of the Department of Speech, will read Shakespeare's Sonnet LXXI and the Song from Cymbeline.

The program will conclude with an original musical work composed especially for the program honoring the late President. The composition, entitled Memorial, is written for concert band and organ and will be performed by its composer, Elliott Schwartz, organ soloist, and the University of Massachusetts Concert Band under John W. Jenkins.

Henry Purcell's Trumpet Voluntary will be performed in a Chapel chime concert by Valerie Dubois '65. The chime performance will be heard both before and after the program in the Ballroom.

Miss Abramson is coordinating the staging of the program. Harold W. Watts, Director of the Student Union Program Office, is in charge of technical details.

Chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the Kennedy tribute is Miss Eva Schiffer, assistant professor of German. Committee members include: Jon Fife '64, president of the Student Senate; William F. Field, Dean of Students; Albert W. Purvis, Dean of the School of

Medeiros Made Head Of Kennedy Library Fund Drive

James A. Medeiros, '64, has been appointed chairman of the local Kennedy Library Committee.

The local committee is part of the National Student Committee which wil coordinate fund-raising drives during late April on 2100 campuses for the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library in Boston. The National Student Committee was formed by the Kennedy Library Corporation in response to requests from students across the nation who wished to contribute to the Kennedy Library in some way.

The Corporation will build the library on a site on the banks of the Charles River which the late President chose shortly before his death. The building will include a Memorial Room, a Museum, an Archive, and an Institute.

The most active of the divisions of the library will be the Institute. It will attempt to further one of President Kennedy's deepest concerns, his interest in joining together the world of scholarship and the world of decision. The Institute will strive to bring intellectual and public affairs together in many ways.

Professors, politicians, and public servants of all parties and from foreign countries will participate in lectures and seminars under the Institute's sponsorship.

Spring Day At South College

Asking the Administration for aid in the planning of a Spring Day may be a betrayal of the philosophy of student initiative, but we don't think so.

Simply, the petitioning students have merely faced up to realities. The question that now remains is whether or not the Administration can do the same.

Sometime, somehow, someway this Spring the chapel bells are going to ring and the students of this University are going to proclaim a one day vacation. It is what follows the ringing of the bells that troubled the committee. What can be done with a group of eight thousand students so that chaos would not follow?

The answer is simple. Plan and plan well. However, the committee realized that it would be futile to do any extensive planning without taking the Administration into its confidence. There is just so much that can be done on this campus without having the sharp ears of the Administration pick it up. Furthermore, there is much the Administration could do to aid in such planning by using the full facilities available to it.

The students have taken the first step. Their petition deserves a prompt and definite reply. However, if the reply is in the negative, and if even then the chapel bells ring this Spring, let it be known here and now that the Administration must take full responsibility for all that ensues.

TravelsInCollegianMontaigne

by JOHN B. CHILDS

It came to pass that we tired of spending our days inside, compiling notes of our travels and adventures. Thus it was that one day we ventured forth once more into the land of the Univers-tay-ovmass in hopes of seeing more wonders and oddities with which that land abounds.

Procuring two guides we began our journey. We had gone but a few metres, when a huge pile of wood caught our sight. The woodpile planks, and logs, was based in a stone pit. Upon our asking the guides replied that the pile was a "leftober" from the "winterkarnevahl." From this we deducted the pile to be part of a sacrificial ceremony in which a human would be given to the gods. Our opinion was confirmed when one of the guides mentioned "the stud-end-sane-it" a religious body, saying that they would burn a member of that body at the stake if he did not relent in his ways.

From this conversation we caught the undertones of deepseated religious battles, and ending our journey for the day, pledged ourselves to uncovering the truth of this matter.

Two days later we attended a service of this religious body. This body is made up of priests called 'sane-it-ors" each of whom has a flock of rel-igious dependents called "con-stit-uends" who depend on the priests for the word of God who is called Roberts. Unity under the God Roberts, exist, though interpretation of his prophetic message, the famed "Ruols-ov-ordar" varies to the extent that it is difficult to discern if it is Robert's prophetic message or a sane-it-ors' apocalpyptic like oracle. The major theological question seems to be one of how many san-it-ors can dance on the head of Roberts.

However, the deeper our investigation into this affair the more we came to realize the existence of another force also religious, which exercised tremendous and awesome influence on the Univers-tay-ovmass. This secret terrorist organization was whispereed about as being called the Collegian. So powerful is this organization that it is called "montaigne" meaning large . . . this was demonstrated to us by a sane-it-or who in reference to this largeness called the Collegian "a pile-ov—"

This underground organization works with an astounding degree of unity and dedication. This unity was amply demonstrated to us when we observed a huge line of men and women, paired off waiting

The Pseudo-Event

by Robert Ebert
Editor, Daily Illini

(CPS)—We live in the age of the pseudo-event.

It no longer matters whether anyone heard the tree fall in the forest. What matters is whether or not the fall of the tree was documented on television.

THE VAST MAJORITY OF AMERICANS are no longer capable of believing something on their own authority. Indoctrinated since childhood by boxtop offers of a "guaranteed genuine official" world, they seek desparately for Authority—and find it everywhere but in themselves.

A commonplace example. Find me, if you will, a can of baked beans that does not carry the instruction, "Heat and Serve." Why do the American consumers require this instruction? Because a good many of them do not have the nerve to heat and serve those baked beans without officials approval. Common sense is no longer a guide.

Thus it is that things no longer happen of themselves. They happen only after a sufficient portion of the public has been told they happened. And then only if the public senses that it was "officially" all right that they happened.

Integration — — A Different View

Me, Madness Humor

by MIKE HENCH

This columnist is diametrically opposed to this whole stupid business of "neighborhood integration." Now, I happen to be liberal enough to have been called "commie" or "red" at least five times in print. But on this issue of integration I find myself becoming more and more conservative. Having lived in the south for about ten years —Texas, Georgia, Mississippi, Florida, and South Carolina—I can at least understand the southern point of view, even though I don't happen to agree with that view expressed by the majority of the whites. But I've lived in the North for over 15 years, and I'm sure I don't understand the Negro point of view in the big cities. They live in what they like to call "ghettos", there's no doubt about that. And there is no doubt that at least a part of the reason for the existence of these ghettos is a housing policy based on race. But just as big a portion of the policy is a result of the age-old desire of man to "live with his own kind."

There was a time, not too many years ago, when I didn't think there was such a thing as "own kind." But the Negroes have spent a lot of time and money to convince me that they are a "kind." Then some idiot comes along and says "We won't be happy until every white man respects every Negro." Not respects the rights of every Negro, but respects every Negro. Hell, I can count the number of people I truly respect on one hand. I admire Meridith and Dr. King, but I wonder if all Negroes even respect Meridith and King.

But this business of trucking kids from one school to another all in the holy name of "integration" is almost as stupid as the idea that because the Negroes occupy one-tenth of the population they ought to hold down one tenth of the construction jobs, one-tenth of the government jobs, one-enth of the movie roles, etc. Maybe Ebony Magazine should devote one tenth of its pages to the Negro, to.

Down South they say that a school is "fully integrated" when there is one Negro. The "they" who say this are the Negro leaders. Up North they're not satisfied unless they've got their blessed tenper-cent. Who invented this word "token integration?" Integration is integration.

But who cares about the kids whose lives are disrupted, the money that is spent, as long as that blessed percentage is reached. A school located on 60th Street in Chicago cannot be integrated in any proportion. There isn't a white home in six blocks in any direction. But then the answer is to bus the ninety percent from up town Chicago and send the displaced Negroes uptown to replace them. Real logic.

Note that I haven't even mentioned the fantastic paradox offered by the "boycott" concept. The southern Negroes scream if the whites choose to walk out of school instead of integrating, but they think its O.K. if they call a "boycott" and the kids gleefully take the day off. Who cares if the "difference in kind" is dramatically implanted in their minds. The whites can say "but the Negro kids got out today," and the Negro kids can say, "Gee, I get to skip school 'cause I'm black and my people are fighting for freedom." There's the rub. They're so enslaved that when they march on Rockefeller's mansion and threaten violence, no one has the heart to arrest them. If they weren't enslaved they could have been martyred and it's only those damn constitutional freedoms that keep them from the little red schoolhouse held in the county jail.

In Support Of Sanford

by MIKE BASIL

College, no one can deny, is the time and place which witnesses the broadness of Weltanschaunng and the height of idealism. No less is the reply to Mr. Arthur Geller's letter appearing in Monday's Collegian, for it is easy to sympathize with Utopian phrases such as "intellectual honesty," "coming to grips with the forces of racial violence," the "altering of moral standards" and "voicing the assertions of human dignity and moral value." No doubt the esteemed Kurland duet "calls itself American" with all the high ideals on the dignity of man and the strong opinions on innate equality befitting a Locke or a Jefferson, and the Kurlands would be right.

But to Judge Terry Sanford solely in the light of these same phrases, not only nebulous at best in content, but equally difficult to put into practice, especially in the South, is to do Mr. Sanford as great an injustice as his critics accuse him of perpetrating. Those who ask of Sanford a militant stand to support his alleged liberalism in North Carolina are ignoring political reality, for reality it is, if one wants to witness reform in any Southern state, he must above all maintain the office to which he is elected.

In short, "coming to grips" with his conservative legislature in the open, with all militance, is political suicide, and thereby the loss of any chance of liberal reform at all. There are, moreover, at least three avowed segregationists just burning to gain the gubernatorial seat in North Carolina. These would, unfortunately, have no trouble in exploiting any of Sanford's radical attempts at reform (which we in the North find all to easy to propound) among a racially aroused white electorate.

Not all those who cry "Equality, equality!" in the so-called "liberal" north understand that such a cry in the kingdom of North Caroline, though ideally justified, is politically unthinkable. Granted we would all like to see and fight for reform in any southern state, but first things first, and that is, to Sanford at least, to be governor.

Now Sanford, by a truly effective and workable education program, is gnawing at the roots of intolerance; for only among an educated people can the final cause of ignorance be eradicated. His economic policies, not conservative by any means have raised the standard of living for both white and Negro by an appreciable degree. In sum, Sanford has instituted reform as far as political insight can allow, and to call him a hypocrite for the subtelty of his program because it is not branded as ideally liberal is to be as ignorant of the facts as the segregationist himself.

It is unfortunate that the haven of college life all too

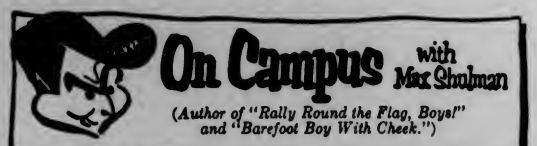
SONNET ON RUTABAGA JUICE

Oh beautiful bottle of Rutabaga juice
On the shelf collecting dust, more or less.
What beautiful cures does your green liquid stuff hold
With your cork so high and mighty leaning skyward
With a little bit of dust on it.
Your label all dingy, dirty, and falling off
Presents an exquisite picture of a dirty, dingy label falling off.
Oh beautiful bottle of Rutabaga juice
On a shelf collecting dust, more or less.



A ROBE BY ANY OTHER NAME

With the Commencement Day just a couple of short months away, the question on everyone's lips is: "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors?" Everybody is asking it; I mean everybody! I mean I haven't been able to walk ten feet on any campus without somebody grabs my elbow and says, "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors, hey?"

This, I must say, is not the usual question asked by collegians who grab my elbow. Ordinarily they say, "Hey, Shorty, got a Marlboro?" And this is fitting. After all, are they not collegians and therefore loaded with brains? And does not intelligence demand the tastiest in tobacco flavor? And does not Marlboro deliver a flavor that is uniquely delicious? And am I not short?

But I digress. Back to the colored hoods of academic robes. A doctor of philosophy wears blue, a doctor of medicine wears green, a master of arts wears white, a doctor of humanities wears crimson, a master of library science wears lemon yellow. Why? Why, for example, should a master of library science wear lemon yellow?

Well sir, to answer this vexing question, we must go back to March 14, 1844. On that date the first public library in the United States was established by Ulrich Sigafoos. All of Mr. Sigafoos's neighbors were of course wildly grateful—all, that is, except Wrex Todhunter.

Mr. Todhunter had hated Mr. Sigafoos since 1822 when both men had wooed the beautiful Melanie Zitt and Melanie had chosen Mr. Sigafoos because she was mad for dancing and Mr. Sigafoos knew all the latest steps—like the Missouri Compromise Samba, the Shays' Rebellion Schottische, and the James K. Polk Polka—while Mr. Todhunter, alas, could not dance at all, owing to a wound he had received at the Battle of New Orleans. (He was struck by a falling praline.)

Consumed with jealousy at the success of Mr. Sigafoos's library, Mr. Todhunter resolved to open a competing library. This he did, but he lured not one single patron away from Mr. Sigafoos. "What has Mr. Sigafoos got that I have not?" Mr. Todhunter kept asking himself, and finally the answer came to him: books.

So Mr. Todhunter stocked his library with lots of lovely books, and soon he was doing more business than his hated rival. But Mr. Sigafoos struck back. To regain his clientele, he began serving tea at his library every afternoon. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter, not to be outdone, began serving tea with sugar. Thereupon Mr. Sigafoos began serving tea with sugar and cream. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter began serving tea with sugar and cream and lemon.

This, of course, clinched the victory for Mr. Todhunter because he had the only lemon tree in town—in fact, in the entire state of Maine—and since that day lemon yellow has, of course, been the color on the robes of masters of library science.

(Incidentally, the defeated Mr. Sigafoos packed up his library and moved to California where, alas, he failed once more. There were, to be sure, plenty of lemons to serve with his tea, but, alas, there was no cream because the cow was not introduced to California until 1937 by John Wayne.)

The Dance And The Song

Union College Choir Appraised

by ANN BAXTER

On Wednesday, March 11, a small audience in the Student Union Ballroom was privileged to hear a concert by the 45-voice Union College Choir from Barbourville, Kentucky. The concert was sponsored by the Wesley Foundation in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival.

The choir, under the direction of Dennis Jackson, did an excellent job. The first section was done a capella and entirely without music. The most notable piece from that section was perhaps the "O Vos Omnes" by Victoria.

The second section consisted of baroque compositions. The "Hostias from the Requiem" by Mozart achieved a better use of dynamics and feeling than the two Vivaldi pieces. The Vivaldi "Et in Terra Pax from the Gloria" seemed to drag a little more than the slow tempo of the piece would warrant.

The third section included three arrangements of folk songs by Brahms. The blending of all three was excellent, especially in "How Sad Flow the Streams." The third section also included what might be considered the feature work of the concert: "Choose Something Like a Star" by Randall Thompson. The words of this piece were taken from a poem by Robert Frost, and it was dedicated to the people of Amherst. The feeling that

by LANGDON LOMBARD

On Thursday, March 12, an audience of close to three thousand people was treated to some of the finest ballet seen on this campus in a great number of years.

The Joffrey Ballet Company made life at the University, at home in the Pioneer Valley, and in the apartments and dorms around the area seem very mundane. They were able to send the audience away with the feeling that somethings of great beauty and splendor and importance do exist beyond the confines of this region.

Dancing on a stage made up of tables (for all intents and purposes) with metal ridges and domed metal rivets designed to hinder the dancer rather than to facilitate any movements, the men seemed to be more in control of the situation than the women. With obvious grace, physical stamina, and complete control in the face of such abominable conditions of staging, the men, especially Lawrence Rhodes, made the audience gasp many times with daring.

And the audience was lucky to have the company perform at all. Joffrey himself, was seriously considering canceling when the gruesome reality of the stage was seen. But this superbly high standing American ballet company was too professional for that. The audience realized this, too, refusing to let the dancers off stage until Joffrey himself came on.

The presentation had to be considered a zenith of this year's Fine Arts Festival.

Joffrey Ballet

by ANN BAXTER

On Thursday, March 12, a near-capacity audience in the Cage saw the Robert Joffrey Ballet, sponsored by the Concert Association and a definite high spot of the Fine Arts festival.

The first dance, "Time Out of Mind," choreographed by Brian MacDonald to music by Paul Creston, was something of a shock to anyone expecting traditional "Swan Lake"—type ballet. Its meaning was calculated to express emotions common to every era rather than to tell a story. The firmly-fixed smile on the face has given way to faces which openly express anguish or passion. This opening number showed some very fine dancing by Lawrence Rhodes and Margaret Mercier as well as the rest of the troupe.

The second ballet, "Feast of Ashes," was choreographed by Alvin Ailey to the music of Carlos Surinach. The costuming, done by Jack Venze, was very creditable. The choreography was excellent; typical of its quality were those scenes where the monk, danced by Vicente Nebreda, was on stage: he commanded the entire stage. Suzanne Hammons as the Matriarch and Lisa Bradley as her youngest daughter gave excellent performances.

The third dance, the "Pas de Deux" from "Flower Festival in Genzano," came closest to being an exponent of traditional ballet. Lawrence Rhodes and Brunilda Ruiz were breathtakingly good, demonstrating highly professional technique.

The last dance was "Con Amore," with choreography by Lew Christensen and music by Gioacchino Rossini, an early 19th century composer. The dance deals with two classic romantic entanglements and the final resolvement of them. It affords an opportunity for a great deal of humor, and Christensen's choreography doesn't miss a trick. The Thief, danced by Helgi Tomasson, who invades the camp of the Amazons, got the most laughs as he was alternately self-assured and alarmed at his predicament. Tomasson also executed some very fine technique, receiving spontaneous applause at one point for his intricate maneuvers.

On the whole, the show was excellent and of a genre seen too seldom on campus. This influx of a contemporary ballet style is a positive trend; hopefully we can see more of it soon.

Pajama Support

To the Editor:

As regards the alleged and inherently atrocious and now notorious pajama party, I would like to say a word or two in defense of pajamas. There is without a doubt an increasing prejudice amongst the puritan-minded regarding pajamas as a result of this notoriety. I can only plead with you, pajamas are innocent, they are pure, they are good, they are God-given, support your pajamas.

Collegian Pajama Policy Blasted

To the Editor:

In regard to the Ed. Note affixed to the letter by a Group of Disgusted Girls concerning the pajama party held recently at one of the fraternities on campus, I would like to say that the all-inclusive statement that "girls who go to pajama parties deserve what they get" was completely uncalled for. This particular party was a registered social event. It appeared on the social calendar which is posted in all the women's residence halls. Therefore I feel that the immoral exhibition which took place was uncalled for. You say that the letter in question should not be seen as a general indictment, yet you make a general indictment concerning all girls who go to such parties. Why don't you just say that all girls who go to fraternity parties deserve what they get?

I have found that immoral exhibitions are not irregular at fraternity parties—parties which are listed as registered social events. Of course the fact that there will be an immoral exhibition is not advertised. So why make such a derogatory statement concerning the girls who were merely the victims of circumstance? They were disgusted, and they voiced their disgust through the columns of this paper. Your comment was completely out of place and should not have been made.

An Irate Coed

Case Not Conclusive, Lee Oswald's Lawyer Claims

by RICHARD DELGUIDICE and JOHN RYAN

Ed. Note: The authors of the following are graduate students in the Department of Government. The story was formulated from extensive notes taken at Mr. Lane's talk.

ON THURSDAY, March 12, Mark Lane, controversial civil liberties attorney and former New York State Assemblyman, spoke on the topic of "The Case Against Lee Harvey Oswald" at Amherst College. His remarks left his audience with two questions: If his statements are false then they should be exposed as such. However, if true, then why has this information come from Lane and not official sources? Mr. Lane's contentions have been noticably absent from the American press including the New York Times.

On the same day that Mr. Lane addressed a rather small audience at Amherst, he had previously delivered a talk at a university in New York. There was no coverage of this speech by the New York papers. Perhaps unwittingly, the day after he spoke at Amherst, the Hampshire Gazette carried a front page summary of the major points stressed in his lecture.

ALTHOUGH we have not conducted a survey of the contents of the American press for the past few months, we are reasonably sure that the New York Times, for one, has made little or no reference to Mr. Lane's activities. One wonders why. Further, he submitted his findings and speculations to all of the major weekly periodicals in the United States. The only one that accepted these findings for publication was the National Guardian, a small and little known publication.

Meanwhile, according to Mr. Lane, he has successfully sold his story to 25 Euporean publishers. In light of the extremely limited exposure his views have received in the American press, we feel that it would be useful to the University community to review his major contentions and compare them with the official Dallas police version of the assassination.

MR. LANE SUGGESTS that the Dallas police established two basic assumptions: First, Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President Kennedy. Second, Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in this crime. The facts that the police did have and those subsequently collected, were fitted neatly to the premise of Oswald's guilt. At no time did they, the police, seem willing to re-evaluate their basic assumptions. The following are illustrations:

Contradiction Seen in Wound

1) The preliminary medical examination of the President revealed a small wound in front of the throat and a larger wound at the rear of the skull. The wound at the Adam's apple was originally reported as the point of entry New York Times, November 23, 1963, p. 2; New York Times, November 24, 1963, p. 5). The original police contention is that Oswald fired from the sixth floor of the Texas Book Depository. The vehicle in which the President was traveling was assumed to be on Houston Street moving toward the Text Book Depository when the shots were fired that killed him. When photographs, later submitted in evidence, revealed that when the shots were fired the President's car was actually past the Book Depository, it was suggested that the President had turned around. This was later disproven by Mrs. Connally who stated that the President was facing forward with his back to the Book Depository building.

UNDER THESE circumstances it was impossible for a bullet fired from the Depository Building to have entered at the front of the President's throat. At this juncture the medical evidence was re-evaluated and it was officially stated that what was originally purported to be an entrance wound was in fact the point of exit. Mr. Lane suggests that the medical evidence should not have been re-evaluated but that the first premise, i.e., that the shot was fired from the Depository, re-examined.

Was there any basis for questioning the first assumption? Mr. Lane contends that there certainly is. First, there were four reporters from the Dallas Morning News on one side of the street and two women on the other side, both groups being approximately 25 feet from the President's vehicle when the shots were fired. These witnesses have stated that when the shots were fired they turned in the direction from which they felt the shots had come. Both groups state that they looked toward the railroad trestle directly in front of the Presidential car.

Shot from Trestle?

The majority of the people standing in front of the Book building expressed the opinion that the shot had come from the direction of the railroad trestle. Congressman Gonazles, traveling in the Presidential party, happened to be leaning out the window at the moment the shots were fired. He, in an interview with Mr. Lane, contended that the shots came from the vicinity of the railroad trestle. He also stated that he was an experienced hunter and felt that his judgment as to the location of the firing was accurate.

FURTHER, THE FIRST Dallas Police radio report stated that the President had been shot from the railroad trestle. These conflicting contentions leave us with one major question. Had the presumption of Oswald's guilt been so firmly implanted in everyone's mind when this evidence was revealed that the question of where the shot was fired from could no longer be considered as open?

2) The Weapon: The first officer to find a weapon on the sixth floor of the Book Depository described it as a 7.6 mm. German Mauser. The F.B.I. later notified the Dallas police that Oswald owed a 6.5 Italian carbine. Then the description of the murder weapon changed in both nationality and caliber. When submitted in evidence this weapon revealed inscriptions in Italian on the outside of the chamber and the caliber was engraved on the barrel as "6.5mm." The question Mr. Lane asks is how the first officer on the scene could have stated in an official report such a gross error. He seems to hint that the facts were again made to conform to the premise of Oswald's guilt.

Test Inconclusive

3) THE PARAFIN TEST: Mr. Lane suggests that the Dallas Chief of Police has stated that the results of the parafin test are sufficiently conclusive to the fact that Oswald had fired the fatal shots. Mr. Lane has obtained a photostat of the results of this test. A parafin test is conducted to determine the presence of nitrates in suspension which are released when a gun is fired. If a rifle has been fired there will be a positnve finding on the face and both hands. The test on Oswald was positive on both hands but negative on the face of the accused. Nitrates in suspension can also get on one's hands if a match has been lit or if one has recently used soap or toothpaste. If anything, the findings are highly inconclusive.

4) The Tippet Murder: We were surprised to discover that the official version of the Tippet murder is that the officer was shot in the street and not in a movie theater as originally reported. There was one eyewitness to the act. She observed a man speaking to a policeman who was seated in a patrol car parked at the curb. The patrolman dismounted and then was shot by the man with whom he had been speaking. The murderer was described in the official. Dallas reports as a young white man. Lane interviewed this witness and asked her why her description of the man was so vague. She replied that her description of the man to the Dallas police was not vague.

Witnesses Talk, Die

She stated to Lane, assuming that he was from the Warren Commission, that the man who had fired the shot was short, stocky and had black bushy hair. Lee Harvey Oswald was medium height, slim and balding. A second witness, named Reynolds, who only saw a man running down the street and reloading a pistol, was, several weeks later, shot and killed by a still unknown sniper. A man named Gardner was taken into custody for questioning. Shortly after his apprehension a woman came forth to state that she was with Gardner at the time the act was committed. This woman was shortly thereafter arrested for fighting with her roommate in her own room. After a brief period in jail she took her life by hanging herself. This woman was identified as a stripper in Jack Ruby's nightclub.

One wonders what was contained in Reynolds statement to the Dallas police, one wonders if this statement was taken in evidence, and one wonders why this sequence of events appeared only in Bob Considine's column in the New York Journal American. One wonders!

CONCLUSIONS: Mr. Lane said more last Thursday. Space does not permit us to repeat all of it. We do not believe that he knows more than the Attorney General, Chief Justice Warren, the F.B.I. and the Secret Service. We must therefore ask why this information, if true, has been withheld. We feel that the argument that the truth would be harmful to the national se-

Speech Department Offers Three-Day New York Tour

The curtain's going up on a new venture for anyone interested in what's going on in the world of theater. A three-day trip to New York, planned for May 1st, 2nd and 3rd, is being offered to UMass students under the sponsorship of the Speech Department.

The weekend's activities will include five shows (both on- and off-Broadway), visits to theater museums and perhaps a chance to drop in on a rehearsal on progress or take a behind-the-scenes peek at a theatrical scene shop. "Students who come along," says Professor Cosmo Catalino, who will be heading the group, "can take in as many of the activities as they wish to . . . or have the strength to!"

"If enough students sign up, the cost per student should not exceed thirty dollars," said Larry Wilker, one of the students backing the venture. "We want to emphasize," he continued, "that the trip is not just for Speech or Theater majors, but is open to the whole UMass campus."

"Anyone interested in finding out more about the trip," Wilker went on to say, "can sign up on a list located on the bulletin board outside the Speech Department in Bartlett Hall. A meeting will be held in the near future to thresh out the details of the trip, decide on what shows to see, etc."

Air Force General To Be Guest Speaker

Major General Paul Scheidecker, Director of Accounting and Finance for the Air Force, will be guest speaker at the annual cadet dinner and ceremonies, Monday evening, Mar. 16.

The two-star general will address members of the 370th AFROTC Cadet Wing and various local dignitaries at the University of Massachusetts' Student Union, highlighting the formal event.

Major General Scheidecker graduated from West Point in 1937 and then served in the Cavalry. Ordinance Department and the Army Air Forces—in the continental United States, Alaska and the China-Burma-India Theater.

He received his master's degree from the Harvard Business School in 1948 and, in 1952, graduated from the Air War College.

The General has served as Comptroller, Far East Air Forces, Tokyo, Japan, and as Comptroller of the Air Defense Command, at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Service Committee

Keeps Busy For Students

During the past month the Student Senate Services Committee, under the chairmanship of George Michael, has dealt with the following campus requests:

1. FREE BUS SERVICE: After meeting with Mr. Harold Durgin of the Amherst Chamber of Commerce, we were informed that the possibility of this free bus service would be determined at the Executive Board meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, March 24.

2. INFIRMARY TELEVISION: The last bids for the cost of the TV for the infirmary have been received and are being evaluated.

3. COMMUTER MAIL BOXES: Through the cooperation of Services Committee Senator Bill Donovan and several university commuters, the commuters now have a mailbox outside of the Student Union Lodge.

4. CAMPUS POND BENCHES: Senator Dick Hatfield is presently discussing the possibility of having permanent benches placed around the campus pond with the University Planning Board.

5. PUBLIC HEALTH WALKWAYS: Senator Paula Stevens contacted the Head of Physical Planning of the University, and was informed that no provisions for a walkway between Morrill Science Center and the Public Health Addition will be made for at least another two years.

6. FOOD VENDING MACHINES: Senator Stevens also contacted the Public Health Department on campus who assure the students that food available in vending machines is consistent with public standards.

7. DINING COMMONS: It is hoped that a survey of food desired by students can be made shortly with combined efforts of the Services Committee and the Dining Commons.

8. NEW DORM COMPLEX: A meeting was held between chairman Michael and President Lederle to discuss the progress of the dorm complex. President Lederle assured chairman Michael that the buildings would be completed by next fall. President Lederle will have available for Senator Michael, progress reports within two weeks.

Maroon Keys Recruits New Members

The process for selection of next year's Maroon Key society has already begun for those freshmen men who achieved a 2.0 or better cummulative average for the first semester. The process started with the submission of applications up until last Friday. Next Wednesday a list of eligible applicants will be published in the Collegian, and the following Friday elections will be held in the Student Union lobby.

At this election all freshmen men, regardless of eligibility, will vote for the candidates of their choice. Following this election, a list of remaining candidates will be published. These candidates will then be interviewed by one of this year's members. The final selection will be made after each member has appeared individually before the entire body of Maroon Keys. The next year's Maroon Key society will be tapped at Student Leaders night on April 28, 1964.

UMass Financial Aid Is Discussed In Interview

At an interview last Wednesday, the Director of Placement and Financial Aid, Mr. Robert Morrissey, and the Assistant Director, Mr. David P. Lawrence, brought out some extremely pertinent facts about the nature and history of financial aid in connection with Campus Chest.

They pointed out that five years ago less than 300 scholarships ranging from $50 to $250 were given out to needy and deserving students. In 1960, 385 scholarships were granted, in 1961, 406 were awarded, and in the 1963-64 year, 700 scholarships were granted. Mr. Lawrence pointed out that in the past, although the number of scholarships increased, the amounts were small. That is, since the need was increasing faster than the supply, the amount of money available had to be spread thinner.

This year, although the Massachusetts Legislature has granted additional funds for scholarships, there will still be a great demand for scholarship assistance. Mr. Morrissey remarked that in the past "we were largely dependent upon donations and in particular, the "Campus Chest." The fact that the Campus Chest gave ten $200 scholarships last year readily attests to the great assistance and the importance of the Campus Chest drive.

With the dependence resting now on both the legislature and campus organizations such as the Campus Chest, Mr. Morrissey stated that "We will help as many as we can and come as close as we can in meeting the specific needs of all applicants." Mr. Lawrence then stated that we need as much money as possible because of "the growing imbalance between the ratio of students applying to the amount of funds available." Both men cited the fact that the primary goal of financial aid was to insure that deserving students who are needy do not drop out of school due to lack of funds.

Mr. Morrissey and Mr. Lawrence were then asked to comment on the special problem of the student who has a definite need for financial aid yet lacks the necessary 2.5 cum. This would apply to the student who, for example, had a poor freshman year yet has shown a steady improvement and has a high average for his sophomore and junior year but still does not have a 2.5. Mr. Morrissey stated that "up until the past year, we couldn't even consider a student who did not have a 2.5 cumulative average. But now, a student may apply for scholarship if he anticipates a 2.5 by June.

However, this does not solve the problem for many, and he stated that at the next scholarship committee meeting, this problem would be brought up with special attention being given to a student's record of improvement, rather than just his cumulative average.

At the close of the interview, Mr. Morrissey and Mr. Lawrence expressed their sincere hope that the Campus Chest would have great success in augmenting scholarship funds.

You too can insure that the Campus Chest drive will be a success by contributing your donation of $1.

Leonard Speaks At Smith About American Foreign Policy And Anti Communism

(From THE SOPHIAN, Smith College, Tuesday March 10)

"The past goes on in the continous present" were perhaps the most important words of a speech given by David Leonard, Assistant Professor of History at the University of Massachusetts last night at Wright Hall. "The Vietnamese Crisis and the Impasse of American Foreign Policy," the topic, dealt with American foreign policy in general and related it to the present Vietnamese situation.

After giving a brief history of American foreign policy, Mr. Leonard explained that the basis of our policy is to get rid of communism either by negative or positive means. "Unfortunately," he said, "we have forgotten the positive." By the positive, he means the Marshall plan, or the building up of strong economies in countries that are threatened by communism.

Unfortunately, according to Mr. Leonard, we have become so obsessed with the anticommunism movement that we begin to suspect everything, even the neutral countries for fear that they might turn communistic. Cambodia, however, has one of the most stable governments of that area and yet there is some evidence that the CIA has tried to undermine it.

Mr. Leonard then went on to show how history has repeated itself with respect to the history of Vietnam. In 1945 after the Japanese left, the French decided to reinstate themselves against the advice of Franklin Roosevelt who was for their independence.

After the fall of Chiang Kai Chek and the beginning of the Korean War, the attitude of the United States towards France and Vietnam changed. Three billion dollars were spent for the hopeless cause; in 1954, France was forced to sign a treaty on Communists terms at Geneva.

As soon as the French left South Vietnam, the U.S. came in and put Ngo Dhim Diem in power. Diem was not known among the populus, but "he was picked by the United States," said Mr. Leonard, "because he was honest and against the Communists."

Mr. Leonard then suggested a change in U.S. foreign policy, especially with regard to Vietnam. The only way to fight the Vietcong, according to him, is to gain the peasant support instead of blindly choosing a president.

Another important improvement might be a new attitude toward neutralism. Mr. Leonard said that the U.S. belief that if an Asian country becomes neutral, it will be communistic, may be a major reason for this happening. But, Cambodia, India, and Burma can be examples of what may actually be possible.

to enter a religious sanctum called the "dark-rume". This dark-rume, our guides informed us, saw many unusual developments. So saying they laughed, the cause of which we could not determine, leaving us to believe that members of the organization laughed at everything.

Perhaps our greatest moment came with an audience held with the High Supreme Inner Upper Echelon Council, called the "Execbored." This council is made up of priests called "idiot-ors". Once in their presence we quaked before their steely eyes, their massive bodies, and tremendous minds. Like giant statues of power they stood before us.

Such is the superstittion of these natives, however, that one magic word can quell ever the most powerful of them. For, as we were in audience, a grinning member of the Greek depressed minority sect ran by screaming the word "Feds", the meaning of which eluded us. Such was the effect of this word, however, that before we could blink the council members had leaped through windows, crawled under desks, hidden in wastebaskets, thus vanishing from our sight.

often leads to life in the clouds among some liberally educated people. Education at least should in the specific sense teach the intricacies and practicalities of politics, and in the broad sense, teach that one's ideas, if they are to be eventually realized, must be compromised for the sake of any progress at all.

Spring Day ...

The letter stressed the importance of student-Administration cooperation and stated in part: "We, along with you, realize the problems that must be faced, the solutions which must be found, and the plans that must be constructed to make Spring Day a success.

"However, we believe that the resources of the Administration and the Student Activities Office coupled with combined efforts of the members of this committee will produce an orderly and enjoyable day, free from the chaos which would inevitably accompany a less organized and well-planned undertaking."

The committee also revealed that it had met numerous times in attempts to formulate a program for Spring Day, and after much deliberation had unanimously agreed that the aid of the Administration must be enlisted.

One member of the committee asserted that with administrative help a successful Spring Day could be carried off. He suggested that planned activities including a rope pull, performing bands and folksinging groups, baseball games, were a few of the ideas which the committee felt were a definite possibility for the Day.

The letters were delivered personally to each of the recipients by members of the committee.

Interest Ceilings On Student Loans Urged

Two angry midwestern Senators this week launched an attack on what they termed "outrageous and incredible" interest rates charged for U.S. college and university student loans.

Initiating a plan to clamp a limit on interest rates charged for student loans was Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind. Hartke, who has introduced legislation providing massive college student aid including low-interest commercial loans, said some commercial lenders are charging as much as 60 per cent interest annually.

Sen. Paul H. Douglas, D Ill., told CPS that he will introduce a bill holding interest rates charged for college student loans to a maximum of 9 per cent annually.

Hartke said some of the commercial frms were "unknowingly recomended by college authorities without realization of their ownership or usurious terms."

Named by Hartke as chaging 60 per cent annual interest was the Tuition Plan, Inc., of New York, a subsidiary of C.I.T. Financial Corp.

In a Congressional Record statement, Hartke explained the firm's operation this way:

"The plan will furnish a student $500 a semester for eight semesters in return for a fixed service charge of $240 (the total) paid, at $106 a month for 40 months beginning a month after the first advance.

"The student or his parents repays $530 or a $500 advance during each of the first two semesters and then repays (during the summer) $212 before the start of the third semester.

"This means the third advance is only $288 plsu the $212 which has been prepaid.

"By the beginning of the third year, the parents is given $424 of his money back and a $76 advance to equal $500. Still, the monthly payments of $106 continue until the parent receives no more advances but is given back his own money for the final two semesters."

Hartke also named other firms charging the high interest rates with similar programs. They included Education Funds, Inc., of Providence, R. I., a Household Finance Corp. subsidiary, which Hartke said charged as much as 54 per cent annually in interest.

His study showed that federal (including the National Defense Education Act (NDEA), state and other non-profit student loan rates ranged from 3 to 6 per cent.

"There can be no question of the need for more favorable loan terms," Hartke said.

Sen. Douglas, a former Chicago University economist, said he would propose his maximum 9 per cent interest rate as an amendment to the NDEA Act.

It would provide that "no education institution participating in the NDEA yoan act may also participate in or cooperate with" any private college-loan program charging students more than 9 per cent a year.

Douglas said he was astonished "at teh high rates charged even by institutions which proudly proclaim they are low-cost lenders." He cited the 11-plus per cent interest rates charged by "typical" banks in Allentown, Pa., and Cleveland, Ohio.

But, Douglas said the worst offenders were "small loan and finance companies which have established subsidiaries with philanthropic sounding names.

U. Colorado Senate Asks Investigation Of American Legion

BOULDER, Colo. (CPS)—The Associated Students of the University of Colorado called last Wednesday (Feb. 26) on the House Un-American Activities Committee to investigate the American Legion.

The request for a HUAC investigation came as an amendment to a resolution criticizing a recent charge by the Legion that the U. S. National Student Association (USNSA) reflects "a high degree of left-wing and pro-Communist infiltration."

The Legion also charged that the establishment of USNSA chapters at tax-supported institutions "would leave the door ajar for the dissemination of Communist propaganda, which is all the Communists desire."

The ASUC resolution said "no ground or substance can be found to justify the serious charges leveled at the USNSA by the American Legion." It added that the ASUC "expresses its dismay at the American Legion's misrepresentation of USNSA policies and progress programs."

The author of the amendment, Richard Carpenter said "the policy of the Legion to brand every opinion disagreeing with their own (as pro-Communist) is detrimental to our society . . . There are other forms of un-Americanism than Communism."

Duke Blasts Connecticut; Villanova Places Third

by JOHN GOODRICH

With all of the regionals in the NCAA now completed, the four winners will proceed to Kansas City for the finals Saturday and Sunday. In this article and the next, the four finalists and their respective regionals will be capsuled.

DUKE WILL BE THE TEAM THAT MAKES THE TRIP from the Eastern regional. The Blue Devils breezed through the regional with little trouble. They played the Villanova Wildcats on Friday night in what was expected to be the big game of the tournament. The fourth ranked Blue Devils broke the game open early in the first half and had a 47-33 margin at halftime. Jeff Mullins had 28 points in this half. He added 15 more in the second half to finish with 43. The Wildcats, number seven ranked, fought back in the second half, but just did not have enough to overcome the classy Devils.

The second game matched UConn against Princeton. The Huskies once again parried there sound defense with a slow down offense to add their second upset, a 52-50 margin over the Tigers. THE HUSKIES, BY MEANS OF THEIR VICTORY, GOT FURTHER THAN ANY YANKEE CONFERENCE TEAM IN THE HISTORY OF THE TOURNEY. Two foul shots by Dom Perno spelled the difference and then Perno added the icing to the cake by making a steal off of Bill Bradley and the Huskies froze the game to clinch their victory.

The finals were almost anticlimactic. UConn coach Fred Shabel admitted that the club was in over its head as the final margin of 101-54 proved. Yet one can take nothing away from the performance of UConn in this NCAA tournament. Villanova easily clinched second place with a 74-62 over Princeton.

The classy Blue Devils should do well in Kansas City. They have plenty of height in two 6'10" players, Hack Tison and Jay Buckley. Mullins proved that he can put the ball through the hoop as he hit for 73 points in his two outings. The other members of the first team, Denny Ferguson and Steve Vacendak have plenty of speed and really make the Devils effective at either the deliberate or the fast break offense. The Devils also have a strong bench that help out at KC.

Michigan came out as the survivor of the rugged Mid-East regional. They beat defending champion Loyola of Chicago 84-80 in the first round. The Spartans proved that they have the guns to be a threat at KC as they held off a late surge by Loyola.

THE BIGGEST UPSET OF THE TOURNEY occured in the first game when the only virtually unknown team in the field, Ohio University, upset the pretourney favorite Kentucky 85-69. Jerry Jackson scored 25 points for the Bobcats in their big effort, as Cotton Nash was held to 10 points. The number two ranked Wildcats also bowed to Loyola 100-91 for consolation honors, so they finished dead last in the field.

The finals saw Michigan break open a tight game midway in the second half and down Ohio 68-57. The Spartans were forced to play a slow down game and work for the good shots. Bill Buntin was the big gun and most consistent player in both games for the Spartans. His performance earned him the MVP award for the regional. In the finals, however, it was Cazzie Russell who came up with 25 points. These two have been the big guns all year for the Michigan team.

THE SPARTANS ALMOST DIDN'T GET TO THE NCAA because they finished in a tie for the Big Ten with Ohio State. Both of the teams were upset in the last weekend of the season, and it was only because Ohio State had been to the tourney for the last 4 years that Michigan made the trip. The Big Ten has a ruling that in case of a tie, the team that went to the tourney most recently is ineligible.

Michigan owns a victory over Duke earlier in the year and will be hoping to repeat in the first game at Kansas City. The winner will be crowned Eastern champ and advance to the finals. Buntin, Russell, Cantrel, Darden, and Tregoning make up a strong representative for the finals at K.C.

took fourth in the dash and fifth in the broad jump and the high hurdles. Craig Erickson had a really fine day as he ran his fastest 600 ever (1:16.0) and then came back to run a 51.4 leg on the relay team.

Jim Collins competed in only one event all day—the mile relay. Thanks to Erickson's fine leg Jim got out in front, with Rhode Island right in back of him. With 220 yards to go the Ram's runner made his move, but Jim fought him off. This happened repeatedly until the Ram runner finally edged Jim at the tape. Even though he lost, Jim deserves credit for running a great race, as well as his fastest quarter ever (52.6).

This Saturday the Redmen will travel to UConn to compete in the Connecticut Relays. This will mark the close of the indoor season for UMass.

UNH Elects Captain

Even before he put away his hockey skates, Peter Merrill of Nashua was elected captain of the 1964 University of New Hampshire baseball team.

MERRILL WAS SELECTED TO LEAD this year's varsity squad by his teammates at their first meeting this week.

The former Nashua High star is a remarkable athlete. Twice he was selected as the All Yankee Conference second baseman and he led UNH in hitting in 1963 with a .281 average.

IN BASEBALL, Merrill is recognized the best fielding second baseman in Durham in a dozen years. He covers a great deal of ground and nobody gets the ball away quicker on the double play.

Last spring, Merrill led the team in runs and was second in total hits as the Wildcats finished second in the Yankee Conference.

This year, Merrill hopes to improve on his personal totals and lead UNH to the league title and its automatic bid to the District One Playoffs.

Pseudo-Event ...

I would suggest, for example, that the Goldwater "boom" of today is not a particle stronger than the same boom a year ago. What is significant is that people have now been told that it exists. Likewise, the civil rights revolution did not exist for middle class white Americans until they had been told about it. Never mind that they could see it all about them, everywhere, every day. They had to be told. And I believe that, in the minds of these same people, the same revolution could again cease to exist if the establishment were to tell them so. The facts seen by the self are nothing compared to the facts reported in Time magazine, a notable spokesman for officialdom.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE. The use of news photographs, long a means to document a fact, has been discontinued on the Huntley-Brinkley program. An artist, has been employed, instead, to do sketches of events. By almost the same token, the news itself on this program has been replaced by the employment of Huntley and Brinkley, who appear to bring the news into being, full-blown from their brows, simply by deigning to acknowledge it.

Despite the public's willingness to believe what is "officially" stated, it still has some hesitation on the really important things. Million of Americans are not willing to wake up in the morning and be told who is the new President. They must sit up all night in front of their television watching the electric lights flash behind Watler Cronkite. Apparently they do not realize that the electric lights, and Cronkite, are present only to make the event "official." Neither has anything to do with reporting the news.

You don't believe me? Look around you at the next Illinois home game and see how many people who are sitting in Memorial Stadium are, nevertheless, holding transistor radios to their ears so that Larry Stewart can TELL them what is going on before their very eyes. Or remember, if you will, how many American watched the solar esclipse on television when the real things was going on in the heavens rights outside their doors.

OR TAKE ANOTHER EXAMPLE. Is it morally correct to sell wheat to Russia? Three months ago, public opinion said no. Today, public opinion says yes. And yet I would bet you that no one has changed his mind on his question—if, indeed, anyone could really say on his own authority whether the sale was right or wrong. We "go along." As a nation, we're great at that. Every four years we choose who to go along with.

Now, then. What about this business of classroom television?

A spokesman on this campus said that within 25 years EVERY freshman and sophomore level course at the University would be taught on television.

That's right. Every one.

And would this be such a bad things? There are some, you know, who argue that an instructor is more "believable" on television than in person. Raises fewer doubts in the student mind. Seems to have more authority behind him.

But still, a question remains.

Does a classroom lecture really happen if it is on television? Do the instructor and his students actually share and experience that has been made "real" by kinescope?

DOES THE TREE IN THE FOREST really fall, if nobody hears it? But what if it were an imaginary tree, and yet everyone heard it? Did it, then, fall?

the choir put into this work was spirited; despite occasional lack of continuity, the performance was excellent.

The fourth section, again done a capella, featured more contemporary works. The choir seemed to be getting tired, and occasionally sounded forced, but there were some highlights. The "Nicene Creed" by Gretchaninoff featured a solo by Karen Watson, whose warm, steady alto was a delight. The last selection, the "Hosanna" by Lockwood, was also well-performed.

Diction was excellent through the whole concert, and the choir's use of dynamics was effective. The female voices carried more weight than the male voices, and those parts where the sopranos were silent suffered accordingly. But on the whole, the concert was of a very high caliber, and was highly appreciated by the audience.

curity is a specious one. This nation should remember that the honor of France came when that country admitted that Dreyfus was innocent. French shame stemmed from the twelve years that he was held in prison.

We feel obligated to ask whether Mr. Lane's views should receive a full official hearing and whether the press shouldn't give more complete coverage to his contentions. Above all, we ask in such important matters should anything come before the truth or at least an honest search for the truth.

Ski Team Fourth In N. E. Competition

by LORRIN PITTENDREIGH

Last Saturday the University of Massachusettts Ski Team participated in its last race for the season, the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference Championships, at Wildcat Mountain, New Hampshire. The race, a Giant Slalom, consisting of forty-two gates set over three-fourths of a mile on the lower Wildcat Trail, proved to be one of the most challenging of the season. Due to the lack of sufficient snow cover, the course wore down to ice and bare ground early in the race. Despite efforts by gatekeepers, the racers at the end of the order had very poor conditions. However, team captain Thomas Clark, racing fortieth out of sixty-one racers, turned in the best time (78.0 seconds) for the University, capturing sixth place in the race, and only 7.7 seconds out of first place. Close behind captain Clark was Richard Woods with a time of 78.4 seconds. Pete Plastridge was the third man to score for the University finishing ninteenth overall with a time of 82.3 seconds and Walter Swiatek rounded out the team score with a time of 85.5 seconds. Norman Carpenter was the fifth man skiing for the University.

CAPT. DICK WOODS

CAPT. TOM CLARK

THE TEAM WAS SERIOUSLY HAMPERED this past weekend by the the lack of a full contingent of six men as Donald Burgess, suffering from internal injuries received the previous weekend, was in the infirmary. Even with this handicap the University Skiers defeated Northeastern University, Brown, Tufts, Boston University, Bowdoin, Boston College, and American International College, losing only to New England College, Keene State Teachers College, and Amherst.

Collin Garstang, a freshman, and Lorrin Pittendreigh, a transfer, both ineligible to count for the University, and racing dead last as "extras", turned in times of 72.6 seconds and 81.6 seconds respectively. Garstang's time was better than the second place time in the individual standings by 1.2 seconds.

IN THE EVENING FOLLOWING THE RACE, at the Conference banquet which was held at the Presidential Inn in Conway, New Hampshire, the University was awarded fourth place standing for the year. This was out of a field of eleven participating colleges. Later in the evening the team members elected Thomas Clark and Richard Woods co-captains of next year's ski team. Both the co-captains and coach William MacConneli expressed hopes of having an even stronger team next year with Garstang and Pittendreigh being eligible and the return of Clark, Woods, and Swiatek.

UM COACH ROGERS presents Mike Rothchild with his gold medal for winning the 1650-yard freestyle.

by BUD PRATT

Led by co-capt. Mike Rothschild's two first places, UM totaled 18½ points to place eighth among sixteen N.E. varsity swimming teams in the N.E.I.S.A. Championships held at the new Frank L. Boyden Phys. Ed. Building this past weekend.

HEAD AND BODY SHAVED RIGHT DOWN TO THE BARE HIDE, Mike was the highest individual pointgetter in the entire three-day event. On Thursday evening Mike walked away from the field to win the grueling 1650-yard freestyle in 18:39.8, just nine-tenths of a second off the New England record. Few doubt that Mike would have set that record had he been chased more closely. On Friday night, Mike qualified for the finals in the 500-yard freestyle in a N.E. and UM record of 5:18.2. In Saturday's finals the Springfield "Boy Wonder" was unchallenged in winning the gold medal in 5:19.4. Mike picked up two unexpected points by taking fifth place in the 200-yard freestyle. In the process he reset the UM record at 1:56.0. All in all it was a most rewarding weekend for the amiable senior, who may have a shot at the Nationals this weekend.

The only other UM swimmer to place was co-captain. Mike Bjornholm with a tie for fourth place in the back stroke. Mike qualified in this event with a UM record 2:13.6. However, a bad turn plus a grave miscalculation at the finish line forced the senior Finn to settle for a tie for fourth.

THE MEET SAW THE BEST OVERALL TIMES ever in N.E.I.S.A. history. New Englands records were set by VanKennan of Wesleyan in the 500 freestyle (21.5) and the 100 freestyle (47.7), by Rodger of Williams in the 200 freestyle (1:50.7) and by Martin of Brown in the individual medley (2:05.5). VanKennan is merely a sophomore.

Relative to the other teams UMass did better than its season record (6-3) would have anticipated, for the Redmen placed ahead of all those teams they defeated in the regular season plus M.I.T., to whom UM lost last December.

TEAM WINNER FOR THE 1964 N.E.I.S.A.'s was Williams College with an unchallenged 57 points. Second was Wesleyan (46); then came Springfield (37), So. Conn. (24½), Brown (23), Amherst and Bowdoin (20 ea), Mass. (18½), with Trinity, W.P.I., Tufts, UConn, Holy Cross, Coast Guard, and Vermont all finishing below double figures. Duncan McDougall of Amherst won the diving championship for the second straight year.

The varsity indoor track team finished fourth in the first YanCon Indoor Track and Field Championships held at Orono, Maine this past Saturday. Maine completely routed the rest of the teams as they scored 69 points. Second was Rhode Island (39), then came New Hampshire (28), UMass (26), Vermont (17), and Connecticut (16).

The Redmen entered the meet with hopes of winning, but Saturday was a Maine day all the way. The Bears scored in every event but one, and swept 1, 2, 3 in the 35 lb. weight throw. Bob Brouillet was the big man for UMass as he easily won the mile (4:21.2) and the 2-mile (9:22.6). Jim Wrynn ran a fine 600 as he took third place with a fine time of 1:14.9. Bob Molvar ran a very good 1,000 as he surprised everyone by taking second place with a fine time of 2:18.0.

Doug Sloane took third in the dash and ran a good leg on the relay team, which took fourth with a time of 3:30.3. The boys came within 2 seconds of the UMass record. John Medeios

Fife Resigns Presidency

Cites Poor Health As Reason; Will Retain Senate Seat

The Senate will finish an old year with a new President. Jon Fife has resigned his office and handed over the Senate gavel to Joan Labuzoski, former Senate Vice-President.

Fife announced his immediate resignation at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Senate Executive Committee. His announcement was a surprise to all but a few of the present Senate committee chairmen. It was greeted with absolute silence as he left the meeting turning the chairmanship over to Labuzoski.

Fife stressed that his was not to be considered similar to the rash of other Senate resignations that have plagued that body this year.

His resignation was purely for medical reasons. It has been generally known on the second floor of the Student Union that Fife has not been in good physical condition for many months.

Fife has only resigned his presidency and not his Senate seat as Senator at large for the class of '64.

In a letter to Labuzoski, Fife stated that he felt that perhaps by the end of the semester he would be able to attend Senate meetings on a regular basis. He also said that he felt it was too late in the year to elect another Senator from the Senior class.

Fife entered the University in his sophomore year as a transfer student from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. In his first year at UMass Fife ran against former Senate President Tex Tacelli for the Van Meter Dorm seat (then a men's dorm), and lost.

In the Spring of '62 Fife was once again unsuccessful in a bid for a berth in the Senate. This time, losing a close battle for Senator at large '64.

He again ran in the fall of '62 for the Van Meter seat and won with a wopping plurality.

In his non-Senate year at UMass Fife served on both the Senate Finance and Public Relations committees.

Fife assumed the position of President after beating out Dave Clancy for the job in the Senate pro tem elections last Spring. He was reelected unanimously and without opposition this past fall.

Labuzoski has been in the Senate for three years and represents the sororities.

The new President will chair this evenings meeting.

BEGINNING TONIGHT it will be Joan Labuzoski and not Jon Fife who will command the podium in the Student Senate Council Chambers.

Campus Chest Drive Behind Expectations

This year's Campus Chest Drive is drawing to a close and the amount collected is far behind what the committee had anticipated.

In a letter addressed to the Collegian, Bill Najam and Merry Halstead, co-chairmen of the Campus Chest Committee, stated their concern with the apparent apathy of both students and faculty. They requested that each student who has not been approached for his contribution seek out his dorm treasurer.

The funds, which will be contributed toward scholarships on campus, toward educating Negro students in South Africa, and toward augmenting the Albert P. Maderia Fund, started by the College Bowl Team, have been slow in coming in.

The co-chairmen continue to urge the students and faculty to contibute generously.

"INSPIRING PROGRAM"

Fine Arts Pay Tribute To Kennedy

By Pamela Brady

"This was truly an inspiring program," said President John Lederle commenting on Tuesday's Fine Arts tribute to the late President John F. Kennedy.

A crowd of over 1500 filled the Student Union ballroom and spilled over into the Commonwealth room to witness the ceremonies.

Frederick C. Ellert of the University's German department gave opening remarks stressing the late President's commitment to the fine arts.

Said Ellert, quoting from Kennedy's Amherst address of October 26:

"If art is to flourish the roots of our culture, society must set the artist free to follow his vision wherever it takes him."

The University Woodwind Quintet played Sarabande in D Minor from First French Suite by J. S. Bach. It was followed by a reading of Frost's "The Gift Outright" by Edward O'Connor, '64.

Several professors of the English department read original poems written in memory of Kennedy.

In addition to his own "A Memorial for President Kennedy," Robert G. Tucker read a poem by Paul Theroux, written for the occasion. Theroux is a former UMass student now serving as a Peace Corpsman in Turkey.

G. Stanley Koehler contributed a poem for the occasion, "In Arlington Cemetery."

"Sacrifice of My Neighbors," a poem which Joseph Langland had planned to read at the University of California on the day of the late President's assassination, was Langland's contribution to the presentation.

An interpretive dance was choreographed and performed by Georgia Reid of the Physical Education Department with the aid of Elaine Baxter '64, and Catherine Noel '65.

This was followed by Shakespeare's "St. Crispin" a speech from Henry V movingly read by Seymour Rudin.

Doris Abramson of the Speech Department read Sonnet LXV and Song from Cymbeline, both by Shakespeare. The program was concluded with the performance of "Memorial" by the Concert Band. "Memorial" was composed for the occasion by Elliot Schwartz.

The hushed audience filed slowly from the Ballroom at the end of the tribute.

Concert Band and Chorale Join For Sat. Presentation

On Saturday, March 21, at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, the University of Massachusetts Concert Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will present the first campus performance of the Grande Symphonie Funebre et Triomphale, Opus 15, by Hector Berlioz. This symphony for band will be the concluding work in the band's con-

Men's Judiciary Applications Available In RSO, Dorms

Applications are now available for Men's Judiciary. Application blanks can be picked up in the RSO office or from dormitory housemothers. There are openings for men from the classes of 1966 and 1967. Applications must be returned to the RSO office no later than twelve-noon on Thursday, March 26.

Men's Judiciary is part of the General Court of Justice, the Judicial branch of the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association. The General Court is composed of members of Men's and Women's judiciary and hears cases involving the Student Government Constitution. The main function of Men's Judiciary, however, is to hear hear cases referred to it by the Dean of Men involving the misconduct of male university students. The judiciary board, as the student voice, makes recommendations to the Dean of Men in the discipline cases. There are seven men—three seniors, three juniors, and one sophomore—on the Men's Judiciary board. Each member serves from the time of his selection until he graduates. We are now seeking to fill two junior and one sophomore positions for next year.

The new members will be chosen from among the applicants by a committee consisting of the members of Men's Judiciary and an equal number of student senators chosen by the Chairman of the Men's Affairs Committee of the Senate. Each candidate will present himself to the committe and then will be questioned extensively by the committee members.

All men interested in taking part in this aspect of student government are urged to apply.

The Tribute To JFK

by JOHN B. CHILDS

Summoning artists to participate
In the augusts occasions of the state
Seems something artist ought to celebrate.
Seems something no artist ought to celebrate.
—Robert Frost
For John F. Kennedy, His Inauguration

Death leaves a heavy atmosphere of weakness behind it.

The weakness, arises from inability to reclaim what the reaper has taken away.

The death of a widely known figure, respected by many, mourned by more, leaves even a wider atmosphere of weakness.

Such was the death of President Kennedy, such was the atmosphere after his death.

The weakness bowed a nation down.

But the nation did not remain bowed.

The nation lifted its head.

The Fine Arts Festival memoriam to John F. Kennedy is illustrative of this head-lifting. For in this memoriam were not empty hollow ideas through which the wind of futility whipped. In this memoriam were somber ideas, but living ones. In this memoriam the tongue of life spoke to the tongue of death, not challenging it, but by-passing it, for in this memoriam, the continuing strength and vitality of a people was expressed.

Such was the participation of the artist, in what is indeed an august occasion of state.

The tongue of death was by-passed, and continuation emphasized, indeed, a fine and a good tribute to one John F. Kennedy.

Guilt & Innocence In Dallas

by KEN FEINBERG

"We were the victims of the greatest railroaded, kangaroo court in history . . . We'll appeal to the United States Supreme Court if necessary . . . I'm going back to San Francisco, the stench of this city nauseates me."

These statements of Melvin Belli, defense attorney for Jack Ruby, the man sentenced to die for the slaying of Lee Oswald are ample proof of a complex problem confronting the citizens of Dallas, the degeneration of a society, which in an attempt to vindicate itself has added further shame to its blemished record.

The trial should not have been held in Dallas. The energetic attempt of the newspaper and radio media to vindicate Dallas at the expense of Ruby was obvious. The trend was comparable to the Sacco-Venzetti case of 1920 in the incompetent handling of press reporting which led to established opinions prior to the trial. The influence of the press in deciding Ruby's guilt was profound. Justice was not served; it could not to be served when millions of people read daily newspapers stressing Ruby's "planned" killing. Ideas are formulated that cannot be dissolved.

A new trial, outside the "city of wonder" is mandatory, if judicial law is not to become the "modern joke of civilized man." Until the death verdict is upheld (a doubtful prospect) one can reiterate that you don't kill a sick man to justify the realization of a murderous act. That Ruby is guilty or innocent is of secondary importance. The greater question of judicial law rests with this case. Dallas continues to stress the unique. Belli could be next to face a pistol.

Letter

Campus Chest - - The Purpose

To the editor:

As co-chairmen of this year's Campus Chest Drive, we can't seem to understand why the students and faculty seem so apathetic toward the drive. Don't they realize that the proceeds will be awarded to deserving students on campus and to Negro students in South Africa? The responsibility for the drive rests on the individual—it cannot be passed from one person to the next.

At a University of approximately 10,000 students, faculty, and administration, it is disappointing to think that we can't raise half of the minimum goal of $1 per person. A $1 contribution isn't too much to ask from students for the only campus-wide scholarship drive all year.

The Stockbridge Senate, under the direction of President Steve Elmont is a noteworthy example of a hard-working, dedicated organization. They managed to raise $300 from the Stockbridge School, from club treasuries alone. This is most encouraging and appreciated and sets a good example for individuals and organizations who have yet to contribute.

A recent source of pride for the University, the College Bowl Team, managed to win $10,500 which was put into a fund in memory of Professor Albert P. Madeira. Campus Chest would like to augment this fund, but cannot do so without your help.

We suggest that you check the barometer in front of the Student Union for progress of the drive. It will last only until next Monday. If you have not been approached for your contribution, your head of residence can direct you to your dorm treasurer.

We can only hope that in the closing days of the drive apathy will turn to interest, and the drive will prove successful.

Honors Day

Are University students merely going to stand by and allow the Honors Day Convocation to be dropped? The interest in honoring intellectual achievement has been shown by the overwhelming tribute paid to the victorious College Bowl Team upon their return from New York City by thousands of their fellow students. What about the many other students who have attained academic excellence—are they to go unnoticed?

This convocation is geared to honor the student. The faculty and administration pay tribute to the students at a separate function. This is the one time that each student can honor his fellow students. In addition, University faculty and administrators report on academic achievement of the University. UMass admissions show that of all the six New England state universities, UMass has the best academic profile. UMass has an excellent Honor program, including Honors Colloquia, UMITE, and senior honors work. This high academic standing is suported by the increasing number of first choices in applications and by the large numbers of transfer applicants.

Is the importance of honoring academic excellence at UMass to go unrecognized? We all should consider it our personal responsibility and obligation to honor these students who have helped to raise our University's academic standing?

Kindling Wood

Dear Sir:

When are we going to be able to have that unsightly, partially-burned pile of kindling wood, originally intended as a Winter Carnival bonfire, removed from the pit at the rear of the Student Union? It was built, you may recall, a day or so before the Carnival; and when lit, it failed to do much more than burn off the primer fluid. This ought to be something that the Carnival Committee would take care of; or as a last resort, the Grounds Department.

Sincerely,

Balance The Record

To the Editor:

Sir; We have all seen a good deal of criticism of the Student Senate in the past several months. Basically, this year's Senate is accused of "leaping and screaming" (a relatively undefined charge) and of harboring individuals who are out to get what they can for themselves. Coupled with this is the idea that the Senate has been sitting on its hands as far as constructive work is concerned. I would like to attempt to balance the record.

Firstly, it must be remembered that the great deal of responsibility which the Senate has is placed in the hands of 54 undergraduates. No other Student Government in the East has the autonomy that resides in ours. This is because of a spirit of responsible independence which has pervaded this organization for many, many years. It is also because the past Presidents of this University have felt that the Student Government has an educative function which is important to a University education and have fostered this spirit of "responsible independence" to a high degree. Other Universities are amazed at our SGA.

Secondly, I firmly believe that the vast majority of disputes within the Student Senate (the only events that seem to make the news) are caused not by selfish individuals, but by persons honestly disagreeing as to what is in the best interests of the Student Body. If I did not believe this, I would not have contributed most of my spare time for the last two years to the Senate; and I am most certainly not alone in this feeling or this contribution. Some disagreements may arise out of personality conflicts and the like, but most people will grant that this is almost inevitable where there are 54 people interacting, and these have not affected the Senate terribly and may have sharpened the minds of many of the individual senators for greater productivity.

Thirdly, "let's look at the Record," as Al Smith would say. What has the Senate done in the past two-thirds year. We have: done work on the tri-mester proposals (an Ad Hoc Committee), set up another Ad Hoc Committee to study the housing problems, which reportedly helped speed up construction of the new dorms, and is still working on many of the other problems of housing; worked on the growing problem of parking on the campus; reworked the SGA Constitution to strengthen the Judicial and Class Officer systems; financed the U.N. Week Committee; recommended to the Board of Trustees that improved fire protection be provided the student, and backed this up by approving a budget for the Volunteer Fire Department; sent buses to N.Y.C. on three occasions as active support of the College Bowl Team; financed and ran a Women's Career Day; set up a Kennedy Memorial Committee; set up committees for the study of Who's Who and Honorary Societies; and on and on.

Fourthly added to these must be the Annual Budgets Act, the work of Services Committee, innumerable financial acts for "emergency appropriations" and policy positions, and 15-20 Constitutions which require a vast amount of work in committee.

Fifthly, there are now pending the long awaited Financial Policy Booklet and a coherent distribution policy of the Collegian, Caesura and Yahoo.

S-105 was passed last Wednesday. In shear bulk of work, this Senate has far outdistanced any other. The Student Body has reason to be justly proud of its elected representatives.

Flying Redmen Win Again

DEMONSTRATING THE FORM and precision which have won them many titles, the Flying Redmen pose for the camera after their latest victory.

The University's "Flying Redmen" armed drill team again won the AFROTC Area "A" Drill Team Championship in competition held at Manhattan College, New York City on Saturday. Being the 5th consecutive victory for the team, it also marks their 11th victory in the twelve years that competition has been held.

The annual meet which brings college teams from all over New England and eastern New York State is conducted in two classes—armed and unarmed. The competition was split in to two routines basic and trick drill. In the morning the Redmen obtained 339 points out of 500 which represented an impressive 49 point lead over all competitors for the basic drill. The after noon routine-trick drill was valued at 240 points and the UMass team again scored well with 173 points, which gave them a total of 512 points for an overall 22 point victory over the nearest competitor, Trinity College.

A very odd paradox, as reported by drill team commander Cadet Lt. Col. Warren M. Vanderburgh, occurred when, in the afternoon trick drill, audience applause forced him to delay a few commands due to noise. This resulted in the fact that the team received a 52 point penalty for being 26 seconds overtime. This indicates that the trick drill routine was also excellent, and with improvement on timing it would be the best in the area.

Besides beating Trinity, the UMass team also topped teams from such schools as Boston Univ., UConn, Brooklyn College, Fordham Univ. and Manhattan College, the host team. The unarmed competition was topped by Trinity who upset perennial winner St. Michael's College (Vt.) with a novel blindfolded trick drill routine.

By winning on Saturday, the "Flying Redmen" will automatically be invited to the 1965 National Drill Team Competition at the annual Cherry Blossom Festival at Washington, D.C. The team has already been invited to this year's competition and indication is that the University will again be well represented at the nation's capitol in April. The team which is sponsored by Arnold Air Society has been training since the fall under the direction of the AFROTC staff and its commander, Warren M. Vanderburgh '64.

U. T. Upcoming Presentation Dedicated To Future

"The University Theatre's upcoming presentations of The Boat and I Do Not Think I'll Fall In Love Today scheduled for March 24 and 25, have been chosen to give UMass audiences a taste of the avant-garde," says Director Doris Abramson. "We have concentrated in our previous productions on the traditional theatre on the past," she added, "next week's plays will be dedicated to the future."

Written by recent UMass graduate Raymond Kennedy, these brand-new one-act plays combine bitter satire, off-beat humor and a "Theater of the Absurd" flavor. The Boat, starring Steve Orlen and Sheila Ferrini, is a wacky comedy of marriage and divorce. I Do Not Think I'll Fall In Love Today, with Helen Tefs, Hal Hines, and Tom Kerrigan in featured roles, puts a poet on trial, and explores the problem of conformity vs. creativity.

"In keeping with the modern, expressionistic atmosphere of the two plays" says Director Abramson, "we are using electronic music and some unusual sound effects as background. After all, this is their world premiere, and we want to do justice to them."

Playwright Kennedy (class of 1960), now living in Greenwich Village, has seen his work produced on campus before. Bagpipe and Poppies and A Matter of Time have been featured by the Speech Department in past UMass theater seasons.

Kennedy's first novel, My Father's Orchard, was published in 1963, and the trial scene in I Do Not Think is an excerpt from his yet-unpublished book, Goodnight Jupiter. Kennedy plans to be on campus March 24 to attend a Coffee Hour and the opening night performance of his plays

The production will be held in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. Ticket are $1.00 per person, and are available at the door or at the Student Union Box Office March 23, 24 and 25.

General Scheideker Speaks On Leadership

Before nearly a hundred junior and senior students of the Air Force ROTC at the University of Massachusetts, Tuesday evening, Major General Paul Scheidecker, Air Force finance and accounting chief from the Pentagon, urged an improvement in human relations ability.

General Scheidecker did not cite specific examples of what he labeled "national and international challenges" but pointed out that "major threats exist and can be expected to exist in the future..."

"As far as members of the Air Force are concerned, our constant chalenge is how to provide the maximum airpower at the most prudent cost. It is common and fashionable, these days, to talk of billions of dollars," he reminded cadets and guests at the Student Union. "But what is a billion dollars? ... If you gave your wife a million dollar and told her she could spend a thousand dollars every day, in three years she would be back for more. But if you gave her a billion dollars, with the same authority to spend one thousand dollars a day, you wouldn't see her again for three thousand years..."

Having given the cadets his impressions of leadership the General drew upon Biblical passages to illustrate. He said, "You could sum up the qualities of leadership by reading the sermon on the Mount and following the Golden Rule..."

He told of Moses organizing his people into a nation and of how Jethro advised the selection of able and trustworthy men to help lead. "Every great matter they shall bring to you," Jethro was quoted as saying, "But any small matter they shall decide themselves." "The practice of delegating authority," said the Air Force finance and accounting chief, "is still sound."

Art And Religion Thurs. Topic

"Many times creative artists are ostracized from recognized Christian groups because the symbols of their expression are not clearly established, or because the conclusions which they discover do not always bolster those established by church tradition."

This is one of the many topics which artist Lynda McNeur will explore in her lecture Thursday evening, March 19, at 8 in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. Included in her presentation will be the whole area of dialogue and turmoil created by the encounter of religion and art. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

All this week expressions of artist McNeur's work in liturgical form are being exhibited in the main lounge of Memorial Hall. In her lecture, however, the artist will not be confined to a discussion of art which uses as its subject matter recognizable religious symbols, for Lynda McNeur is involved in bringing religious experience and the artist into honest dialogue.

"The spirit reveals itself in its own way, in its own time, and where it will. Some listen to it; some will not hear it. It seems to be given ear most sensitively at the present time by certain creative artists, who seek to express what they encounter through their art forms." It is to this sensitive expression that Mrs. McNeur will draw our attention.

Freshmen golf candidates will meet Thursday, March 19, at 7 p.m. in the Hampden room of the Student Union.

Peace Corps Reps. To Visit UM

A Peace Corps team from Washington, D. C., is scheduled to visit the University from March 23 through 24.

The purpose of the visit is to interpret a record number of opportunities for Peace Corps service, as well as to supply general information to students and faculty, a Peace Corps official said.

William Saltonstall, former Principal of Phillips Exeter Academy now serving as Peace Corps Representative in Nigeria, will address UM students on March 24.

Plans have been made to set up a Peace Corps Information Center in the Student Union Lobby, to be manned by Peace Corps staff members, day and evening throughout their visit.

The Peace Corps team will also administer the non-competitive Placement Test several times daily during their stay. Peace Corps Questionnaires must be completed before taking the test, said the Peace Corps official. Those thinking of applying should fill out a Questionnaire now and submit it to the Peace Corps representative upon taking the test. Questionnaires may be obtained in advance from the Peace Corps liaison on campus, Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement & Financial Aid. Donald Boyd '65 is the student Peace Corps liaison on campus.

cert presented in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival. Featured on the program will be the University Chorale, conducted by Larry Lemmel.

The Symphony is in three movements and, as with all symphonic works of Berlioz, is of a programmatic character. The first movement is subtitled "Funeral March." The second, "Recitative and Prayer," is known to every trombone soloist as one of the very rare examples of a solo for trombone written by one of the great masters. The final movement, the "Apotheosis" is martial in character, on the programmatic theme of Glory and Triumph, and is climaxed by a choral hymn setting of the brisk and militant principal theme, in stirring combination with the full band sonority.

Also included in the concert will be Music for a Festival, commissioned by the Arts Council of Great Britain for the 1951 Festival of Britain. This work is scored for a choir of four trumpets, 3 trombones, and tympani, contrasted with the full band. A review of the London premier describes the work as an important addition to the finest quality to the band's repertoire, and during succeeding years frequent performances, both here and abroad, have added prestige to its initial evaluation.

Memorial for concert band and organ, by Elliott Schwartz, will receive its second performance on this concert, the premier having been heard on March 17 at the University Convocation in honor of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. The work is modern in sonority, and while not programmatic, presents antiphonally the dignified yet somber mood of a tragic ceremonial occasion.

Larry Lemmel, Conductor of the University Chorale, will conduct the combined Concert Band and Chorale in a performance of Gustav Holst's Turn Back O Man. This work is a setting of the melody, "The old 124th Psalm", from the Genevan Psalter. Gustav Holst is well known to band audiences for a variety of original band works, all of which are flavored by his experience as a trombonist in an English Military Band.

The University Concert Band will open the concert with a performance of Canzona by Peter Mennin. Mr. Mennin, a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music since 1947, is an important and prolific young American composer, whose works also include six symphonies and a variety of other compositions for diverse media. The word "canzona" has long been associated with the fugal style of writing, and with an important sixteenth and seventeenth century form which led eventually to the sonata. The Canzona for band is reflective of this style, both in its contrast of contrapuntal and homophonic style, and in its variety of rhythmic and melodic materials.

For its performance in conjunction with the Contemporary Arts Festival, the University of Massachusetts Concert Band will present a program of representative band music from diverse periods of composition, and will give a concise but clear musical picture of the contemporary trend toward the performance of worthy, idiomatically written band music.

School Of Ed. Sponsors Math Conference

The School of Education will sponsor a day-long mathematics education conference for elementary and secondary teachers at the University this Saturday, March 21.

Dr. Bruce E. Meserve of Montclair (N. J.) State College, president-elect of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, will address the teachers at 9 a.m. in the School of Education auditorium. Dr. Meserve will talk on "A Professional Approach to Improving Mathematical Instruction."

At noon, Dr. J. Fred Weaver of Boston University will give a luncheon address in the Student Union entitled "Mathematics in the Elementary School: Revolution or Evolution?"

Sectional meetings will be held throughout the day in the Education building. There will be several demonstration classes and publishers' exhibits of new textbooks.

BAGELS AND BLARNEY

WMUA Folk Show Scored

by DAVE GITTELSON
and DICK DOHERTY

IN RESPONSE TO a number of requests from students for a program of recorded folk music, the University station, WMUA, has set aside three hours each Saturday evening to present a program of this nature. Unfortunately, the people responsible for the composition of this broadcast have completely missed the boat, or so we feel.

These people seem to be dedicated to the proposition that if a particular song and artist have not sold a million records, they are not worth playing. Their programming consists almost entirely of music by such well-known names as Peter, Paul, and Mary, the Kingston Trio, the New Christy Minstrels, and others whose songs appear in almost every juke box on campus.

But is this serving any purpose other than to save students the nickels they might otherwise throw into the juke box in the hatch? We feel that because this is the only program of its nature offered, it should be of a more educational or informative nature. It should be devoted to exposing its listeners to the lesser known areas of the folk idiom, such as southern blues, flamenco, or the folk music of distant nations, as well as the popular form we are all so well acquainted with. Perhaps if more artists and forms were to be given a decent amount of broadcast time, the program itself might gain a more widespread popularity.

OLD BAGELS-NEW BLARNEY: One of the brightest new names on the folk scene is that of Raun McKinnon. Raun received her first big break at the "Second Fret" in Philadelphia, and has subsequently appeared in many of the leading night spots in the East. She has a hearty, robust voice, which, blended with her unique style of arrangement, makes for truly enjoyable listening.

On her recently released album American Folk Songs Sung by Raun McKinnon, she performs such favorites as House Carpenter, Freight Train, Dink's Blues, in addition to several of her own compositions. Remember the name—this is a girl who possesses all the potential to become one of this country's outstanding artists.

From Campus To Campus

Ballet For Football Players

THE SKIFF, (Texas Christian Univ.): Athletic coaches at TCU are cooking up a new secret weapon—one they hope will make their teams unbeatable on the basketball court and gridiron. The secret? Ballet lessons for ballplayers! Working on the assumption that dancing is the "best possible way to improve coordination, reflexes, stamina, and determination," the University ballet instructor and the coaches appear interested in devising a program of ballet and modern dance for athletes in their off seasons. "If an athlete can change or shift his weight quickly" said Ballet Instructor David Preston, "he has an excellent advantage over the less graceful, slipshod type." The ideal football player, it seems, is a cross between Pavlova and Paul Hornung.

CAMPUS CHAT, (Univ. of North Texas): More bright ideas from Texas students. UNT class officers have been getting away with murder, it seems, and the Senate is cracking down. Senate Veep James Hightower declared that a majority of students running for class offices think there are no responsibilities involved. "They seek to bolster their own record" he said, "at no cost to them." After searching the Constitution, Senator Hightower came to the conclusion that class officers are supposed to have some duties connected with their offices, and asked that a senate committee be assigned to specify the jobs. Ulcer-ridden UMass officers will find this Never-Never Land hard to believe, we think.

MITA CAMPUS, (Kelv Univ., Tokyo): Students problems are universal, it seems. The MITA CAMPUS recently printed an article deploring student attitudes toward classwork: "When the lecture is a required subject the classroom is filled up with a good deal of lazy (?) students. Indeed it is a funny thing. This phenomenon comes from the mandatory attendance at required subject lectures. Only for this little reason have the students gathered in room. What a pitty thing!" Parents, the paper states, have the problem pegged. "Students in these days are not good. They are danced by mass-communication."

Three Redmen Among Top Fifteen Scorers

YANKEE CONFERENCE STATISTICS SHOW THREE UM PLAYERS among the top fifteen scorers. Peter Bernard copped fifth place with a 19.9 game average, one point shy of a tie for fourth place. Junior Charlie O'Rourke took 13th place with an average of 13.4 points. Captain Rodger Twitchell was right behind O'Rourke in fourteenth place with a 13.1 average.

JIM RICH, a steady performer for the University of New Hampshire Wildcats for the past three years, is the New Yankee Conference scoring champion. Rich scored 230 points in 10 games to clinch the title and replace Rodger Twitchell of Massachusetts as the leader. The latter, bothered by injuries most of the campaign, slipped to 14th place.

Dennis McGovern and Steve Chubin, members of the co-champion University of Rhode Island Rams, took over second and third spots, respectively. McGovern, who led briefly, was held to only nine points in the final conference game against Connecticut and saw his average drop to 21.4. Chubin scored 208 points for a 20.8 average while Nick Mandravelis of New Hampshire was fourth with an average of 20 points per game. Pete Bernard of Massachusetts was fifth with a 19.9 average. Wildcats Place Third Durham, March 17 — A third place finish in the first Yankee Conference indoor meet ended the winter season on a high note for Coach Paul Sweet and his University of New Hampshire track team.

The Wildcats finished behind winning Maine and runner-up Rhode Island but outpointed a Massachusetts team which rated as a possible victor in pre-meet predictions.

UNH scored 28 points in the six team meet, its best showing in conference competition since 1958.

Junior Don Dean of Buffalo, N.Y. was the UNH standout Saturday as he has been all winter. Don won the 1,000 yard run in the time of 2:15.9 and also finished fourth in the mile.

Sophomore Jack Doherty of Manchester took a second in the low hurdles and a third in the high hurdles to account for six UNH points.

Junior Wally Johnson finished right behind Doherty in the low hurdles and also placed fourth in the broad jump. Russ Briggs of Concord was second in the latter event.

The Wildcats also captured fifth place in five events and these points pushed UNH ahead of Massachusetts which scored 26 points.

Picking up these vital points for the Wildcats were Captain Dick Clark in the high hurdles, George Estabrook in the mile, Hal Fink in the 600, Jeff Reneau in the two mile, and the UNH mile relay team.

Since only Briggs and Clark are seniors and Sweet has a couple of standouts on the frosh indoor squad, the future of track at UNH looks much brighter today.

Russian Olympians Hit In Mag.

NEW YORK, March 12 — Ski magazine charged today that the 'inequitable structure" of the Olympic Winter Games allowed the Communists to score a worldwide propaganda victory over the United States.

A signed editorial by the magazine's publisher, Arnold E. Abramson, in the current (March-April) issue of Ski, also deplored the participation in the Olympics of "professional" athletes from behind the Iron Curtain.

Abramson's charge concering Red propaganda stems from the fact that the medals won by Russia in "secondary" women's events were lumped in with all the "major" men's events in the overall tabulation. Thus the impressive combined total of medals won by Russia's men and women made it appear that the USSR had dominated the Olympics, said Abramson.

Pointing out that the Russian women contributed 15 of the Soviet Union's total of 25 medals at Innsbruck, Abramson asserted that the results of men's events paint a much truer picture of a nation's overall capability at the Olympics.

"Volumes", of course, could be written about the double standards applied to amateur eligibility for the Games, and to the financing of training programs," said Abramson. "A flagrant case in point is the professional ice hockey teams from behind the Iron Curtain, any one of which could be trounced by reasonably competent Canadian or American pros. More subtle, but inequitable also, are the differences in preparing the college students who make up the U.S. downhill and slalom ski squads compared with the thoroughly financed, trained, and often strategically employed European Alpinists.

"It is one thing to fall short of the mark and lose. It is quite another to be the loser in a game already organized along lines favoring the opposition. The distinction needs to be made for the benefit of many observers who have come away from the recent Olympic Winter Games overwhelmed by the medal-winning superiority of Russian athletes. No one begrudges the Russian victory itself. What galls, however, is when the victory is measured solely by the crude output of gold, silver and bronze, and is trumpeted to winter sports cognoscenti in Uruguay and Uganda as some sort of Communist superiority over a decadent West.

Kansas State vs. UCLA In NCAA Playoffs

by JOHN GOODRICH

THE SECOND GAME that will be played this Friday at Kansas City will feature the two western entrants in the NCAA championships. Kansas State earned the right to make the trip by sweeping to victory in Midwest regionals while undefeated UCLA fought through the Far West regionals.

In the tourney which Kansas State won, they had to upset Wichita 94-86 despite the fact that the Shockers used a full court press. State now sports a 13 game win streak and have high hopes of adding two more this year. At present their record is a fine 22-5.

Dave Stallworth had 37 points for Wichita, but a fine effort by regional MVP Willie Murrell spelled the difference, in the championship game. The 6'8" center came up with 28 points and 4 assists as well as numerous rebounds. Third place in the regional was won by Texas Western 63-52 over Creighton.

In addition to big gun Murrell, State's Wildcats feature top sophomore Sammy Robinson as well as Roger Suttner, Jeff Simons, and Max Moss.

COACH TEX WINTER feels that the team has a good chance to beat UCLA, despite the fact they bowed to the Bruins 78-75 earlier in the year. He says, "UCLA's press is a lot like Wichita's. We handled them pretty well."

Winter has worn his same brown suit during all 13 games in the current win streak. He sent it out to the cleaners because, If I didn't, it would be the most offensive thing in Kansas City.

In the Far West regional UCLA was figured to have an easy go of it, but they had the toughest of any of the four teams. They edged Seattle in the first round and defeated San Francisco 76-72, in the finals. In both games, the Bruins had to fight back from 13 point deficits.

Walt Hazzard, the Bruins All-American guard, was instrumental in both comebacks. In the finals, he hit for 23 points including 7 field goals in the second half. In addition he fed off to the other star guard, Gail Goodrich, for 5 more hoops. Seattle clinched third place by defeating Utah State, 88-78.

ONE CANNOT HELP BUT ADMIRE the Bruins and their drive through 28 games undefeated. In this day of giants, UCLA is a midget. Hazzard goes about 6'2", Coodrich 6' even, and Jack Hirsch 6'3". The two "big" men for the Bruins are Fred Slaughter and Keith Erickson, both of whom are only 6'5". Yet this team has dropped such opponents as Kansas State and Michigan, the latter by 18 points. The Bruins hope that their smooth offense and pressing defense will carry them through to the championship that has often been missed by the top team in the country.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES: Massachusetts continues to pass out awards to their two star basketball players . . . Pete Bernard won the newly initiated George H. "Trigger" Burke award for the most valuable player . . . He also copped the Samuel B. Samuels Award for the top foul shooter . . . The scrappy guard from Brockton led the team in eight departments over the past season . . . His foul shooting percentage was .757 as he hit on 81 of 107 . . .

CHUCK O'ROURKE WAS NAMED RECIPIENT of the George H. Richards award for the most improved player on the team . . . He had a 14.9 point per game average, as well as setting a new rebounding record . . .

The Burke award was named for the Redmen star of the mid-50's . . . Burke played only 2 years, but was All-Conference both times . . . He set a record of 153 assists in a season and was one of the all time top scorers . . .

In the other national tournament, the NIT, dark horse NYU appears to have overcome its erratic play as it moved to the semi-finals.

Soutter Speaks On Need For New Medical School

by SUE KLEIN

"I hope the addition of a medical school to the University will stimulate people and show them that we are a growing university." These were the words of Dr. Lamar Soutter, Dean of the new University of Massachusetts Medical School, in an address to the Pre-med Club Wednesday evening.

In his "Plans for the Coming University Medical School," Dr. Soutter enumerated his hopes and expectations for the school as well as the reasons for its conception.

EXPLAINING THAT there are only 95 medical schools in the country, 40 of which are state schools, including the one to be built in conjunction with the University, he indicated a need for more medical schools. The high cost of a medical education (generally $3000-4000 a year) is one of the factors which tends to produce a shortage of physicians, a condition that a state medical schol would go a long way in remedying. Dr. Soutter hopes that the legislature will go along with the proposal to keep the tuition the same as it is for the rest of the University ($100 a semester for state students.)

Changes come hard for an old school. A new University Medical School would add to the existing methods that have proved useful in the past rather than completely revolutionizing the whole system:

HE FEELS that each school should be a little different; each should have its own flavor.

It is hoped that the school will give a broad, general education with a good deal of student-teacher interchange and more intimate contact in laboratory work.

THE FACULTY - STUDENT ratio would be kept low, as low as 1:3.

Dr. Soutter emphasizes a more leisurely curriculum with more general theory than details.

THE PRESENT CLASS day runs from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. with four hours of work to do at home. Dr. Soutter would like to see the semester lengthened in order to shorten the day and give the students more time in which to do individual work.

It is hoped that the new med school will bring patient care into the first two years of training in order to help the students get the feel of medicine as soon as possible.

THE FINAL POINT made by Dr. Soutter was that more time should be devoted to electives to enable the student to study subjects which they would not get a chance to study after medical school.

In order to get the Medical School going, a faculty, and land with room for expansion must be secured. The first is easily disposed. There have already been about thirty applications from doctors interested in a position here at the University once the school is open. Dr. Soutter anticipated little problem in hiring a competent staff.

THE ACQUISITION of land for the new schol does present quite a problem. There are already three medical schools in the state—Boston University's, Tufts' and Harvard's — all of which are in the Boston area. If

by DON JOHNSON

"There is much work to be done . . . and we must do it" so said Joan Labuzoski as she ended her speech to the assembly and began her first meeting as President of the Student Senate. The determined manner in which she spoke belied the soft tone of her voice as she called for the first order of business; and the response of the Senate was business as usual.

The Senate tabled three bills which will assure a more equitable distribution of the Collegian, Yahoo, Caesura and any other such publications that may be formed in the future. Particular attention was given commuter students, who will be given I.D. cards identifying them as commuters and will use these for aquisition of these publications.

The Senate also approved the expenditure of $450.00 "for research and development of an FM-AM Converter system" for the university. Directly in line with this converter, WMUA is seeking to relocate its transmitter facilities to one of the new dormitories now being completed to the North of Van Meter. The effect of this change-over will be to double the present transmitting radius and include such cities as Springfield and Greenfield where, it was noted, a potentially large audience exists in the person of commuter students and other interested friends of the university.

The meeting was marked by the conspicuous absence of former president Jon Fife, who was cited by the Senate in a formal motion as follows:

Whereas, the Administration of Jonathan Fife has been characterized by patience, selflessness, sincerity, and dedication, and

Whereas, for reasons of health, Senator Fife has found it necessary to resign from the Presidency of the Student Senate, therefore

Be it resolved that the Student Senate express its regrets upon his resignation and gratitude for his service to the student body and the University as a Senator and as President of the Student Senate.

In having the presidency turned over to Senator Labuzoski, the student body is getting a three-year veteran of the Senate. She has served as Vice-President for a full year, and is well versed in parliamentary procedure. In assuming the presidency, Senator Labuzoski is setting what she hopes to be a precedent for an alumnus for her sorority, I speak of her fellow—Sigma Kappa . . . Senator Margaret Chase Smith.

Hills N. Hosts Bowl Team

by PHIL VANDERSEA

A reception for the victorious UMass College Bowl team was held Tuesday night by Hills North. Mike Berrini, Bill Landis, and Dave Mathieson were guests of honor at the affair which was attended by a large number of Hills North residents.

The team engaged in a "bull session" for almost an hour before the actual reception began.

Residents of Hills stated that they were proud to have the team present, and that they, as representatives of all dormitories, wished to extend their congratulations.

Refreshments were served, and the team members present were presented pens as a mementoe of their service to the University.

The reception at Hills North was another in a continuing string of receptions given in honor of the victorious team. Last week the team journeyed to Boston where they were guests of Governor Peabody at a luncheon.

Previous to their fifth and final bowl try, the team was feted at a special "training meal" given by Kappa Sigma.

Since their victory, the team has been receiving many letters from alumni and parents praising the University and the team.

Oswald Defense Must Be Heard

by TED WEINBERG

For four months Americans have heard only one side of the case concerning Lee Harvey Oswald and the assination of President Kennedy. The prosecution has presented its case explicitly and with vivid detail, leaving no room for thought.

Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade declared on November 24, "I have sent men to the electric chair with less evidence"; thus implying that he had his man. That same night, in a nationally televised press conference, Attorney Wade stated, "I would say that without any doubt Oswald is the killer . . . there is no question that he (Oswald) was the killer of President Kennedy." The prosecution's tool, the national newspapers, further presented to the people a biased case against Lee Harvey Oswald.

Wade's evidence has been publicized widely. With this evidence, any jury would rightfully pass down a verdict of guilty. The prosecution has long rested, easing itself of the burden of determining the final sentence.

In the courtrooms of this country, the next people to be heard are the defense. In this case, for expedient reasons, the defense has been eliminated. There was no cross examination of any of the evidence presented against Oswald. No that there is no defense attorney, for one does exist. The trouble is that he has no way of presenting his case to the people for none of Mr. Wade's tools (newspapers) will print "the other side of the story". Those who have heard Mr. Lane speak at Amherst College are fortunate, for they have heard the vital cross-examination of the prosecution's evidence.

I strongly urge that Mr. Lane be brought to the University so that others may hear the defense for what it is.

Lee Harvey Oswald will never have his day in court, but if he did, with a good defense lawyer answering Mr. Wade, what might not have emerged?

A Dialogue

The Doctrine Of Futurism

by DAVE HARACZ

Socrates: Come, let us discuss street lights.

Student: Yes. Master, how may we define our terms? You know we must define our terms.

Socrates: Well, one would do well to begin with what the object does. In this case, it illuminates. Is thas not so?

Student: Of course. I see! A streetlight is that which illuminates a street.

Socrates: You see, in this manner, we can determine that which is a street. You must agree that a street, in converse, is that which is illuminated by a street light.

Student: Exactly! Then, master, that area between Wheeler Dormitory and Fernald Hall is a street, because it is so illuminated.

Socrates: But of course. The confirmation of our hypothisis is to be found here in this map of your campus. See, here, where the street is indicated running from the corner by Hills House and past the Infirmary . . .

Student: Wait! I have never seen a street in front of the Infirmary.

Socrates: You have gotten us on yet another track. We must now have some sort of an explanation of why you cannot see that which is actually there. What is usually the cause of the inability of an individual to see something?

Student: Since I am not blind, I can only suggest that there is an imperfection in my reasoning. Have I forgotten something?

Socrates: Are you not familiar with the doctrine of futurism? It is the ruling force here.

Student: I confess my ignorance, master. What is this concept which you say rules here?

Socrates: Well, let us return to the map. You see, here, the Administration Building, here, the football stadium, and here, the three dormitodies at the top of this hill?

Student: I have seen but mud and masses of concrete there in my time here, but I suppose they must be there if the map says so.

Socrates: Yes, this is the concept I hoped you would see. These things are an aspect of futurism.

Student: Then they are like the street we spoke of?

Socrates: Exactly. One must accept them on faith, faith in the doctrine of futurism, or he will otherwise see only the ugliness of construction and discomfort about him. You must be willing to suffer for the ideal, which, in this case, is these buildings and the street.

Student: Then I will be really noble if I firmly believe that there is a road under my feet as I walk by the Infirmary and past that street light. Little inconveniences cannot stop me from attaining perfection, even though I know not when this perfection will come.

Socrates: Well spoken. Can you, now, define futurism?

Student: I will try, master. I would say that futurism is — that concept in which "temporary" inconveniences, no matter how long they may remain, are subordinated to the benefits, real or imagined, of the improvements to come out of this inconvenience at some later time. Is that it?

Socrates: Yes. Your perceptivity astounds me!

Student: Well, Master, I must put on my galoshes and return to my dormitory. Don't forget your boots; it's almost spring.

Socrates: Thank you. May the gods of Futurism protect you.

Diamonds - - Apartheid's Best Friend

by Mike Hench

In spite of my reservations concerning boycotts and "ten percent plans" (whether suggested by Sen. Russell of Georgia or Rep. Powell of New York), I do stand opposed to segregation and deprivation of rights. Nowhere in the world do these evils manifest themselves with more force than in South Africa. Well, I have a plan for effectively dealing with South Africa, and I'm sure it will meet with wide approval.

Current efforts to chastise South Africa have been rather confused and completely ineffective. We do real bad things like cutting off arms aid and the like. Now, what is the basis of the South African economy? Where might we legally strike at apartheid and strike in such a manner that it would really hurt? And when I say "we", I mean we college students. The answer is diamonds.

De Beers, which is the largest diamond interest in the world, gets most of its raw diamonds from South Africa. The firm spends millions in advertising to convince people that you are not "lastingly married" or "lastingly engaged" until you have a diamond on your finger. They have been so successful that no one thinks of giving, say, a ruby for an engagement ring. Now, I'm sure you're way ahead of me, but wouldn't it be simple enough to change this tradition, especially among the youth of America, who are more liberal than their elders and more susceptible to change and marriage.

The next time one of you goes into a store to buy a diamond, remember that De Beers controls 80% of wholesale diamond sales. It might also help to note that De Beers has just raised all prices 10%, as have cutters, importers, wholesalers and manufacturers; so your ring prices are now as much as 40 percent higher than last year. (Diamond ring prices, that is.) Also remember that the success or failure of apartheid in South Africa could set the pattern for segregation the world over.

Anyway, rubies and emeralds are pretty nice stones and even lowly zircons are more brilliant than diamonds.

Letters

Fife's Resignation

Dear Joan,

With deep regret I hereby submit my resignation as President of the Student Government Association. It is only due to the advice of my doctor that I take this action. My health has been at a low point for many months and it now has forced me to take this action to relieve myself of some of my extra responsibilities.

I hope that the Senate will make it as easy as possible for you to do your job as President backing your rulings and remaining at all times dignified, responsible students.

With much sadness do I take this action and hope after a rest I might give a little time as Senator-at-Large '64. I wish to keep my senate seat as I feel that it would be unwise to find a new person at this late date and that there is chance that I will be able to return before my term of office is up.

I will not give any farewell instructions to you or the Senate since anything I might say would be repeating what I have said so often.

I wish you the best of luck and success in the remaining term.

Jonathan D. Fife

Ed. Note: This letter was received by Senator Joan Labuzoski.

Field Comments On Fife

To the Editor:

I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the dedication and sincerity of purpose which Jon Fife displayed in his leadership of the Student Senate. The maintenance of a meaningful student government within the context of the University is at all times a difficult operation. With the full understanding of these difficulties, Mr. Fife at all times throughout the year worked with real devotion for the best interest of the student government and the student body with all of his energies.

When his own medical advice was such that he could no longer pursue the affairs of the senate with the full effort required, he chose to step down from his high position with the best interests of the senate and of student government as his basic motivation.

An independent and responsible student government is of importance not only to the student body, but to the University community at large, and for his service to this community I offer Mr. Fife my sincere appretiation.

Peace Corps On Campus; Program Director To Speak

William G. Saltonstall, former principal of Phillips Exeter Academy and Director of the Peace Corps program in Nigeria, will speak to the UMass student body on Tuesday, March 24. The address, which will be held in the ballroom at 11:15, is in conjunction with the visit of a Peace Corps team from Washington, D. C. from March 23 through March 24.

Saltonstall, a second cousin of Senator Leverett Saltonstall, is a member of one of Massachusetts' oldest and most distinguished families. Mr. Saltonstall was graduated from Harvard with bachelor and masters degrees and holds honorary degrees from Harvard, Princeton, Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Williams and Colby.

DURING WORLD WAR II he served as a Naval officer aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Bunker Hill. Released from active duty as a lieutenant commander in 1945, he returned to Exeter and to the Chairmanship of the school's history department. He was chosen as principal the following June.

A Republican, he has twice been a delegate to national GOP conventions and was active in the early and successful candidacy of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

As an educator, he has been president of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and a member of the executive committee of the American Council on Education.

PEACE CORPS DIRECTOR Sargent Shriver has described Saltonstall as "one of the ablest educators in America. He brings to the Peace Corps an outstanding reputation as a dynamic administrator, teacher, and leader."

The purpose of the two day program is to interpret a record of opportunities for Peace Corps service and as well as to supply general information to student and faculty.

William G. Saltonstall will be on campus Tuesday to address faculty and students on recent development in the Peace Corps.

WMUA To Broadcast Univ. Band Concert

It has just been announced that Governor Peabody is sending his military aide, Lt. Dermot Shea, to represent him at the Band Concert to be held in the Student Union Ballroom on Saturday, March 21, at 8:00 P.M. Governor Peabody regretted that he would be unable to attend the concert as he will be out of the Commonwealth, but is sending a representative. In his letter to the Band he asked that, "you convey to those assembled on this occasion my personal greetings and warmest best wishes."

As part of this program of original band literature the Band will present the first Amherst performance of the Berlioz Grande Symphonie Funebre et Triomphale.

This concert, presented in conjunction with the contemporary Fine Arts Festival, is open to the public with no admission charge. As a recognized student organization, the Band hopes to give as many University students, faculty and staff as possible the opportunity to hear fine band literature.

Because of the number of reservations already requested, it is recommended that groups wishing to reserve blocks of seats do so immediately.

WMUA, 91.1 FM will broadcast the concert.

Med School . . .

the school were built in Boston, it would be more difficult to find clinical patients. Patients would have to be gathered from all over the state and brought by ambulance. As a result, the existing schools would be prevented from expanding. In the interest of civil defense, it might be a good idea not to concentrate the medical schools in one small section of the state. Another of the primary concerns in choosing a site for the school will be in locating it near a hospital.

Boston, Worcester, Springfield and Amherst are the cities now under consideration. Hospital facilities in these cities are being studied:

A SITE IS AVAILABLE next to Boston City Hospital but it would be very difficult to obtain land for expansion.

Another site in Boston, Lemuel Shattuck Hospital which is located near Franklin Park, is a possibility but facilities for 400 patients must be added before this hospital could be used.

IN WORCESTER, St. Vincents and Worcester Memorial Hospital could provide the students with hospital training.

Several sites are available in Springfield, where they can receive practical training at Municipal Hospital.

THERE ARE, however, drawbacks for both the private hospitals and the medical school if such arrangements were made. Students usually run more tests and take more X-rays thus increasing the hospital cost. In addition, it is impossible to use private patients in medical training. The private hospital has its own Board of Trustees which might disagree with the Board of the University.

In Amherst, on the other hand, a University hospital would have to be built.

THE CONSTRUCTION SITE should be decided on by the Board of Trustees by June. Dr. Soutter elicited a laugh from the audience with a suggestion that the school be located at a resort like Nantucket to attract a large faculty.

In a previous statement, Dr. Soutter said that he expected the school to be in operation by the fall of 1967 or 1968 with a necessarily small class of about 100 students. The students are to be chosen on a competitive basis and the ratio of out-of-state students will probably be about the same as the rest of the University. Out-of-state tuition will be about the same as that of Harvard—$1500 a year.

Former Student Presents Case Against Indiana Indictment

Last week in Wright Hall, Smith College, Ralph Levitt, former student at Indiana University, presented his case against the indictment of his organization, the Young Socialist Alliance, by the Indiana Grand Jury.

Levitt and two other officers of the Y.S.A. were indicted under the 1951 Anti-Communism Law of Indiana, bringing about "the most important case (of the present day) as it relates to academic freedom."

THE Y.S.A. was founded with permission of the University in 1958. In October of 1962, the month of the Cuban blockade, the Y.S.A. planned a peaceful demonstration, with 25 picketers. Five thousand people, notified by the news media, received the picketers. Five hundred to 1,000 of these, according to Levitt, were actively hostile. Attacks were made on all, he said, even on the bystanders; one onlooker was taken for a Communist "because he was wearing a beret." University police had been told to protect only "Americans," Levitt said. The next day Elvis Stahr, president of I.U., praised the students for their "moderation and restraint."

The result of the publicity Levitt continued, was a general shock expressed by all layers of Indiana life at the existence of a "subversive group." There arose a grass roots pressure operation to silence those who took strong stand on the left.

THE PUBLIC prosecutor, newly elected Thomas Hoadley, conducted an inquiry into the Y.S.A. using the Anti-Communism law. The statue itself was thus at issue.

It had been passed in the hysteria of the McCarthy period, Levitt said, in a state with a history of the KKK and the John Birch Society. Other laws passed in that year, he said, called the Robin Hood legend subversive because Robin Hood stole from the rich to give to the poor. The anti-subversion law reads as follows: it is the public policy of the state of Indiana to exterminate Communism, Communists and any and all teachings of the same, according to Levitt. The penalty can only be applied to teaching of subversive activities; therefore the Y.S.A. had tao be accused of influencing an overthrow of the government to be brought to trial.

The Y.S.A.'s rights to a fair

Photography From Five Years of Space is a display of photography from the first five years of activity in the programs of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In general, the photographs depict scenes from NASA's four major program areas — manned space flight, space sciences, applications, and advanced research and technology.

The ninety-four color and monochrome photographs can be considered a dual-purpose exhibition. To the general public, the prints provide in visual form information that adds to understanding of United States space science and technology as reflected in NASA program activities. To those who use the camera as a vocation or avocation, the exhibition will be a collection of outstanding prints made by NASA, Life, National Geographic and New York Times photographers. It is interesting to note that many of the photographs in the exhibit were made with 35mm cameras and color film similar to equipment used by many hobbyists today.

NASA gratefully acknowledges the assistance of the following in selecting the photographs used in the exhibition: Allan Gould, American Society of Magazine Photographers; George Tames, New York Times; Maurice H. Louis and A. C. Summerville, Fellow and Associate, respectively, Photographic Society of America.

This exhibit can now be seen in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. The exhibit will be on display until March 27.

Firemen Rush To Morrill

Amherst firefighters were faced with a hard to reach fire atop the new addition of Morrill Science Center Tuesday morning.

Responding to a telephone and subsequent box alarms at 11:58 a.m., one engine and one ladder company of the local department, under command of Capt. Homer Cowles, discovered that fire had worked its way into the insulation atop the yet incomplete roof.

Workmen were throwing burning insulation from the roof as firefighters arrived, in an attempt to delay the progress of the flames. Hoselines were quickly stretched to the roof, and the fire extinguished.

One engine remained at the scene for about two hours, guarding against a possible rekindling.

University Fire Marshal Edmund Goetzel stated that the origin of the fire was unknown.

The building is as yet not owned by the University, and no figures as to the amount of delay the blaze caused was available.

Chevrolet will go to any length to make you happy

Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.

So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17½ feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size makes it a luxury car. But not the price.

Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15¼-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space.

This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over).

Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it. And finally, Corvette—still 14½ feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.

The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.

Wednesday, the Tri Sigmas spent a delightful evening with Miss Abramson of the Speech Department. During the informal gathering after dinner, Miss Abramson talked with the girls about the forthcoming theatrical productions of which she is the director.

EGG HUNT

Easter Bunny is as essential to Easter as Santa Claus is to Christmas. The giant rabbit is very aware of this, and he will visit the children of the University community on Sunday, March 22, at 2:00. He will bring with him television's famous clown, Bozo, and together they will hide Easter eggs in the Ballroom. There will be refreshments, games, and decorations.

This event is sponsored by the Special Events Committee and the Dames Club. All children between ages three and ten are cordially invited.

Dean Of City Managers Speaks

C. A. Harrell, often seen as the dean of American city managers, was recently a guest of the government department. Harrell was on campus from March 16-18, to discuss the profession of city management.

Harrell was one of the first men to receive a degree in public administration for the Maxwell School at Syracuse. He then journeyed to Cincinatti where he was employed as executive assistant to the manager there. Almost a quarter of a century later, Harrell returned as the manager. Between the time he served as assistant and his term as manager, he served as manager in Portsmouth, Ohio; Binghampton, N. Y.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Norfolk, Va.; and San Antonio, Texas.

Mr. Harrell cites the advantages of a career in city management as: the knowledge that you are "not a small cog in a big wheel; the satisfaction of seeing your programs completed" and a high level of compensation. Mr. Harrell earned $30,000 a year as manager of Cincinatti.

trial were violated, Levitt stated. The group was supposed to have been formed by Moscow-trained agents, a faillacy, he said, since the Y.S.A. is a Trotskyite organization outlawed under the death penalty in Russia. No equal time was given to the Y.S.A. in the press. The socialists were accused of recruiting members through the lure of marijuana, Levitt continued. They were further charged with conducting their affairs clandestinely.

ON MAY 1 the Y.S.A. was indicted for assembling to advocate the use of violence. The meeting referred to in the indictment, Levitt said, was actually an address by Leroy MaCrae, the secrtary of th National Y.S.A., concerning the right of the Negro people to defend themselves against racists. This is a constitional right. The only point of controversy is between supporters of non-violence and those who believe that there are exceptions to such a policy. A tape recording was made of the proceedings, Levitt said, which the prosecutor, however, did not hear. The hearing was in effect "a trial of the totality of beliefs," he said, of the Socialist party. Technicalities caused the dismissal of the first jury, and a new one was organized. It was illegally headed by a "professional anti-communist," according to Levitt.

Pressure was put on the jury to indict the Y.S.A. and its officers on two counts, the MacRae speech and another meeting on May 2.

THE SECOND meeting, Levitt said, was to determine the policy of the Y.S.A. to be followed in the trial and it was taped through the ventilator pipe.

The argument of the Y.S.A. as presented by Levitt, is that the anti-Communist law is unconstitutional. It is superceded by the federal government, having a precedent in the Nelson case. The claim of the prosecution that the Y.S.A. is seeking the overthrow of only the state of Indiana is contrived and impractical for the Socialists. Levitt stated that the trial will be in reality an indictment of all Socialist theory. The Y.S.A. will take its case to the Supreme Court, but it needs money for the trial.

College Judo Tournament Held At Princeton Univ.

The Third Annual Eastern College Judo Tournament was held February 29th in Princeton University's Dillon Gymnasium. Seventy-two undergraduate Judo players, ranging in rank from White Belt beginners to Brown and Black Belt experts, represented sixteen colleges from Massachusetts to Puerto Rico.

The Judo squad from Columbia University, captained by Brown Belt Sandy Yoshikami, captured the Eastern College Judo Team Championship with 135 points. Fairleigh Dickinson University of New Jersey was second with 132, and Oswego State University of New York was third with 102. The Cornell, Princeton and NYU teams were also high-scorers.

Competition was held in the four weight classes used in Olympic Judo: lightweight (below 149.9 lb.), middleweight, heavyweight (above 176.5 lb), and open (any weight). Heavyweight champion Albert Sica, a Brown Belt from Fairleigh Dickinson, took the Overall Individual Championship in a four-way play-off with the other weight-class champions. Scott Usher of Fairleigh was the lightweight champ, Jean-Yves Canas of Cornell took the middleweight trophy, and H. Kestenholz of Fairleigh was first in the open class.

There are four ways to win a competition Judo match: by throwing an opponent cleanly to the mat on his back; by holding him down securely on his back for 30 seconds; or by causing him to surrender to a choke or to an elbow lock. Referees award points or half-points depending on how well a technique is executed; matches are won by a full point. In this college tournament a player earned ten points for his team by winning with a full point, seven points for finishing a match with a half-point lead, and five points for winning by decision.

The modern sport of Judo is descended from the Japanese Ju-Jitsu, the deadly hand-to-hand fighting techniques of the ancient samurai warriors. Judo is Ju-Jitsu modified and unified so that it can be practiced without restraint with no more chance of injury than exists in any other contact sport. Since World War II Judo has become the fastest growing sport in America. Hundreds of thousands of men, women and children in every part of the country study Judo in neighborhood Judo schools, or dojos. There is sport Judo activity at about 300 U.S. colleges and universities, ranging from small practice groups to physical education courses and varsity intercollegiate competition teams. The U.S. Judo Team took first place at last year's Pan-American Games in Brazil, and in June the play-offs for the U.S. Olympic Judo Team will be held at the World's Fair.

The 1964 National Collegiate Judo Championships will be held April 18th at Texas Western College in El Paso.

Information about forming a Judo group on your campus can be obtained from Major Philip Porter, National Collegiate Judo Association, BOQ 108, U.S. Air Force Academy, Colorado.

All Intra-Mural Team Picked By The Experts

The old saying, "better late than never," applies here, since these choices were supposed to be made two weeks ago. After carefully processing innumerable score sheets, and hundreds of names, we present the Collegian's First Annual Intermural All-Stars.

First Team:

Center—Charlie Fohlen, LCA—Charlie's steady rebounding and fine all around play was a big factor in Lambda Chi's championship season.

Guard—Al Garseys, LCA—Hustler—combined with Fohlen to lead Lambda Chi to campus title.

Guard—Stu Bailin, P.E. Grads—fast, drive, ball hark, good jump shot from outside.

Forward—Terry Swanson, P.E. Majors—his steady popping from corner brought the majors all the way to the final playoff.

Forward—John Yates, Baker Ind. --steady rebounder and general hustler. Led Baker to semi-finals.

Freshmen Down Connecticut; Complete Undefeated Season

The Freshman track team closed out its dual meet season with a 65-46 victory over UConn at Storrs on March 10. This victory brought their total to three wins in as many meets and leaves them with an undefeated season. This is the fifth year in a row that the University's freshmen track teams have been undefeated in winter track action.

Despite the absence of several key performers due to study duties, the frosh still overwhelmed Connecticut's finest with ease. Mass swept the three longest distance events, placed well in the sprints, but had their trouble in the field events.

The first field events were the 16 lb. shot put and the high jump, which were run concurrently. Bob Davis took the shot (43'11½") and John Lisack took a third in the high jump (5'10"). After these two events UConn led 12-6. The third event, the mile (4:44.1) saw UMass take the lead via a 9-0 sweep of the first three places. Mike Sheeley led Terry Carpenter and Charlie Mitchell across with ease. This put the score at 15-12, UMass.

UConn again took the lead back with their own sweep, this time in the 35 lb. weight throw (45'4"), and held it with a victory in the 60 yard dash (6.4). Art Larvey took second and Aba Johnson third for UMass. In the broad jump (19'6¼") Larvey gained a first for UMass, while UConn got second and third.

The lead see-sawed once more as Mass went up with Damian Gaffney's and Richard Penta's 1-2 in the 600 (1.21.6). Then Conn took over with 1-2 in the pole vault (11") and held on for a second in the high hurdles (8.5), which was won by Dan O'Leary of Mass. The score at this point was 42-37, Connecticut, their last lead of the day. UMass went on top for good then with another sweep, this time in the two mile (10:10.4). Terry Carpenter won and was followed by Charlie Mitchell and Jimmy Parker. Terry's time established a new freshmen record for UConn's cage. Nine more points were chalked up for the victors after a sweep in the thousand (229.4). Here Bill Thoms beat teammates Mike Sheely and Terry Carpenter for first place honors.

Dan O'Leary's victory in the 60 yard low hurdles (7.7) and a victorious relay team closed out the scoring. UMass had overcome its personnel problem by drawing good performances from the boys who made it.

This Saturday's Connecticut relays will provide some top-notch post-season competition for the frosh, as they will face most of New England's top freshmen teams. How well they will do remains to be seen, but they couldn't go in with a more impressive record than an undefeated season.

Basketball . . .

Trophy for the most improved varsity player. The 6'7" forward averaged 14.9 points per game, set a new rebounding record of 308, and ranked second in assists, field goals and free throw percentage. He was also the top UMass defensive player. His top rebounding games were 23 vs Maine and 22 vs New Hampshire and Maine. O'Rourke also sparkled with 25 points vs St. John's and 24 vs New Hampshire and St. Michael's.

UNH Drills Squads For Rigid Schedule

The skiers might have been delighted with last week's snowfall, but at least two University of New Hampshire sports teams definitely were not.

Coach Andy Mooradian's baseball team had visions of working outdoors before their spring trip while Coach Whoop Snively's lacrosse squad was already outside before the snow fell.

Both squads will be in the Middle Atlantic states in two weeks seeking the answer to their main 1964 problems.

Mooradian is seeking some pitching help for lettermen Dick Mill of Bedford and Jack Strobel of North Andover, Mass.

He has a couple of sophomores in Steve Bowie of Plymouth and Mike Hargreaves of Waltham, Mass., who did not play freshmen ball, and is anxious to see them in action.

Snively is faced with a shortage of midfielders. He had a dozen lettermen at this position last year, but only three have returned for the 1964 season.

As usual, Snively must make his own midfielders from athletes who have played other sports but have little or no previous experience in lacrosse.

Snively's stick men open their season on March 28 against Adelphi while Mooradian's baseballers play at Princeton on April 1.

Baseball Team Prepares For Season And Trip South

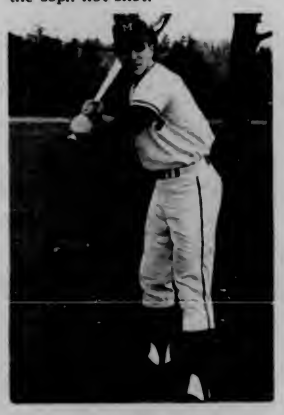
by JOHN GOODRICH

Coach Earl Lorden has had the Redman baseball team busy inside the Cage for the last three weeks in preparation for the annual southern swing during the coming recess.

THERE ARE A NUMBER OF PROBLEMS that Lorden must solve if he hopes to reach the 10-7 mark recorded last year. The first of these is the fact that he is confronted with an inexperienced pitching staff. Only Rod Corey has been tested at all. Mike Johnson pitched only once last year, and that was against BU in a memorable 13 inning game. The rest of the staff is untested. Ross Piken up from the frosh could be a good prospect. Jim Ritchie, William Smith, and Marshall Karol are other hurlers expected to see service.

There was a large turnover of infield personnel after last season so many of the slots are wide open. First base should be held down by John Awdyckl, the captain this year. Bill Crane appears to a good bet for the shortstop position, while Jim Neary has a good shot at the second base slot, but will have plenty of competition from Dick Premerlani.

While the infield is short on experience, the outfield has four returning veterans plus a top flight sophomore prospect. Ken Clark, Neil Harris, Steve Wojnar, and Tony Simoni are the vets and Dennis Della Piana is the soph hot shot.



DENNIS DELLAPIANA, last year's frosh standout, is expected to be a prime factor in Redmen contention for YanCon

The leading prospect as catcher is Karl Kamena, but he will be hard pressed by Ray Yando, another player up from the frosh.

OTHER MEN THAT SHOULD SEE PLENTY OF ACTION are pitcher Rick Farrell, outfielder Jim Kuczynski, and good prospects Bill Cleary and Dick Stewart.

Coach Lorden, while he looks ahead to the new year, cannot take his eyes off of last year. It was a year in which the Redmen led the nation in two categories, but were only able to win 2 of 8 games in the conference.

WITH THE SUPERB PITCHING OF DICK WILSON AND LOU PIA, MASS HAD THE BEST EARNED RUN AVERAGE OF ANY MAJOR SCHOOL IN THE COUNTRY. Their ERA was 1.34 and second place UCLA had a 1.21 ERA and Pia came through with 1.29 ERA. Yet Wilson had a 4-4 record and Pia a 4-2. Even Corey came in with a 1.81 ERA and Jonhson had 0.67 ERA. There can be little doubt that the pitching was effective.

The next place to look is in the field. The team was the best in the country in total defense and number three in fielding behind Holy Cross and Southern Cal. The team made only 28 errors all year. One cannot blame the defense, so that leaves only one place to look.

The team's whole season can be summed in one word; hitting, or in the case of the Redmen the lack of it. The team had a batting average of .189 compared to the opponents .181. Mass produced 2.65 runs a game while the opponents came up with 2.30 a game. No hitter on the squad even approached the .300 mark.

Herein lies the key to the season. The pitching could not hope to be as strong as last year. The entire season will depend on how well the team can hit. With a little more batting prowess the team could go a long way.

Lorden sees UConn as the toughest team in the conference, despite the loss of All-American pitcher Ed Jones who gave up five runs all year and only two earned runs. New Hampshire and Vermont will also pose threats to UConn along with Mass.

O'Rourke And Bernard Recipients Of Awards

Pete Bernard of Brockton and Charlie O'Rourke of Hadley have added more awards to their growing list of honors for their outstanding performances with the University of Massachusettts basketball team this winter.

BERNARD, who led the Redmen in eight scoring, shooting and ball-handling departments, was voted the George H. "Trigger" Burke Most Valuable Player Award by his teammates. The 5'8" pepper-pot backcourtman scored in double figures in every game and went over the 20-point mark 13 times. Pete's top scoring efforts were a 32-point barrage against Yankee Conference rival Maine, 29 against Rhode Island and St. Peter's and 26 against Iona at Madison Square Garden.

IN ADDITION Bernard was the recipient of the Samuel B. Samuels foul shooting trophy. He successfully converted 81 of 107 attempts for a .757 mark, tops on the team.

THE "TRIGGER" BURKE AWARD is new this year. Burke was a prolific scorer in the mid-1950's for the Redmen. He played only two varsity seasons and scored 432 and 382 points. He also set records with 153 assists in 1954-55 and a career total of 279. He was a first team All Yankee Conference selection in 1954-55 and made second team in 1955-56. His shooting and ball-handling enable the Redmen to finish with a 17-6 record in 1955-56.

O'ROURKE, recently elected co-captain for next season, was awarded the George H. Richards

Palm And Glew Pace Redmen Goal Scorers

Junior Ken Palm (Melrose) took his scoring antics from the football field right onto the hockey rink this winter. The husky forward, who led the undefeated Redman football team with eight touchdowns, notched 11 goals and 11 assists for 22 points. Ken's top scoring game came against New Hampshire when he got four goals in a 6-5 loss to the Wildcats.

PALM EDGED CAPT. CHARLIE GLEW (Framingham) in the scoring race 22-18. Glew's total would have been higher except for an injury sustained in the early minutes of the Colgate game which sidelined him for the rest of the season. Charlie scored 11 goals and 7 assists in 11 games. He ended his career as the second best goal-scorer at UMass with 45, fifth in assists with 21, and fourth in total points with 66.

The smooth-skating center set a UMass record as a sophomore by netting 24 goals. His scoring opportunities were lessened his junior year when his abilities were needed as a defenseman.

THIRD BEST SCORER THIS WINTER WAS SOPH PETER HURD (Natick) with 7 goals and 7 assists for 14 points; senior Bobby Lee (Chestnut Hill) with 8 goals and 5 assists for 13 points and soph Bob Edmonston (Boston) with 5 goals and 5 assists for 10 pts.

Coach Steve Kosakowski's skaters finished with a 6-9-2 record. Losses included an extremely well-played 2-1 decision at New Hampshire; 6-5 to UNH; 4-3 to Williams and 5-1 to a strong Colgate squad. The Redmen battled Yankee Conference foe Vermont to two ties, 5-5 and 4-4.

Graduation takes Glew, Lee and top defenseman Dick Phillips (Framingham). But Kosakowski feels he has several promising freshmen who could combine with the large number of returning veterans to give the Redmen a respectable record next winter.

Ex-UMass Hockey Star Coaches N.E. Contenders

SPECIAL NOTE: Bob Roland, who captained the varsity hockey team at the University of Mass. three years ago, while proving to be one of the best goalies in the east, has proven to be just as successful as a coach.

His Marblehead High School hockey team, battled its way into the state finals last Saturday. Roland accomplished this feat within his first two years of coaching and with only three seniors on a squad, which included many underclassmen and the nucleus of a strong squad for next year.

Although defeated in the state final by Arlington High, Marblehead will venture to Providence for the New England Championships.

Four UMass Coeds To Aid Negro Voter Registration

by RICHARD RYAN '66

Four UMass women will work on a Negro voter registration drive in Atlanta, Georgia, this spring vacattion.

The four women, Helen Symons '65, the group's leader; Shella Cooper '65, Virginia Myers '65, and Dani Ostrow '67, are members of Students for Civil Rights. The trip to Atlanta is being sponsored by the YWCA.

Their mornings will be taken up with civil rights seminars and training in non-violence. In the afternoons, they will either work in a voter registration office or go out on door-to-door canvassing in the Negro neighborhoods, asking the Negro residents to register and vote in the next election.

According to Dani Ostrow, the four women think that voter registration forms the foundation of any civil rights movement because registered Negro voters are in a better position to strive for racial equality.

When questioned on her feelings about the trip, Miss Ostrow replied that she was "somewhat scared" about the dangers inherent in such a venture, but she was determined to work on the project because, "I believe in it, and I'm not going to let other people do it for me."

The UMass group is but one element in a campaign for civil rights being conducted by college students in the North. Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke students will also be going to various cities in the South during their spring vacations. One group, scheduled to leave for St. Augustine, Florida, will have to have $500 on reserve for bail money, said Miss Ostrow, "because they intend to stage sit-in demonstrations and will probably be thrown into jail."

One civil rights demonstrator from Connecticut College for Women is currently free on $15,000 bail and faces a sentence of 12 months in jail plus 6 months at hard labor if convicted for her part in a sit-in demonstration, Miss Ostrow explained.

The UMass women, however, say that they are looking forward to going about their voter registration work without hindrance from the Atlanta police, and, hopefully, without trouble from white segregationists.

They will live in either YWCA rooms or the homes of local Negroes. Although they are expected to pay for their own expenses, they have received some financial assitance. Dani Ostrow, for example, was given $50 by her hometown Quaker Church in Burlington, Vermont.

Field Responds To Petitioners; Will Discuss "Spring Day" Tonight

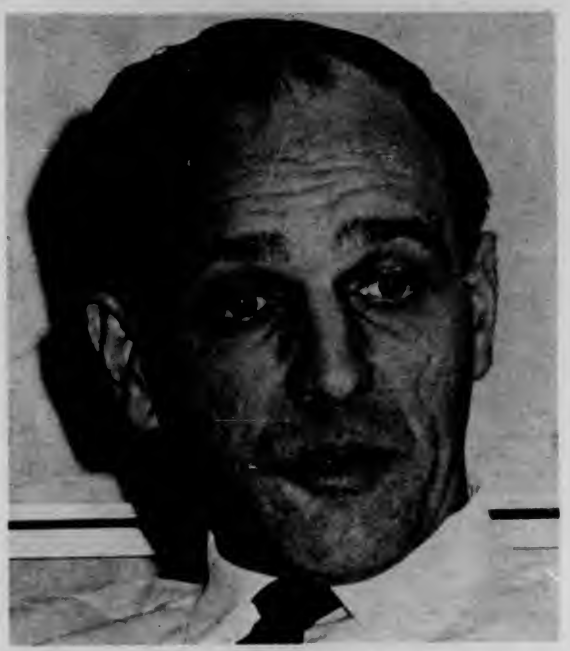
by DAVID AXELROD

In a letter addressed to the "Spring Day Petitioners", William Field, Dean of Students, saw little hope for the reinstatement of a Spring Day on campus. The communique, answering the March 16 petition by twelve campus leaders, states that "the administrative position is clear and irrevocable and that no Spring Day of any sort can be permitted at the University."

The Dean, however, went on to express a willingness to discuss the planning of a Spring Day celebration. A meeting, to be chairmanned by Senior Class President, James Medeiros, will be held tonight with the students and administrators involved, to discuss any new ideas that might make a form of Spring celebration possible.

In his letter Dean Field went on to say "It is difficult for me to imagine any way in which even the best of motives could result in an organizational plan which would produce a Spring Day. He explained that Spring Day, a spontaneous celebration on the first pleasant day of Spring, had a short and rocky history. Its abolishment, in the late fifties left "a general feeling of relief on the part of most groups on campus."

The student action, addressed to President Lederle, and



No, but then again, maybe . . .

Deans Field, Hopkins and Curtis, presented the student opinion that the one thing needed to make the celebration both enjoyable and a valuable contribution to the spirit of the University, is planning. A rope pull, performing bands, folksing groups, baseball and other group activities could entertain the masses of students that would swarm to the area around the campus pond when the Old Chapel bells rang out the call to skip classes.

Dean Field acknowledged "the responsibility of members who have "discussed this problem" and the "possibility . . . that there are ideas and plans in the minds of the signers of the petition which have not occurred to me, which are worthy of further exploration."

However, he firmed the negative side of the story with the comment that "The obstacles to such a plan are well nigh impossible to overcome with the major context of the academic responsibilities of the University."

Election Accusations Disproved At Meetings

by ELWIN McNAMARA

A letter, sent to the Collegian, protesting alleged undemocratic practices by Women's Judiciary was the subject of a meeting between Student Senate president Joan Labuzoski and Judiciary Chief Justice Jan Reimer.

The conclusion of the meeting was a reaffirmation of the Judiciary's selection for the coming elections. A bid to postpone the election by Sen. Maureen Flanagan (Leach) was rejected on the grounds that the past selection was both legal and fair to all concerned. Sen. Flanagan pointed out that no Senators were present at the selections, as is usually the rule followed.

President Lubuzoski saw the problem as one of apathy on the part of UMass women. "How much," she asked, "does an organization owe to the individual student" in the areas of publicizing the need for people within that organization.

It was claimed out that "excellent" publicity had been given for the openings, both in the Collegian, through posters, and through circulars sent to all dormitories.

Chief Justice Reimer pointed out that the selections were reopened once already because there were not enough freshman applicants to create a fair race. Thus, in actuality, there were two chances for freshmen wanting to apply for the openings, Justice Reimer said.

Present selection procedure is divided into three phases: first, an applicant is required to get a nomination blank filled with 25 signatures; second, each person submitting the nomination paper is screened by a special board (usually consisting of members of judiciary and senators); last, all those passed by the board are placed on the ballot and must then campaign in a general election.

Can You Help Deaf Student Find Lost Tape Recorder?

On February 26 the Collegian printed an article ("Off Hours" Theft Proves More Than Hardship) about a tape recorder stolen from Bartlett Hall. The recorder belonged to a deaf student named John who used it to record his lectures. John's mother would later type notes from the tapes for John to study.

The portable tape recorder pictured here is a Norelco, Model "100", and measures 10½" x 3¾" x 7½". One like it, Serial No. 161383, with a brown leather case and shoulder strap, used to be John's ears.

Anyone having information which might help in locating the missing recorder is urged to contact Col. John Marchant in South College or to notify the Collegian. John doesn't ask for sympathy. He wants to make it on his own, but not being as fortunate as you and I, he needs his tape recorder to do it.

Won't you help, John?

Blue, Black & Red All Over

Brilliantly red on the outside, slightly blue on the inside, the tenth anniversary Yahoo is now on campus.

Like its cover, a hodgepodge of on and off campus personalities milling about, the magazine itself seems without direction, a veritable hodgepodge. The theme of the tenth anniversary is caried imperfectly through the book with occasional shots of past Yahoo queens and a back page of some of the more famous Yahoo cartoons, including a priceless "Uncle Sam Wants You" ad.

In general, as in past Yahoos, the book suffers from a lack of direction both in theme and in content. By by-passing the obvious possibilities of the theme of a tenth anniversary issue, the staff lost any continuity that it might have gained. Also the content itself lacks direction. From a fairly well-written commentary on Greeks and independents to a poorly written and trite incident in a drugstore, from some clever jokes to purely prurient and blue gags, there is a realm of difference. Yahoo is uneven and undirected.

But to say that the magazine lacks direction is not to say that it was ill-planned or ill-executed. On the contrary, this issue of Yahoo sems to be a well-planned, handcrafted job, from the construction of ads to the ridiculously funny franking notice that begins on page one and ends sometime later in the book.

The mass hysteria section was a typical and a good one, taking pot shots at the all too common campus fixtures: Federal Officers, parking signs, and a host of others.

The comment on "the Kennedy publicity stunt" can and should be interpreted by every reader himself. It was not particularly funny, but then again, it was not particularly disrespectful and certainly not sacreligious.

The article on Count Greek and the Tree was humorous, but had a few too many references to the Collegian and other second floor fixtures thus running the risk of being placed in the "in" category with a few people. But for the most part its humor was general and should have appealed to the whole campus.

The lovely Yahoo queen Miss Carol Ann Russell was artfully posed by photographer Don Crasco and the photos have already made their way to over half the dorm walls on campus.

A clever photographic mockup of Governor Peabody crowning a look-alike queen was a high point in the magazine.

Generally, the jokes were clever and a few were outrageously hilarious. The ads, especially those done in the comic strip manner, were well-read and that is the most any advertiser can hope for.

The cartooning, mostly done by Roger Jones and Abe Spencer except for some excellent pirated material, was on the whole quite professional.

Last, and not at all least, the "Happiness is" book was excellent and totally enjoyable. It is something that can be saved and read over and over again.

On the whole this issue of Yahoo was a creditable one, perhaps a little uneven in spots, but for the most part a good effort which seems to have been well received by the campus.

The Meaning Of Passover

by FRED LAZIN

Passover is a Jewish holiday which has been observed by Jewish people for over three thousand years throughout the world wherever Jews may have lived or live today.

Basically it is a holiday emphasizing two values: the joy of the appearance of spring; and the desire for freedom. The latter idea, due to the circumstances of the Jewish historical experience, has predominated throughout the years.

As one tastes the bitter herbs during the seder (the traditional Passover meal) he symbollically "feels" the bitterness that human beings have suffered as slaves. As one eats matzot (unleavened bread) he is reminded of the people yearning for freedom, for they baked bread like this years ago in fleeing from slavery in Egypt. And throughout Jewish history, as Jews dipped celery into salt water, they reminded themselves of the tears of people suffering in one place or another.

The year is 1964 and the place America. This Friday and Saturday evening in Jewish homes throughout the United States the seder will be celebrated. The story of Jewish bondage in Egypt and of a yearning for freedom will be retold, lest one forget. When the matzoths are eaten freely at the table, one will perhaps be reminded of the present bondage of people living in the Soviet Union, where the people have neither the matzot nor the freedom to bake it. But more important, as one tastes the bitter herbs, let him be reminded of slavery in Egypt, but also of discrimination in America. The salt water traditionally symbolizes tears of suffering; therefore, it should remind all of tears running down a black face at the utterance of the "nigger." Yes, this holiday is a holiday of a desire for freedom, not just for Jews but for all human beings. One should remember Egypt and Warsaw but at the same time Birmingham and Atlanta.

A Statement Of Fact

by KEN BERK

Gorman House, for the two years of its existence, has been plagued with a series of severe accidents.

Last year there were several accidents where men put their hands through the glass windows of the swinging doors that separate the corridors. This is not hard to do as the slightest touch will shatter the glass.

On Tuesday March 17, 1964, another accident occurred. One of the residents of Gorman was opening the swinging door on the first floor south of Gorman, when the glass shattered, and his hand went through the window. The wound was deep and serious. The skin was torn off from the wrist to the forearm, severing tendons and a muscle. Doctor Gage worked for three hours that night sewing up the arm. Altogether it took three hundred stitches to close the wound. Dr. Gage commented that it was extremely lucky that the person involved did not sever any veins.

After a discussion with the Housemother of Gorman and several of the Janitors it was determined that the glass in the windows was not the safety glass windows but ordinary glass windows that have a tendency to break if touched wrong. It was noted that Housing did not replace the windows with safety

Brand of Type

To the Editor:

The latest issue of Yahoo, (our self-supposed "humor" magazine), illuminates its editors dissatisfaction with the usual. No longer, it seems, does the usual brand of tripe found in the Yahoo satiate the trash-oriented appetites of its editors. The usual baseness has evidently proved to be inadequate, the usual degradation to be correspondingly insuffi c i e n t. Have these deficiencies stymied the Yahoo editors in their quest for the basement of crudity? It seems not. The latest edition of the Yahoo has solidified its already prominent position in the Hall of Shame.

It has accomplished this despicable feat by means of a statement located on page two, which refers to the assasination of our late President as "the Kennedy publicity stunt." This statement not only unveils a gross disrespect to the memory of a great man, but also to the feelings of the many who have suffered the pangs of sadness accompanying the untimely death of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. The Yahoo has chosen to ignore these facts in its efforts to submerge still deeper beneath the surface of decency. There is hope, however. Excrement, like water, finds it own level. So goes the Yahoo.

"Thanks Phil"

Thursday evening, March 19, I enjoyed one of my proudest moments of my four years at the University of Massachusetts. I was proud because I was a part of a group of responsible people who showed their sincere appreciation and respect to a gentleman who has not only worked so relentlessly for his constituency, but who has made important contributions to the University as a Student Senator.

We, the residents of Mills Dormitory, refused to accept his resignation by seeing him re-elected as Senator. It was a tribute of great respect and gratefulness.

Phil Howard: you are our choice and we hope that you accept to represent Mills in the Student Senate.

Thanks Phil.

More On Integration

To the Editor:

This writer is also opposed to neighborhood school integration just for integration's sake. Probably the theory behind it is that if enough white kids have to attend a school such as those in the "ghetto", the school department just might have to improve it. You know, put a few light bulbs in, maybe a little heat and possibly a good full time teacher or two. Transport 90% of the kids for a little thing like that? Real logic.

I would personally like to meet this idiot who comes along and says "We won't be happy until every white man respects every Negro." He doesn't speak for everybody. Who gives a damn about your rspect anyway? The main issues are some privileges supposedly guaranteed by the Constitution and the Bill of Rights which are shouted world-wide. As for the respect due Rev. King and Mr. Meredith, the law of averages will take care of that, even among Negroes.

A 10:10 quota: one finds ironic humor in that. It is reasonably doubtful that the percentages will ever be so neatly apportioned. Do you think the national income will be divided the same way? How about the lynch mobs. Did they murder their 10%? What about the dead soldiers of the last three wars, not to mention previous wars. Are 10% of them Negro? Blessed is the 10%. It's amazing how well the quota performs in exclusion of certain people.

It would surely be a miracle if "integration" were accomplished with the same fervor as "segregation". "Integration" and "segregation" are both the white man's word.

UMass Student Wins Yan Con "School Spirit Championship"

by TERRY STOCK

UMass "Music Man" Jack Singer has shown UConn. that although they beat the Redmen in Basketball, the Yankee Conference "School Spirit Championship" belongs to UMass and only UMass.

On March 13 (Friday the 13th) Singer traveled to Storrs, Conn., and successfully competed in auditions which were being held for UConn's production of "Music Man."

Posing as a UConn student, Singer baffled the director by rattling off his lines throughout the play without the use of a script, singing the songs without using music, and employing the designated stage motions that helped the UMass production to be labeled "a smash hit" by several critics.

The two men from UConn who were also vying for the lead role never had a chance. They expressed wonder, as did all the onlookers, why Singer had never before appeared in a UConn theatrical production.

The director's approval became obvious when he awarded Singer the lead part immediately after the auditions.

It was at this point that Singer avenged UMass for the humiliation suffered on the Storrs basketball court.

He said, "Because my time is limited, it would be impossible for me to attend rehearsals. Good-bye and good luck."

He then walked out leaving the bewildered director with his mouth open and returned to the UMass campus with the Yankee Conference "School Spirit Championship."

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

WELL-KNOWN FAMOUS PEOPLE: No. 1

This is the first in a series of 48 million columns examining the careers of men who have significantly altered the world we live in. We begin today with Max Planck.

Max Planck (or The Pearl of the Pacific, as he is often called) gave to modern physics the law known as Planck's Constant. Many people when they first hear of this law, throw up their hands and exclaim, "Golly whiskers, this is too deep for little old me!"

(Incidentally, speaking of whiskers, I cannot help but mention Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades. Personna is the blade for people who can't shave after every meal. It shaves you closely, cleanly, and more frequently than any other stainless steel blade on the market. The makers of Personna have publicly declared—and do here repeat—that if Personna Blades don't give you more luxury shaves than any other stainless steel blade, they will buy you whatever blade you think is better. Could anything be more fair? I, for one, think not.)

Max showed no indication.....

But I digress. We were speaking of Planck's Constant, which is not, as many think, difficult to understand. It simply states that matter sometimes behaves like waves, and waves sometimes behave like matter. To give you a homely illustration, pick up your pencil and wave it. Your pencil, you will surely agree, is matter—yet look at the little rascal wave! Or take flags. Or Ann-Margret.

Planck's Constant, uncomplicated as it is, nevertheless provided science with the key that unlocked the atom, made space travel possible, and conquered denture slippage. Honors were heaped upon Mr. Planck (or The City of Brotherly Love, as he is familiarly known as). He was awarded the Nobel Prize, the Little Brown Jug, and Disneyland. But the honor that pleased Mr. Planck most was that plankton were named after him.

Plankton, as we know, are the floating colonies of one-celled animals on which fishes feed. Plankton, in their turn, feed upon one-half celled animals called krill (named, incidentally, after Dr. Morris Krill who invented the house cat). Krill, in their turn, feed upon peanut butter sandwiches mostly—or, when they are in season, cheeseburgers.

But I digress. Back to Max Planck who, it must be said, showed no indication of his scientific genius as a youngster. In fact, for the first six years of his life he did not speak at all except to pound his spoon on his bowl and shout "More gruel!" Imagine, then, the surprise of his parents when on his seventh birthday little Max suddenly cried, "Papa! Mama! Something is wrong with the Second Law of Thermodynamics!" So astonished were the elder Plancks that they rushed out and dug the Kiel Canal.

Meanwhile Max, constructing a crude Petrie dish out of two small pieces of petrie and his gruel bowl, began to experiment with thermodynamics. By dinner time he had discovered Planck's Constant. Hungry but happy, he rushed to Heidelberg University to announce his findings. He arrived, unfortunately, during the Erich von Stroheim Sesquicentennial, and everyone was so busy dancing and duelling that young Planck could find nobody to listen to him. The festival, however, ended after two years and Planck was finally able to report his discovery.

Well sir, the rest is history. Einstein gaily cried, "E equals mc squared!" Edison invented Marconi. Eli Whitney invented Georgia Tech, and Michelangelo invented the ceiling. This later became known as the Humboldt Current.

© 1964 Max Shulman

Mr. Shulman is, of course, joshing, but the makers of Personna Blades are not: if, after trying our blades, you think there's another stainless steel blade that gives you more luxury shaves, return the unused Personnas to Box 500, Staunton, Va., and we'll buy you a pack of any blade you think is better.

Kennedy's Two New Plays To Be Staged On Campus

University Theatre will present two new plays by Raymond Kennedy Tuesday and Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium

The two Kennedy comedies, "The Boat" and "I Do Not Think I'll Fall in Love Today," which will be presented for the first time, are the fourth in the UT series of the current season.

According to Doris Abramson, who will direct the plays, original plans called for a reading production. Instead, the theatre group has decided to stage the two pieces.

Raymond Kennedy, author of "Love" and "The Boat," is no stranger to UMass. A native of Holyoke, Kennedy is an alumnus of the University. He now lives in New York, but he is planning to attend the opening performance of his plays.

Kennedy's first novel, "My Father's Orchard," was published last year. He has also written several plays, poems, and short stories. Some of his work has appeared in "The Massachusetts Review."

Two other Kennedy plays, "Bagpipe and Poppies" and "A Matter of Time," were produced at the University in 1961.

According to Miss Abramson, who directed the 1961 production of Kennedy's plays, "Love" and "The Boat" were chosen only after careful consideration.

She said, "I received scripts from all over the country. Some were very interesting. None was as theatrical or thought-provoking as these by Raymond Kennedy."

Series Of Concerts Announced

The Springfield Symphony Orchestra has announced its 1964-65 series of concerts this week to some 7,000 persons on its mailing list in the Greater Springfield area and to the large audience attending the Orchestra's final concert of this season in Municipal Auditorium last Tuesday evening.

Robert Staffanson, entering his tenth year as Music Director of The Springfield Symphony will conduct five of the six concerts planned, the sixth being guest conducted by Arthur Fiedler who will be returning here for the fourth consecutive season. The 1964-65 season will have an international flavor. Two of the season's soloists will be stars of the European concert world. Janos Starker, considered one of the world's greatest cellists will join the orchestra as soloist in the Dvorak Cello Concerto.

The 150 voice Springfield Symphony Chorus will be featured on two programs during the 1964-65 season. In December they will be heard in the Brahms Requiem. Soloists for this occasion will be Margaret Kalil, soprano, Concert Artists Guild Award Winner, and John Fiorito, baritone of The New York City Opera who made such a great success this past season as soloist in the Symphony's performance of "Tosca."

Two New Bills Provide More Standards For Car Inspection

Highway safety in Massachusetts received a large boost with the signing by Governor Endicott Peabody of two bills which will provide additional standards for the semi-annual motor vehicle inspection.

The first bill broadens the inspection for the state's 2,000,000 motor vehicles to include tires, fenders, bumpers, external sheet metal and the entire exhaust system, as well as adding reflectors, chock blocks and mud flaps to the inspection of commercial vehicles.

The second bill provides that new motor vehicles as well as second hand automobiles, must be inspected within seven days of registration. Formerly, this requirement was only necessary for second-hand automobiles registered between the two inspection periods.

"These two bills will be a significant step in our efforts to bring better highway safety to Massachusetts," Registrar of Motor Vehicles James R. Lawton commented.

"We have long known the danger that is possible when a vehicle is operating with poor tires, and we are also aware of the number of fatalities that occur each year when carbon monoxide seeps through faulty metal into the passenger compartment of an automobile," Registrar Lawton added.

The new requirements for the semi-annual motor vehicle inspection will take effect with the start of the fall inspection on September 1, 1964.

The spring inspection begins on April 1 and will last for 15 days.

"It is pleasant to contemplate," Registrar Lawton concluded, "that as good as we hope to make this spring inspection, we can look forward to an even better inspection in the fall because of the broadening of inspection safety standards."

Daytona Beach Area Plans Diversified Program For Collegiate Vacationers

Daytona Beach, Fla—As the sun begins to loom higher and higher in the sky, the warm spring breezes begin to blow off of the ocean, and Universities throughout the land grant students a brief respite from the rigors of the academic life, the Daytona Beach Resort Area once again sets in motion its preparations for this annual onslaught of collegians.

Since the Daytona Beach Area is a year-round resort region, little preparation is needed to make ready the beautiful 23 mile long expanse on hard packed sand, or the miles of hotels and motels lining the beach which will accommodate the visiting collegians; nor is any special program needed to set into operation the mutitude of attractions and events which normally fill the schedules of this resort community.

Nonetheless, the community is planning an extensive program of "extracurricular" activities for the collegiate visitors who may weary from time to time of the abundant sun, sand and surf.

The City Manager has been assigned the responsibility of seeing the program is administered through the City Recreation Department. City Manager, Norman Hickey has also enlisted the assistance of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The extremely diversified program is designed to attract a multitude of interests, with two large groups of entertainers working day and night to provide adequate diversions for the energetic students.

The Ford Motor Company's "Folk and Jazz Wingding" will arrive Saturday, March 21, and perform for 14 days and nights at the local Bandshell and along the beach area. Billed as the "lively ones," this nationally acclaimed touring group will include such performers as the Paul Winter Sextet Josh White, Jr., the Modern Folk Quartet, the Moonshiners and Ron Eliran.

Returning to the Daytona Beach Resort Areat for the second straight year will be a troop of athletes, musicians and other entertainers appearing under the auspices of the Halifax Ministerial Association. Headed by Ed Beck, a former All America basketball player at the University of Kentucky and now a Minister, the group will include many stars of the National Football League, such as Billy Wade, Quarterback of the Chicago Bears; Don Shinnick, linebacker for the Baltimore Colts; Jim Ray Smith, offensive guard for the Dallas Texans; Bill Krisher, past captain of the Dallas Texans, Budy Dial, great pass receiver now with the Dallas Texans; Maxie Baughan, linebacker for the Philadelphia Eagles; Tony Romeo of the Boston Patriots; and Phil King, halfback for the New York Giants. Angel Flight And Arnold Air Societies Hold Joint Meeting

A European tour and a cross-country U.S. trip were on the agenda of a joint Angel Flight and Arnold Air Society meeting March 19.

Not Possible? Through the color slides of Major Edward Bamber and Capt. Robert Gailey it was.

Major Bamber took his audience through Paris, Greece, and Italy, as they viewed statues, gardens, castles, churches, and runins. An impressive slide was of the Eiffel Tower at night, illuminated by amber lights.

Capt. Gailey started his trip in his home town, Portsmouth, N.H., and East met West as he traversed the country, finally reaching Washington State, then going through Canada up to Fairbanks, Alaska. Most impressive was the vast change in vegetation—the snow of New England, the valley of the Mississippi, the lains of Kansas, the Rocky Mountains of Colorado, the sagebrush land (cowboy territory) of Utah, and the endless snow of Alaska. Included was a slide of a sunset—at 12:00 noon.

Aero-Space Team Briefing- "U.S. Mission In Space"

The Department of Air Science cordially invites the entire university community to a briefing by the Air University Aero-Space Presentations Team concerning the topic, "U. S. Mission in Space." The briefing will take place at 11:15 a.m. on March 24, 1964 in Bowker Auditorium.

The "U. S. Mission in Space" is concerned with the aims and purposes of the U. S. space exploration programs and deals with manned and unmanned programs and their comparative relation to the over-all goal. The briefing will utilize motion pictures and 35 mm. slides, to illustrate the progress of the United States in space.

The ultimate objective of the U. S. space program is to insure peace. The United States must expend effort and money to achieve manned space stations, permanent observation stations on the moon, both maned and unmanned, and unmanned and manned weapon satellites. The scope and aims of the U. S. space program can be more readily comprehended if the meaning of the word astronautics and our concept of space are clarified.

Astronautics can be defined as the art or science of designing, building and operating space vehicles. An understanding of space must begin with our solar system, which is flat, disc-shaped and over seven billion miles in diameter, with the sun at its center. It is only one of billions of solar systems in the galaxy known as the Milky Way, which in turn is only one of billions of galaxies in the universe.

In order that man may safely enter this strange environment and make a safe reentry to earth, tremendous efforts must precede a space flight. The U.S. organizations responsible for these efforts are the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Department of Defense.

The primary objectives of NASA in space are to produce scientific data on the environment, to study practical applications of satellites and to explore the problems of man in space. The objectives in reaching the moon and planets are to conduct scientific exploration, to establish unmanned observatories, to identify planetary properties and to search for extraterrestrial life.

The two major manned approaches in space are: First, the Glide Boost Vehicles, such as the X-15, and Second, the Ballistic Capsule, such as Project Mercury. The X-15 is probably the most advanced research aircraft in the history of aeronautics. It is carried aloft under the wings of a B-52 and dropped at about 45,000 feet. Its rocket ignites and it goes into a flight path at speeds in excess of 4,000 mph and at altitudes of more than 300,000 feet. This experimental aircraft has taken man to the fringes of space to gather data about weightlessness, aerodynamic heating, flight control, reentry control, ultra-violet stellar photography as well ae evalute advanced vehicle systems and structural materials.

Project Mercury employed a capsule which carried a man in a circular orbit of the earth at on altitude of about 120 miles. Normally, three 90-minute circuits of the earth were accomplished before reentry and recovery. However, the last Mercury flight with Major Gordon Cooper aboard orbited the earth 22 times. An Atlas booster was used to put the capsule in orbit. The next step in capsule development is Project Gemini which will provide data on rendezvous.

The X-15 and the Mercury program provided data for additional space activities such as Gemini and Apollo. The major U. S. manned space program for this decade is the three-passenger Apollo vehicle. Present plans call for it to serve as a manned orbiting laboratory and later to land two Americans on the moon.

Many problems must be solved in improving boosters, guidance, navigation and technical reliability, as well as in providing man with an environment which will allow him to perform a useful function in space. These problems are being solved daily. However, today we are still in the "Model T" stage of space exploration. Many steps, vital to the future of man, must be taken. Today, as mankind is breaking free of his small planet and moves out into the enormity of space, we live in an exciting era of high adventure. In all probability the explorations that will be carried on by the Air Force and by NASA in this decade will have a profound effect on the future of the human race.

Amherst J.C.'s Sponsor Trip

The Massachusetts Junior Chamber of Commerce has announced plans for the third annual Foreign Student Trip to Sturbridge Village. Mr. John Welles, Junior Chamber International Director of the Amherst Jaycees and State Project Chairman for this trip has announced the excursion this year will be held on Sunday, April 19.

Foreign students and their families are escorted on this all day tour of Sturbridge Village from all parts of the state. Jaycees provide transportation, lunch and act as guides for the tour of the village which is free to the students. Many dignitaries from all parts of the state support and participate in the tour each year. Last year the trip attracted about four-hundred foreign students and it is expected there will be an increase in the number participating this year.

Robert Van Vliet, local Jaycee who is chairman for Amherst has stated, "this tour of Sturbridge Village is one more step in our program to interest foreign students in our American heritage and way of life. Last fall local foreign students were escorted on a tour of the state capitol on International Students Day. We feel that this annual tour into the ways of the past adds to the broad education that foreign students receive about the American way of life."

Any international student interested in participating in this trip may contact Mr. Van Vliet by calling 545-2785.

Town - Gown Inaugurate Breakfasts

A series of Community Breakfasts to be held for all those interested in the University was announced Thursday by President John W. Lederle.

The breakfasts are sponsored in cooperation with the Amherst Chamber of Commerce and will be attended by members of the University administration and businessmen from throughout the area. At each meeting there will be announcements about University plans. The breakfasts will provide an excellent opportunity for the exchange of information between administrators and members of the community.

Pres. Lederle and Chamber of Commerce President Donald Madsen issued the following statement in announcing the breakfasts:

"On behalf of the University and the Amherst Chamber of Commerce, we are pleased to inaugurate this program, and hope that it will be a welcome addition to the fine relationships which exist between the community and the University. As the University grows, we are anxious to provide every opportunity possible for the exchange of information and a cooperative approach to mutual problems."

The first breakfast will be held on Tuesday, March 31, at 8 a.m. in the Student Union ballroom. It is planned to hold additional breakfasts at least quarterly.

African Students Form Four-College Organization

It is not, perhaps, wrong to say that very little is known about the Continent of Africa, her culture, and her people by the peoples of other nations. Indeed, this also applies to the scanty knowledge the Africans have about other people from other continents.

To bridge this gap, the African students enrolled at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Smith and Holyoke colleges have formed an African Students Association, a four-College organization (with membership open to students and people of other nationalities) to help create, among other things, an authentic platform for the dissemination of African Culture and to project Africa as it is today.

The Association has been functioning on the campus since the beginning of the year and a number of activities have been carried out.

We are accordingly inviting you to join us and to bring your questions about Africa to the Association for open discussion. Its African membership is cross-sectional representation of the African States. It is our desire to promote better understanding between the African people and the Americas.

We will request you direct all communication to the General Secretary, Mr. Sihanns Odurukwe, at 210 Greenough (AL 3-9167) who will be willing to supply additional information about the Association.

Peace Corps Visits Campus For Two Days

A Peace Corps team from Washington will visit the University campus Monday and Tuesday, March 23 and 24, in an effort to provide information on the growing number of opportunities for Peace Corps service.

According to a Peace Corps spokesman, the special visit is aimed primarily at college upperclassmen and graduate students, but is also designed to get information to all interested persons in the Amherst area.

The official said the Peace Corps plans to train more than 5,000 volunteers this summer for service in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

The Peace Corps staff members will maintain an information center in the lobby of the Student Union. A half-hour film, "A mission of Discovery," will be available for showing to interested campus groups.

The Peace Corps staffers will also administer a non-competitive placement test several times during their two-day stay, in advance.

Prof. To Study Settlements Influence On Institutions

by DIANE D'INDIA

A prize-winning doctoral dissertation and a $1,000 fellowship will merge this summer when Dr. Mario S. DePillis seeks to find the answer to a self-posed question.

The question: "What is the influence, if any, of the process of settlement on American social institutions?"

Dr. DePillis, assistant professor of history at UMass, has a special interest in the social history of the American West as influenced by religion and immigration.

With the $1,000 research grant recently awarded him by the University he will travel to at least six American cities gathering information to expand his 1960 doctoral dissertation to a book. The three inch high volume entitled Development of Mormon Communitarianism, 1826-1846 won the George Washington Egleston prize in American History at Yale's 1961 commencement exercises.

At UMass this semester Dr. DePillis is teaching three courses related to the social history of the American West. Two are undergraduate courses titled Westward Expansion and Social History of the United States. The third course is a graduate seminar on the American West.

This summer as he travels to Albany, Cleveland, Independence, Chicago, and Salt Lake City. Dr. DePillis will be compiling facts about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, otherwise known as the Mormon Church. Mormonism, according to Dr. DePillis, is "the most effective test case" for the study of American social history because it is a "well-documented" and "fairly well-defined" movement, and because it is the "most important of the three leading American sects of the 19th century." The other two sects are Campbellism and Christian Science.

Contrary to popular belief, the Mormons did not originate in Utah, but in upstate New York. What Dr. DePillis terms "the extraordinary story of their westward wandering" shows that between 1830 and 1846 the Mormons traveled to Utah, making settlements in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois on the way. Many of the westward moves of the Mormons "primarily as polygamists", in various localities.

At first he thought of the Mormons primarily as polygamists", said Dr. DePillis recently, but "found out that Mormonism was really one of the most significant religious movements in the history of the United States, and one of the most influential movements on the American frontier." He was, he said, "roused from a bemused diffidence into an avid investigation" by this discovery.

He attributes the influence of Mormonism to "a certain Yankee will that they instituted in their religion and the fact that the way of life was spread by their religion."

The grant will allow Dr. DePillis eight weeks and $1,000 for his research. He has this to say of the grant:

"The grant is as important for releasing assistant professors from summer teaching, especially if they are married, as it is for paying actual expenses.

"These grants represent a new and admirable attitude in University policy."

The program enables people interested in the humanities to overcome the limitations of our library."

Dr. DePillis joined the UMass faculty in 1958. He received his B.A. and M.A. at the University of Chicago and an M.A. and Ph.D. at Yale University.

Peace Corps Director Speaks In S. U. Tues.

William G. Saltonstall, former principal of Phillips Exeter Academy and now Peace Corps director of Nigeria, will address UMass students, faculty members and other interested persons on Tuesday, March 24.

Saltonstall will speak at 11:15 a.m. in the S. U. ballroom.

Before becoming director of Peace Corps efforts in Nigeria, Africa's most populated country, Saltonstall headed Phillips Exeter for 17 years.

When Sargent Shriver announced Saltonstall's appointment to the Nigeria post, he described the Exeter principal as "one of the ablest educators in America."

"He brings to the Peace Corps a distinguished career in education and an outstanding reputation as a dynamic administrator, teacher and leader," Shriver said.

Born in Milton, Mass., Saltonstall was educated at Phillips Exeter and Harvard college. He joined the Phillips Exeter faculty in 1932. After World War II service with the U. S. Navy, he was named principal of the school in 1946.

Saltonstall has been president of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and a member of the board of overseers of Harvard University. In 1956 he was chairman of the selection committee of the General Motor scholarship program.

He is the author of "Ports of Piscataqua," a maritime history of New Hampshire, and served as president of the New Hampshire Historical society. He is also a member of the Salem Marine Society and the Colonial Society of Massachusetts.

Students For Civil Rights To Distribute Newsletter

This Tuesday will mark the beginning of an effort by Students for Civil Rights to inform the campus of the major issues, problems and happenings in relation to the civil rights movement. The group will distribute the first issue of its newsletter The Torch throughout the campus.

The goal of this effort is to arouse greater interest in the cause of civil rights at the University, and to act as a forum for discussion of the movement. Students, faculty members and members of the staff are being solicited to write articles for the newsletter, which will appear weekly.

Students for Civil Rights are hopeful that the effort will be successful at the University, and that the movement will eventually embrace the four colleges in this area. Copies are to be distributed at the Dining Commons, the Hatch, fraternities and sororities, and Stockbridge dormitories. Editorial policy is controlled by three members of SFCR, Philip Johnston, Danny Kurland and Kat Timpson.

The first issue carries articles relating to the history and the development of the civil rights movement, with an emphasis on present-day problems, faced by its leaders. The next issue, to be published in April, will deal chiefly with the Civil Rights Week, to be held at the University from April 19-26.

Writer Lectures On Problems Of Mass Media

"The press of this country is very depressing". So said Mr. Milton Mayer at a lecture he delivered on Thursday, March 19, to the Government 76 and 176 class at the University.

Mr. Mayer, a feature writer for Harper's and The Saturday Review, stated that the poor quality of the press today is due to the public's want of spectacular news. The reason that this type of news is printed is because the newspapers are a commercial entity and as such they depend upon quantity to make a profit.

In the business of Journalism the papers are losing money, for it costs more than a dime per paper to publish a newspaper. To balance this loss the newspaper must deal in quantity and not quality.

Mr. Mayer declared, "This is what the profit system does to the press—it does not poison the press, it ruins the press!"

Mr. Mayer, author of several books dealing with the problems of the news media, emphasized the fact that the only way for the news to be factually and unbiasedly presented is to get rid of the quantity paper and to establish the "elite" paper.

The elite paper, which would sell to a limited market, would be a paper privately subsidized, like The Christian Science Monitor, and would reflect the true nature of the culture.

In concluding his lecture, Mr. Mayer made an appeal to all people that read papers such as The New York Times and others that are directed to mass audience, to read these with open eyes so as not to be taken in by quantity news instead of quality news.

stellar football players will be Paul Anderson, the world's strongest man; Chuck Hunter, a famed weight lifter; Hank Slomanski, noted karate expert who was General MacArthur's personal bodyguard during World War II; and Jack Pirrie, former Vanderbilt University basketball star.

Dr. John "Knocky" Parker, Professor at Methodist College in North Carolina, and his "All-American Jazz Combo," will also be on hand to entertain the students on the beach and in the bandshell. The famed Dixieland combo includes Dr. Parker on piano, Doc Evans on trumpet, Don Frans on tuba, Munn Ware on trombone, Al Shelton on drums, and features Jazz Singer Edmond Souchon.

The band will also accompany R.C.A. Victor recording stars Skeeter Davis and George Hamilton IV, during separate concerts in the Bandshell on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, respectively — March 25 and 26. The two recording artists will be joined each evening by Gregory Walcott, a featured performer in the recent television series "87th Precinct," and the movie "Captain Newman, M.D."

A pavillion will also be set up for Howard Ellis, an artist who will be giving demonstrations for interested students along the beach.

In addition to the community-planned programs many of the motels are also sponsoring daily entertainment for their guests such as local combos and folk groups, hootenannies and twist contests.

With such preparations already made, and many plans still in the offing, the Daytona Beach Resort Area expects to attract well over 65,000 vacationing college students this spring.

Robert Frost Room Opened By Trustees Of Jones Library

Next Thursday, March 26, will be the 90th anniversary of the birth of Robert Frost, outstanding poet in the English language. Mr. Frost, born in San Francisco of a New England father and a Scotch school teacher mother, author of eight books of poetry and two masques, was associated with Amherst since 1916 when he came to teach at Amherst College and where he was Simpson Lecturer in Literature, 1949-1963.

As part of the observation the Jones Library trustees have opened the Robert Frost Room to visitors and filled two exhibition cases with especially valuable and interesting Frost items. In one showcase one may see copies of the earliest issues of A Boy's Will and North of Boston printed in England in 1912 and 1914, and in the other a selection of Christmas cards and earliest publications. Especially interesting are the numbers of the Lawrence, (Mass.) High School Bulletin, containing some of Mr. Frost's earliest prose and poetry, and a copy of Come In and other poems published in 1943 "for use by the United States Armed Forces only." Mr. Frost died in Boston January 29, 1963.

India And Russia Cooperate

NEW DELHI, India (NSPCI-CPS)—Two top Russian educators, who have recently visited India, seem to have been satisfied with the outcome of their visits.

Vyacheslav Yelutin, Russian Minister for Higher Education, and S. K. Romanovsky, chairman of the Soviet State Committee for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, were successful in getting several agreements signed calling for further cooperation in the field of education and culture.

India and the USSR gave decided to expand their cultural and scientific exchanges. Letters to this effect were exchanged by M. C. Chagla, Indian Education Minister, and S. K. Romanovsky.

The new program, according to Romanovsky, "is very comprehensive" and gives "special attention" to scientific subjects and higher education.

Romanovsky told newsmen that under the program mutual visits of scentists would be organized to promote scientific achievements in both countries. Indian scientists for example would be acquainted with the research of Soviet scientists and the Soviets would work in India on a number of mutually accepted subjects such as electrochemical kinetics.

Scientists from both sides would take part in various national scientific conferences.

During this year, Indian educational centers will invite a greater number of Russian professors and teachers than last year to deliver lectures.

The Indian and Soviet delegations also considered the question of fixing the equivalent of the scientific degrees of the two countries.

It has been agreed that the Indian Ph.D. will be the equivalent to the diploma which certifies in the USSR the scientific degree of "Candidate of Sciences."

Soviet Russia also agreed to set up 10 technological institutes in India during the next six years. These institutions will be set up through UNESCO, though Russia will provide the technical assistance for them.

Talking about the Indian Technological Institute set up with Russian assistance in Bombay, Yelutin said that it was a very important institution for the training of young Indian students. He was of the opinion that more students should be admitted.

Chagla is reported to have disclosed that he had proposed to Yelutin that an institute of Russian Study be set up in India in the near future.

Horticultural Society Open For Members

The University of Massachusetts Horticultural Society is extending an invitation to all interested University undergraduates to become members. Membership is open to all majors in all fields of endeavor. The club plans to build the meetings around guest speakers, films, demonstrations and other activities that will be of interest to anyone interested in plants and horticulture.

Those interested in the society are asked to come to the next meeting in French Hall (in front of the greenhouses) on Tuesday, March 24, at 7:30 in the evening.

Honor Code At Columbia

NEW YORK (CPS)—Columbia College freshmen are being asked to sign an academic integrity statement as a primary move to establish an honor code and abolish proctors in examinations.

The move is being sponsored by a group called the Commission on Academic Integrity which was formed last year with the approval of the dean's office.

An honor system has been under discussion at Columbia for several years. The major obstacle has been that students were unwilling to sign a statement that required them to report any infractions of the system.

The statement currently being circulated has a provision that makes the student aware of it being a violation of the code to "fraudulently advance one's academic status or knowingly be a party to another student's failure to maintain academic integrity."

Baseball . . .

"My mother encouraged me all the way to play baseball as long as I took my lessons," Al said. "She always wanted me to do what I wanted to do. I had a lesson once a week and I practiced about an hour and a half every day except Sunday. I played ball on Saturday and Sunday. I think now I could've really been good, but I didn't study that hard. I'd rather go out and take a couple of rounds of batting practice than rattle off some scales."

Being from Brooklyn, Ferrara heard some noise from the guys about his piano playing. He says it wasn't too bad though. He was always big for his age.

Once he'd made the Lafayette High School team, the baseball-piano conflict became too great. "By then," he said, "I really didn't think I'd be a concert pianist." He smiled. "Of course, I didn't think I'd be a baseball player either. I hit .083 by senior year in high school."

However, the Dodgers were still sponsoring an amateur team in '57, Al tried out, went 0-for-4 and somehow stuck. After two seasons the Dodgers signed him. "I got a modest bonus, about $10,000," he said. "I didn't think I was worth what I got. Actually, I thought I was stealing." He smiled. In 1959 he hit .270 in D ball, then .352 in C, .270 in AA with 100 RBIs. "But then last year I hit .240 in Triple A and there's not that much difference between Double A and Triple A. Then this year I don't know what happened," he said in disbelief. "The 19 home runs I hit in half a season were more than I hit in any other full season. I ever stole 19 bases—which is probably more than I stole in my whole career."

And he got to watch the World Series from the winning dugout. No concert pianist can make that claim.

YWCA Sponsors Voting Registration In South

NEW YORK (CPS)—An estimated 600 students from more than 100 colleges are expected to give their spring vacations starting this week to voter registration projects to be conducted in eight cities under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association.

An additional undetermined number are supporting the projects by remaining in their own or nearby communities to assist in voter registration and voter education, according to report received at YWCA national headquarters here.

The Student YWCA activity is one phase of an extended voter registration program initiated by the National YWCA in an effort to increase the number of women as well as men going to the polls.

"Every Woman a registered Voter" is the theme of the second project being conducted by community YWCAs. Associations in approximately 200-communities across the nation have received kits to be used in planning local activity.

The student project will include voter registration training as well as actual participation in efforts to register voters already underway in the following communities: St. Louis, Missouri; Berkeley, California; Raleigh and Greensboro, N.C.; Birmingham, Ala.; Atlanta, Ga.; Louisville, Ky; and Richmond, Va.

Students will go in teams from their respective campuses, joining those attending colleges in the project communities.

Africa Dept. Established

Madison, Wis. (I.P.) — A department of African Languages and Literature will be established at the University of Wisconsin as the result of recent Board of Regents approval.

The proposal to establish the department has the unanimous approval of the University's Division of Humanities, the administrative committee of the Graduate School, and the African Studies program.

Beginning next fall, students choosing African languages and literature as an undergraduate major will undertake a program including two years' intensive study of an African language and courses in African literature, linguistics, anthropology, and French.

For the master's degree, students will study modern African literature and Bantu linguistics, in addition to other requirements. Doctoral candidates must demonstrate comprehensive knowledge of two African languages, pass exams in linguistics or modern African literature and the reading exam in French, and complete the requirements for a minor field in African studies and a dissertation.

Courses to be offered include elementary, intermediate and advanced Swahili, intensive Xhosa, southern Bantu literature, African literature in translation, modern African literature in English, modern African literature in Romance languages, and comparative Bantu linguistics.

UCLA Bruins NCAA Champs; Bradley Romps In N.I.T.

by JOHN GOODRICH

The curtain fell on the college basketball season with champions crowned in both the NIT and NCAA tournaments. The first was won by Bradley, 86-54 over New Mexico, and in the big one, UCLA downed Duke, 98-83.

THE BRUINS OF UCLA proved that the newspaper men were right when they ranked them number one in the country. The Uclans used a single hot streak in each of the two games to earn the title. Against Kansas State, the Bruins were down by 5 with about 7 minutes left. Then they proceeded to run off 11 straight points to open a 81-75 margin and wrap up the game. Once this margin was opened, Coach Johnny Wooden had his club slow it down and hold on to win 90-84.

The other semifinal saw Duke downing Michigan 91-80, as the Blue Devils avenge an early season loss to Wolverines. 6'10" Jay Buckley was the big star with 17 rebounds and 25 points. He got good support from Jeff Mullins who added 21 points. The big gun for the game, and one of the highest single game scorers in the games was Cazzie Russell of Michigan with 31 points.

IN THE CONSOLATION, Michigan got the best performance of the tourney from Bill Buntin who hit for 33 points as the Wolverines beat Kansas State 100-90.

This set the stage for the big game between Duke and UCLA. The Blue Devils were ranked as the favorites because of the height advantage they held over the Bruins.

THE GAME WAS TIGHT FOR THE FIRST 12 MINUTES until Duke sat on a 30-27 lead. Then the Bruins with their persistent zone press and Walt Hazzard at the controls ran off 16 points while shutting out the Devils, and opening a 43-30 lead. The trailers were never able to catch the classy West Coast club.

The game was hampered by the fact that almost 50 fouls were called. Both of the All-Americans, Hazzard and Mullins weren't around at the finish. This boy Hazzard has to be the greatest in the country for his size. He got only 19 points against Kansas State and 12 against Duke, but this is not the slightest measure of his value. He came up with the key steals, key baskets and the key assists. He makes the offense and pressing defense of the Uclans work.

The most impressive thing on the side of the Bruins is the way they compensate for their lack of height. They use speed and a pressing defense to keep their opponents off-balance while they rebound consistently. Although the exact figures were not available, it would appear they out rebounded the much taller Duke quintet. The two big men for the Devils were held to five rebounds total in the first half, despite the fact they had 4 inches height on their biggest opponent.

UCLA SHOWED TREMENDOUS BALANCE scoring-wise in the tourney. Against Michigan, they had four men in double figures. Keith Ericksen came up with 28 points in the game followed by Hazzard with 19, Gail Goodrich had 14 and sub Ken Washington had 13. In the finals, the small Goodrich had 27 points, and Washington came off the bench to pump in 26 points. These two along with Ericksen and sub McIntosh will be back next year, as the Bruins try to enlarge on their 30 game win streak.

An interesting side light was that the Bruins were only the third team in the history of this event to go through the season undefeaed. San Francisco with Bill Russell and K. C. Jones went through the 1956 season undefeatead, and then with Jones on the sidelines, won the tourney. In 1959 North Carolina made it all the way.

This also marked the first time since the 1959 tourney that the top ranked team has won the title.

The NIT was simply no contest. The Bradley Braves put the ball through the hoop at a 62% clip while the New Mexico Lobos were around the 30% mark. After a 33-22 halftime score for the Braves, they proceeded to outscore their opponents 21-4 to leave the Lobos a battered team and their reputation as the top defensive club in the nation shattered. Army clinched third place by downing NYU 60-59 on Mike Silliman's hoop.

YanCon Goes South; Face Rugged Test

The University of New Hampshire baseball team will follow the lacrosse team on a tour of the Middle Atlantic states during UNH's spring vacation.

Coach Andy Mooradian's Wildcats will play four games on this shakedown cruise as they prepare for a rugged Yankee Conference and New England schedule.

They open with Princeton on April Fool's Day and on successive afternoons face Villanova and Rutgers.

On Saturday, April 4, they play at ten o'clock in the morning against a Trenton State team coached by former UNH grid star Bob Salois.

After daily workouts in the UNH Field House, Mooradian has cut his squad to 20 players. Seven of the eight fielders who played regular last spring are returning but pitching remains the big question.

Mooradian probably will find the answer to this question in New Jersey and hopes it will be an answer he likes.

UMass Redmen leave campus next Thursday and will start playing games at Camp Lejeune, N.C. March 28. Opening game is with Michigan State. Games will also be played at East Carolina College, Fort Eustis, Va., Fort Lee, Va., and Loyola of Baltimore.

The team will return to campus after the Loyola game April 4.

UNH Preps Squad For Opening Tour

In his 40 years in coaching, Whoop Snively, the lacrosse coach at the University of New Hampshire, has learned that experience is the best teacher.

For this reason, Snively will take his 1964 UNH squad on a seven game tour of the Middle Atlantic States a week from Saturday. Never has a Wildcat team needed the vital experience gained on a spring trip more than this year's squad.

Charlie Thayer of Exeter is the lone senior on a team where the seniors traditionally are forced to carry the load. In addition, UNH numbers only eight lettermen among its 30 odd candidates.

Snively also faces a problem of trying to replace three entire midfield units with a group of sophomores and juniors who for the most part are playing lacrosse for the first or second year.

UNH will gain its experience the hard way as they face some rugged opposition on its tour which begins March 28.

They open against an Adelphi team which tied for the New York Taylor Division title last spring and the following day face a Long Island Lacrosse Club which is loaded with former All Americans.

Also on the itinerary are games with Southern Division champs Washington College, a Maryland team which rated number two in the nation, and a Rutgers team which ranked seventh.

Ferrara Combines Classics With Professional Ball

from Sport Magazine

Arriving in New York for the World Series, one member of the Dodger team had second thoughts about having left Brooklyn for a baseball career. Al Ferrara, outfielder, wondered if he could have made it as Al Ferrara, concert pianist. There were no regrets, just a thought that briefly entered his mind. Ferrara, a 6-1, 200-pounder who had hit .321 with 89 RBIs and 19 home runs at Spokane when Los Angeles called him up late in July, had given four piano recitals at Carnegie Hall by age 16. That was seven years ago. He hasn't touched a piano since.

That was the only thing the crewcut 23-year-old was sorry about. "I actually wasn't wholeheartedly interested in the piano when I was younger," Al said in the locker room after the second game. "Now I wish I'd kept on playing. I realize it would be a good thing to have. But I don't have an ear, I just played what the author put down and it was all classical. So I haven't even played at parties or anything since I quit."

It's amazing that he was able to quit without repercussions at home. For Al's piano instructor, Guido Morvillo (who's now in his 90s), had also taught Al's mother and grandmother. When piano playing is that strong in a family, you'd figure baseball playing would come in a bad second.

The United States Olympians, an association of former Olympic athletes, was formed in 1946 to keep ex-teammates in touch with each other and to offer their services to new teams being developed. However, many former Olympic competitors have not been located and the organization would like to hear from them at Olympic House, 57 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. Mr. Buck To Resign; Will Finish Fiscal Year

RSO financial advisor Edward Buck has asked to "be relieved of his duties", effective July 1, co-ordinator of Student Activities William D. Scott announced yesterday.

Confidante of activity's business managers for many years, Buck is leaving for a year of travel and devotion to personal business.

Mr. Buck was the third person to be hired for the Student Union. He was Foods Manager from December of 1956 to July of 1957. At that time, he was promoted to Assistant Director of the Student Union, where he established the system of records keeping still used by the Union.

In the Spring of 1958, Buck took over the position of RSO financial advisor from Lawrence "Prof" Dickenson, the organization's founder.

In an exclusive interview, Mr. Buck said that he saw a need for continuity within the position of financial advisor which could not be gotten with a temporary replacement. It was for this reason that he tendered his resignation.

We have tried, Buck stated, to streamline RSO financial procedure in the face of expanding activities. However, he also sees a need for a continuation of the present system of student self government.

"I have enjoyed the job very much," Mr. Buck said. "Nothing worthwhile will be let go. However, continuity cannot be maintained with a temporary person."

Student activities, Mr. Buck states, should create an atmosphere for the exchange of ideas,

New Concept In Campus Dorms; Professor Varley First "Master"

SITE OF THE NEW residence plan, the hilltop dorms should be completed by the end of August.

A new student residence plan, established on a limited and experimental basis, will be conducted at the University next fall.

The pilot project, designed to bring students and faculty closer together, will be instituted in the new dormitory center now under construction in the northwest corner of the campus.

The residence area, consisting of four seven-story dormitories, will be headed by a "Master," who must hold the rank of full professor. The Master will be assisted by four "Preceptors," professors or associate professors, who will maintain offices in the four dormitories. Each Preceptor will be responsible for a dormitory and for providing stimulating cultural and social programs for students within the dormitory.

Each dormitory will have a "Resident Faculty Fellow," who will live in the dormitory. In addition, a number of "Faculty Fellows," drawn from all academic ranks, will be available to aid Preceptors in leading seminars within the dormitories, advising students, and joining in evening meals and social activities.

President John W. Lederle announced today that the Master for the experimental residence program will be Dr. H. Leland Varley, professor of English. In making the announcement, Pres. Lederle said, "The success of an experimental program of this nature deepnds upon the personnel directing the program. We are fortunate to have Prof. Varley heading this pilot project. He is a scholar who has the high

Adelphia To Start Selection Of Juniors

Adelphia, senior men's honor society, will begin selection of juniors for next year's Adelphians, president Dave Clancy announced yesterday.

Nomination blanks requesting the names of juniors in campus organizations have been placed in the boxes of all RSO organizations on the second floor of the Student Union.

"Membership in Adelphia is one of the highest honors that students of the University of Massachusetts can confer upon male students, faculty and members of the administration," said the statement issued by Clancy.

Twenty junior and senior men are selected each year in recognition of outstanding contributions and leadership during the undergraduate years.

The statement listed the three principal characteristics for selection to the society:

1. Demonstration of scholastic achievement—the junior members must have a cumulative average that places them in the top third of their class.
2. Attainment of high quality leadership in college activities, a willingness to accept responsibility, devotion and service to the University.
3. Outstanding individual with a high moral character and a strong sense of civic responsibility.

"It is imperative that all blanks are returned completed as soon as possible so that every consideration may be given the nominees," Clancy said. The blanks are to be returned to RSO box 401.

Greek Week To Feature Four Preps

Spring is upon us and we all can look forward to the traditional festivities of Greek Week. Sponsored by the Interfraternity and PanHellenic Councils, this annual Spring week has long been among the most popular of all campus events. This year's Greek Week, April 6-12, will begin Wednesday with the sorority mass exchange dinner. Each sorority welcomes someone from each house on campus—with an eye toward better friendship and understanding. Also on Wednesday there will be a dinner for the Fraternity Manager's Association Board of Directors.

THE ANNUAL GREEK BANQUET will be held Thursday at Wiggins Tavern. At this traditional event, the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils will host fraternity and sorority presidents and the advisors to these organizations. The evening will include speakers from the faculty and administration.
